and served scholars much, why did he die in middle age? and no man could answer her. On one occasion I¹ was a guest at her house,² and she related the whole story to me. Said I to her, 'My daughter! how was he to thee in thy days of menstruation?' 'God forbid!' she rejoined; 'he did not touch me even with his little finger.' 'And how was he to thee in thy days of white [garments]?'³ 'He ate with me, drank with me and slept with me in bodily contact, and it did not occur to him to do other.' Said I to her, 'Blessed be the Omnipresent for slaying him, that He did not condone on account of the Torah!⁴ For lo! the Torah hath said, And thou shalt not approach unto a woman as long as she is impure by her uncleanness.'⁵ When R. Dimi came,⁶ he said, It was a broad bed. In the West [Palestine] they said, R. Isaac b. Joseph said: An apron interposed between them.⁷ MISHNAH. AND THESE ARE OF THE HALACHOTH WHICH THEY STATED IN THE UPPER CHAMBER OF HANANIAH B. HEZEKIAH B. GARON, WHEN THEY WENT UP TO VISIT HIM. THEY TOOK A COUNT, AND BETH SHAMMAI OUTNUMBERED BETH HILLEL.; AND ON THAT DAY THEY ENACTED EIGHTEEN MEASURES.⁸

GEMARA. Abaye said to R. Joseph: Did we learn, THESE ARE or AND THESE ARE? Did we learn AND THESE ARE [viz.,] those that we have stated [in the former Mishnah]; or did we learn THESE ARE [viz.,] those that are to be stated soon?⁹ -Come and hear: One may not search his garments by the light of a lamp, nor read by the light of a lamp; and these are of the halachoth stated in the upper chamber of Hananiah b. Hezekiah b. Garon. This proves that we learnt, AND THESE ARE;¹⁰ this proves it.

Our Rabbis taught: Who wrote Megillath Ta'anith?¹¹ Said they, Hananiah b. Hezekiah and his companions, who cherished their troubles.¹² R. Simeon b. Gamaliel observed: We too cherish our troubles, but what can we do? For if we come to write [them down], we are inadequate.¹³ Another reason is: a fool is not assailed.¹⁴ Another reason: the flesh of the dead does not feel the scalpel. But that is not so, for did not R. Isaac say, Worms are as painful to the dead as a needle in the flesh of the living, for it is said, But his flesh upon him hath pain, And his soul within him mourneth?¹⁵ Say: The dead flesh in a living person does not feel the scalpel.

Rab Judah said in Rab's name: In truth, that man, Hananiah son of Hezekiah by name, is to be remembered for blessing:¹⁶ but for him, the Book of Ezekiel would have been hidden,¹⁷ for its words contradicted the Torah.¹⁸ What did he do? Three hundred barrels of oil were taken up to him and he sat in an upper chamber and reconciled¹⁹ them.

AND ON THAT DAY THEY ENACTED EIGHTEEN MEASURES. What are the eighteen measures?-For we learnt: The following render terumah unfit:²⁰ one who eats food of the first degree or the second degree, or who drinks unclean liquid;²¹ one who enters with head and the greater part of his body into drawn water;²² a clean person upon whose head and the greater part of his body there fell three logs²³ of drawn water; a Book;²⁴ one's hands;²⁵ a tebul yom;²⁶ and food or utensils which were defiled by a liquid.²⁷ which Tanna [holds that] one who eats food of the first or of the second degree [merely] renders unfit

(1) Elijah, the supposed author of the Tanna debe Eliyahu; v. n. 1.

(2) Elijah was believed to visit the earth and speak to people.

(3) When a niddah's discharge ceased, she donned white garments and examined herself for seven consecutive days, which had to pass without any further discharge of blood before she became clean. During this time she was forbidden to her husband.

(4) He showed no unfair favoritism because of the man's learning.

(5) Lev. XVIII, 19.

(6) V. p. 12, n. 9.

(7) But they were not actually in bodily contact.

(8) Scholars are divided as to when this took place. Z. Frankel, Darke ha-Mishnah assigns it to the beginning of the division of the two schools. Graetz maintains that it took place about four years before the destruction of the Temple; Weiss favours the last generation before the destruction, not long after the death of Agrippa I. V. also Halevi, Doroth, 1, 3, 580 seq.

(9) Lit., 'before us'. The actual eighteen were forgotten in course of time-hence Abaye's question.

- (10) Since the halachoth quoted are given in the previous Mishnah.
- (11) 'The scroll of fasting', containing a list of the days on which fasting is forbidden. Thirty five days are listed; on fourteen public mourning was forbidden, whilst fasting was prohibited on all. V. J.E. VIII, 427.
- (12) I.e., the days of victorious release from their troubles, and declared the minor festivals.
- (13) Every day marks the release from some trouble.
- (14) I.e., he does not perceive the troubles which surround him. So we too do not perceive our miraculous escapes.
- (15) Job XIV, 22.
- (16) Lit., 'for good'.
- (17) The technical term for exclusion from the Canon'
- (18) E.g. Ezek. XLIV, 31; XLV, 20, q.v.
- (19) Lit., 'expounded them'.
- (20) For terumah v. Glos. 'Unfit' denotes that it may not be eaten on account of defilement, but does not defile any other terumah by its contact; 'unclean' denotes that it defiles other food too by its touch.
- (21) Various degrees of uncleanness are distinguished. The greatest of all is that of a human corpse, called the prime origin (lit., 'father of fathers') of uncleanness; this is followed in successively decreasing stages by 'origin' (lit., 'father') of uncleanness, first, second, third and fourth degrees of uncleanness. When an object becomes unclean through contact with another, its degree of defilement is one stage below that which defiles it. By Biblical law unclean food or drink does not defile the person who eats it; but the Rabbis enacted that it does, and so he in turn renders terumah unfit by contact.-Ordinary unsanctified food (hullin) does not proceed beyond the second degree; i.e., if second degree hullin touches other hullin the latter remains clean; but if it touches terumah, it becomes a third degree. Again, terumah does not go beyond the third degree (hence it is then designated 'unfit', not 'unclean' in respect of other terumah); but if it touches flesh of sacrifices (hekdesch) it renders this unfit, and it is called 'fourth degree'.
- (22) Water which had passed through a vessel, as opposed to 'living water', i.e., well water, river water, or rain water collected in a pit.
- (23) 1 log = 549.4 cu.centimetres; v. J.E. Weights and Measures.
- (24) Any of the Books of the Bible.
- (25) Before washing.
- (26) V. Glos.
- (27) All these render terumah unfit-they are all discussed in the Gemara.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 14a

but does not defile?¹ -Said Rabbah b. Bar Hanah, It is R. Joshua. For we learnt: R. Eliezer said: One who eats food of the first degree is [himself defiled in] the first degree; of the second degree, is [defiled in] the second degree, of the third degree, is [defiled in] the third degree.² R. Joshua said: One who eats food of the first or of the second degree is [defiled in] the second degree;³ of the third degree, [he enters] the second degree in respect of hekdesch,⁴ but not in respect of terumah,⁵ this referring to hullin subjected to the purity of terumah.⁶

When one eats food of the first or of the second degree, why did the Rabbis decree uncleanness in his case? Because one may sometimes eat unclean food [hullin] and take a liquid of terumah and put it in his mouth and thus render it unfit.⁷ When one drinks unclean liquid, why did the Rabbis decree uncleanness in his case?-Because he may sometimes drink unclean liquid and take food of terumah and put it in his mouth, and thus render it unfit. But it is the same thing!⁸ -You might argue, The first is usual but not the second:⁹ therefore he informs us [that it is not so]. And one who comes with his head and the greater part of his body] into drawn water, why did the Rabbis decree uncleanness in his case?-Said R. Bibi in R. Assi's name: Because originally people performed tebillah¹⁰ in collected pit water, which was stagnant [noisome], and so they poured drawn water upon them selves.¹¹ [But when] they began to make this a fixed [law], the Rabbis imposed uncleanness thereon. What is meant by 'a fixed [law]?' Abaye said: They maintained, Not this [pit water] purifies, but both together purify. Said Raba to him, Then what did it matter, seeing that they did perform tebillah in this [the pit water]? But, said Raba, they maintained, Not this [the pit water] purifies but that [the drawn water].¹²

And a clean person upon whose head and the greater part of his body there fell three logs of drawn water, why did the Rabbis decree uncleanness in his case? For if not this, the other would not stand.¹³

And why did the Rabbis impose uncleanness upon a Book? Said R. Mesharsheya: Because originally food of terumah was stored near the Scroll of the Law, with the argument, This is holy and that is holy.¹⁴ But when it was seen that they [the Sacred Books] came to harm,¹⁵ the Rabbis imposed uncleanness upon them.¹⁶ 'And the hands'?-Because hands are fidgety.¹⁷ It was taught: Also hands which came into contact with a Book¹⁸ disqualify terumah, on account of R. Parnok['s dictum]. For R. Parnok said in R. Johanan's name: One who holds a Scroll of the Law naked¹⁹ will be buried naked. 'Naked!' can you really think so? Rather said R. Zera, [It means] naked without good deeds.²⁰ 'Without good deeds!' can you really think so?²¹ Rather say, naked, without that good deed [to his credit].²² Which was first enacted? Shall we say that the former was first enacted?²³

(1) 4. P. 55, n. 5.

(2) Hence, when he eats defiled food in the first degree, he defiles terumah, not merely renders it unfit (v. p. 55, nn. 5, 6).

(3) Hence in both cases he merely renders terumah unfit.

(4) Flesh of sacrifices.

(5) If he touches hekdesch he defiles it in the third degree, being regarded himself as second degree in respect thereto; but he does not affect terumah at all.

(6) People (particularly perushim, v. p. 51, n. 1) voluntarily treated hullin as terumah; then it could become unfit in the third degree, but not otherwise (v. p. 55, n. 6), and this is the only way in which it is possible for a person to eat hullin of the third degree, v. Hul. 33b.

(7) For it may touch the food still in his mouth. Unfit terumah may not be eaten.

(8) Both being based on the same reason, the second is a corollary of the first and need not be stated.

(9) So that a Rabbinical measure is not required in the second case.

(10) I.e., took a ritual bath to be purified of defilement.

(11) The correct reading appears to be: three logs of drawn water; v. Marginal Gloss to cur. edd.

(12) This would lead to the neglect of proper tebillah.

(13) A general measure had to be enacted that three logs of drawn water defiled a person, whether it came upon him by his intention or accidentally. Had the Rabbis drawn a distinction, the former too would have remained unobserved.

(14) Hence it is fitting that they be placed together.

- (15) The food attracted mice, which naturally injured the Books too.
- (16) To put an end to the practice.
- (17) They are active and apt to touch things. Hence unless their owner has taken care that they should not touch a ritually unclean object after he washed them, they are treated as unclean.
- (18) Lit., 'which come on account of a Book.'
- (19) Without its wrapping.
- (20)) As though he had never performed a good deed or fulfilled a precept.
- (21) Surely that act does not nullify all his meritorious deeds!
- (22) If he took it for Study or to wrap it up after the public reading likewise a 'good deed'-it is not accounted to him (Tosaf.). Tosaf. also observes that presumably this applies to any of the Books of the Bible.-The reference is to the actual parchment; but there is no objection to the modern practice of elevating the uncovered Scroll whilst holding it by the rollers on which it is wound. The Sephardi Jews, i.e., the descendants of the Spanish Jews, have the entire parchment of the Scroll from end to end shielded with silk or cloth.
- (23) Viz., that hands in general are unclean.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 14b

But since this was first enacted, why was the other too needed?-Rather the latter was first decreed, and then it was enacted in respect of all hands.

'And a tebul yom.' But the law of tebul yom is Biblical, for it is written, and when the sun is down, he shall be clean; [and afterwards he shall eat of the holy things,¹ i.e., terumah]?-Delete tebul yom from here.

'And food which was defiled through liquid'. Through liquid of which [uncleanness]?² Shall we say, through liquid which was defiled by a [dead] reptile:³ then its law is Biblical,⁴ for it is written, and all drink that may be drunk [in every such vessel shall be unclean]?⁵ _ Rather it means through liquid defiled by the hands, and it is a preventive measure on account of liquid defiled by a reptile.⁶

'And vessels which were defiled by liquid'. Vessels which were defiled by liquid of which [uncleanness]?⁷ Shall we say, By the liquid of a zab? But that is Biblical, for it is written, and if the zab spit upon him that is clean; [then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water],⁸ [meaning] what is in the clean man's hand have I declared unclean unto thee!⁹ Rather it refers to liquid defiled by a reptile, and it is a preventive measure on account of the fluid of a zab.¹⁰

'And the hands'. Did then the disciples of Shammai and Hillel¹¹ decree this: [Surely] Shammai and Hillel [themselves] decreed it! For it was taught, Jose b. Jo'ezer of Zeredah¹² and Jose b. Johanan of Jerusalem¹³ decreed uncleanness in respect of the country of the heathens and glassware.¹⁴ Simeon b. Shetah instituted the woman's marriage settlement¹⁵ and imposed uncleanness upon metal utensils.¹⁶ Shammai and Hillel decreed uncleanness for the hands. And should you answer, [It means] Shammai and his band and Hillel and his band [of scholars];¹⁷ surely Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: They enacted eighteen measures, and they differed on eighteen measures,¹⁸ whereas Hillel and Shammai differed only in three places; for R. Huna said, in three places they differed, and no more! And should you answer, They [Hillel and Shammai] came and decreed that it be suspended,¹⁹ while their disciples came and decreed that it be burnt.²⁰ surely Ilia said: The original decree concerning hands was for burning?-Rather, they [Hillel and Shammai] came and decreed it, yet it was not accepted from them; then their disciples came and decreed, and it was accepted from them.²¹

But still, Solomon decreed it? For Raba Judah said in Samuel's name, When Solomon instituted 'erubin²² and the washing of the hands, a Heavenly Echo came forth and declared, 'My son, if thine heart be wise; My heart shall be glad, even mine';²³ and 'My son, be wise, and make my heart glad, That I may answer him that reproacheth me'?²⁴

(1) Lev. XXII, 7.

(2) I.e., how did this liquid itself become unclean?

(3) Lit., 'which come on account of a reptile'.

(4) Sc. that this food disqualifies terumah.

(5) Ibid. XI, 34. Though that refers to a liquid defiled through an earthenware vessel, the Talmud deduces in Pes. 18b that the same holds good if it is defiled by a reptile. Now, the latter is original ('father of') uncleanness; the fluid is first degree, and the food is second degree, and therefore it renders terumah the third degree, i.e., unfit (v. p. 55, n. 6), and all this is Biblical law, not a Rabbinical enactment.

(6) The latter is Biblical; but if the former were not declared unclean, it would be thought that the latter is not unclean either.

(7) How did the liquid itself become unclean?

(8) Ibid. XV, 8.

(9) This interpretation is not really germane to the difficulty which arises directly from the verse; v. Rashi. Since the clothes are to be washed etc., the saliva must rank as original ('father of') uncleanness, for only such defiles garments and man. The vessels therefore defiled by the saliva (or any fluid emanating from a zab) are unclean in the first degree, and defile terumah by Biblical law.

(10) The former is unclean in the first degree, and by Biblical law does not (defile vessels (v. previous note); nevertheless the Rabbis enacted that it shall defile vessels, which in turn render terumah unfit, lest it might be confused with the fluid of a zab, which will also be held incapable of defiling vessels.

(11) As is implied by the terms Beth Shammai, Beth Hillel.

(12) A town in Persia; Neub. Geogr. p. 275.

(13) Two Rabbis of the early Maccabean period (second century B.C.E.); together they formed the beginning of the Zugoth (duumvirate) which governed Jewish religious life until Hillel and Shammai. It may be observed that the title 'Rabbi' is not prefixed to their names: the famous letter of Sherira Gaon to Jacob b. Nissim, quoted by Nathan b. Jehiel in the Aruk (s.v. declares that this title dates from the time of R. Johanan b. Zakkai only.

(14) The former, to stem the emigration of Jews from Palestine consequent upon the troublous times of the Maccabees; and the latter probably because glassware was manufactured in those countries, or because they learnt at that time that its manufacture was similar to that of earthenware; Weiss, Dor. 1, 105

(15) When a woman married, she brought a dowry to her husband, which was returnable if he divorced her. Originally the security for the return of the dowry was deposited with her father. This went through a number of changes until Simeon b. Shetah enacted that the husband should trade with the dowry and mortgage all his effects for its repayment, the purpose being to make divorce more difficult. This is the meaning of the present passage, not that he actually instituted the marriage settlement itself, J, Keth. end of chapter VIII, and Weiss, Dor. 1, 144 and note a.l.

(16) This is discussed below,.

(17) I.e., enacted the eighteen measures.

(18) I.e., these eighteen measures which they enacted jointly were originally subjects of controversy between them (Rashi).

(19) I.e., that the hands are only suspected of uncleanness, and if they touch terumah it is 'suspended', and may neither be eaten, as clean, nor burnt as unclean.

(20) Ruling that the hands are definitely unclean, not merely suspected.

(21) The need for renewing some of the early Rabbinical enactments, to which reference is made in the present discussion, arose through the interdict which the Sadducees laid upon their observance; Weiss, Dor, I, 143f; cf. Halevi, Doroth, I, 3, pp. 584 seq.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 15a

— Solomon came and decreed in respect of holy things,¹ while they came and instituted [it] in respect of terumah.

[To revert to] the main text: 'Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: They enacted eighteen measures, and differed in eighteen 'But it was taught: They were in agreement?—On that day they differed and [only] on the morrow were they in agreement.'²

[To revert to] the main text: R. Huna said: In three places Shammai and Hillel differed: Shammai said: Hallah³ is due from a kab [of flour]; Hillel said: From two kabs: but the Sages ruled neither as the one nor as the other, but a kab and a half is liable to hallah. When the measures were enlarged, they said, Five quarters of flour are liable to hallah. R. Jose said: [Exactly] five are exempt; just over five are liable.⁴

And the second?—Hillel said: A hin full of drawn water renders a mikweh unfit. (For one must state [a dictum] in his teacher's phraseology. Shammai maintained: nine kabs). But the Sages ruled neither as one nor as the other, until two weavers⁵ came from the dung gate of Jerusalem and testified on the authority of Shemaiah and Abtalion that three logs of drawn water render a mikweh unfit, and the Sages ratified their words.⁶

And the third?—Shammai said: All women, their time suffices them; Hillel maintained: From examination to examination; but the Sages ruled neither as the one nor as the other, but a full day⁷ reduces [the time] between examination and examination, and [the time] between examination and examination reduces a full day.⁸ And are there no more? But there is [this]: Hillel said: One shall lay [hands]; while Shammai ruled that one must not lay [hands]?⁹ — R. Huna spoke only of those concerning which there is no dispute of their teachers in addition.¹⁰ But there is also [this:] When one vintages [grapes] for the vat [i.e., to manufacture wine], Shammai maintains: It is made fit [to become unclean]; while Hillel ruled: It is not made fit.¹¹ — That is excepted, for there Hillel was silenced by Shammai'.¹²

'Jose b. Jo'ezer of Zeredah and Jose b. Johanan of Jerusalem decreed uncleanness in respect of the country of the heathens and glassware.’ But the Rabbis of the ‘eighty years’ decreed this? For R. Kahana said, When R. Ishmael son of R. Jose fell sick, they [the Rabbis] sent [word] to him, ‘Rabbi, Tell us the two or three things which you stated [formerly] on your father's authority.’ He sent back, ‘Thus did my father say: One hundred and eighty years before the destruction of the Temple the wicked State [sc. Rome] spread over Israel.¹³ Eighty years before the destruction of the Temple uncleanness was imposed in respect of the country of heathens and glassware. Forty years before the destruction of the Temple the Sanhedrin went into exile¹⁴ and took its seat in the trade Halls.¹⁵ (in respect to what law [is this stated]?)—Said R. Isaac b. Abdimi, To teach that they did not adjudicate in laws of fines.¹⁶ ‘The laws of fines’ can you think so!¹⁷ But say: They did not adjudicate in capital cases.¹⁸) And should you answer, They [Jose b. Jo'ezer and Jose b. Johanan] flourished during these eighty years too: surely it was taught: Hillel and Simeon [his son], Gamaliel and Simeon wielded their Patriarchate during one hundred years of the Temple's existence;¹⁹ whereas Jose b. Jo'ezer of Zeredah and Jose b. Johanan were much earlier!²⁰

(1) That the hands must be washed before eating e.g., flesh of sacrifices.

(2) V. Halevi, Doroth, 1, p. 600 for a discussion of a variant which he considers correct.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) 1 kab = four logs = 2197.4 cu.cm. The controversy centres on the interpretation of ‘your dough’ in Num. XV, 20. The Talmud does not state when the measures were enlarged, but the enlargement was by one fifth, i.e., one ‘Sephoric’ log (which was the name of the new measure) == one and one fifth Jerusalem log, as the old one was called; v. ‘Ed., Sonc. ed., p. 2, n. 3.

(5) V. Halevi, op. cit., p. 122, n. 59.

(6) A mikweh (v. Glos.) must be filled with ‘living’ water, as opposed to ‘drawn’ water, i.e., water drawn in vessels, and it must contain not less than forty se'ahs. The controversy refers to the quantity of drawn water which, if poured into the mikweh before it contains forty se'ahs of ‘living’ water, renders it unfit. The hin is a Biblical measure, equal to twelve logs. The passage ‘for one must state (a dictum) in his teacher's phraseology’ is difficult, and various interpretations have been advanced. They are discussed by Halevi in Doroth, 1, 3, 95-7, who explains it thus: The teachers referred to are not Shemaiah and Abtalion, Hillel's masters in Palestine, but his Babylonian teachers (unnamed). Now hin is not the usual Mishnaic term but Biblical. This, however, was sometimes preferred to Babylonian because it was constant, whereas the Babylonian measure varied in different places (cf. J. E. XIII, 488 s.v. Cab.). Thus Hillel said a hin full instead of twelve logs, in order to be faithful to his teacher's phraseology. V. ‘Ed., Sonc. ed., p. 2 notes.

(7) Lit., ‘from time to time’, the technical phrase for a twenty-four hour day.

(8) A menstruous woman defiles whatever food she touches. Shammai maintains that this is only from when she discovers her discharge, but not retrospectively. Hillel holds that since her discharge may have been earlier, though she has only now observed it, her uncleanness is retrospective to when she last examined and found herself clean. Thus Shammai said, Their time, sc. when they actually find that they are unclean, suffices them and it has no retrospective effects; whilst Hillel rules, They are retrospectively unclean from the present examination to the last. The Sages make a compromise: she is retrospectively unclean for twenty-four hours or from the last examination, whichever is less. V. ‘Ed., Sonc. ed., p. 1 notes.

(9) When a man brings a freewill-offering, part of the ritual consists in his laying hands upon the head of the animal (v. Lev. I, 4; III, 2, 8). The dispute refers to festivals.

(10) This matter was disputed by Shammai and Hillel's predecessors too; v. Hag. 16a. For the importance of this particular question v. Frankel, Darke ha-Mishnah, p. 44; Weiss, Dor. I, 104.

(11) V. P. 45, nn. 1, 4; the same applies to grapes. Now, if the grapes are to be eaten, the liquid they exude whilst being gathered does not subject them to uncleanness, since their owner is displeased therewith. But when they are vintaged for wine they differ; V. infra 17a for the full discussion.

(12) I.e., he was unable to refute his proofs and accepted Shammai's ruling.

(13) Judea appears to have entered into official relations with Rome for the first time in 161 B.C.E. at the instance of Judas Maccabeus; Margolis and Marx, Jewish History, p. 145. But the first step which laid Judea under subjection of Rome was the quarrel of Hyrcanus II and Aristobulus II over the throne, when both brothers appealed to Pompey (e. 66 C.E). A date midway between these two is given here (110 B.C.E.) which may be assumed as merely approximate. This corresponds roughly to the death of Hyrcanus I in 106 B.C.E.

(14) I.e., they forsook their locale in the Chamber of Hewn Stones in the Temple.

(15) A place on the Temple Mount Hannuth, v. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 267, n. 11.

(16) E.g., the fine for seduction, Deut. XXII, 29.

(17) Any court in Palestine consisting of ordained judges was competent to adjudicate in laws of fine, whatever its locale.

(18) V. Krauss, op. cit., pp. 23f.

(19) I.e., Hillel commenced his Patriarchate a hundred years before the destruction of the Temple, and he was followed by Simeon, Gamaliel and Simeon, his direct descendants, the four spreading over that century. V, Halevi, Doroth, I, 3, pp. 706 seq.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 15b

Rather say they came and decreed in respect to a clod, that it be burnt,¹ but nothing at all in respect to the atmosphere;² while the Rabbis of the eighty years came and decreed in respect to the atmosphere that it [terumah] be suspended.³ Shall we say that the original enactment was for burning? Surely Ilfa said: The original decree concerning hands was for burning. Thus, only concerning hands was the original decree for burning, but concerning nothing else?—Rather say they came and decreed in respect to a clod, that it be suspended, and nothing at all in respect to the atmosphere; and then the Rabbis of these eighty years came and decreed in respect to a clod that it be burnt and in respect to the atmosphere that it be suspended. Yet still, that⁴ was decreed in Usha?⁵ For we learnt: Terumah is burnt on account of six doubtful cases [of uncleanness]: — [i] The doubt of Beth ha-Peras;⁶ [ii] The doubt of earth which comes from the land of the heathens;⁷ [iii] The doubt attached to the garments of an 'am ha-arez;⁸ [iv] the doubt of vessels which are found;⁹ [v] doubtful saliva;¹⁰ and [vi] the doubtful human urine near cattle urine.¹¹ On account of their certain contact, which is doubtful defilement, terumah is burnt.¹² R. Jose said: It is burnt even on account of their doubtful contact in a private domain.¹³ But the Sages maintain: [If there is doubtful contact] in a private domain we suspend it; in public ground, it [the terumah] is clean. Now 'Ulla observed, These six cases of doubt were enacted at Usha!¹⁴—Rather say they [Jose b. Jo'ezer and Jose b. Johanan] came and decreed suspense in respect of a clod and nothing at all in respect of atmosphere; then the Rabbis of the eighty years came and decreed suspense in both cases; then they came at Usha and decreed burning in respect of a clod, and as to the atmosphere they left it in status quo.

Why did the Rabbis impose uncleanness upon glassware? — Said R. Johanan in the name of Resh Lakish, Since it is manufactured from¹⁵ sand, the Rabbis declared it the same as earthenware.¹⁶ If so, let them be incapable of purification in a mikveh?¹⁷ Why then did we learn,

And the following interpose in utensils: pitch and myrrh gum in the case of glass vessels?¹⁸ -The circumstances here¹⁹ are e.g., they were perforated, and molten lead was poured into them, this agreeing with R. Meir, who maintained, Everything depends on the support.²⁰ For it was taught: If glass vessels are perforated and [molten] lead is poured into them,-said R. Simeon b. Gamaliel: R. Meir declares them unclean, while the Sages declare them clean.²¹ If so,²²

 - (6) A field one square peras (peras half the length of a furrow — fifty cubits) in area, declared unclean because a grave was ploughed in it and the crushed bones scattered over the field, so that their exact position is not known, If terumah enters its atmosphere it must be burnt, though it is doubtful whether it was actually over the crushed bones.
 - (7) I.e., any earth which comes thence.
 - (8) V. P. 51, n. 1. His garments are doubtful, because his wife may have sat upon them while a menstruant; v. Hag. 18b.
 - (9) And it is unknown whether they are clean or not.
 - (10) All saliva found is suspected of uncleanness, as it may be of a zab; v. p. 58, n. 10.
 - (11) This is not the same as the preceding, where the substances themselves were not in doubt; e.g., the object was definitely a utensil, or saliva. Here, however, there is a double doubt; it may not be human urine at all, but cattle urine; and even if it is, it may not be a zab's (only his defiles). Yet the Rabbis ruled it definitely unclean, even when found near cattle urine, so that it might be supposed that this is the same.
 - (12) If terumah comes definitely into contact (or as explained in n. 2) with these, which renders it doubtfully unclean, it is burnt.
 - (13) Cf. p. 20, n. 5.
 - (14) The difficulty arises from ii.
 - (15) Lit., 'the beginning of its making'.
 - (16) Other edd. omit 'R. Johanan said in the name of', reading simply Resh Lakish. It is certainly unlikely that R. Johanan, who, as head of the Academy at Tiberias enjoyed a superiority over Resh Lakish, his contemporary, would report his statement.
 - (17) Just as earthenware.
 - (18) Mik. IX, 5. When a utensil is purified in a mikweh, nothing must interpose between it and the water; if it does, the immersion is ineffective: pitch and gum on the side of a glass vessel constitute an interposition.
 - (19) In Mik. IX, 5.
 - (20) The perforated glass vessel is supported by the lead, i.e., it can be used only through the lead. Hence, according to R. Meir, it is a metal, not a glass vessel.
 - (21) Rashi in R.H. 19a offers two explanations: (i) When an unclean vessel is perforated, it becomes clean, since it can no longer be used as a vessel. Now, if a metal utensil is thus broken and then repaired, it reverts to its former state, but not so a glass vessel (infra 16a). R. Meir maintains that a glass vessel supported by metal is treated as metal; while the Rabbis hold that it is still regarded as a glass vessel. (ii) A clean glass vessel supported by metal becomes Biblically unclean, according to R. Meir, as a metal utensil, while the Rabbis hold that it is Biblically clean, as a glass vessel, and is subject to defilement only on account of the Rabbinical enactment; the reasoning being the same as before. Tosaf. a.l. s.v. VSIVH is inclined to agree with the second interpretation.

(22) Since they are treated as earthenware vessels.

let them not become unclean through their [flat or convex] backs.¹ Why did we learn, Earthen vessels and nether vessels² are alike in regard to their uncleanness: they become defiled and defile [other objects] through their air space;³ they become unclean through their outside,⁴ but they cannot be defiled through their backs;⁵ and their breaking renders them clean.⁶ Thus, only earthen and nether vessels are alike in regard to their uncleanness, but not other things?⁷ -I will tell you: since they can be repaired when broken,⁸ they were assimilated to metal utensils.⁹

If so, let them revert to their former uncleanness, like metal utensils? For we learnt: Metal vessels, both flat and hollow,¹⁰ are subject to defilement. If broken, they become clean; if remade into utensils, they revert to their former uncleanness. s. Whereas in respect to glass vessels we learnt: Wooden, skin, bone and glass utensils, if flat, they are clean;¹¹ if hollow, they are unclean;¹² if broken, they become clean; if remade into vessels, they are liable to defilement from then onwards. [Thus] only from then onwards, but not retrospectively?-The uncleanness of glass utensils is Rabbinical, and [the resuscitation of] former uncleanness is [also] Rabbinical: now, in the case of that which is unclean by Scriptural law, the Rabbis have imposed [retrospective] uncleanness upon it, but upon that which is unclean by Rabbinical law the Rabbis have imposed no [retrospective] uncleanness.

Yet at least let their flat utensils be unclean, since flat metal utensils are [susceptible to uncleanness] by Scriptural law!-The Rabbis made a distinction in their case, so that terumah and sacred food should not be burnt on their account.¹³

(1) If an unclean object touches them on the back, which is flat or convex, they should not become unclean, in accordance with the Mishnah quoted.

(2) Rashi: a kind of white earth; Jast.: a vessel made of alum crystals.

(3) If an unclean object is suspended in the hollow of one of these vessels, even if it does not touch its side, it becomes unclean. Again, if a clean object is suspended in the hollow of an unclean vessel, though it does not actually touch it, it too becomes unclean.

(4) E.g., if the base is concave, and an unclean object is suspended from the outside in the hollow.

(5) Which are flat or convex.

(6) If these vessels, being already unclean, are broken, they become clean; cf. p. 65, n. 7.

(7) yet glass vessels too should be the same according to Resh Lakish's reason.

(8) By being melted down and refashioned, which is impossible with earthen utensils.

(9) Which can be repaired in the same way.

(10) Lit., 'those of them which receive'.

(11) I.e., they cannot be defiled.

(12) As in n. 7.

(13) For these must not be burnt when defiled by Rabbinical law, except in the six cases of doubtful uncleanness enumerated on 15b.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 16b

R. Ashi said: After all, it is similar to earthen utensils, and as for your difficulty, 'let them not become unclean through their [flat or convex] backs', [the reply] is because its inside is as visible as its outside.¹

'Simeon b. Shetah instituted a woman's marriage settlement and imposed uncleanness upon metal utensils.' But [the uncleanness of] metal utensils is Biblical, for it is written, howbeit the gold, and the silver [... etc.]?² -This [the Rabbinical law] was necessary only in respect of former uncleanness.³ For Rab Judah said in Rab's name: It once happened that Queen Shalzion⁴ made a banquet for her son and all her utensils were defiled. Thereupon she broke them and gave them to the goldsmith, who melted them down and manufactured new utensils of them. But the Sages declared, They revert to their previous uncleanness. What is the reason?-They were concerned there to provide⁵ a fence against the water of separation.⁶

Now, that is well on the view that they [the Sages] did not rule thus in respect of all forms of defilement but only in respect of the defilement of the dead:⁷ then it is correct. But on the view that they ruled thus for all forms of uncleanness, what can be said?-Abaye answered: As a preventive measure lest he might not perforate it to the standard of purification.⁸ Raba said: As a preventive measure lest it be said that tebillah⁹ of that very day is effective for it.¹⁰ Wherein do they differ?-They differ where a smith refashioned it.¹¹ And what is another?¹² For we learnt: If one places vessels under a spout to catch rain water therein, whether they are large vessels or small, or even vessels [made] of stone, earth¹³ or dung, they render the mikweh unfit. It is all one whether he places or forgets them [there]: that is Beth Shammai's view; but Beth Hillel declare it clean¹⁴ if he forgets them.¹⁵ Said R. Meir: They took a count, and Beth Shammai outnumbered Beth Hillel. Yet Beth Shammai admit it that if he forgets [the utensils] in a courtyard,¹⁶ it is clean.¹⁷ R. Jose said: The controversy still stands in its place.¹⁸

R. Mesharsheya said: The scholars of Rab¹⁹ said: All agree that, if he places them [under the spout] when clouds are massing, they²⁰ are unclean;²¹ [if he places them there] when the clouds are dispersed, all agree that they are clean.²² They differ only if he places them there when the clouds were massing, but they then dispersed, and subsequently massed together again:²³ one Master [Beth Hillel] holds that his intention was nullified,²⁴ while the other Master holds that his intention was not nullified.

Now, according to R. Jose, who maintained, The controversy still stands in its place, they are less [than eighteen]?²⁵ -Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: On that same day they also enacted that the daughters of Cutheans²⁶ are niddoth²⁷ from their cradles.²⁸

And what is another? For we learnt: All movable objects induce uncleanness by the thickness of an ox-goad.²⁹ Said R. Tarfon,

(1) From without; hence it is all regarded as the inside.

- (2) Num. XXXI, 22. The text continues: everything that may abide the fire, ye shall make go through the fire, and it shall be clean; nevertheless it shall be purified with the water of separation.
- (3) V, supra a.
- (4) i.e., Salome Alexandra, wife and successor of Alexander Jannai and according to the Talmud, sister of Simeon b. Shetah.
- (5) Lit., 'on account of'.
- (6) V. n. 2.; i.e., they were anxious to safeguard this law, which would fall into disuse if the expedient of melting and refashioning were widely adopted.
- (7) Only then is the former uncleanness revived.-The verse quoted in n. 2. refers to such.
- (8) The hole which removes its status of a utensil must be of a certain size, — large enough to permit a pomegranate to fall through.
- (9) V. Glos.
- (10) When it is purified by means of tebillah it may not be used until the evening; but making a hole and repairing it permits its immediate use. One seeing this vessel thus used on the same day may think that it underwent tebillah, and that the latter too releases it for immediate use.
- (11) Abaye's reason still holds good, for one may think that a small note too would have sufficed. But Raba's reason does not operate, for it is plainly evident that this was newly remade.
- (12) Of the eighteen enactments.
- (13) Roughly manufactured, without being kneaded and baked.
- (14) I.e., the mikweh retains its powers of purification.
- (15) V. p. 61, n. 3. The spout was fixed in the earth before it was actually a spout, and after fixing it was made hollow to act as a water duct to the mikweh. In that case the water that passes through it is regarded as 'living water'. When, however, the water falls from the spout into vessels, it becomes 'drawn water', which renders the mikweh unfit. This holds good whether they are very large vessels, too big to be susceptible to uncleanness, e.g., a tub more than forty se'ahs in capacity, or very small, so that I might think of disregarding them altogether; also, even if of dung, when they are not regarded as vessels at all in respect to uncleanness. If they are merely forgotten there, Beth Hillel maintain that the water is not 'drawn', since it was unintentional.
- (16) But not under the spout, and they are filled with the rain water which flows thence into the mikweh.
- (17) V. n. 3. Because he had no intention at all of filling it, since he did not place it under the spout.
- (18) I.e., they differ here too.
- (19) The term debe Rab means either the disciples of the Academy founded by Rab or scholars in general; Weiss, Dor, III, 158 (Ed. 1924).
- (20) Utensils purified in the mikweh.
- (21) Because the mikweh was rendered unfit, as above. For he showed that he desired the water to flow into the utensils, and though he had forgotten them by the time the rain descended, his original intention was fulfilled, and the water is regarded as drawn.
- (22) Since there were no clouds, his placing the utensils there was not with the intention of filling them.
- (23) And by then he has forgotten them.
- (24) By the dispersal of the clouds; hence the subsequent filling does not render the water drawn.
- (25) Since there is a controversy, the halachah agrees with Beth Hillel, that the mikweh is fit.
- (26) The Cutheans were the descendants of the heathens who settled in Samaria after the destruction of the Northern Kingdom. They accepted a form of Judaism, and the Rabbis' attitude towards them varied. At times they were regarded as Jews, but they were subsequently declared non-Jews. The present enactment treats them as Jews, who, however, are looked upon with disfavour.
- (27) Pl. of niddah, a menstruant woman.

(28) I.e., from birth they are treated as unclean, like a niddah. The purpose of this enactment was to discourage intermarriage with them (Tosaf.).

(29) This refers to the defilement caused by a dead person, not by contact but through the fact that both the dead person and the object defiled are under the same covering, e.g., the roof of a house or an overhead awning (cf. Num. XIX, 14f), which induces uncleanness to the object defiled. The width of the covering object must not be less than the thickness of an ox-goad, for which v. infra '7a.

Talmud - Mas. Shabbath 17a

May I bury my children,¹ if this is not an erroneous halachah, for the hearer heard [a ruling] and erred [therein]. [Viz.,] a peasant was passing with an ox-goad on his shoulder and one end thereof overshadowed a grave, and he was declared unclean in virtue of [the law of] utensils which overshadowed the dead.² R. Akiba said, I will rectify [it] so that the words of the Sages³ may be fulfilled. [Viz.,] all movable objects induce uncleanness in their bearers by the thickness of an ox-goad; [and induce uncleanness] in themselves, by any thickness; and in other people or utensils, by the width⁴ of a handbreadth. And R. Jannai observed: and the ox-goad of which they spoke is not a handbreadth in thickness but in circumference, and they enacted [this law] concerning its circumference on account of its thickness.⁵ But according to R. Tarfon who said, 'May I bury my children but this halachah is incorrect!' they are less [than eighteen]? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac, That the daughters of Cutheans are niddoth from their cradles was also enacted on that same day; and on the other [question]⁶ he agrees with R. Meir.⁷

And another?-When one vintages [grapes] for the vat [I.C., to manufacture wine], Shammai maintains: It is made fit (to become unclean); while Hillel ruled, It is not made fit.⁸ Said Hillel to Shammai: Why must one vintage [grapes] in purity, yet not gather [olives] in purity?⁹ If you provoke me, he replied, I will decree uncleanness in the case of olive gathering too. A sword was planted in the Beth Hamidrash and it was proclaimed, 'He who would enter, let him enter, but he who would depart, let him not depart!'¹⁰ And on that day Hillel sat submissive before Shammai, like one of the disciples,¹¹ and it was as grievous to Israel¹² as the day when the [golden] calf was made. Now, Shammai and Hillel enacted [this measure], but they would not accept it from them; but their disciples came¹³ and enacted it, and it was accepted from them.¹⁴

[Now,] what is the reason?¹⁵ -Said Ze'iri in R. Hanina's name: For fear lest he vintage it into unclean baskets.¹⁶ Now, that is well on the view that an unclean vessel renders fluid effective;¹⁷ but on the view that an unclean vessel does not render fluid effective, what can be said?-Rather, said Ze'iri in R. Hanina's name: For fear lest he vintage it in pitch lined baskets.¹⁸ Raba said: It is a preventive measure on account of tightly cleaving, [clusters].¹⁹ R. Nahman said in Rabbah b. Abbuha's name: [It is a preventive measure, for] a man sometimes goes to his vineyard to see if the grapes are ready for vintaging, takes a bunch of grapes to squeeze it, and sprinkles [the juice] on the grapes, and at the time of gathering the moisture is still dripping on them.

And another?-Said

(1) Lit., 'may I cut off my children that this halachah is cut off'.

(2) I.e. any utensil which overshadows the dead becomes itself unclean, whatever its width, and the peasant was

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. A SUKKAH¹ WHICH² IS MORE THAN TWENTY CUBITS HIGH IS NOT VALID, R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID. ONE WHICH IS NOT TEN HAND BREADTHS HIGH, OR WHICH HAS NOT THREE WALLS, OR WHICH HAS MORE SUN THAN SHADE, IS NOT VALID.

GEMARA. We have learnt elsewhere³ : If the [cross-beam above an] alley-entry⁴ is more than twenty cubits high, it must be lowered. R. Judah says this is unnecessary. Now wherein lies the difference [between the two cases that] with regard to the Sukkah it is declared NOT VALID, while with regard to [the cross-beam over] the alley-entry, a remedy is indicated? — With regard to the Sukkah, since it is a Pentateuchal⁵ ordinance, it [was proper categorically to] state, NOT VALID;⁶ with regard to [the cross-beam over] an alley-entry, however, since the injunction is only Rabbinical,⁷ a remedy is given.⁸ And, if you wish, you may say that even with a Pentateuchal command a remedy may be given, but with regard to the Sukkah, as the ordinances relating thereto are many it was briefly stated, NOT VALID⁹ [while in the case of a cross-beam over] an alley-entry, since the regulations thereof¹⁰ are not many, a remedy is indicated.

Whence do we know this?¹¹ — Rabbah answered: Scripture says, That your generations may know¹² that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths,¹³ [with a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man 'knows' that he is dwelling in a booth, but with one higher than twenty cubits he does not 'know' that he is dwelling in a booth, since his eye does not descry it.¹⁴ R. Zera replied: From the following verse, And there shall be a booth for a shadow in the daytime from the heat.¹⁵ [With a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man sits in the shade of the booth;¹⁶ but with one higher than twenty cubits he sits, not in the shade of the booth¹⁶ but in the shade of its walls.¹⁷ Said Abaye to him, ¹⁸ But if so, if a man made his Sukkah in Ashteroth Karnayim¹⁹ would it also be no valid Sukkah? — He answered him: In that case, remove the 'Ashteroth Karnayim' and there will remain the shade of the Sukkah, but here, remove the walls, and you have no shade of a Sukkah.²⁰

Raba replied: [It is derived] from the following verse, Ye shall dwell in booths seven days,²¹ the Torah declared, For the whole seven days leave thy permanent abode and dwell in a temporary abode. [With a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man makes his abode a temporary one; [in one] higher than twenty cubits, a man does not make his abode temporary, but permanent.²² Said Abaye to him, But if so, if he made walls of iron and placed the [proper] covering²³ over them, would it also²⁴ be no valid Sukkah. The other answered him, it is this that I mean to tell you: [In a booth] up to twenty cubits, which a man makes his temporary abode, even if he makes it permanent, he has fulfilled his obligation; [but in one] higher than twenty cubits, such as a man makes his permanent abode, even if he makes it temporary, he has not fulfilled his obligation.

- (4) If an alleyway has courtyards opening into it, while on one side it is open to a public domain, a cross-beam placed over the entrance imparts to it some of the characteristics of a private domain within which freedom of movement on the Sabbath is permitted.
- (5) V. Supra n. 1.
- (6) The suggestion of a remedy might have been misunderstood as being mere advice the neglect of which did not vitally affect the performance of the precept, and so it would be concluded that ex post facto the Sukkah may be deemed fit. (V. Tosaf. 'Er. 2a s.v. Vfux contra Rashi).
- (7) According to the Pentateuchal ordinance three walls suffice to make an enclosure private.
- (8) There is no need for so much precaution in the case of a Rabbinical, as in that of a Pentateuchal law.
- (9) Thus presenting a succinct ruling covering all disqualifications. Were remedies for each disqualification to be indicated the ruling would have extended to undue lengths, contrary to the principle of brevity in teaching (v. Pes. 3b).

- (21) Lev. XXIII, 42.
- (22) Such a high structure requires firm foundations and walls and these give it the characteristics of a permanent abode.
- (23) lfX, 'to cover' refers especially to the valid covering of a Sukkah,
- (24) Since it is a permanent structure.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 2b

All¹ do not agree with [the deduction of] Rabbah, since that [verse]² refers to the knowledge of [future] generations. Nor do they agree with R. Zera, since that verse³ refers to the Messianic age.⁴ [What, however, does] R. Zera [answer to this objection]?- [he could answer], If so, the verse could read 'And there shall be a covering for a shadow in the daytime'. Why then was it stated, 'And there shall be a booth for a shadow in the daytime'? Hence you must infer therefrom both points.⁵

Nor do they⁶ agree with Raba, on account of the objection of Abaye.⁷

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Josiah in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion⁸ is where the walls do not reach the covering, but where the walls do reach the covering the sukkah is valid, even if it is higher than twenty cubits?

‘Whose authority is followed’ [you ask]? it is in accordance with Rabbah whose reason⁹ is that the eye does not descry it, but where the walls reach the covering, the eye¹⁰ does descry it.

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Huna in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion⁸ is where the area of the sukkah was only four cubits square but where it was more than four cubits square [both agree] that even if it is higher than twenty cubits it is valid? — In agreement with whom [you ask]? In agreement with R. Zera who gives as the reason¹¹ the [character of the] shade, and, since it¹² is spacious- there is the shade of a Sukkah.¹³

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Hanan b. Rabbah in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion¹⁴ is only where [the Sukkah] can contain [only] a person's head, the greater part of his body, and his table,¹⁵ but where it is larger than this [both agree] that even if it is higher than twenty cubits it is valid? — In agreement with whom [you ask]? In agreement with none.¹⁶

It is understandable that R. Josiah disagrees with R. Huna and with R. Hanan b. Rabbah, since they lay down a [minimum] measurement in the extent [of the Sukkah] while he does not lay down a minimum measurement as to the extent [thereof]; but [as regards] R. Huna and R. Hanan b. Rabbah, can we say that they differ on [what minimum of extent constitutes] the validity of the Sukkah, the former¹⁷ holding the opinion that the validity of the sukkah [depends upon its being a minimum of] four cubits [square] while the latter¹⁸ holds that the validity of the sukkah [depends, upon its capacity of] containing his head, the greater part of his body, and his table?— No! Both may agree that the validity of the Sukkah [depends upon its capacity of] containing his head, the greater part of his body, and his table, but here they differ on the following principle: One master¹⁸ holds the opinion that they¹⁹ differ where the Sukkah [can] contain [only] his head, the greater part of his body, and his table, but if it is larger than this both agree that it is valid,²⁰ while the other master¹⁷ holds the opinion that they differ [about a Sukkah whose size is] between [one capable of] containing his head, the greater part of his body and his table, and one four cubits square, but if it is more than four cubits square, both agree that it is valid.²¹

It was objected:²² A Sukkah which is higher than twenty cubits is not valid, but R. Judah declared it valid up to a height of forty or fifty cubits. R. Judah stated, ‘It happened with Queen Helena²³ in Lydda²⁴ that her Sukkah was higher than twenty cubits, and the elders nevertheless were going in and out of it and spoke not a word to her [in disagreement]’. They said to him, ‘Is²⁵ this a proof? She was a woman and [therefore] free from the obligation of the Sukkah’.²⁶ He answered them, ‘Did she not have seven sons? And besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’. Why does he have to add ‘and besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’? Thus he said to them: If you will answer [with regard to her seven sons] that her sons were minors²⁷ and minors are free from [the obligation of] the sukkah, since [however] she had seven, there must have been at least one²⁸ who was [old enough] not to be dependent on his mother; and if you will object that [the duty of educating] a child who is not dependent on his mother is merely a Rabbinical injunction, and she took no heed of a Rabbinical injunction, I²⁹ add ‘and besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’. Now this [Baraita] is well according to the authority who says that their³⁰ difference of opinion was in the case where the walls did not reach the covering;³¹ since it is the custom of a queen to sit in a sukkah whose walls do not reach the roof because of ventilation; but according to the authority who states that they differed only in the case of a small' Sukkah,¹ is it then customary for a queen to sit in a diminutive sukkah?² — Rabbah b.

Adda answered, The ruling was necessary only in the case of a Sukkah constructed with many recesses.³ Is it then customary for a queen to sit in a sukkah with many recesses? — R. Ashi answered: [The ruling] was necessary only in the case of the recesses in it.⁴ The Rabbis hold the opinion that her sons sat in the proper Sukkah, while she sat in one of the recesses for reasons of modesty, and hence they⁵ made no remark,⁶ while R. Judah was of the opinion that her sons sat with her,⁷ and still they⁵ made no remark.

R. Samuel b. Isaac⁸ stated, The halachah is that [the Sukkah] must be able to contain his head, the greater part of his body, and his table. R. Abba said to him, In agreement with whom is this ruling? Is it in agreement with Beth Shammai?⁹ -The other answered him,, According to whom else? Another version: R. Abba said to him, Who holds this opinion?-He answered, ‘Beth Shammai, and¹⁰ do not budge from it’.

R. Nahman b. Isaac demurred: Whence do we know that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel are in dispute concerning a small Sukkah? Perhaps their dispute concerns a large Sukkah, as for instance, where a man sat at the entrance of the Sukkah with his table inside the house,¹¹ Beth Shammai holding the opinion that we prohibit it lest he be drawn after the table, while Beth Hillel hold that we do not prohibit it? This, furthermore, may be deduced also [from the wording], for it was stated, ‘If his head and the greater part of his body were within the Sukkah but his table was within the house, Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid;’¹² but if it is [as you say]¹³ it ought to read, [If the Sukkah can] contain, or cannot contain [his head etc.].¹⁴

But do they not dispute concerning a small Sukkah? Has it not in fact been taught: [If a Sukkah can] contain his head, the greater part of his body and his table, it is valid. Rabbi says, It must be four cubits square. While in another [Baraita] it has been taught: Rabbi says, Any Sukkah which is not four cubits square is invalid, while the Sages say, Even if it can contain only his head, and the greater part of his body it is valid. Whereas of ‘his table’ there is no mention. Does not thus¹⁵ a contradiction arise between the two [Baraitas]? We must consequently infer therefrom that one is [according to] Beth Shammai, and the other according to Beth Hillel!¹⁶

Mar Zutra observed, The wording of this Mishna!¹² also proves it,¹³ since it says: ‘Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid’, and if it were [as you say]¹⁷ it ought to read: Beth Shammai say’, He has not fulfilled his obligation while Beth Hillel say that he has.¹⁸ But do not the words, ‘He [whose head etc.] were’¹⁹ present a difficulty? — The fact is that they differ on two [points], on a small Sukkah and a large one, but the text is defective and is to be read thus: ‘He whose head and the greater part of his body were within the sukkah and his table within the house,²⁰ Beth Shammai say, He has not fulfilled his obligation and Beth Hillel say, He has; and if it is [able to] contain only his head and the major part of his body alone,²¹ Beth Shammai declare it invalid and Beth Hillel valid.’ Who is the authority for that which our Rabbis taught: ‘A house which is not four cubits square is free from the obligations of Mezuzah²² , and parapet,²³ does not contract levitical uncleanness from leprosy,²⁴ is not irredeemable among the dwelling houses of a walled city,²⁵ nor does one return on its account from the array of war,²⁶ nor need an ‘Erub²⁷ be prepared for it, nor Shittuf,²⁷ nor does one place therein an ‘Erub²⁸ nor make of it an extension¹ between two cities, nor can brothers or partners divide it “?² Must we say that it agrees with Rabbi,³ and not with the Rabbis?⁴ — No! One can even say that it agrees with the Rabbis. The Rabbis say it⁵ only with regard to a Sukkah which is a temporary abode, but with regard to a house which is a permanent abode, even the Rabbis admit that if it has an area of four cubits square, people dwell therein,⁶ otherwise, they do not dwell therein.

The Master said, 'It is free from the obligations of Mezuzah, and parapet, does not contract levitical uncleanness from leprosy, is not irredeemable among the houses of a walled city, nor does one return on its account from the array of war'. What is the reason? — Because the term 'house' occurs in all [these commandments].⁷

‘Nor need an ‘Erub be prepared for it, nor Shittuf, nor does one place therein an ‘Erub’. What is the reason?—Since it is unsuitable as a dwelling.⁸ Now the ‘Erub of courtyards is not placed therein, but a Shittuf⁹ may be placed therein. What is the reason? — Since it is no worse than a courtyard within an alleyway as we have learnt, ‘The ‘Erub of courtyards [are placed] in a courtyard, and the shittuf of an alley in the alley’,¹⁰ and the point was raised, [How can it be said that], ‘The ‘Erubs of courtyards [are placed] in a courtyard’? Have we not in fact learnt,¹¹ If a man placed his ‘Erub in a gatehouse¹² or in an exedra, or in a gallery, it is no valid ‘Erub,¹³ and he who dwells therein cannot be a cause of prohibition?¹⁴ — Say rather, ‘Erubs of courtyards [are placed] in a house of the courtyard, and the Shittufs of alleys in a courtyard of the alley; and this¹⁵ is no worse than a courtyard in an alley.

‘Nor make of it an extension between two cities’. Since it is not regarded even as an outpost.¹⁶ What is the reason?— Outposts are suitable for their purpose,¹⁷ but this is unsuitable for anything.¹⁸

‘Nor can brothers or partners divide it’. The reason apparently is that it is not four cubits square, but if it were four cubits square, [presumably] they could divide it.¹⁹ But have we not learnt, A courtyard should not be divided unless there be four cubits to each [of the parties]?²⁰ — Say rather, The law of division²¹ does not apply to it, as [it does in the case of] a courtyard. For R. Huna ruled, ‘A courtyard is divided according to the number of its doors’,²² and R. Hisda said, ‘Four cubits are allowed for each door and the remainder is divided equally’, but this²³ applies only to a house which is intended to stand, [and therefore] we allow it a [share in the] courtyard; but as to this [a hovel] which is intended to be demolished, we do not allow it [a share in the] courtyard.

If [a Sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high and he diminished its [height] with bolsters and cushions it is not a [valid] diminution,

(1) A legal fiction whereby a house between two cities’ (situated at a distance of a hundred and forty-one and a third cubits from each other) ‘extends’ the boundaries of each if it was equidistant from both. The two cities are then treated as one, and walking from one to the other and along distances of two thousand cubits from each city in all directions is permitted on the Sabbath.

(2) If it fell to brothers as an inheritance, or if it belonged to partners who wish to dissolve their partnership. V. Mishnah B.B., I, 6.

For the same reason only the resident of a house that is suitable as a dwelling imposes restrictions on his neighbours unless he joined in the ‘Erub. even though he abandoned them¹ since his intention is canceled by that of other men;² if [he spread] straw [in order to diminish the height] and abandoned it, it is a [valid] diminution, and much more so is this the case with earth which he abandoned. [If he spread] straw which he had no intention of removing³ or earth concerning which his intention is unknown — this is a matter of dispute between R. Jose and the Rabbis. For we have learnt, If a house was filled with straw or gravel and the owner announced his intention to abandon it, it is duly abandoned.⁴ [Thus only if] he expressly abandoned it,⁵ is it not regarded as abandoned, but if he did not expressly do so, it is not so regarded; and with regard to this we have learnt, R. Jose ruled: Straw which he has no intention of removing is like ordinary earth⁶ and is deemed to be abandoned; earth which he intends to remove [later] is like ordinary straw⁶ and is not deemed to be abandoned.⁷ [If a Sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high but palm-leaves⁸ hung down within the twenty cubits, if the shade⁹ is more than the sun,¹⁰ it is valid, otherwise it is invalid. If [the sukkah] was ten handbreadths high¹¹ and palm-leaves hung down within the ten cubits, Abaye¹² intended to say that if the sun [that penetrates through them] is more than their shade, it is valid,¹³ [but] Raba said to him, This is a house [whose roof] hangs low down, and no man lives in such a dwelling. If it was higher than twenty cubits and he built a ledge at the middle wall¹⁴ along its whole length¹⁵ and it¹⁶ has the minimum size of a valid Sukkah,¹⁷ it¹⁸ is valid.¹⁹ If [he built the ledge] on a side [wall], — if from the edge of the ledge to the wall [opposite] there are four cubits,²⁰ it²¹ is invalid; but if the distance was less than four cubits, it¹⁸ is valid.²² What principle does he teach us by this ruling? That we apply the rule of the 'curved wall'?²³ But have we not [already] learnt it: A house [the middle of whose flat roof] is missing and one placed the valid covering of a Sukkah upon it,²⁴ if there are four cubits from the [top of the] wall to the covering, it²⁵ is invalid;²⁶ which [shows that] if the distance was less than this it is valid?²⁷ — One might have thought that only there²⁸ [it is valid] since [each side] is suitable [to serve] as a wall;²⁹ but that here³⁰ since it³¹ is unsuitable for a wall, one might say that it is invalid, [therefore] we were taught [that even here the principle³² is applied].

If [a sukkah] was higher than twenty cubits and one built a platform in the middle of it, if there are four cubits on every side between the edge of the platform and the wall, it³³ is invalid; but if the distance is less than four cubits, it is valid. What principle does this teach us? That we apply the rule of the 'curved wall'?³⁴ But is not this principle identical with the former one?—One might have thought that we apply the rule of the 'curved wall' on one side only, but not on every side, therefore we were taught [that we apply it to all sides also].

If [a Sukkah] was less than ten handbreadths in height and one hollowed out³⁵ [a hole]³⁶ in order to bring it to [ten handbreadths], — if there was a distance of three handbreadths from the brim of the hollow to the wall, it is invalid;

 - (6) Concerning which the owner's intention is unknown.
 - (7) It has thus been shown that all agree that straw or earth that had been explicitly abandoned is deemed to be duly abandoned, and that straw about which the owner's intention is not known and earth which he intends to remove is not regarded as abandoned, while as regards straw or earth which the owner does not intend to remove and earth about which the owner's intention is not known there is a divergence of view between R. Jose, who deems it to be abandoned, and the Rabbis.

if the distance was less than three handbreadths¹ it is valid. Why do we say there² 'less than four cubits', and here 'less than three handbreadths'? In the former case where there is a wall,³ it is sufficient [if the distance is] 'less than four cubits'; in the latter case, however, where a wall has to be made,⁴ [if the distance is] 'less than three handbreadths' it is [valid]; otherwise it is not.

If [a sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high and one erected in it⁵ a pillar ten handbreadths high, and large enough for a valid sukkah,⁶ [in this case] Abaye intended to say the partitions⁷ are deemed to be continued upward,⁸ [but] Raba said to him: Recognizable partitions are necessary, which these are not.

Our Rabbis taught: If a man drove four poles into the ground and put the sukkah-covering on them, R. Jacob declares it valid and the Sages declare it invalid. R. Huna stated: The dispute relates only [to poles erected] on the edge of a roof, where R. Jacob holds that we apply the rule of 'the partition continues upward'⁹ while the Sages hold that we do not apply the rule of 'the partition continues upward'; but [if they were erected] in the middle of the roof,¹⁰ all agree that [the Sukkah is] invalid.¹¹ R. Nahman, however, maintained that the dispute relates only [to poles erected] in the middle of the roof.¹² It was asked: [Does he mean that] the dispute concerns only [poles that were erected] in the middle of the roof, but if such were erected on the edge of the roof all agree that it is valid,¹³ or is it possible [that he means that] the dispute concerns both cases? — The question remains undecided.¹⁴

An objection was raised: If one drove poles in the ground and placed the Sukkah-covering over them, R. Jacob declares [such a sukkah] valid, and the Sages declare it invalid. Now the earth, surely, is [in respect of partitions] like the middle of a roof¹⁵ and still R. Jacob regards [the Sukkah] as valid. Is this not, then, a refutation of R. Huna?¹⁶ — It is indeed a refutation. Moreover, [presumably] they dispute¹⁷ concerning the middle of the roof, only, but where [poles are put up] on the edge of the roof they all agree that it is valid. Must it then be said that this will refute R. Huna on two points?¹⁸ -R. Huna could answer you: They disagree about poles in the middle of the roof, and likewise also about those on the edge, and the reason why the dispute concerns the middle of the roof is in order to show you how far R. Jacob's view extends viz., that even where the poles were in the middle of the roof he holds [the Sukkah] to be valid.

Our Rabbis taught: If a man drove four [round shaped] poles into the ground and covered them with the Sukkah-covering, R. Jacob ruled, We see: If it is found that on being planed and smoothed¹⁹ there would remain the width of a handbreadth on two adjacent sides,²⁰ they²¹ are treated as deymads,²² but if not, they cannot be treated as deymads for R. Jacob used to say, The prescribed minimum width of the deymads of a Sukkah is a handbreadth;²³ but the Sages say, Only if two [of the adjacent walls] are proper [walls], may the width of the third be only a handbreadth.

ONE OF WHICH IS NOT TEN HANDBREADTHS HIGH. Whence do we know this?- It was stated, Rab, R. Hanina, R. Johanan and R. Habiba learnt: (throughout all Seder Mo'ed²⁴ when these pairs are mentioned together [some] substitute the name of R. Jonathan for that of R. Johanan), the ark [of the covenant] was nine handbreadths high,²⁵ and the ark cover one handbreadth,²⁶ making a total of ten handbreadths, and it is written, And there I will meet with thee, and I will speak with thee from above the ark-cover;²⁷

 - (8) As far as the ceiling, and that, since the sides are no less than ten handbreadths high and the distance between the top of the pillar and the roof is less than twenty cubits, the pillar constitutes a valid Sukkah.
 - (9) The walls of the house, may, therefore, be regarded as continuing upward and forming walls for the Sukkah.
 - (10) So that the house walls are removed front the poles.
 - (11) The poles alone being insufficient to constitute valid walls.
 - (12) R. Jacob holding that poles provided the width of each is no less than a handbreadth, constitute valid walls for a Sukkah, while the Sages hold that a Sukkah must have no less than two valid walls adjacent to each other and a third one of the minimum width of a handbreadth.
 - (13) On the principle of upward extension.
 - (14) Teku (v. Glos.).

 - (17) R. Jacob and the Rabbis, in the Baraitha just cited.
 - (18) His statement (a) that all agree that poles in the middle of a roof constitute no valid Sukkah is refuted by the explicit statement in the Baraitha, while his statement (b) that the dispute concerns poles erected on the edge of the roof is refuted by the inference just made.

and it has been taught, R. Jose stated, Neither did the Shechinah¹ ever descend to earth, nor did Moses or Elijah ever ascend to Heaven,² as it is written, 'The heavens are the heavens of the Lord, but the earth hath He given to the sons of men'.³ But did not the Shechinah descend to earth? Is it not in fact written, And the Lord came down upon Mount Sinai?⁴ — That was above ten handbreadths [from the summit]. But is it not written, And His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives?⁵ — That will be above ten handbreadths. But did not Moses and Elijah ascend to Heaven? Is it not in fact written, And Moses went up unto God?⁶ — [That was] to a level lower than ten [handbreadths from heaven]. But is it not written, And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven?⁷ — [That was] to a level lower than ten handbreadths. But is it not written, He⁸ seizeth hold of the face of His throne, and He spreadeth His cloud upon him,⁹ and R. Tanhum said: This teaches that the Almighty spread some of the radiance of¹⁰ his Shechinah and his cloud upon him?¹¹ — That was at a level lower than ten handbreadths. But in any case is it not written, 'He seizeth hold of the face of His throne'?¹² — The throne was well lowered for his sake until [it reached a level] lower than ten handbreadths [from Heaven] and then he¹¹ seized hold of it.

One can well understand that the ark was nine [handbreadths high] since it is written, And they shall make an ark of acacia wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half¹³ the height thereof,¹⁴ but whence do we know that the ark-cover was a handbreadth [high]? — From that which R. Hanina learned: As for all the vessels which Moses made, the Torah gave the measurements of their length and breadth and height, [while in the case of] the ark-cover its length and its breadth are given,¹⁵ but not its height.¹⁶ Proceed, therefore, to deduce it from the smallest of the vessels, concerning which it is said, And thou shalt make unto it a border of a handbreadth round about.¹⁷ Just as there the height was a handbreadth so was it there also a handbreadth. But why should not our deduction be made from the vessels themselves?¹⁸ — If one select the greater, one does not select well; if one select the lesser, one selects well.¹⁹ But why should not our deduction be made from the plate of gold,²⁰ as it was taught: 'The ziz²¹ was in the shape of a plate of gold two finger-breadths broad and stretching from ear to ear, and upon it were engraved two lines, Yod and He²² above, and Kodesh²³ [followed by a] Lamed²⁴ below,²⁵ and R. Eliezer son of R. Jose said, I saw it in Rome²⁶ and it had Kodesh Ladonai²⁷ on one line? — We deduce [the measurements of a] vessel from another vessel, but we do not deduce [the measurements of a] vessel from an ornament. Why then should we not deduce from the crown,²⁸ of which a master stated, The crown was on the smallest possible size?²⁹ — We deduce the size of a vessel from that of another vessel, but not from the appurtenances of a vessel. If so, [it may be objected] was not the border also an appurtenance of a vessel?³⁰ — The border was below [the top of] the table.³¹ This is correct according to the authority who holds that the border was below, but according to the authority who holds that it was above³² what can one answer³³ seeing that it³⁴ was only an appurtenance of a vessel? — The fact is that one adduces the size of a thing some of whose measurements are given by the Torah from another thing whose measurements are given by the Torah, but no deduction can be made from the plate of gold or the crown of which the Torah gave no measurements at all.

R. Huna said: [The height of the ark-cover may be deduced] from the following verse, Upon the face of the ark-cover' on the east,³⁵ and a 'face' is not smaller than a handbreadth. But perhaps it means a face like that of the Bar-Yokani?¹ — If one select the greater, one does not choose well, if one select the lesser, one does select well. Might it not be said that the face meant was one like that of a zipartha² which is very small? — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, R. Huna draws an analogy between two expressions of 'face'.³ It is written here, '[Upon the face of the ark-cover]', and it is written elsewhere,⁴ From the face of Isaac his father.⁵ But why should we not deduce from the 'face' Above, concerning which it is written, As one seeth the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me?⁶ -If one selects the greater, one does not select well; if one select the lesser, one selects well. Then why should we not deduce from the cherub,⁷ concerning which it is written, Toward the face of the ark-cover shall the faces of the cherubim be?⁸ — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, We have a tradition that the face of the cherubim was not less than a handbreadth, and R. Huna too made his deduction from this verse.⁹ What is the derivation of cherub?- R. Abbahu said, 'Like a child', for in Babylon they call a child Rabia.¹⁰ Said Abaye to him: If so,¹¹ how will you explain the Scriptural text, The first face was the face of the cherub and the second face the face of a man,¹² seeing that the face of a cherub is the same as that of a man?¹³ — [One¹⁴ has] a large face and the other a small face.¹⁵

But whence do we know that the height of the interior space¹⁶ exclusive of the covering, must be ten [handbreadths] seeing that it might be said that the covering¹⁷ also is included? — The fact is that the deduction¹⁸ is made from the Temple covering of which it is written, And the house which King Solomon built for the Lord, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits,¹⁹ and it is written, The height of the one cherub was ten cubits and so was it of the other cherub,²⁰ and it was taught, Just as we find in the Temple that the cherubim²¹ reached to a third of the height thereof²² so also in the Tabernacle²³ they reached to a third of its height.²⁴ Now what was the height of the Tabernacle? Ten cubits, as it is written, Ten cubits shall be the length of a board.²⁵ How much is this? Sixty handbreadths. How much is a third? Twenty handbreadths. Deduct the ten of the ark and the ark-cover,²⁶ and ten handbreadths remain; and it is written, And the cherubim shall spread out their wings on high, covering the ark-cover with their wings.⁹ [From which we see that] the Divine Law calls [the wings that were stretched] above a height of ten handbreadths²⁷ a 'covering'.²⁸ But whence do we know that their wings were above their heads? Is it not possible that they were on a level with their heads.²⁹ — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, It is written 'On high'. But perhaps this means that the wings were raised very high?³⁰ — Is it then written, 'On high, on high'?

This explanation is satisfactory according to R. Meir, who says that all the cubits [in the Sanctuary] were normal cubits,³¹ but according to R. Judah who says that the cubits of the edifice were six handbreadths, but of the vessels were five, what can be said? For how much [then] were the ark and cover?³² Eight and a half,³³ so that eleven and a half handbreadths are left.³⁴ Shall we [therefore] say that [according to R. Judah] a Sukkah must be [at least] eleven and a half [handbreadths high]? — The fact is that according to R. Judah the law³⁵ was learnt as a tradition, for R. Hiyya b. Ashi citing Rab stated: The laws concerning [minima],³⁶ standards, interpositions³⁷ and partitions³⁸ are [a part of the] halachah that was given to Moses on Sinai. But are not the laws relating to minima Pentateuchal, since it is written, A land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig-trees and pomegranates, a land of olive-trees and honey,³⁹ and R. Hanin stated that all this verse was said in allusion to the prescribed minima. ‘Wheat’ is an allusion to the leprous house as we have learnt: He who enters a leprous house with his clothes on his shoulders, and his sandals and rings in his hand, both he and they become instantaneously unclean;⁴⁰ [ if however he was dressed in his garments, and his sandals were on his feet, and his rings on his fingers, he becomes instantaneously unclean, but they¹ remain clean² unless he carries there long enough to eat half a loaf of wheaten bread but not of barley bread,³ while in a reclining position and eating with condiment.⁴ 'Barley'? As we have learnt, A barley-corn's bulk of a bone⁵ defiles by contact and by carrying, but not by 'overshadowing'.⁶ 'Vines' are an allusion to the fourth part [of a log of wine which is the minimum prohibited] to a Nazirite.⁷ 'Fig-trees' allude to the size of a dry fig [which is the minimum measurement for transgressing the law against] the carrying out⁸ of [food] on the Sabbath. 'Pomegranates'? As we have learnt: All [defiled wooden] vessels belonging to householders⁹ [become clean if the breaches in them] are as large as pomegranates.¹⁰ 'A land of olive-trees' [is an allusion to the] land all of whose [minima] standards [for permitted and forbidden things] is the bulk of an olive. How can it possibly mean 'all whose [minima] standards'? Are there not those which we have just mentioned? — Say rather, 'The majority of whose [minima] standards are the bulk of an olive'. 'Honey' alludes to the size of a large date,¹¹ [which is the minimum size forbidden] on the Day of Atonement. Does it not then clearly follow that the [minima] standards are Pentateuchal?¹² — Do you then imagine that the [minima] standards were actually prescribed in the Pentateuch? [The fact is that] they are but traditional laws while the Scriptural verse is merely a support.

But are not [the laws of] interposition Pentateuchal, as it is written, And he shall wash his flesh in water¹³ [which implies] that nothing should interpose between him and the water? The traditional law comes [to teach] concerning one's hair, in agreement with a statement of Rabbah b. Bar Hana, for Rabbah b. Bar Hana stated: One knotted hair constitutes an interposition;¹⁴ three hairs do not, but I do not know [the law in the case of] two. But is not the law relating to one's hair also Pentateuchal, since it was written, And he shall wash [eth] his flesh in water¹³ and [the word] 'eth' includes that which is joined to his body, i.e., his hair?¹⁵ — The traditional law comes to teach with reference to [the ruling reported by] R. Isaac; for R. Isaac said:

In the case of a craftsman's utensils, even holes as small as an olive, are sufficient to deprive them of the legal status of utensils, since they cause the utensils to be unfit for sale, and they consequently become clean.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 6b

According to the word of the Torah¹ if most [of one's hair is covered]² and one minds it, an interposition is constituted,³ and if one does not mind it, no interposition is constituted. [The Rabbis] however enacted a prohibition against [a covering of] most of one's hair, even if one does not mind it, as a preventive measure [against the possibility of allowing an interposition on] most of one's hair where one does mind it, and that [a covering over] the minor part of one's hair where one minds it [shall constitute an interposition] on account [of the possibility of allowing an interposition over] most of one's hair where one minds it. Then why should not a prohibition be enacted against an interposition over the lesser part of one's hair where one does not mind it as a preventive measure against [the possibility of allowing an interposition over] the lesser part where one does mind it or the major part which one does not mind? — This ruling⁴ itself is only a restrictive enactment; shall we come and institute a restrictive enactment against the possibility of infringing another restrictive enactment?⁵

[As for the laws of] partitions, these are those referred to above.⁶ That is satisfactory according to R. Judah,⁷ but according to R. Meir⁸ what can one say?⁹ — That the tradition refers to [the legal fiction] of extension,¹⁰ junction¹¹ and the curved wall.¹²

OR WHICH HAS NOT THREE WALLS. Our Rabbis taught: Two [walls] must be of the prescribed dimensions, and the third [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ R. Simeon says: Three walls must be of the prescribed dimensions, and the fourth [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ On what principle do they differ? — The Rabbis hold that the traditional Scriptural text¹⁴ is authoritative, while R. Simeon holds that the traditional reading¹⁵ is authoritative. 'The Rabbis hold that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative', and the word Sukkoth occurs twice defectively and once plene, making four references.¹⁶ Deduct one¹⁷ for the law itself,¹⁸ and three remain; two [walls at least] must be of the prescribed dimensions, and tradition came and diminished [the prescribed minimum of] the third, reducing it to only one handbreadth. ‘R. Simeon holds that the traditional reading is authoritative’. The word Sukkoth¹⁹ is read thrice, which²⁰ equals six [references]. Deduct one Scriptural reference²¹ for the law itself and four remain; three walls at least of prescribed dimensions, and tradition came and diminished the [prescribed minimum of the] fourth and reduced it to a handbreadth. And if you wish, you can say that they²² are unanimous that the traditional reading is authoritative²³ but they differ in this; that one Master²⁴ holds that the covering heeds a Scriptural reference,²⁵ while the other Master²⁶ holds that it does not.²⁷ And if you wish you can say that they are unanimous that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative,²⁸ but they differ on this principle; that one Master²⁴ holds that the tradition comes to diminish [the implications of Scripture]²⁹ while the other²⁶ holds that tradition comes and adds to it.³⁰

And if you wish you can say that both agree that tradition comes to diminish and that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative, but they differ as to whether one uses first [references] for exegesis. One Master²⁶ holds that we employ first references for exegesis, and the other Master³¹ holds that we do not.

R. Mattenah said: The reason of R. Simeon is a derivation from the following verse: And there shall be a Sukkah for a shadow in the day-time from the heat, and for a refuge and for a covert from storm and from rain.³² Where is this handbreadth [of a wall]³³ placed? — Rab said: It is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls].³⁴ R. Kahana and R. Assi said to Rab:

- (1) ‘Torah’ here means the halachah received by Moses on Sinai (Rashi).
 - (2) With mud; or each hair was knotted singly.
 - (3) So far in virtue of the halachah given to Moses on Sinai.
 - (4) That an interposition (a) over a minor part which one minds or (b) over a major part which one does not mind.
 - (5) Of course not. Hence the permissibility of an interposition over a minor portion which one does not mind.
 - (6) The height of a Sukkah.
 - (7) Who does not derive these laws from a Scriptural text.
 - (8) Who deduced the height of ten handbreadths from Scriptural verses.
 - (9) Sc. how could such laws which are Pentateuchal be described as merely traditional?
 - (10) Sud a partition that does not reach (a) the ground or (b) the ceiling may in certain conditions be deemed to touch the ground and the ceiling respectively.
 - (11) SuCS small interstices, of less than three handbreadths, are disregarded, and the wall is deemed to be a solid whole.
 - (12) vnueg ipus if a portion of the roof of a Sukkah consists of materials that are legally unfit for the purpose the Sukkah may nevertheless be valid if that portion is adjacent to any of its walls and terminates within a distance of four cubits from that wall. That portion of the roof together with the wall it adjoins are regarded as one curved wall; and the space under the remainder of the roof, consisting of suitable materials, may be used as a proper Sukkah.

(31) Sc. the Rabbis.

(32) Isa. IV, 6; unless there are four walls, the Sukkah is no refuge from storms.

(33) Of the third wall according to the Rabbis and of the fourth according to R. Simeon.

(34) Sc. if, for instance, (according to the Rabbis) there are only two walls running respectively from north to south along the east and from east to west along the south, meeting each other at south east, the small handbreadth wall is to be placed either at the northern end of the eastern wall or at the western end of the southern wall.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 7a

Why not place it in a slanting position?¹ Rab remained silent. It was also stated: Samuel said in the name of Levi: It is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls], and so it is ruled in the Beth Hamidrash that it is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls]. R. Simon (or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi) ruled: One makes [the additional wall of the width of] a loose² handbreadth and places it within three handbreadths of the wall, since whatever is less than three handbreadths from the wall is regarded as joined to the wall.³

Rab Judah said, A Sukkah made like an [open] alley-way⁴ is valid, and this handbreadth [wall] is placed in whatever side one pleases.⁵ R. Simon (or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi) says, He makes a strip of slightly more than four [handbreadths]⁶ and places it within three handbreadths of the wall, since whatever is less than three handbreadths from the wall is regarded as joined to the wall. But why did you say in the previous case⁷ that one loose handbreadth suffices while here you say that there must be a strip of four handbreadths? — In the previous instance where there are two valid walls,⁸ a loose handbreadth suffices, but here, where there are no two valid walls,⁹ if there is a strip of four handbreadths it is valid, otherwise, it is not [valid]. Raba ruled, It¹⁰ is only permitted if it has the form of a doorway.¹¹ Another version is that Raba said, And it¹⁰ is also valid if it has the form of a doorway.¹² Another version is that Raba said: And in addition,¹³ the form of a doorway [to the intervening part] is necessary.¹⁴ R. Ashi found R. Kahana making [the third wall of a Sukkah] a loose handbreadth wide¹⁵ and constructing also the form of a doorway. He said to him: Does not the Master hold the opinion of Raba who said that it is also valid with the form of a doorway?¹⁶ — He answered: I accept the other reading of [the statement of] Raba viz., that in addition [to a board of the size of a handbreadth] the form of a doorway is also necessary.

‘Two walls must be of the prescribed dimensions etc.’¹⁷ Raba¹⁸ said, And similarly with regard to the Sabbath.¹⁹ Since [the handbreadth] is regarded as valid wall of the Sukkah it is also regarded as a valid wall in respect of the Sabbath.²⁰ Abaye raised an objection against him: Do we then apply the rule of ‘since’?²¹ Was it not in fact taught: ‘[The rules relating to the structure of] the wall of a Sukkah are the same as those relating to that of the Sabbath,²² provided only that there is no gap of three handbreadths between any two reeds.²³ And the [law relating to the] Sabbath is more [stringent] than that of Sukkah, in that the [wall for purposes of] the Sabbath is valid only if its standing portion is more than that which is broken,²⁴ which is not the case with the Sukkah’. Now this means, does it not, that the law relating to the Sabbath of the Sukkah²⁵ is more [stringent] than that relating to the Sukkah itself,²⁶ and that we do not apply the rule of ‘since’?²⁷ — No, [it means that the law relating to] the ordinary Sabbath is more [stringent in its requirements with regard to a valid wall] than [the law relating to] the Sabbath of the Sukkah.²⁸ But if this is so,²⁹ why was it not also stated: [The law relating to] the ordinary Sukkah³⁰ is more [stringent] than [that of] the Sukkah of Sabbath,³¹ since [the validity of] the ordinary Sukkah demands a width of a loose handbreadth [for the third wall] while [the validity of] the Sukkah of Sabbath does not require the width of a loose handbreadth [for a wall] but a side-post alone is sufficient,³² for it is you who ruled³³ that if one placed Sukkah-covering over an alleyway which has a side-post it is valid?³⁴ — There was no need to mention this,³⁵ [since it is obvious³⁶ that] if we apply [the rule of ‘since’] from the less stringent³⁷ to the more stringent,³⁸ we certainly apply it From the more stringent to the less stringent.³⁹ [Reverting to] the main subject; ‘Rab ruled:

- (1) So that it would be facing two walls and the Sukkah would seem to have four walls. Lit., ‘as the head of an ox’, so
 - (2) A handbreadth is four fingerbreadths and the ‘loose handbreadth’ is measured by holding the fingers loosely, not pressed against one another.
 - (3) The total width now being four handbreadths and the prescribed minimum size of a Sukkah wall being seven handbreadths, the wall constitutes the greater part of a valid Sukkah wall.
 - (4) The two walls facing one another.
 - (5) Since either wall at either end is a projecting wall.
 - (6) The width of one handbreadth not being enough in this case.
 - (7) Where the walls were at right angles to one another.
 - (8) Cf. previous note.
 - (9) Since each stands isolated from the other.
 - (10) A Sukkah that has one wall less than the required number of walls.
 - (11) I.e., it is not enough to attach one board of the width of four handbreadths to one of the walls, but two posts each half a handbreadth in width must be attached to each opposite wall with a cross-beam joining them (cf. ‘Er. 11b).
 - (12) Instead of a board of the width of a handbreadth; sc. either the one or the other contrivance renders the Sukkah valid.
 - (13) To a board of the width of a handbreadth.
 - (14) Sc. one of the posts on which the cross-beam lies (cf. supra n. 2) must be a full handbreadth wide.
 - (15) In agreement with the ruling of R. Simon supra.

- (16) Without the addition of a board of the full width of a handbreadth.

- (18) Var. lec. Rabbah.
- (19) Sc. though at least three walls are necessary to constitute a private domain to permit carrying therein on the Sabbath, on the Sabbath of Tabernacles the Sukkah is regarded as a private domain even though it has only two normal walls and one of the width of a handbreadth, and if he set up such a Sukkah next to his entrance of this house adjoining the street, he may carry in and out of it into his house.
- (20) As the third narrow wall is on such a Sabbath, as on any other day, deemed valid as a wall for the Sukkah it is ipso facto deemed valid as a wall in respect of enclosing a private domain, and if such a Sukkah is set up at the entrance of a house opening out into the street, one may carry out of the house into the Sukkah and vice versa.
- (21) 'Since (the handbreadth wall) is regarded etc.'

- (23) That make up the fence.
- (24) A technical term meaning that the space of wall must exceed the interstices.
- (25) Sc. the Sabbath in the week of Tabernacles.
- (26) Sc. that though the Sukkah is valid as a Sukkah, it is not valid to carry therein on the Sabbath unless the wall space is more than the interstices.
- (27) Since the walls are valid in respect of the Sukkah they are also valid in respect of the Sabbath.
- (28) For on the Sabbath of the Festival the rule of 'since' (cf. n. 6) is well applied.
- (29) That the comparison is only between the Sabbath generally and the Sabbath of the festival.
- (30) Of the festival weekdays.
- (31) Cf. supra n. 4.

- (33) By' applying the rule of 'since etc.'.
- (34) On the Sabbath.
- (35) That the law relating to a Sukkah generally is more restrictive than that relating to a Sukkah on the Sabbath.
- (36) By an inference from the ruling in the earlier clause.
- (37) Sukkah.
- (38) Sabbath.
- (39) Viz., that a sidepost that effects validity in respect of the Sabbath also effects it in respect of Sukkah.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 7b

If one placed Sukkah-covering over an alley-way which has a side-post it is valid'. Rab further ruled: If one placed Sukkah-covering over the [upright] boards around wells¹ it is valid [as a Sukkah]. And the enunciation of [all the three laws² was] necessary. For if he had mentioned only [the law relating to] the alley-way one would have assumed [that there the Sukkah is valid]³ because it had two proper walls, but that in the case of partitions of wells, which have not two proper walls, the Sukkah is not valid. And if we had been informed of the boards around wells only, one would have assumed [that there the sukka is valid] because there are four walls, but that if one placed sukka-covering over an alleyway, where there are no walls, it is not [valid]. And if we had been informed of both those laws [but not of the third,] one would have assumed that from the more stringent to the less stringent [we apply the rule of 'since'] but not from the less stringent to the more. [Therefore all the three enunciations were] necessary.

OR WHICH HAS MORE SUN THAN SHADE IS NOT VALID.

Our Rabbis taught: [This⁴ applies only where] the sunshine is due to the scanty covering, but not where it is due to [interstices in] the walls, while R. Josiah says,⁴ Even where it is due to [interstices in] the walls. R. Yemar b. Shelemiah said in the name of Abaye, What is the reason of R. Josiah?⁵ — Because it is written: And thou shalt cover the ark with the veil.⁶ Now since the ‘veil’ was a partition⁷ and the Divine Law nevertheless called it a ‘covering’ it is evident that a wall must be as [close] as the covering. And [how do] the Rabbis [explain this verse]? — It⁸ means that the veil should bend over a little [at the top] so that it might look like a covering.

Abaye said: Rabbi, R. Josiah, R. Judah, R. Simeon, R. Gamaliel, Beth Shammai, R. Eliezer and ‘Others’⁹ -all hold the opinion that the Sukkah must be constructed like a permanent abode. ‘Rabbi’? — As it has been taught: Rabbi said, A sukkah which is not four cubits square¹⁰ is invalid.¹¹ ‘R. Josiah’? — As we have [just] stated. ‘R. Judah’? — As we have learnt: A SUKKAH WHICH IS MORE THAN TWENTY CUBITS HIGH IS NOT VALID, R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID.¹² ‘R. Simeon’? — As it has been taught: Two [walls] must be of the prescribed dimensions and the third [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ ‘R. Gamaliel’? — As it has been taught: If a man erects his Sukkah on the top of a waggon or on the deck of a ship, R. Gamaliel declares it invalid and R. Akiba declares it valid.¹⁴ ‘Beth Shammai’? — As we have learnt: If his head and the greater part of his body were within the Sukkah and his table was within the house, Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid.¹⁵ ‘R. Eliezer’? — As we have learnt: If a man makes his sukkah like a cone-shaped hut¹⁶ or if he propped it up against a wall,¹⁷ R. Eliezer declares it invalid, since it has no roof, and the Sages declare it valid.¹⁸ The ‘Others’? As it has been taught: Others Say: A Sukkah made like a dovecote¹⁹ is invalid, since it has no corners.

R. Johanan said: If a sukkah was [round shaped] like a furnace,²⁰ provided twenty-four men can sit around its circumference,²¹ it is valid, otherwise it is invalid. According to whom [is this²² state — ment made]? Obviously²³ according to Rabbi who says that a sukkah which is not four cubits square is invalid. But consider: A man occupies the space of a cubit, and where the circumference [of a circle] is three handbreadths, its diameter is one handbreadth,²⁴ should it not then²⁵ suffice²⁶ if only twelve men²⁷ [can sit around it]?²⁸

(20) R. Johanan disagrees with the 'others' supra.

(21) Each man is assumed to occupy one cubit space.

(22) Which requires such a large size for a round shaped Sukkah.

(23) Since no other authority required so large a size.

(25) Since the circumference is three times the diameter.

(27) Three times four (cf. supra n. 3).

(28) Why then did R. Johanan speak of twenty-four men?

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 8a

— That¹ applies only to a circle, but in the case of a square, a greater perimeter is required.² But consider: By how much is a square greater than its [inscribed] circle? By a quarter. Should it then not suffice if only sixteen [men can be seated around it]?³ -That⁴ is so in the case of a circle inscribed within a square, but if a square is to be inscribed within a circle a greater circumference is required on account of the projection of the corners.⁵ But consider: If the side of a square is a cubit, its diagonal is approximately one and two fifths cubits.⁶ Should not then [a circumference equivalent to] sixteen and four fifths [cubits]⁷ suffice?⁸ — [R. Johanan] gave only an approximate figure. But is it not to be maintained that one may be assumed to give all approximate figure only [where the discrepancy is] small, but could such all assumption be made [where the discrepancy is] big? — Mar Kashisha the son of R. Hisda said to R. Ashi: Do you think that a man occupies one cubit? [The fact is that] three men occupy two cubits. How much then does this [amount to for twenty-four men]? Sixteen cubits; and we [really] demand here sixteen and four fifths,⁹ [because, as has been said, R. Johanan] gave only an approximate figure. But is it not to be maintained that one may be assumed to give approximate figures only when the law is thereby restricted, but could such an assumption be made where a law is thereby relaxed?—R. Assi answered R. Ashi: In truth, a man occupies a cubit-space, but R. Johanan does not include the space occupied by the men.¹⁰ How many [cubits] does this¹¹ [amount to]? Eighteen;¹² while sixteen and four-fifths suffice. That is [then] what was meant [when it was stated] that he only gave an approximate figure; and in this case it is in the direction of stringency.¹³

The Rabbis of Caesarea¹⁴ (and some say, The judges of Caesarea) maintain, The circumference of a circle inscribed in a square is a quarter;¹⁵

- (1) That the perimeter is approx. only three times the diameter.
- (2) Since the diameter is not equal to the side, but to the diagonal of the square.
- (3)  being regarded as equivalent to three, a square is one quarter larger than its inscribed circle. If a circle with a diameter of four cubits accommodates four times three is twelve men, a square of four cubits provides seating capacity for four times four is sixteen men. A circumference of sixteen cubits should, therefore, have sufficed.
- (4) That a square exceeds a circle by a quarter, and that a four cubits square contains a perimeter of sixteen, and a circle one of twelve cubits.
- (5) The circumferences of the Sukkah must, therefore, be large enough to contain a square of four cubits.
- (6) Actually it is 1.4142.
- (7) Lit., 'seventeen less a fifth'. The diagonal of the square being equal to $(4+4 \times 2/5 =) 5 \frac{3}{5}$ cubits, and  being approximately equivalent to three, a circumference of $3 \times 5 \frac{3}{5}$ cubits $16 \frac{4}{5}$ cubits ought to suffice. (For this whole discussion of Feldman, op. cit., pp. 28-30). Cf. also 'Er., Sonc. ed., p. 531ff, notes.
- (8) I.e., space for no more than sixteen men. Why then did R. Johanan prescribe a space for twenty-four men?
- (9) V. p. 29, n. 13.
- (10) The men are considered as sitting round the circumference of the Sukkah they themselves forming a circumference of twenty-four cubits (equivalent to the space occupied by twenty-four men) with a diameter of eight cubits. But the inner circumference formed by the Sukkah is smaller since its diameter is eight minus two (the space occupied lengthways by the legs of two men, one sitting at each end) is six cubits.
- (11) For the circumference of the Sukkah.
- (12) Since a diameter of six cubits has a circumference of eighteen cubits.
- (13) Instead of a circumference of $16 \frac{4}{5}$ one of eighteen cubits is prescribed while the difference in the diameter $(6 - 5 \frac{3}{5} = \frac{2}{5})$ is even less but the square inscribed within that circle is a half.¹ But this² is not correct, for we see that these are not so much bigger. R. Levi said in the name of R. Meir: If the two booths of the potters are one within the other,³ the inner one⁴ is not valid as a Sukkah,⁵ and is obliged to have a Mezuzah⁶ while the outer one⁷ is valid as a Sukkah,⁸ and is free from the obligation of a Mezuzah.⁹ But why should this be so? Why should not the outer one be regarded as the gate-house of the inner one, and¹⁰ therefore be obliged to have a Mezuzah? — Because neither [booth] is of a permanent nature.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: [Mnemonic,] Ganbak.¹² A booth of Gentiles,¹³ women, cattle or Samaritans and any booth whatever¹⁴ is valid, provided that it is covered according to the rule. What is meant by 'according to the rule'?¹⁵ — R. Hisda answered: Provided that [the covering] was made [with the intention of providing] the shade for the Sukkah.¹⁶ What does 'any booth whatever' include? — It includes the booths [whose mnemonic is] Rabbash,¹⁷ as our Rabbis taught: The booth of shepherds, the booth of field-watchers, the booth of city guards, and the booth of orchard-keepers,¹⁸ and any booth whatever¹⁹ is valid, provided that it is covered according to the rule. What is meant by ‘according to the rule’?²⁰ — R. Hisda answered: Provided [the covering] was made [with the intention of providing] the shade for the Sukkah. What does ‘any booth whatever’ include? — It includes the booths [whose mnemonic] is Ganbak.²¹ The Tanna of Ganbak²² regards these booths as possessing greater validity²³ because they are permanent, and therefore he used the expression, any booth whatever’ to include Rakkash which are not permanent,²⁴ while the Tanna of Rakkash regards the latter as possessing greater validity since they belong to those who are bound [by the commandment of Sukkah]²⁵ and therefore he used the expression, ‘any booth whatever’ to include the Ganbak booths which belong to those who are not bound [by the commandment of Sukkah].

(1) Of the circumscribed square. Thus if a circumference is twenty-four cubits (the figure given by R. Johanan) the circumscribed square has a perimeter of $24 + 24/3 = 32$ cubits, while the inscribed square has a perimeter of approximately: $32/2 = 16$ cubits (the measurements prescribed by Rabbi).

(2) That the perimeter of the circumscribed square is twice the perimeter of the inscribed square and that the circumference of the circle is, therefore, bigger than the latter by a half of its perimeter. V. ‘Er., Sonc. ed., p. 533, n. 6.

(3) A potter worked and lived in his inner booth and displayed his wares in the outer one.

(4) Since he works and lives in it throughout the year.

(5) Because his dwelling in it during the festival would in no way indicate that he is performing the commandment of Sukkah,

(6) As any other dwelling.

(7) In which he lives only during the festival.

(8) It being obvious to all that he is performing the commandment.

(9) Being only a temporary dwelling, it is free from the obligation of Mezuzah, even during the festival. Throughout the year it is free from the obligation since it is not used as a dwelling.

(10) In accordance with the ruling in Men. 33b.

(11) Sc. even the inner one cannot be regarded as important enough to have a gate-house.

(12) The word l"cbd consists of the initial letters of ohud, ohab, vnvc, and oh, uf Gentiles, women, cattle and Samaritans, whose booths are discussed in what follows.

(13) Used only as a summerhouse.

(14) This will be explained infra.

(15) It cannot simply refer to rules like those enunciated in our Mishnah, which are applicable to all Sukkahs, since this would be self-evident.

(16) Not merely for privacy. While it is not essential for a Sukkah to be made expressly in connection with the festival, it cannot be valid unless it was originally made to serve as a protection from the sun.

(17) a'cer initials of ohgur, ohmhe ihbdruc and , urhp hrnua — shepherds, fieldwatchers, city guards and orchard-keepers.

(18) All these are male Israelites who are subject to the commandment of Sukkah; but their booths are not made for the festival.

[MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE AN OLD SUKKAH¹ INVALID,² BUT BETH HILLEL PRONOUNCE IT VALID. WHAT IS AN OLD SUKKAH? ONE MADE THIRTY DAYS BEFORE THE FESTIVAL; BUT IF ONE MADE IT FOR THE PURPOSE OF THE FESTIVAL, EVEN AT THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR, IT IS VALID.

GEMARA. What is Beth Shammai's reason?³ -Scripture says, The festival of Sukkoth, for seven days unto the Lord,⁴ [implying therefore] a Sukkah made expressly for the sake of the Festival. And Beth Hillel?⁵ - They need that [verse] for the same deduction as that of R. Shesheth, R. Shesheth having said in the name of R. Akiba, Whence do we know that the wood of the Sukkah is forbidden⁶ all the seven [days of the Festival]? From Scripture which states, 'The Festival of Sukkoth, seven days to the Lord'; and it was taught, R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Just as the Name of Heaven rests upon the Festival offering,⁷ so does it rest upon the Sukkah, since it is said, 'The Festival of Sukkoth, seven days to the Lord': just as the Festival [offering] is 'to the Lord', so is the sukkah also 'to the Lord'. And Beth Shammai also, do not they need the verse for this deduction?-Yes, indeed. What then is Beth Shammai's reason?⁸ -There is another Scriptural verse. Thou shalt make⁹ the Festival of Sukkoth for seven days.¹⁰ This implies a sukkah made expressly for the sake of the Festival. And Beth Hillel?¹¹ -They need this [verse for the deduction] that a sukkah may be made in the intermediate days of the Festival.¹² And Beth Shammai? — They hold the same opinion as R. Eliezer, who laid down that no sukkah may be made in the intermediate days of the Festival.¹³

Do not Beth Hillel, however, agree with the statement Rab Judah cited in the name of Rab: If a man made [zizith]¹⁴ from the hanging web or woof,¹⁵ or sewing threads,¹⁶ they are invalid;¹⁷ but if he made them from a tuft [sewn to a garment]¹⁸ they are valid.¹⁹ When I repeated this in the presence of Samuel,²⁰ he said to me, Even if made from a tuft [sewn to a garment] they are also not valid, because²¹ it is necessary that the weaving²² shall be done specifically for its purpose?²³ Here too then we should require a Sukkah²⁴ to be made specifically for its purpose?²⁵ — [Zizith are] different, since Scripture says, Thou shalt make to thee twisted cords:²⁶ 'to thee' [means] for the specific purpose of thy obligation. But here also [Scripture says], 'The Festival of Sukkoth thou shalt make to thee', 'to thee' meaning for the specific purpose of thy obligation? That [phrase]²⁷ is needed to exclude a stolen [Sukkah].²⁸ But in the other case too it²⁷ is needed to exclude stolen [zizith]? — In that case there is another verse, [that serves the purpose], And they shall make to them,²⁹ i.e., of their own.

(1) This is explained anon.

(2) The reason is given in the Gemara infra.

(3) For their ruling in our Mishnah.

(4) Lev. XXIII, 34. Emphasis on 'Sukkah. . . for the Lord'.

(5) How, in view of this text, can they maintain their view?

(6) To be used for secular purposes.

- (7) To render it forbidden before its prescribed portions have been burnt on the altar.
- (8) For their ruling in our Mishnah.
- (9) J.T. 'keep', A. V., 'observe'.
- (10) Deut. XVI, 13; emphasis on 'make'.
- (11) How, in view of the text, can they maintain their view?
- (12) If one did not make it prior to the Festival.
- (13) Infra 27b.
- (14) v. Glos. and cf. Num. XVI, 38.
- (15) Sc. he twisted into zizith threads hanging over from a woven garment.
- (16) That were used in the sewing of a garment and ends of which were hanging from that garment.
- (17) Since they were not attached to the garment as zizith, but merely formed a part of the web etc.
- (18) Sc. a tuft of wool was sewn to the garment and then was cut into strips and twisted into zizith.
- (19) Since their attachment to the garment was made for the purpose of the zizith.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 9b

MISHNAH. IF ONE MADE HIS SUKKAH UNDER A TREE, IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE.¹ IF ONE SUKKAH IS ERECTED ABOVE ANOTHER, THE UPPER ONE IS VALID BUT THE LOWER IS INVALID.² R. JUDAH SAID, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS IN THE UPPER ONE, THE LOWER ONE IS VALID.

GEMARA. Raba said, [Our Mishnah] was taught only in respect of a tree whose shade is greater than the sun [shining through its branches] but if the sun is more than its shade, it is valid. Whence [do we know this]? Since it states, IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE. Now for what purpose does it state IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE? Let it simply state 'it is invalid'? But the fact is that he taught us this, that the tree³ [referred to is] like a house, just as in a house the shade is more than the sunshine, so the tree has more shade than sunshine.

But even where the sun is more than the shade, what is the advantage, seeing that all invalid covering is joined to a valid one?⁴ — R. Papa answered: [This⁵ is a case] where [the branches of the tree] were interwoven.⁶ If the branches were interwoven,⁶ why⁷ mention the case at all? — One might have thought that it should be prohibited where it is interwoven as a preventive measure against the possibility of regarding it as valid even where it was not interwoven,⁸

[therefore the Mishnah] informs us that no such preventive measure has been enacted. Have we not learnt this also: If a man trained upon it [a sukkah] vine, or a gourd, or ivy, and he covered [it with a valid covering], it is invalid.⁹ But if the valid covering exceeded these in quantity, or if one cut them,¹⁰ it is valid.¹¹ Now to what case does this¹² refer? Shall I say where he did not interweave them,¹³ then obviously the invalid covering is joined to¹⁴ the valid one?¹⁵ Must it not then¹⁶ refer to a case where one did interweave them;¹³ and hence it may be inferred that no preventive measure was in such a case deemed necessary?¹⁷ — One might have presumed that [this¹⁸ is permissible] only ex post facto but not ab initio, hence we were informed [that¹⁹ even ab initio it is permissible]. IF ONE SUKKAH IS ERECTED ABOVE ANOTHER. Our Rabbis taught, Ye shall dwell in Sukkoth,²⁰ but not in a sukkah under another sukkah, nor in a Sukkah under a tree, nor in a Sukkah within the house. On the contrary! Does not the word Sukkah²¹ imply two? — R. Nahman b. Isaac answered, The word is written defectively.²² R. Jeremiah said: Sometimes both²³ are valid, sometimes both invalid; sometimes the lower one is valid and the upper invalid, and sometimes the lower one is invalid and the upper one valid. ‘Sometimes both are valid’. In what circumstances? When in the lower one the sun is more than the shade,²⁴ and in the upper the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is within twenty [cubits from the ground].²⁵ ‘Sometimes both are invalid’. In what circumstances? When in both of them the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is more than twenty cubits [high].²⁶ ‘Sometimes the lower one is valid and the upper invalid’.

- (1) I.e., it is as though there are two roofs, and it is, therefore, invalid
 - (2) The reason is given in the Gemara infra.
 - (3) Which renders a Sukkah under it invalid.
 - (4) The covering of a Sukkah must be made of plants that are detached from the ground. Growing ones are invalid. The presence of the invalid covering of the tree should, therefore, invalidate the Sukkah.
 - (5) The ruling in our Mishnah.
 - (6) Lit., ‘he pressed them down’. The branches of the tree were pressed down and interwoven with the valid covering, and, since the former are less in quantity than the latter, the Sukkah is valid (cf. infra 11a).
 - (7) Since the ruling is so obvious why did the Mishnah have to state ‘AS IF HE MADE IT IN THE HOUSE’; and what need of Raba's ruling?
 - (8) Invalid materials that are not interwoven with valid ones render a Sukkah invalid.
 - (9) On account of the invalid covering which remained isolated from the valid one.
 - (10) And thus detached them from the growing tree.
 - (11) Infra 11a.
 - (12) The Mishnah just cited.
 - (13) The invalid with the valid material.
 - (14) But not interwoven with.
 - (15) And the Sukkah therefore would be invalid.
 - (16) Since the Sukkah was stated to be valid.
 - (17) And the question re-arises: Why should the same law be repeated here?
 - (18) The joining of the two materials.
 - (19) Provided the two materials were interwoven.
 - (20) Lev. XXIII, 42.
 - (21) The plural form of Sukkah.
 - (22) V. supra. Traditional spelling is , fx a singular form.

- (23) Sukkoth that were put up on the top of one another.
- (24) Its covering can, therefore, be disregarded.
- (25) The covering of the upper one is thus valid for both, since they are regarded as one Sukkah.
- (26) I.e., from the roof of the lower one. The lower one is invalid since it is a Sukkah under a Sukkah, and the upper one is similarly invalid since it is more than twenty cubits high.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 10a

In what circumstances? When the lower one has more shade than sun, and the upper one more sun than shade,¹ and both are within twenty cubits [from the ground].² ‘And sometimes the upper one is valid and the lower invalid’. In what circumstances? When in both of them the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is within twenty cubits.³ [But is not all this] self-evident? — The statement of the case of the ‘lower one valid and the upper one invalid’ was necessary. As it might have been thought that [the lower sukkah] would be prohibited as a preventive measure lest one also joins⁴ an invalid covering⁵ to a valid covering,⁶ therefore it teaches us [that it is valid].⁷

How much [space] should there be between [the roof of] one sukkah and that of the other to invalidate the lower one?⁸ R. Huna replied, A handbreadth,⁹ since we find a handbreadth [prescribed as the minimum size] with regard to overshadowing in cases¹⁰ of uncleanness, as we have learnt.¹¹ [A space of] one handbreadth square and one handbreadth high¹² acts as a carrier of uncleanness and as an interposition to it,¹³ but if it is less than one handbreadth high it neither conveys nor interposes.¹⁴ R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna [however,] say, Four [handbreadths], since we do not find a place of any [legal] importance¹⁵ to be less than four [handbreadths];¹⁶ while Samuel says, Ten [handbreadths]. What is the reason of Samuel? — As its validity, so is its invalidity. Just as its validity [is effected by a height of] ten handbreadths,¹⁷ so is its invalidity [effected by] ten handbreadths.¹⁸

We have learnt: R. JUDAH SAID, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS IN THE UPPER ONE, THE LOWER ONE IS VALID. Now what is the meaning of ‘THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS’? If we say, actual occupants, are then occupants [it could be objected] a determining factor?¹⁹ Must [we then] not [say] that ‘THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS means that the Sukkah is unsuitable for occupation? And how is this possible? Where it is less than ten handbreadths high. May we not, therefore, infer that the first Tanna²⁰ holds the opinion that even if it is unsuitable for occupation it is still invalid?²¹ — When R. Dimi, came,²² he said, In the West²³ they say,²⁴ if the lower one cannot bear the weight of²⁵ the bolsters and the cushions of the upper one, the lower one is valid.²⁶ This implies [does it not] that the first Tanna²⁷ holds the opinion that even if the lower one is not able to bear their weight, it is still invalid?²⁸ -The difference between them²⁹ is³⁰ where it can bear the weight with difficulty.³¹

MISHNAH. IF ONE SPREAD A SHEET³² OVER IT³³ BECAUSE OF THE SUN OR BENEATH IT BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES], OR IF HE SPREAD [A SHEET] OVER THE FRAME OF A FOURPOST BED,³⁴ [THE SUKKAH] IS INVALID.³⁵ ONE MAY SPREAD IT, HOWEVER, OVER THE FRAME OF A TWO-POST BED.³⁶

GEMARA. R. Hisda stated, [Our Mishnah] speaks only [of a sheet spread] BECAUSE OF

FALLING [LEAVES],³⁷ but if [it was spread] in order to beautify [the Sukkah], it is valid.³⁸ But is not this obvious! For have we not learnt, BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES]? One might have said that the law is the same even [where the sheet served the purpose] of beautifying [the Sukkah] and that the reason why it was stated, BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES], is that he mentions what is the common practice, therefore he informs us this.³⁹

Can we say that the following supports [R. Hisda's view]: If he covered it⁴⁰ according to the rule, and adorned it with embroidered hangings and sheets, and hung therein nuts, almonds, peaches, pomegranates, bunches of grapes, wreaths of ears of corn, [phials of] wine, oil or fine flour, it is forbidden to make use of them⁴¹

- (1) And thus its covering which is an invalid one cannot invalidate the lower Sukkah.
 - (2) If the roof of the upper Sukkah, however, was above twenty cubits from the ground its invalid material (since all Sukkah roofs above twenty cubits height are invalid) would be deemed to be joined to the roof of the lower Sukkah and to render it invalid in consequence.
 - (3) Of the roof of the lower one. Being a valid Sukkah it invalidates the lower one on the ground of the latter's being a Sukkah under a Sukkah.
 - (4) I.e., regards the roof of the upper, and of the lower Sukkah as one.
 - (5) Sc. the covering of the upper Sukkah where it is higher than twenty cubits.
 - (6) And thus use an invalid Sukkah.
 - (7) Thus indicating that no preventive measure was deemed necessary.
 - (8) As a Sukkah under a Sukkah.
 - (9) I.e., if it is less than this, the two roofs are regarded as one.
 - (10) Lit., 'tents'.
 - (11) V. marg. glos. Cur. edd. in parenthesis, 'for it was taught'.
 - (12) I.e., a cubic handbreadth between the level on which the contaminating object lies and the object that forms the 'roof' or 'tent' above it.
 - (13) It acts as a carrier in that whatever is under the same 'roof' as the unclean object is unclean, and as an interposition in that whatever lies above the 'roof' is not defiled.
 - (14) Ohal. III, 7. Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.
 - (15) A private domain, for instance.
 - (16) V. Shab. 7a. A space between the upper and lower roof that was less than four handbreadths cannot, therefore, be regarded as forming an upper Sukkah above the lower one.
 - (17) The roof of a Sukkah must be at least ten handbreadths high to render the Sukkah valid.
 - (18) If the roof of the Sukkah above it is, however, lower than ten handbreadths, the lower Sukkah remains valid.
 - (19) Of course not.
 - (20) The authority of the anonymous first part of the Mishnah who differs from R. Judah.
 - (21) Which is refutation of Samuel.
 - (22) From Palestine to Babylon.
 - (23) Palestine.
 - (24) In explanation of R. Judah's ruling, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS'.
 - (25) Lit., receive .
 - (26) Since the upper one is not strong enough to be regarded as a Sukkah. As a Sukkah cannot be valid unless its floor can bear the prescribed weight so also, on the principle, 'As its validity so is its invalidity' laid down by Samuel, it cannot cause the invalidity of the lower Sukkah unless the latter's roof which is its floor can bear the prescribed weight. Where the upper one, however, is less than ten handbreadths high even the first Tanna agrees that it cannot affect the validity of the lower one, in agreement with Samuel.

(27) Who differs from R. Judah.

(28) Apparently we may. Now, since in this respect the first Tanna does not uphold Samuel's principle, and since the question of height depends on the same principle, may it not be contended that he differs from Samuel as regards the height also?

(29) The first Tanna and R. Judah.

(30) Not the complete ability or inability to bear the weight mentioned.

(31) According to the first Tanna this invalidates the lower one; according to R. Judah, it does not. Where, however, it cannot bear the weight at all, the first Tanna on Samuel's principle, agrees with R. Judah.

(32) A sheet (cf. infra 11a) is subject to ritual defilement and is, therefore, invalid as a Sukkah-covering.

(33) The roof of a Sukkah.

(34) And thus made a tent within the Sukkah. ; ubhe Gr. , four poles over which a covering is placed.

(35) In the former case, because of the unsuitability of the covering, and in the latter case because of the intervention of a tent.

(36) A bed frame with only two poles, one on each side, the top of which being less than a handbreadth in width it cannot be regarded as a valid tent (v. Gemara infra).

(37) In which case it is regarded as a part of the roof and therefore causes the invalidity of the Sukkah.

(38) Since the sheet does not serve the purpose of a roof covering.

(39) That the Sukkah is valid if a sheet was intended to beautify it.

(40) The Sukkah.

(41) To eat, for instance, any of the fruit.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 10b

until the conclusion of the last day of the Festival, but if¹ he expressed a condition about them,² all depends on [the terms of] his condition?³ — No! It is possible [that the statement was made with reference to sheets] at the side [of the Sukkah].⁴ It was stated: The adornments of a Sukkah do not diminish [the height of] the Sukkah.⁵ R. Ashi said, But at the side, they do diminish [the size of a Sukkah].⁶

Minyamin, the servant of R. Ashi, had his shirt soaked in water, and he spread it out on their Sukkah. R. Ashi said to him, 'Remove it, lest they say that it is permissible to use as a covering something which is susceptible to defilement'. 'But [the other asked] can they not see that it is wet?'⁷ 'I mean [the first answered] when it is dry'.⁸

It was stated: The adornments of a Sukkah⁹ which are removed four [handbreadths from the roof] R. Nahman declared valid,¹⁰ and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna declare invalid.¹¹ R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna once came to the house of the exilarch, and R. Nahman¹² sheltered them in a Sukkah whose adornments were separated four handbreadths [from the roof]. They were silent and said not a word to him. Said he to them, 'Have our Rabbis¹³ retracted their teaching?'¹⁴ -"We", they answered him, are on a religious errand,¹⁵ and [therefore] free from the obligation of the Sukkah'.¹⁶

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, It is permissible to sleep in a canopied bed in a Sukkah, even though it has a flat roof, provided it is not ten [handbreadths] high.¹⁷

Come and hear: He who sleeps in a canopied bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligation?¹⁸ - Here we are dealing with a case of one that was ten [handbreadths] high. It was objected: He who sleeps under the bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligation?¹⁹ — But, surely, Samuel has explained that [this refers to] a bed ten [handbreadths] high. Come and hear: OR IF HE SPREAD [A SHEET] OVER THE FRAME OF A FOUR-POST BED, [THE SUKKAH] IS INVALID? — There also it is a case where they are ten [handbreadths] high. But surely, it was not taught thus, for it has been taught, naklitin [means a frame with] two [poles], and kinofoth [means a frame with] four [poles]; if one spread a sheet over the frame of kinofoth it is invalid, if over naklitin, it is valid, provided that the naklitin are not ten [handbreadths] high above the bed. This implies that kinofoth [are invalid] even if they are less than ten [handbreadths high]? — Kinofoth are different, since they are permanent.²⁰ But, behold the case of one Sukkah above another, which is also permanent; and Samuel nevertheless said, ‘As its validity so is its invalidity’?²¹ — I will explain: In the latter case, [when it is a question] of invalidating a Sukkah,²² [the upper one must be ten [handbreadths] high,²³ but here, [where it is a question] of making a tent,²⁴ even less than ten [handbreadths suffices] also to constitute a tent.²⁵

R. Tahlifa b. Abimi said in the name of Samuel, He who sleeps naked in a canopied bed, may put his head out of the canopied bed and read the Shema’.²⁶ It was objected: He who sleeps in a canopied bed naked may not put his head out of it and read the Shema’? — The latter refers to a case where [the canopy] was ten [handbreadths] high.²⁷ This stands to reason also, since it was stated in the final clause: To what can it be compared? To a man standing naked in a house, in which case he may not put his head out of the window and read the Shema’. This is conclusive.

(1) Prior to the Festival.

(2) I.e., he made a declaration that he desired to retain full possession ‘during the twilight of the first day’ of the Festival of any of the objects mentioned. Unless the declaration is made at the proper time and in this form the objects assume the sanctity of the Sukkah and no subsequent declaration can remove it.

(3) Bezaḥ 30b, which shows that ornamental sheets do not invalidate a Sukkah. Does not this then provide support to R. Hisda’s view?

(4) One, however, hung under the roof may well invalidate a Sukkah, even if its purpose was ornamental.

(5) If it was higher than twenty cubits and the sheet hung lower, it is still invalid, since a sheet is unsuitable as a Sukkah-covering.

(6) If the presence of the adornments caused it to be less than the minimum of seven handbreadths square.

(7) And that it was spread out for the purpose of drying only.

(8) Only then is it necessary to remove it from the Sukkah.

(9) Sheets spread under the Sukkah roof as decorations (Rashi).

(10) Because their identity is merged in that of the roof.

(11) Since they form a ‘tent’ that intervenes between the roof and the habitable part of the Sukkah.

(12) R. Nahman was chief in authority at the exilarch’s house.

(13) Sc. R. Hisda and Rabbah b. R. Huna.

(14) Cited supra.

(15) It was regarded as a religious duty to visit one’s master, or the exilarch, on the Festivals.

(16) A person engaged on a religious errand is free from other religious duties (cf. infra 25a).

- (17) Above the bed. It cannot be regarded as a valid tent unless it is ten handbreadths high.
- (18) An objection against Samuel's ruling just cited.
- (19) infra 20b.
- (20) Hence they may be regarded as a proper tent. The poles of a canopied bed, however, are not permanent, and cannot be regarded as a valid tent unless they are ten handbreadths high.
- (21) Supra 10a; which shows that even a permanent structure cannot be valid unless it is ten handbreadths high.
- (22) On the ground that one Sukkah is above another.
- (23) Otherwise it cannot invalidate the lower Sukkah.
- (24) Under which it should be forbidden to sleep but the rest of the Sukkah remaining valid.
- (25) If it is to be permanent.
- (26) The Scriptural reading Deut. VI, 4f, which had to be read twice daily; otherwise it is forbidden to read while naked. V. Ber. 24b and 25b.
- (27) Which has, therefore, the legal status of a room. As a naked person is forbidden to read the Shema' even if he puts his head out of a window (because the greater part of his body is still in the room) so it is forbidden to read the Shema' while the greater part of one's body remained in the canopied bed. A canopy that is lower than ten handbreadths is regarded as a covering or cloak.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 11a

But as to a house, even though it is not ten [handbreadths] high, since it is permanent it constitutes a valid tent,¹ for it is no worse than the frame of a four-post bed.

Another version is that Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, It is permitted to sleep in a bridal-bed in a Sukkah, since it has no roof,² even though it be ten [handbreadths] high. It was objected: He who sleeps in a canopied bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligations? — Here we are dealing with the case of one which has a roof³. Come and hear: Naklitin [means a frame with] two [poles]; kinofoth [means a frame with] four [poles], if he spread a canopy over the frame of kinofoth it is invalid,³ over that of naklitin it is valid, provided that the naklitin are not ten [handbreadths] high above the bed. But if they are ten [handbreadths] high above the bed, it is invalid, [is it not] even though it has no roof?—Naklitin are different, since they are permanent. If they are permanent, why are they not [subject to the same law as] kinofoth?⁴ — As compared to kinofoth they are not [considered] permanent,⁵ but compared to the bridal-bed they are [considered] permanent.⁶

Rabbah son of R. Huna expounded, It is permitted to sleep in a canopied bed [in a Sukkah] even though it has a roof and even though it is ten [handbreadths] high. According to whom [is this opinion expressed]?—According to R. Judah who said that a temporary tent⁷ cannot nullify a permanent one,⁸ as we have learnt: R. Judah said, We were accustomed to sleep under a bed⁹ in the presence of the Elders.¹⁰ Why then does he not say, The halachah is as R. Judah?—If he had said, The halachah is as R. Judah, I might have presumed that this applies only to a bed which is made [to be slept] upon,¹¹ but not to a canopied bed which, is made [to be slept] within,¹² hence he informs us that the reason of R. Judah is¹³ that a temporary tent cannot nullify a permanent one, no matter whether it be an ordinary bed¹⁴ or a canopied bed.¹⁵

MISHNAH. IF HE TRAINED A VINE OR A GOURD OR IVY OVER [THE SUKKAH]

AND COVERED IT WITH THE COVERING OF A SUKKAH, IT IS NOT VALID.¹⁶ IF [HOWEVER] THE SUKKAH-COVERING EXCEEDS THEM IN QUANTITY, OF IF HE CUT THEM,¹⁷ IT IS VALID. THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE. WHATEVER IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND DOES NOT GROW FROM THE SOIL MAY NOT BE USED FOR SUKKAH-COVERING, BUT WHATEVER IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND GROWS FROM THE SOIL MAY BE USED FOR SUKKAH-COVERING.

GEMARA. R. Joseph sat¹⁸ before R. Huna, and in the course of the session he stated, [with reference to the ruling] OR IF HE CUT THEM, IT IS VALID, Rab said, But he must shake them.¹⁹ Said R. Huna to him, This has been said by Samuel! R. Joseph turned away his face [in annoyance] and retorted, Did I then tell you that Samuel did not say it? Rab said it and Samuel also said it. It is this that I say, said R. Huna to him, As to that, Samuel said it, and not Rab, since Rab declares it valid [without shaking],²⁰ as in the case of R. Amram the Pious who attached fringes to the aprons of the women of his house.²¹ He hung them²² but did not cut off the ends of the threads.²³ When he came before R. Hiyya b. Ashi²⁴ the latter said to him, Thus said Rab, [In such a case the threads] may be cut and they are valid. Thus it is obvious that their cutting is their [valid] preparation, so here also,²⁵ their cutting is their [valid] preparation. But does Samuel hold the opinion that we do not say that their cutting is their [valid] preparation? Did not Samuel in fact teach in the name of R. Hiyya, If one attached [zizith] to two corners in one²⁶ and then cut the ends of these threads, the zizith are valid. Does not this mean that he first knotted them and then cut them?²⁷ -No, he cut them first²⁸ and afterwards knotted them. If he cut them first and then knotted them, why mention it?²⁹ -One would have thought

- (1) And therefore if a person is naked he cannot put his head out and read the Shema'.
 - (2) The cover was sloping from above the bed around it.
 - (3) Sc. one may not use it within a Sukkah.
 - (4) And thus render their use in a Sukkah forbidden.
 - (5) Hence they cause no invalidity where they are lower than ten handbreadths.
 - (6) They cause, therefore, invalidity where they are ten handbreadths high even if they have no roof, while a canopied bed that has no roof causes no invalidity even where it is ten handbreadths high.
 - (7) The canopied bed.
 - (8) The Sukkah which in comparison with it may be regarded as permanent.
 - (9) In a Sukkah. The movable bed being regarded as temporary and the Sukkah as permanent.
 - (10) Infra 20b.
 - (11) And not under it. As the bed was never intended to serve as a 'tent' a person's occasional use of it for the purpose of sleeping under it cannot confer upon it the status of a valid tent.
 - (12) And the roof thereof might, therefore, be regarded as constituting a valid tent.
 - (13) Not the one just suggested.
 - (14) Under which one sleeps.
 - (15) Within which one sleeps.
 - (16) Since a growing plant may not be used as a Sukkah-covering.
 - (17) From the ground, after he had trained them on the Sukkah.
 - (18) In the college.
 - (19) After they had been cut. Sc. each branch must be raised and put back in position so that the covering is made from valid materials. If no moving or shifting takes place after the plants had been cut the Sukkah remains invalid since it was made from invalid materials. The mere cutting of them from the ground does not alter the fact that the covering was made from invalid materials.

(20) The cutting alone is regarded as the 'making' of the covering.

(21) R. Amram was of the opinion, not generally held, that women are bound to wear fringes.

(22) On the four corners of the garments.

(23) He folded one thread four times, and attached it to the garment. By subsequently cutting it he made of it the eight requisite threads.

(24) To inquire whether the mere cutting of the long thread constitutes the 'making' of the fringes.

(25) In the case of the Sukkah where the branches were only cut and not shifted.

(26) Long threads folded in four were passed through the two corners, and then separated by being cut in the middle.

(27) In agreement with Rab.

(28) Immediately after insertion before he wound the prescribed number of coils and made the necessary knots.

(29) It is obvious that it is valid.

that it was necessary to insert the threads in one corner at a time, which was not the case here, therefore he informed us [that it was not so].

It was objected: If he hung them¹ and did not cut their ends, they are invalid. Does not this mean invalid for ever,² and is thus a refutation of Rab?-[No!] Rab can answer: What is the meaning of 'invalid'? Invalid until they are cut. Samuel, however, says, [It means] invalid for ever. And so said Levi, They are invalid for ever. And so said R. Mattenah in the name of Samuel: They are invalid for ever. Another version is that R. Mattenah said, A [similar] incident happened to me, and when I came before Samuel he told me, They are invalid for ever.

It was objected: If he inserted them³ and then cut their ends, they are invalid; and it was also taught concerning a Sukkah: Thou shalt make⁴ [implies] but not from that which is already made, hence they⁵ inferred, If one trained a vine or a gourd or ivy [over the walls of a Sukkah] and then covered them with the Sukkah-covering it is invalid. Now, how is this to be understood? If you say that it is a case where one did not cut them,⁶ why then give the reason because of "'Thou shalt make" [implies] but not from that which is already made'? Let him rather give the reason that they are joined to the ground? Consequently it must be a case where he cut them,⁶ and yet it is taught that it is invalid. Deduce then, therefrom that we do not say that their cutting⁶ is their [valid] preparation. And is not this then a refutation of Rab?Rab can answer that there we are dealing with a case where he pulled them [from the trunk]⁷ so that their 'making' is not apparent. At all events, [does not the case where] 'he inserted them and then cut their ends'⁸ present a difficulty against Rab?⁹ — It is a difficulty.

Can we say that [their dispute¹⁰ accords with a dispute of] Tannas? [As we have learnt], If one transgressed and¹¹ plucked them,¹² [the myrtle is still] invalid, so R. Simeon b. Jehozadak, while the Sages declare it valid. Now they¹³ were of the opinion that everyone¹⁴ agrees that [the components of] a lulab¹⁵ must be tied together, and that we deduce [the law of] lulab from that of

Sukkah, concerning which it is written 'thou shalt make', [which implies]'but not from what which is made'. Do they [then] not dispute on this principle, that the one who declared it¹⁶ valid is of the opinion that with regard to the Sukkah we say that 'their cutting is their [valid] preparation', and [therefore] with regard to lulab also we say that their plucking is their [valid] preparation; while the one who declares it invalid is of the opinion that with regard to the Sukkah we do not say that 'their cutting is their valid preparation', and [therefore] with regard to lulab also we do not say that their plucking is their [valid] preparation?¹⁷ — No! Everyone may agree that with regard to the Sukkah we do not say that their cutting is their [valid] preparation, but here they differ on the principle whether we deduce the law of lulab from that of Sukkah. The one who declares it¹⁶ valid is of the opinion that we do not deduce lulab from Sukkah, while the one who declares it invalid says that we do deduce lulab from sukkah. And if you wish you may say that if we were of the opinion that¹⁸ the [components of the] lulab must be tied together,¹⁹ [we must admit that] all agree that we do deduce the law of lulab from that of Sukkah,²⁰ but here they dispute on the following: One Master²¹ holds the opinion that it²² must be tied together²³ while the other holds that it need not be tied together; and their dispute is analogous to that of the following Tannas of whom it has been taught: A lulab, whether [its components] be tied together or not, is valid, while R. Judah says, If tied together it is valid, if not, it is invalid.²⁴ What is the reason of R. Judah?—He deduces the word 'take'²⁵ from the word 'take' mentioned in connection with the bundle of hyssop. It is written there, And ye shall take a bundle of hyssop,²⁶ and it is written here, And ye shall take you on the first day etc.²⁷ Just as there it was taken in a 'bundle',²⁸ so here also it must be taken in a bundle.²⁸ And the Rabbis?²⁹ — They do not deduce 'take' from 'take'.³⁰

According to whom is that which has been taught, It is a religious duty to tie [the components of] the lulab together, but if one did not tie them, it is [still] valid? If it is according to R. Judah, why is it valid if one does not tie them, and if it is according to the Sages, why is it 'a religious duty'?³¹ -It is in fact according to the Rabbis, but [it is a religious duty]³¹ since it is written, This is my God and I will glorify him³² [which implies] glorification³³ before Him in [the due performance of] religious duties.

THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHATEVER IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS etc. Whence do we know this?Resh Lakish said: Scripture says, But there went up a mist from the earth;³⁴ just as a mist is a thing that is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanliness and originates from the soil, so must [the covering of] the Sukkah³⁵ [consist of] a thing that is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanliness, and grow from the soil. That is satisfactory according to the authority who says that [the booths of the wilderness were] clouds of glory, but according to the authority who says [the Israelites] made for themselves real booths, what can one say?³⁶ For it has been taught: For I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths,³⁷ These³⁸ were clouds of glory, so R. Eliezer. R. Akiba says, They made for themselves real booths. Now this³⁹ is satisfactory according to R. Eliezer, but according to R. Akiba, what can one say?³⁶ — When R. Dimi came,⁴⁰ he explained in the name of R. Johanan, Scripture says, The Festival [hag] of Sukkoth thou shalt keep.⁴¹ The Sukkah is thus⁴² compared to the Festival [offering].⁴³ Just as the Festival offering is a thing which is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanliness and grows from the soil,⁴⁴ so the Sukkah must be unsusceptible to [ritual] uncleanliness and grow from the soil.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 12a

And if [you will suggest]: Just as the Festival offering was a live animal so the Sukkah must be [of something which is] alive, [it may be replied that] when Rabin came, he said in the name of R. Johanan, Scripture says, After that thou hast gathered in from thy threshing-floor and thy winepress. The verse thus speaks of the leavings of the threshing-floor and the leas of the wine-press.¹ But perhaps it means the actual threshing-floor and the actual wine-press?² - Zera answered, It is written winepress', and³ it is impossible to cover the Sukkah with this!³ R. Jeremiah demurred: But perhaps it means the solidified wine that comes from Senir, which resembles fig-cakes?⁴ R. Zera observed, We had something in our hands, and R. Jeremiah came and cast an axe at it.⁵ R. Ashi replied, 'From thy threshing-floor',⁶ [implies] but not the threshing-floor itself,⁷ from thy wine-press',⁶ [implies] but not the wine-press itself.⁸ R. Hisda replied,⁹ The deduction is made from this verse, Go forth unto the mount and fetch olive-branches, and branches of wild olive, and myrtle-branches and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees.¹⁰ Are not myrtle-branches, the same as branches of thick trees?¹¹ — R. Hisda answered: The wild myrtle¹² [were to be fetched] for the Sukkah, while the branches of thick trees,¹³ for the lulab.

MISHNAH. BUNDLES OF STRAW, BUNDLES OF WOOD, AND BUNDLES OF BRUSHWOOD MAY NOT SERVE AS SUKKAH-COVERING, BUT ALL OF THEM,¹⁴ IF THEY ARE UNTIED, ARE VALID. ALL MATERIALS, HOWEVER,¹⁵ ARE VALID FOR THE WALLS.

GEMARA. R. Jacob said, I heard from R. Johanan [the explanation of] two things,¹⁶ this one,¹⁷ and the following:¹⁸ If one hollows out a haystack to make of it a Sukkah, [the hollow] is no [valid] Sukkah.¹⁹ The reason for one of them he attributed to a Rabbinical enactment lest [a man use his] store-house as a Sukkah,²⁰ and as a reason for the other he gave, because 'thou shalt make', [implies] but not from that which is made; but I do not remember which of them is on account of a 'store-house', and which on account of "'thou shalt make" but not from that which is made'. R. Jeremiah said, Let us see:²¹ R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan, Why did they say that bundles of straw, bundles of wood, and bundles of brushwood may not serve as sukkah-covering? Because it may happen²² that a man returns in the evening from the field with his bundle on his shoulder, and raising it up he places it on his hut to dry it,²³ and then²⁴ he might decide to leave it there as a sukkah-covering, but the Torah said, 'Thou shalt make', [which implies], but not from that which is made.²⁵ Now since this is forbidden as a restrictive measure against the possibility of the use of a store-house²⁶ [as a Sukkah]²⁷ the other²⁸ must have been forbidden on the ground of 'thou shalt make' [which implies], but not from that which is made.²⁹ And R. Jacob?³⁰ -He had not heard that [statement] of R. Hiyya b. Abba. R. Ashi said:³¹ Are then bundles of straw, bundles of wood and bundles of brushwood forbidden only because of the possible use of a store-house³² and not because of the injunction 'thou shalt make' [which implies], but not from that which is made,³³ and is the hollowing out of a haystack forbidden only because of the injunction 'thou shalt make' which implies but not from that which is made, and not because of the possible use of a store-house?³⁴ And R. Johanan?³⁵ — He can answer you that here where it states, MAY NOT SERVE AS A SUKKAH-COVERING, it means that only at the outset

Jacob maintain in the name of R. Johanan that only a Pentateuchal, or only a Rabbinical prohibition applied to either Mishnah?

(35) How, in view of R. Ashi's contention, can he assign only one reason for each.

it is invalid, because of the possible use of a store-house;¹ according to the Biblical law, however, it is valid; while in the other case where it is stated categorically that it is no Sukkah, implying even when he has made it, it is no Sukkah even Pentateuchally. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, If one covered a Sukkah with plain² arrow-shafts, it is valid; with bored³ shafts, it is invalid. 'With plain arrow-shafts it is valid'; but is not this obvious? I might have said that these should be forbidden on account of bored ones, therefore he informs us [that they are not forbidden]. 'With⁴ bored shafts, it is invalid', is not this obvious? — I might have thought that a receptacle which is made to be [permanently] filled up is not regarded as a receptacle, therefore he informs us [that it is].

Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, 'If one covered a Sukkah with flax-stalks that had been soaked and baked, it is invalid;⁵ with flax stalks in their natural state it is valid; with flax-stalks in an intermediate stage of preparation, I do not know [whether it is valid or not]'. But as to what constitutes an intermediate stage,⁶ I⁷ do not know whether if it has been pounded and not corded it is regarded as in an intermediate stage,⁸ but if it has been soaked and not pounded it is regarded as being in its natural state,⁹ or perhaps, even if it has been soaked but not pounded, it is also regarded as being in an intermediate stage.¹⁰

Rab Judah ruled, One may use licorice-wood or wormwood as a Sukkah-covering. Abaye ruled, Licorice-wood may be employed, but not wormwood. What is the reason?— Since

(1) Ex post facto, however, it is obviously permitted. The prohibition, therefore, can only be Rabbinical.

(2) Lit., 'male shafts'. The shaft, being plain and inserted into the arrow head, is regarded as a piece of unprepared wood, which is unsusceptible to ritual uncleanness

(3) Lit., 'female shafts'. Having a hole bored at one of its ends into which the arrow-head is inserted, the shaft is regarded as a valid receptacle which is susceptible to ritual uncleanness.

they give an unpleasant odour, one might leave [the Sukkah]¹ and depart.

R. Hanan b. Raba said, Izma and hegel² may be employed as a Sukkah-covering; [while] Abaye said, Izma may be used, but not hegeh. What is the reason?—Since their leaves fall off, one might leave the Sukkah and depart. R. Giddal said in the name of Rab, The forked portion of a palm tree³ may be used as a Sukkah-covering, even although [the branches] are joined together,⁴ [since] a natural joining⁵ is not considered a joining; and even although one later joined them⁶ [the covering is valid, since] joining of one thing [to itself] is not considered a joining.

R. Hisda said in the name of Rabina b. Shila, One may cover the Sukkah with forked reeds, even though they are joined,⁴ [since] a natural joining is not considered a joining; and even though one later joins them,⁶ the joining of one thing [to itself] not considered as a proper joining.

So it was also taught: Reeds and forked reeds may be used as a Sukkah covering. As to reeds, this is obvious?⁷ — Read: Reeds of the forked variety⁸ may be used as a Sukkah-covering.

R. Hisda [further] stated in the name of Rabina b. Shila, A man fulfils his obligation⁹ on Passover with bitter herbs of the marsh,¹⁰ It was objected: Hyssop but not Greek hyssop, or stibium-hyssop, or wild hyssop, or Roman hyssop or any kind of hyssop which has a special¹¹ name?¹² — Abaye answered: Whatever had different names prior to the Giving of the Law, and yet the Torah makes specific mention of the general name only obviously [the intention is to exclude such of the species which] have special names;¹³ but the former¹⁴ did not have different names before the Giving of the Law at all.¹⁵

Raba answered: Their ordinary name is really ‘bitter herbs’,¹⁶ but they are called ‘bitter herbs of the marsh’, because they are found in marshes.

R. Hisda said, The joining of one thing [to itself] is not considered a proper joining;¹⁷ of three things, it is considered a joining; of two, there is a dispute between R. Jose and the Rabbis, as we have learnt, The commandment [to take a bunch] of hyssop [requires the taking of] three stalks having three buds.¹⁸ R. Jose says, Three buds,¹⁹ and its remnants²⁰ [continue valid] if two [stalks remained] and if there is aught [of each] of the stumps.²¹ Now it was assumed that since²² its remnants [are valid] with two, at the outset also two are valid, and that the reason he teaches three is to indicate what is the most proper observance of the commandment;²³ consequently since R. Jose requires three only for the most proper observance of the commandment according to the Rabbis²⁴ three are indispensable.²⁵ But has it not been taught, R. Jose says, If at the outset a bunch of hyssop has only two stalks²⁶ or if its remnants²⁷ consist of one, it is invalid, since a bunch is not valid unless at the outset it contains three and its remnants are no less than two? — Reverse [the assumption]:²⁸ According to R. Jose three are indispensable, according to the Rabbis three are required only for the proper observance of the commandment. So it has also been taught: If²⁹ a bunch of hyssop contains two stalks at the outset or if its remnant consists of one it is valid, since it is not invalid unless at the outset or when it is a remnant it consists of one. But is a remnant of one invalid? Have you not [just] said that a remnant of one is valid?

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 13b

— Say rather, Unless at the outset, [it contains] no more than the permitted number for its remnant, viz., one.¹

Meremar expounded, The bundles of Sura² are valid as a Sukkah-covering.³ Although [the seller] binds them together he does so merely to facilitate their counting.⁴ R. Abba said, As for cone-shaped bundles of bulrushes, as soon as the top-knots are untied they are valid [as a Sukkah-covering]. But are they not still tied at the bottom?⁵ — R. Papa answered, [This is a case] where he loosens them.⁶ R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said, one can even ‘say that [it is valid though] he does not loosen them, since a binding which is not made to facilitate transport⁷ is not considered a binding. R. Abba said in the name of Samuel, Herbs concerning which the Sages said that a man fulfils with them his obligation on Passover,⁸ carry⁹ ritual defilement,¹⁰ do not¹¹ act as an interposition to ritual defilement¹² and cause invalidity in a Sukkah-covering in the same manner as an air space.¹³ What is the reason? — Since when they wither they crumble and fall, they are regarded as though they were not there.

R. Abba further said in the name of R. Huna, He who cuts grapes for the vat, does not render their ‘handles’ [stalks] susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness;¹⁴ while R. Menashia b. Gada said in the name of R. Huna, He who cuts [ears of corn] for a Sukkah-covering¹⁵ does not render their handles susceptible to uncleanness. He who holds this opinion with regard to the cutting [of ears], certainly holds it with regard to the cutting of grapes,¹⁶ since one does not desire [any stalks] lest they suck up one's wine; he who holds the opinion that the cutting of grapes¹⁶ does not render their stalks susceptible to the uncleanness, holds that the cutting [of ears]¹⁵ does render them susceptible since one is pleased to use [the ears] for the Sukkah-covering in order that [the grains] be not scattered.¹⁷

Must we say that the [ruling of] R. Menashia b. Gada¹⁸ is a point at issue between Tannas? For it has been taught, Boughs of fig-trees on which there are figs, branches of vines on which there are grapes, or straws on which there are ears of corn or palm-branches on which there are dates, all these, if the inedible part is greater than the edible are valid [for a Sukkah-covering], otherwise, they are invalid. ‘Others’¹⁹ say, [They are not valid] unless the straw²⁰ is more than both the ‘handle’²¹ and the food. Now do they not differ on this principle, that one Master²² holds the opinion they²³ render the handles²⁴ susceptible to uncleanness,²⁵ while the other Master holds the opinion that they do not render the ‘handles’ susceptible to uncleanness? — According to R. Abba,²⁶ there is certainly²⁷ a dispute of the Tannas,²⁸ but according to R. Menashia b. Gada,²⁹ must we say that [his ruling is] in agreement only with one of the Tannas?³⁰ — R. Menashia can answer you, All³¹ agree that he who cuts ears for a Sukkah-covering does not render the ‘handles’ susceptible to uncleanness, but here we are dealing with a particular case where he cuts them for food,³² and then changed his mind [and used them] for a Sukkah-covering. But if he cut them for food, what is the reason [for the view] of the Rabbis?³³ And if you will answer that the Rabbis³⁴ are of the opinion that since he changed his mind about them [to use them] for a Sukkah-covering, his original intention³⁵ becomes annulled, [it may be objected], does then one's intention become annulled in such a case?³⁶ Have we not learnt:³⁷ All vessels

- (1) Thus it has been shown that the number of three stalks mentioned supra in the name of the Rabbis refers only to what is expected for the most proper observance of the commandment. If the number is to be insisted upon as indispensable this last cited Baraita, could agree neither with R. Jose nor with the Rabbis.
 - (2) Reeds tied into bundles which were on sale at Sura.
 - (3) Sc. they are not to be classed with ordinary bundles which are invalid for the purpose.
 - (4) He has no intention of keeping them together for storage. Any one buying them usually unbinds them before putting them out to dry. Hence their validity for the Sukkah even before they are unbound.

- (5) Since the reeds are also woven together at the bottom.
- (6) Sc. undid the ends of the cord that hold them together. The woven part may still remain.
- (7) If they are carried about they fall apart.
- (8) As, for instance, bitter herbs, lettuce or endives prescribed for the first Passover evening meal.
- (9) While they are still fresh.
- (10) Sc. they serve as ohel (v. Glos.).
- (11) If they form a horizontal partition between a clean and an unclean object.
- (12) This is a Rabbinical restriction. Pentateuchally they act as an interposition until they become dry.
- (13) The space they occupy is regarded as air space, and just as an air space of three handbreadths in the roof of the Sukkah invalidates it, so does a covering of these herbs.
- (14) Lit., 'they have no handles', since the stalks serve no useful purpose in the case of grapes for a vat. Handles of vessels or stalks of fruit are susceptible to ritual uncleanness only where they are needed for the purpose of lifting the object with their aid.
- (15) And produce is attached to them.
- (16) For a vat.
- (17) In the absence of the stalks the grains could not be used at all as a roof covering.
- (18) That 'he who cuts ... does not render their stalks susceptible etc.'

- (22) The 'Others'.
- (23) I.e., both he who cuts grapes and he who cuts ears of corn for Sukkah-covering.
- (24) V. supra n. 10.
- (25) And, therefore, they are regarded in the same light as the fruit and are unfit for the Sukkah roof unless the inedible portion exceeds both them and the edible portion.
- (26) Who ruled that only in the case of grapes are handles not susceptible but in the case of ears the handles are susceptible.
- (27) Since the first Tanna holds that in either case the 'handles' are not susceptible.
- (28) R. Abba holding the same view as the 'Others' who hold that 'handles' are susceptible.
- (29) Who holds that if one cuts ears for a Sukkah-covering it does not render the 'handles' susceptible to ritual uncleanness.
- (30) The first Tanna. Sc. must it be admitted that the 'others' always maintain that the handles in the case of 'ears of corn' are rendered susceptible to uncleanness, in complete contradiction of it. Menashia's ruling, or is it possible to explain the view of the 'others' as applying to a particular case only?
- (31) Even the 'others'.
- (32) When they are rendered susceptible to uncleanness.
- (33) The first Tanna, who ruled that the 'handles' are not rendered susceptible to uncleanness.
- (34) Sc. the first Tanna.
- (35) Of using them for food.
- (36) That of susceptibility to ritual uncleanness.

can be rendered susceptible to uncleanness by intention,¹ but cannot be rendered insusceptible except by an act of change,² since³ an act can disannul a [prior] act or intention, while an intention cannot disannul either a [previous] act or a [previous] intention? And if you will say that this⁴ refers only to vessels which are of importance but that ‘handles’ which are needed only as aids for the eating of the food,⁵ are made [susceptible to uncleanness] by intention and are also unmade by intention [it may be objected], Have we not learnt: The stalks of all foodstuffs that are threshed⁶ in the threshing-floor⁷ are insusceptible to ritual uncleanness,⁸ and R. Jose declares them susceptible?⁹ It is explicable according to the authority who says that ‘threshing’ here means loosening [the sheaves],¹⁰ but according to the authority who says that ‘threshing’ here really means ‘threshing’,¹¹ what can one answer?¹² — That in the previous case also,¹³ he actually threshed them.¹⁴ If so,¹⁵ what is the reason of the ‘others’?¹⁶ They hold the same opinion as R. Jose, as we have learnt, R. Jose declares them susceptible to uncleanness. How can you compare them?¹⁷ One can understand there¹⁸ the reason of R. Jose, that [the stalks] have a use according to R. Simeon b. Lakish, as R. Simeon b. Lakish said, Since one can [the more easily] turn them¹⁹ with the pitchfork,²⁰ but in this case,²¹ what use have they?²² --To seize hold of them by their haulms when he takes it²³ to pieces.

[Reverting to] the main text, ‘The stalks of all foodstuffs that are threshed in the threshing-floor are unsusceptible to uncleanness, and R. Jose declares them susceptible’. What is the meaning of ‘threshed’ here? — R. Johanan says, Actual threshing. R. Eleazar²⁴ says, Untying the bundle. One can understand according to R. Eleazar,²⁴ who says that ‘threshing’ means untying the bundle, that this²⁵ is the reason why R. Jose declares them susceptible to uncleanness, but according to R. Johanan who says that ‘threshing’ means actual threshing, why²⁶ does R. Jose declare them susceptible to uncleanness? — R. Simeon b. Lakish answered, Since he can [the more easily] turn them with a pitch fork.

R. Eleazar²⁴ said, Why are the prayers of the righteous likened to a pitchfork?²⁷ To teach thee that just as the pitchfork turns the corn from place to place in the barn, so the prayers of the righteous turn the mind of the Holy One, blessed be He, from the attribute of harshness to that of mercy.

MISHNAH. PLANKS MAY BE USED FOR THE SUKKAH-COVERING. THESE ARE THE WORDS OF R. JUDAH. R. MEIR FORBIDS THEM. IF ONE PLACES OVER IT²⁸ A PLANK FOUR HANDBREADTHS WIDE, IT IS VALID PROVIDED THAT HE DOES NOT SLEEP UNDER IT.²⁹

GEMARA. Rab said, The dispute³⁰ concerns planks which are four [handbreadths wide],³¹ in which case R. Meir holds the preventive measure against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing,³² while R. Judah disregards this preventive measure against [the use of] an ordinary roofing, but in the case of planks which are less than four handbreadths wide all agree that the Sukkah is valid.³³ Samuel however says that the dispute³⁴ concerns planks which are less than four [handbreadths wide],³⁵ but if they are four [handbreadths wide], they are invalid according to all.³⁶ If they are ‘less than four’ [you say, does this then imply,] even less than three? But [in this case] are they not mere sticks?³⁷ — R. Papa answered, He³⁸ means thus, If they are four [handbreadths wide] the Sukkah is invalid according to all,³⁶ if they are less than three, it is valid according to all.³⁹ What is the reason? Since they are mere sticks. In what do they⁴⁰ dispute? In [planks that are] from three to four [handbreadths wide]. One Master⁴¹ holds the opinion that since there is not in them the minimum extent of a 'place'⁴² we do not make a restrictive enactment,⁴³ and the other Master⁴⁴ holds the opinion that since the law of labud⁴⁵ can no longer apply to them⁴⁶ we make a restrictive enactment.

We learned: IF ONE PLACES OVER IT A PLANK WHICH IS FOUR HANDBREADTHS WIDE, IT IS VALID, PROVIDED THAT HE DOES NOT SLEEP UNDER IT. Now it is well according to Samuel who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths] but where there are four, all agree that it is invalid; for this reason he must NOT SLEEP UNDER IT. But according to Rab who says that the dispute is where there are four [handbreadths] but where there are less than four all agree that it is valid, why, according to R. Judah, may he NOT SLEEP UNDER IT? — Do you then think that this statement⁴⁷ is according to all? The concluding statement agrees in fact with R. Meir [only]. Come and hear: Two sheets combine,⁴⁸

two boards do not combine. R. Meir says, Boards also are like sheets.¹ It is well according to Samuel who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths], but where there are four handbreadths all agree that it is invalid, [since it may be explained:] What does ‘combine’ mean? That they combine to make four [handbreadths]. But according to Rab, who says that their dispute is where there are four [handbreadths], but where there are not four handbreadths all agree that it is valid, how is it² to be explained? If there are four [handbreadths]³ why need they combine; if there are not, why [is it invalid]? Are they not mere sticks? — Indeed [it is a case] where there are four handbreadths, and what [is meant by] combine is that they combine to form four cubits⁴ at the side.⁵

Another version: It is well according to Samuel, who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths], but where there are four, all agree that it is invalid, [since it may be explained:] What is meant by ‘combine’? That they combine to form four cubits at the side. But according to Rab, it is well according to R. Meir, since what is meant by ‘combine’ may be that they combine to form four cubits at the side, but according to R. Judah, who says that even if there are four [handbreadths] the Sukkah is valid, what could be the meaning of ‘they do not combine’? Are they not like mere sticks?⁶ — Since R. Meir said ‘they combine’, R. Judah said ‘they do not combine’. It has been taught in agreement with Rab, and it has been taught in agreement with Samuel. ‘It has been taught in agreement with Rab’, If he covered the Sukkah with planks of cedar which are not four [handbreadths wide], it is valid according to all. If they have four [handbreadths], R. Meir declares it⁷ invalid and R. Judah valid. R. Judah said, It happened in a time of peril⁸ that we brought planks which were four [handbreadths wide]⁹ and we laid them over a balcony and sat under them. They¹⁰ said to him, Is this a proof? A time of peril is no proof.

‘It has been taught in agreement with Samuel’, If one covered the Sukkah with planks of cedar which are four [handbreadths wide] it⁷ is invalid according to all; if they have not four [handbreadths] R. Meir declares it⁷ invalid and R. Judah valid. But R. Meir admits that if there is a space of one plank between every two planks,¹¹ a man may place laths¹² between them and the Sukkah is valid,¹³ and R. Judah agrees that if he placed on it a plank four handbreadths wide, [although] the Sukkah is valid, a man may not sleep under it,¹⁴ and if he sleeps beneath it he has not fulfilled his obligation.¹⁵

It was stated: If he placed the planks¹⁶ on their sides,¹⁷ R. Huna declared it⁷ invalid,¹⁸ and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna declared it valid.¹⁹ R. Nahman once came to Sura and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna came in to him and asked, If he placed them on their sides, what is the law?²⁰ He said to them, It is invalid, since they are regarded as metal spits.²¹ R. Huna said to them, Did I not tell you, Say as I do? They answered him, Did then the Master give us a reason when he did not accept his ruling? He said to them, Did you ask me for a reason and I would not give you?

Can we say that the following provides support for his view:²² If [the Sukkah] cannot contain his head, the major part of his body and his table, or if a breach has been made in it²³ large enough for a kid to jump in headlong,²⁴ or if he placed on it a plank four handbreadths wide, even if only three handbreadths of it enter within, it²⁵ is invalid. How is this [last sentence]²⁶ meant? Surely that he placed them²⁷ on their sides?²⁸ — No! Here we are dealing with a case where he placed it²⁹ above the entrance of the booth,³⁰ with three [of the four handbreadths] within and one protruding outside, in which case it is considered as a lath protruding from the Sukkah, and every lath protruding from a Sukkah is regarded as [part of the] Sukkah.³¹

- (16) That were four handbreadths wide.
- (17) Which were less than three handbreadths in width.
- (18) For the reason given by R. Nahman infra.
- (19) Since no house roof is constructed in such a manner there was no need to enact a preventive measure as in the case of flat-lying planks.
- (20) They thought he might agree with their view.
- (21) I.e., since a plank of four handbreadths is invalid, as is any metal object, in whatever position it is placed, it is still invalid.
- (22) R. Nahman's.
- (23) In one of the Sukkah walls near the ground.

- (29) One plank only.
- (30) Sc. the side where there was no wall and to which the principle of 'curved wall' (v. supra 4a) does not apply.
- (31) V. infra, 19a. Hence it is that the one handbreadth without is deemed to be added to the three within to constitute an invalid covering.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 15a

MISHNAH. IF A ROOF [OF TIMBER]¹ HAS NO PLASTERING, R. JUDAH SAYS THAT BETH SHAMMAI RULED THAT² HE SHOULD LOOSEN [ALL THE PLANKS] AND REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN EACH TWO,³ WHILE BETH HILLEL RULED HE SHOULD EITHER LOOSEN [THE PLANKS] OR REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO. R. MEIR RULED, HE SHOULD REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO, BUT NOT LOOSEN.⁴

GEMARA. It is well according to Beth Hillel; their reason is that 'Thou shalt make', [implies] but not from that which is [already] made,⁵ so that if he loosens [the planks] he performs an action,⁶ and if he removes one from between two he performs an action;⁶ but what is the reason of Beth Shammai? If it is that 'Thou shalt make' [implies] but not from that which is [already] made, one act only⁷ should be sufficient; if it is because of a restriction on account [of the possible use]⁸ of all ordinary roofing,⁹ it should suffice if he removes one from between two?¹⁰ — Indeed it is because of a restriction on account [of the possible use] of an ordinary roofing, but they mean thus: Even although he loosens them, if he removes one from between two,¹¹ it is [valid], otherwise it is not. If so, read the concluding [part:] R. MEIR RULED, HE SHOULD REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO, BUT NOT LOOSEN. Is not R. Meir's view thus identical with that of Beth Shammai? — He¹² means thus: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not dispute on this point.¹³ What [then] does [the Mishnah] teach us?¹⁴ That R. Meir holds that a preventive measure [has been enacted] against the possible use⁸ of an ordinary roofing, while R. Judah disregards the preventive measure against [the use of] an ordinary roofing? But have they not already disputed on this point, seeing that we have learnt, Planks may be used for the Sukkah covering, these are the words of R. Judah; R. Meir forbids them?¹⁵ — R. Hiyya b. Abba answered in the name of R. Johanan, The former Mishnah deals with planed boards¹⁶ and they forbade them as a preventive measure against [the possible use⁸ of] vessels.¹⁷ But according to Rab Judah who citing Rab said,¹⁸ ‘If he covered the Sukkah with plain arrowshafts, it is valid; with bored arrow-shafts, it is invalid’,¹⁸ and he does not restrict plain shafts on account of [the possible use of] bored ones; here also we should not restrict planed boards on account of [the possible use of] vessels? You are consequently obliged to say that the dispute in the former [Mishnah] is on the question whether a preventive measure against the possible use of an ordinary roofing has been enacted and that the dispute in the latter Mishnah is also on the same question; but why should they dispute the same question twice? — The latter [Mishnah] is what R. Judah said to R. Meir: ‘Why [he said in effect] do you forbid planks?’¹⁹ As a preventive measure against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing? But it is Beth Shammai only who hold this opinion while Beth Hillel do not enact any preventive measure’.²⁰ To this R. Meir answers that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not dispute this point at all. This is correct according to Rab who says that the dispute²¹ is where the planks are four [handbreadths wide], since in such a case R. Meir holds that a preventive measure [has been enacted] against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing while R. Judah disregards the preventive measure against all ordinary roofing; but according to Samuel, who says that the dispute²¹ is where the planks are not four [handbreadths wide], but that where they are four handbreadths wide all agree that it²² is invalid, on what principle do they dispute in the latter [Mishnah]?²³ They dispute on [the question of] the annullment of a roof.²⁴ One Master²⁵ holds the opinion that²⁶ by this means it becomes annulled,²⁷ while the other Master²⁸ holds the opinion that by this means it does not become annulled.²⁹

MISHNAH. IF ONE ROOFS HIS SUKKAH WITH IRON SPITS OR THE LONG BOARDS OF A BED,³⁰ AND THE SPACE BETWEEN THEM³¹ EQUALS THEM,³² IT³³ IS VALID. IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK TO MAKE FOR HIMSELF A SUKKAH, IT IS NO VALID SUKKAH.

GEMARA. Can we say that this³⁴ is a refutation of R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua, since it was stated, If the breach is equal to that which is standing,³⁵ R. Papa says it is permitted,³⁶ and R. Huna the son of R. Joshua says it is forbidden?³⁷ — R. Huna the son of R. Joshua can answer, ‘What is meant by EQUALS THEM? That it can easily pass through them.’³⁸

- (1) The planks of such a roof were usually no less than four handbreadths wide.
 - (2) If it is desired to use the room as a Sukkah.
 - (3) Being replaced by suitable material.
 - (4) Loosening being of no avail at all.
 - (5) Sc. from invalid materials or as a house and not as a Sukkah.
 - (6) For the express purpose of the Sukkah.
 - (7) Loosen or remove.
 - (8) As a Sukkah.
 - (9) V. supra 12a.
 - (10) By which the solidity of the roof is broken up.
 - (11) So that (a) he performs an act for the express purpose of the Sukkah and (b) he breaks up the solidity of the roof and there is no need to provide against the possible use of a solid roof for a Sukkah.

(12) R. Meir.

(13) Both agreeing as to the necessity for removing one from between two.

(14) By giving the views of R. Judah and R. Meir.

(15) Mishnah supra 14a.

(16) Less than four handbreadths in width, so that no preventive measure against the possible use of all ordinary roofing was necessary.

(17) Vessels are susceptible to ritual contamination and are, therefore, invalid for a Sukkah-covering. Planed boards are not proper 'vessels' and are not susceptible to ritual uncleanness, but, as they can be used for certain purposes, they are forbidden as a Sukkah-covering lest one regard proper vessels also as permitted.

(18) Supra 12b.

(19) In the Mishnah supra 14a.

(20) An objection thus arises against R. Meir: Why does he adopt the view of Beth Shammai against the more authoritative one of Beth Hillel?

(21) Between R. Meir and R. Judah.

(22) The Sukkah.

(23) Sc. since the planks in an ordinary roof are usually no less than four handbreadths wide why does R. Judah maintain that according to Beth Hillel the Sukkah is nevertheless valid?

(24) Sc. whether what was once a roof can be annulled by removing planks, or by the performance of any other act which indicates that the man is aware that a Sukkah is valid only if it was made for the purpose.

(25) R. Judah.

(26) According to Beth Hillel.

(27) No preventive measure being deemed necessary.

(28) R. Meir.

(29) Even according to Beth Hillel, a preventive measure having been enacted.

(30) Iron spits, since they are metal, and side pieces of a bed since they are 'vessels' are invalid for a Sukkah since they are susceptible to ritual uncleanness.

(31) Which is filled in with a valid Sukkah-covering.

(32) I.e., their thickness.

(33) The Sukkah.

(34) The first ruling in our Mishnah.

(35) This deals with a barrier for the purpose of establishing a private enclosure to carry within it on the Sabbath.

(36) To carry objects within the enclosure.

(37) 'Er. 15b. Now since in the circumstances mentioned a partition is invalid in the case of the Sabbath why is the roof valid in that of Sukkah?

(38) Sc. between the spits or boards, so that the space between, which will be covered with suitable materials, is slightly wider.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 15b

But is it not possible to measure them exactly'?¹ — R. Ammi answered, This is a case where he makes it larger.² Raba said, one can even say that he does not make it larger, but if they³ were placed as the web, he places [the valid covering] as the woof; if as the woof, he places them as the web.⁴ OR THE LONG BOARDS OF A BED. Can we say that this⁵ confirms [a statement of] R. Ammi b. Tabyomi, for R. Ammi b. Tabyomi said, If he covered the Sukkah with discarded⁶ vessels it is invalid? — [No,] as R. Hanan said elsewhere in the name of Rabbi, ‘With the long board and two legs, or with the short board⁷ and two legs’,⁸ so here also it may refer to the long board and two legs, or the short board and two legs.⁹ Where was this statement of R. Hanan in the name of Rabbi stated? — In connection with what we have learnt:

- (1) The questioner assumed that the previous answer meant that the phrase EQUALS THEM denotes a space between boards and the like which is usually larger than the objects between which it intervenes.
- (2) I.e., the Mishnah actually referred only to a case where one did make it larger.
- (3) The boards or the spits.
- (4) I.e., the valid covering is placed crosswise to the invalid, and, therefore, always exceeds it in volume.
- (5) The prohibition to use boards that can no longer be regarded as ‘vessels’ on account of having once formed a part of a ‘vessel’.
- (6) Lit., ‘worn out’.
- (7) The short boards are at the head and foot of the bed, the long at the sides. V. Kelim XVIII, 5.
- (8) It will be explained infra why these may be regarded as vessels and what purpose they can serve.
- (9) Which may be regarded as a proper vessel.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 16a

A bed can become unclean [only] when it is assembled¹ and be rendered clean only when it is assembled, these are the words of R. Eliezer, but the Sages say, it can become unclean when it is in parts and become clean when in parts.² What are [these parts]? — R. Hanan said in the name of Rabbi, The long board and two legs or the short board and two legs. For what is it³ fit?⁴ — For placing against a wall and sitting upon it, and for tying it with ropes.⁵

[Reverting to] the main text: ‘R. Ammi b. Tabyomi said, If he covered with discarded vessels it is invalid’. What are discarded vessels? — Abaye said, Small strips of cloth less than three [handbreadths] square which are unfit to be used either by rich or by poor. It has been taught in agreement with R. Ammi b. Tabyomi: In the case of a matting of rushes or straw, the remnants thereof, even if diminished,⁶ may not be used for a Sukkah-covering;⁷ in that of a mat of reeds, a large one⁸ may be used for a Sukkah-covering, a small one⁹ may not be used for a Sukkah-covering.¹⁰ R. Eliezer said, The former also is susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness¹¹ and may not be used as a Sukkah-covering.¹²

IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK. R. Huna said, This only refers to where there is not a hollow of one handbreadth [in height] extending to seven [handbreadths square],¹³ but if there is a hollow of one handbreadth extending to seven, it is a [valid]¹⁴ Sukkah. So it has also been taught; If he hollows out a haystack to make for himself a Sukkah, it is a [valid] Sukkah. But have we not learnt, IT IS NO SUKKAH? Deduce, therefore, therefrom [that the explanation is] according to R. Huna. This is conclusive.

Some put it¹⁵ in the form of a contradiction. We have learnt: IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK TO MAKE FOR HIMSELF A SUKKAH, IT IS NO SUKKAH. But has it not been taught that it is [a valid] Sukkah? — R. Huna answered, There is no difficulty. The latter refers to where there is a hollow of a handbreadth extending to seven [handbreadths]¹³ while the former refers to where there is no hollow of a handbreadth extending to seven [handbreadths].

MISHNAH. IF ONE SUSPENDS THE WALLS¹⁶ FROM ABOVE DOWNWARDS,¹⁷ IF THEY¹⁸ ARE HIGHER THAN THREE HANDBREADTHS FROM THE GROUND, IT IS INVALID. IF HE RAISES THEM FROM THE BOTTOM UPWARDS, IF THEY BE TEN HANDBREADTHS HIGH, IT IS VALID.¹⁹ R. JOSE SAYS, JUST AS FROM THE BOTTOM UPWARDS A HEIGHT OF TEN HANDBREADTHS SUFFICES SO FROM THE TOP DOWNWARDS DOES A HEIGHT OF TEN HANDBREADTHS [SUFFICE].

GEMARA. On what principle do they²⁰ differ? — One Master²¹ holds the opinion that a hanging partition²² renders [the Sukkah] valid, and the other Master²³ holds the opinion that a hanging partition does not render it valid.²⁴

We have learnt elsewhere, If there be a cistern between two courtyards,²⁵ they²⁶ may not take water therefrom on the Sabbath,²⁷ unless a partition ten handbreadths high be made either from above, or from below,²⁸ within²⁹ its rim.³⁰ R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says,

- (1) When all its parts are joined together.
 - (2) Kelim XVIII, 9.
 - (3) The long or short board with the legs.
 - (4) That it should in consequence have the status of a 'vessel'.
 - (5) To form a couch (v. Rashi). [Aliter: and to sit upon it for twisting ropes. Cf. Aruch; MS.M. omits 'and sitting upon it', which Rashi also did not seem to read.]
 - (6) From the minimum required to make them susceptible to uncleanness, i.e., six handbreadths square, v. Kel. XXVII, 2.
 - (7) Since in origin they constituted a vessel.
 - (8) Which cannot be regarded as a 'vessel' since it is usually used as a covering.
 - (9) Which may be regarded as a vessel.
 - (10) On account of its susceptibility to ritual uncleanness.
 - (11) In his opinion a large one also is used as a rule for sitting purposes and must, therefore, be regarded as a vessel.
 - (12) V. infra Mishnah I, 11.
 - (13) The minimum size of a Sukkah.
 - (14) [The reason for invalidating a Sukkah which has been hollowed out of the haystack is as stated supra 12a "thou shalt make" which implies but not from that which has been made'. This reservation it is to be noted applies only to the Sukkah-covering but not to the walls. Now, if in piling up the haystack there was left a space below of the mentioned dimensions, the top of the haystack can be said to have been constructed in the very first instance to provide a covering (for the space below) and as such is valid for the Sukkah which has been hollowed out. Where, however, there was no such space left in the first instance, the covering which the top of the haystack provides comes into existence only as the automatic result of the hollowing out and consequently is invalid for the Sukkah; so Rashi. For another interpretation v. R. Han.]
 - (15) R. Huna's explanation.
 - (16) Of a Sukkah.
 - (17) This refers, of course, to walls woven from reeds, branches or textile.
 - (18) Sc. their lower ends.

- (19) Even though they do not reach the roof.
- (20) R. Jose and the first Tanna in our Mishnah.
- (21) R. Jose.
- (22) If it is ten handbreadths high.
- (23) The first Tanna.
- (24) When its lower end, however, is within three handbreadths from the ground it is no longer regarded as a hanging partition but as one resting on the ground.
- (25) Between which there was no 'erub (v. Glos.), and one half of the cistern was in one courtyard while the other half was in the other courtyard, and the partition between the courtyards was suspended above the cistern.
- (26) The tenants of either courtyard.
- (27) Since each group of tenants would thereby be carrying the water of the other group from the latter's domain into their own.
- (28) Near the water.
- (29) Cf. Rashi. Lit., 'or within', referring to 'from above'.
- (30) This is a special relaxation of the law of partitions in the case of water. Where the suspended partition, however, is without the rim, as is the case with the wall between the courtyards, since it was not especially made for the water, it cannot be regarded as valid.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 16b

Beth Shammai say, [The partition may be suspended] from above, and Beth Hillel say, Only from below. R. Judah said, A partition¹ should not be [subjected to] greater [restrictions] than the wall between them.² Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, R. Judah spoke according to the view of R. Jose³ who said that a hanging partition validates. But in fact it is not so! Neither does R. Judah hold the opinion of R. Jose,⁴ nor does R. Jose hold the opinion of R. Judah.⁵ 'R. Judah does not hold the opinion of R. Jose', for R. Judah speaks only there with regard to the 'erub of courtyards,⁶ which is a Rabbinical injunction, but here, with regard to the Sukkah which is a Pentateuchal commandment, he does not [say so]. 'Nor does R. Jose hold the opinion of R. Judah,' for R. Jose speaks only here with regard to the Sukkah which is merely a positive commandment⁷ but with regard to the Sabbath, the interdiction of which involves stoning, he does not say so.⁸ And if you will retort⁹ with regard to the incident which occurred at Sepphoris,¹⁰ on whose authority was it done?¹¹ Not on the authority of R. Jose,¹² but on that of R. Ishmael son of R. Jose.¹³ What was this incident? — [That concerning which] when R. Dimi came¹⁴ he related that on a certain occasion they forgot to bring a Scroll of the Law¹⁵ on the eve of the Sabbath. On the morrow, they stretched sheets over the pillars¹⁶ and¹⁷ brought the Scroll of the Law and read therein. Can it mean that they [really] spread them out? Whence then did they bring them on the Sabbath?¹⁸ — Rather they found sheets [already] spread over the pillars, and therefore they brought the Scroll of the Law and read therein. R. Hisda stated in the name of Abimi, A matting slightly more than four handbreadths [wide] is permitted as a Sukkah wall.¹⁹ How does one place it? — One suspends it in the middle less than three [handbreadths] from the ground and less than three from the top,²⁰ and whatever [space] is less than three handbreadths is treated as labud.²¹ But is not this obvious? — One might have said that we apply the law of labud once, but we do not apply labud twice [to the same wall], therefore he informed us of this. It was objected: A matting slightly more than seven [handbreadths] is permitted as a Sukkah wall!²² — With reference to what was this taught? With reference to a large Sukkah,²³ and what does it inform us?²⁴ That walls may be suspended from above downwards in agreement with R. Jose.²⁵

R. Ammi said, A board which is slightly more than four [handbreadths] wide²⁶ is²⁷ permitted for a Sukkah wall when he places it less than three [handbreadths] from the termination of the adjacent wall, since a space less than three [handbreadths] is²⁸ treated as labud.²⁹ What does he inform us? — He informs us this: That the minimum extent of a small Sukkah is seven [handbreadths].

- (1) Within the cistern.
 - (2) The two courtyards, 'Er. 86b. I.e. the wall alone, though suspended above the cistern, is a valid partition in respect of the movement of objects on the Sabbath.
 - (3) Of our Mishnah.
 - (4) That a suspended partition is valid in a Sukkah.
 - (5) That a suspended partition is valid on the Sabbath in the case of the cistern.
 - (6) V. supra 3b.
 - (7) The punishment for which transgression is comparatively mild.
 - (8) Even in the case of a Rabbinical injunction.
 - (9) Since R. Jose does not agree with R. Judah in the case of Sabbath.
 - (10) V. infra, where a suspended partition was treated as valid in the case of Sabbath.
 - (11) Seeing that R. Jose who was the rector of the academy of Sepphoris (v. Sanh. 32b) did not agree with such a view.
 - (12) Who at that time was no longer alive.
 - (13) His son.
 - (14) From Palestine to Babylon.
 - (15) The Scroll was in one of the houses of the courtyard where stood the Synagogue. As there was no 'erub prepared it was forbidden to carry from the house to the Synagogue on the Sabbath, and they, therefore, adopted the following device.
 - (16) That were situated between the house and the Synagogue.
 - (17) Having thus formed a sort of private domain.
 - (18) When the carrying of objects is forbidden.
 - (19) If it is as long as the required wall.
 - (20) The Sukkah referred to is one that is exactly ten handbreadths high, and the placing of a matting slightly more than four in the middle leaves a space of less than three on either side.
 - (21) V. supra 6b, and Glos.
 - (22) Since it prescribes the minimum of seven handbreadths, it follows that only one labud is permitted.
 - (23) I.e., one more than ten handbreadths in height which precludes the assumption of more than one labud. All that can be done is to suspend the mat at a distance of less than three handbreadths from the roof so that its size (being slightly more than seven handbreadths) combines with the space between it and the roof (which is somewhat less than three handbreadths) to constitute (by the rule of labud) a suspended wall of ten handbreadths in height.
 - (24) Sc. is it not obvious that a ten handbreadths high wall is valid?
 - (25) Supra.
 - (26) And is ten handbreadths high.
 - (27) Placed vertically.
 - (28) By the rule of labud.

(29) And thus a wall of the prescribed minimum length of seven handbreadths is obtained.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 17a

MISHNAH. IF ONE REMOVED THE SUKKAH-COVERING THREE HANDBREADTHS¹ FROM THE WALLS, IT IS INVALID.² IF [THE ROOF OF] A HOUSE IS BREACHED,³ AND HE PLACED A SUKKAH-COVERING OVER IT, IF THERE IS A DISTANCE OF FOUR CUBITS FROM THE WALL TO THE COVERING, IT IS INVALID.⁴ SIMILARLY IN THE CASE OF A COURTYARD WHICH IS SURROUNDED BY AN EXEDRA.⁵ IF [THE COVERING OF] A LARGE SUKKAH WAS SURROUNDED WITH A MATERIAL WHICH IS INVALID FOR A SUKKAH-COVERING, IF THERE IS A SPACE OF FOUR CUBITS⁶ BENEATH IT, IT IS INVALID.⁷

GEMARA. Why are all these [rulings]⁸ needed? — It is necessary [to state them all]. For if he⁹ had only informed us of [the roof of] a house which is breached, [one would have said that the validity¹⁰ applied to this case only] because the partitions are made for the house,¹¹ but in the case of a courtyard which is surrounded by an exedra, where the partitions are not made for the exedra it does not apply;¹² and if he had informed us of those two,¹³ [one would have said that the validity¹⁰ applied to these cases only] because their covering might be a valid covering,¹⁴ but in the case of a large Sukkah which is surrounded with a material which is invalid for a Sukkah-covering, since the very material of the covering is invalid, it does not apply, [therefore it is] necessary [to mention all].

Rabbah stated, I found the Rabbis of the College of Rab sitting and saying,¹⁵ ‘An air space invalidates¹⁶ if it is three [handbreadths wide]; an invalid covering invalidates¹⁶ if it is four [handbreadths wide]’, and I said to them, Whence do you know that an air space of three [handbreadths] invalidates? [Presumably] because we learned: IF THE SUKKAH-COVERING IS THREE HANDBREADTHS DISTANT FROM THE WALLS, IT IS INVALID. [But if so,] invalid Sukkah-covering too should not invalidate¹⁶ unless it extends to four cubits, since we have learnt: IF [THE ROOF OF] A HOUSE IS BREACHED AND HE PLACED A SUKKAH-COVERING OVER IT, IF THERE IS A DISTANCE OF FOUR CUBITS FROM THE WALL TO THE COVERING, IT IS INVALID. And they said to me, This is no evidence¹⁷ since Rab and Samuel both say that¹⁸ the reason of its validity is because [the roof is regarded as the continuation] of a ‘curved wall’;¹⁹ and I said to them, What [would the law be] if the invalid Sukkah-covering were less than four [handbreadths], with an air space²⁰ of less than three [handbreadths]? [Surely] it would be valid.²¹ And what if he filled in this space with spits?²² [Surely] it would be invalid.²³ Now should not an air-space which invalidates with three [handbreadths]²⁴ be treated like invalid covering which only invalidates with four?²⁵ And they answered me, ‘If so, then even according to you, who say that invalid covering invalidates only if there are four cubits, how [would it be] if there was invalid covering of less than four cubits, and [next to it] an air space of less than three handbreadths? [Surely] it would be valid. And if he filled in this space with spits? [Surely] it would be invalid. Now [can it not similarly be argued] should not an air space which invalidates with three [handbreadths] be like the Sukkah-covering which invalidates [only] if there are four cubits?’ And I answered them, ‘How can you compare the two cases? It is well according to me who say four cubits,

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. WHEN DO WE [BEGIN TO] MAKE MENTION OF THE POWER OF RAIN?¹ R. ELIEZER SAYS: ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FEAST.² R. JOSHUA SAYS: ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST. R. JOSHUA SAID TO HIM: SEEING THAT RAIN ON THE FEAST IS A SIGN OF [GOD'S] ANGER³ WHY MAKE MENTION OF IT? THEREUPON R. ELIEZER SAID TO HIM: I ALSO DID NOT SAY TO PRAY⁴ BUT TO MAKE MENTION [IN THE WORD] 'HE CAUSETH THE WIND TO BLOW AND THE RAIN TO FALL'⁵ -IN ITS DUE SEASON. HE [R. JOSHUA] REPLIED TO HIM: IF THAT IS SO ONE SHOULD AT ALL TIMES MAKE MENTION OF IT.

WE PRAY FOR RAIN ONLY CLOSE TO THE RAINY SEASON. R. JUDAH SAYS: THE LAST TO STEP BEFORE THE ARK⁶ ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST MAKES MENTION, THE FIRST DOES NOT; ON THE FIRST DAY OF PASSOVER THE FIRST MAKES MENTION, THE LAST DOES NOT.

GEMARA. What has the Tanna [in mind] when he teaches WHEN etc.?⁷ -The Tanna refers to [a Mishnah] elsewhere which teaches: We make mention of the Power of Rain in the [benediction of] the Revival of the Dead,⁸ and we pray for [rain] in the Benediction of the Years⁹ and [we insert] the Habdulah¹⁰ in [the benediction] 'Thou favourest man with knowledge'.¹¹ [With that passage in mind] the Tanna now teaches: When do we [begin] to make mention of the Power of Rain? Would it not have been more appropriate to teach it there, why did he leave it until now? — [Say] rather, because the Tanna had just completed [learning the Tractate] Rosh Hashanah¹² where we have learnt: And on the Feast [the world] is judged through water. And, [as there] he taught: 'And on the Feast [the world] is judged through water,' therefore there he teaches: When do we [begin] to make mention of the Power of Rain. But let him teach: When do we [begin] to make mention of Rain: why, the Power of Rain?-R. Johanan said: Because Rain comes down by the Power [of God], as it is said, Who doeth great things und unsearchable, marvellous things without number.¹³ And it is [further] written, Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the fields.¹⁴ Where [in these verses is this idea] implied? — Rabbah b. Shila replied: It is derived from the analogous use of the word heker in verses treating of Creation. Here it is written, 'Who doeth great things and unsearchable'. And there it is written, 'Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, The Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? His discernment is past searching out.'¹⁵ And [of Creation] it is [also] written, Who by Thy strength settest fast the mountains, Who art girded about with might.¹⁶ Whence do we know that mention of Rain is to be made in the Prayer?¹⁷ - It has been taught: To love the Lord your God and to serve Him with all your heart.¹⁸ What is Service of Heart? You must needs say, Prayer. And the verse following reads, That I will give the rain of your land in its season, the former rain and the latter rain.¹⁹

R. Johanan said: Three keys the Holy One blessed be He has retained in His own hands and not entrusted to the hand of any messenger, namely, the Key of Rain, the Key of Childbirth, and the Key of the Revival of the Dead. The Key of Rain, for It is written, The Lord will open unto thee His good treasure, the heaven to give the rain of thy land in its season,²⁰ The Key of Childbirth, for it is written, And God remembered Rachel, and God hearkened

(1) The term 'power of Rain' is applied to the phrase 'He causeth the wind to blow and the rain to fall' inserted in the second benediction of the prayer known as 'the Eighteen Benedictions' — The Tefillah (v. Glos.) On the expression POWER OF RAIN v. infra.

(2) The Feast, dj V, the name by which the festival of Tabernacles is referred to in Mishnah and Talmud. Cf. I Kings VIII, 2, 65; Neh. VIII, 14, 15.

(3) Lit., curse, v. Suk. 28b.

(4) I.e., to insert in the ninth benediction the words, 'Give dew and rain for a blessing upon the face of the earth'.

(6) To step before the Ark (tebah), a technical term denoting the recitation of the tefillah or the Amidah by the reader. V. R.H., Sonc. ed. p. 160, n. 9.

(7) What is the Tanna's authority that the power of rain has to be mentioned at all?

(8) The second benediction.

(9) The ninth benediction.

(10) Additional prayer inserted in the fourth benediction in the evening service at the termination of Sabbath and festivals.

(11) Ber. 33a.

(12) The order of the tractates of the Mishnah mentioned here is the same as given by the Gaon Sherira of Pumbeditha (968 C.E.) in the letter addressed by him to the community of Kairwan. (V. Neubauer Med. Jew. Chronicles, p. 13). The same sequence is given by Maimonides in the Introduction to his Commentary on the Mishnah.

(13) Job V, 9-10. The Gemara cites IX, 10, but the commentators substitute for it V, 9 which makes the sequence of ideas clearer.

(14) V. supra n. 5.

(15) Isa. XL, 28.

(16) Ps. LXV, 7. Rabbah b. Shilah infers from the analogous use of the word rej, in Job (where it speaks of rain) and Isaiah (where it refers to Creation) that just as God displayed 'Power' at Creation so too 'Power is a concomitant of rain. Hence the expression, POWER OF RAIN.

to her, and opened her womb.¹ The Key of the Revival of the Dead, for it is written, And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves.² In Palestine they said: Also the Key of Sustenance, for it is said, Thou openest thy hand etc.³ Why does not R. Johanan include also this [key]? — Because in his view sustenance is [included in] Rain.⁴

R. ELIEZER SAYS: ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FEAST etc. The question was asked, Whence did R. Eliezer derive this? Did he learn it from Lulab⁵ or from the Libation of Water?⁶ If he learnt it from Lulab, then just as the obligation of the use of the Lulab comes into force on the [first] day of Tabernacles, so too should we begin to make mention of rain on that day. Or perhaps he learnt it from Libation. [If so, then] just as Water Libation may be [carried out] on the evening [preceding the first day] — (for a Master [interpreting the verse], And the meal-offering thereof and their drink-offerings,⁷ said, Even by night)-so too should one begin to make mention of rain on that evening!⁸ — Come and hear: R. Abbahu said: R. Eliezer deduced it from Lulab only. Some there are who say: R. Abbahu had a tradition. Whilst others say: He based it on a Baraitha. Which is the Baraitha? — It has been taught: ‘When do we [begin to] make mention of Rain? R. Eliezer says: From the time of the taking up of the Lulab; R. Joshua says, From the time when the Lulab is discarded.⁹ Said R. Eliezer: Seeing that these Four Species are intended only to make intercession for water,¹⁰ therefore as these cannot [grow] without water so the world [too] cannot exist without water. R. Joshua said to him: Is not rain on the Feast a sure sign of [God's] anger? R. Eliezer replied: I too did not say to pray but to make mention. And just as one makes mention of the Revival of the Dead all the year round¹¹ although it will take place only in its proper time, so too should mention be made of the Power of Rain all the year round although it comes only in its due season. Therefore if one desires to make mention all the year round he may do so. Rabbi says: I hold the view that when one ceases to pray [for rain]¹² one should also no longer make mention of it. R. Judah b. Bathyra says: On the second day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention. R. Akiba says: On the sixth day of the Feast. R. Judah says in the name of R. Joshua: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention, the first does not; on the first day of Passover the first makes mention, the last does not. Did not then R. Eliezer reply well to R. Joshua?- R. Joshua can answer you: It is quite in order to make mention of the Revival of the Dead [all the year round], since any day may be its time, but is rain reasonable at all times? Have we not learnt: Should Nisan terminate and then rain fall it is a sign of [God's] anger, for it is said, Is it not wheat harvest to-day etc.?’¹³

‘R. Judah b. Bathyra says: on the second day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention’. What is R. Judah b. Bathyra's reason? — It has been taught: R. Judah b. Bathyra says, Of the second day of the Feast, Scripture Says, we-niskehem,¹⁴ [‘and their drink-offerings’] and of the sixth day, u-nesakeah¹⁵ [‘and its drink-offerings’] and of the seventh day, kemishpatam¹⁶ [according to their rule]. Note [the letters] Mem, Yod, Mem which form the word mayim [‘water’].¹⁷ Here you have the biblical allusion to the Libation of Water. And what makes him [R. Judah b. Bathyra] fix it on the second day? — Because [the first of the allusions to the Water Libation] is found in connection [with the order for] the second day. Hence why we should [begin] to make mention on the second day. R. Akiba says: On the sixth day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention, for of the sixth day Scripture says, And its drink-offerings.¹⁸ Scripture thus speaks of two libations,¹⁹ the Libation of Water and the Libation of Wine. Perhaps both Libations must be of wine? — He [R. Akiba] is of the same opinion as R. Judah b. Bathyra who said, There is an allusion to water.²⁰

Once, however, it is granted that the mention of rain starts on the evening, it will have to be the preceding, so as to be on the same day as the Water Libation (the night always being counted with the following day). Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 3a

If he accepts the view of R. Judah b. Bathyra let him also agree with him [that one begins to make mention on the second day of the Feast]? — R. Akiba holds the view that the additional Libation occurs in the text¹ on the sixth day.

It has been taught: R. Nathan says, In the holy place shalt thou pour out a drink-offering of strong drink unto the Lord.² Scripture [here] speaks of two Libations, the Libation of Water and the Libation of Wine.³ Perhaps both are of wine?— If it were so, he should have said, either hassek hassek or nasok nesek. What is the force [of the words] hassek nesek? — From this is to be inferred, that one points to the Libation of Water, and the other to the Libation of Wine.⁴

Who is the authority for that which we have learnt, The Libation of Water [is performed] throughout the seven days [of the Feast]? Is it R. Joshua? He would have stated on one day only!⁵ Is it R. Akiba? According to him it is performed on two days!⁶ Is it R. Judah b. Bathyra? According to him it is performed on six days?⁷ — I can still say, It is R. Judah b. Bathyra and he will hold the same opinion as R. Judah of the following Mishnah. For we have learnt: R. Judah says, A vessel of a log⁸ capacity was used for Libation throughout the eight days [of the Feast]; but he [R. Judah b. Bathyra] excludes the first day and includes the eighth day.⁹ Why does he exclude the first day? Is it because the [first of the] biblical allusions to water [is to be found] on the second day? Then the eighth day too should be excluded seeing that the last [of the] allusions to water is on the seventh day! — It must then be R. Joshua, and as for the Libation of Water being performed throughout the seven days [of the Feast] this is founded on a tradition;¹⁰ for R. Ami said in the name of R. Johanan, in the name of R. Nehunia a native¹¹ of the Plain of Beth-Hawartan,¹² the laws concerning the Ten Young Trees,¹³ the Willow of the Brook,¹⁴ and the Libation of Water are laws [communicated] to Moses from Sinai.¹⁵

‘R. Judah in the name of R. Joshua says: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention [of rain], the first does not; on the first day of Passover the first makes mention, the last does not. Which R. Joshua? Is it R. Joshua of our Mishnah? Surely he said, ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST ONE MAKES MENTION? Or, is it R. Joshua of the Baraitha? Surely he said: From the day that the Lulab is discarded? And further, when it is taught: R. Judah says in the name of Ben Bathyra: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention. Which Ben Bathyra [is meant]? Is it R. Judah b. Bathyra? Surely he said: On the second day of the Feast one makes mention? — R. Nathan bar Isaac replied: [In both passages cited] it is R. Joshua b. Bathyra. Sometimes he is called by his own name and some times he is referred to by his father's name; by the one before his ordination, and by the other after his ordination.

It has been taught: The Sages did not make it obligatory on one to make mention of dew and winds, but if one desires to make mention he may do so. What is the reason? — R. Hanina said: Because they are never withheld. And how do we know that dew is never withheld? — For it is written, And Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the settlers of Gilead, said to Ahab: As the Lord the God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years but according to my word.¹⁶ And it is written further, Go, show thyself unto Ahab, and I will send rain upon the land.¹⁷ Of dew, however, Scripture does not speak. Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 3b

Because it is never withheld. But if it is never withheld, why did Elijah take an oath on it? — This is what he conveyed to him [Ahab]. The dew of blessing also would not fall. Then the dew of blessing should also have been restored? — Because the difference would not have been discernable. How do we know that winds are not withheld? R. Joshua b. Levi said: Scripture says, For I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven, saith the Lord.¹ What does the prophet desire to convey? Shall we say that the Holy One, blessed be He, spoke thus to Israel, 'I have scattered you to the four corners of the world'. If so, Scripture should have said not 'as the four' but 'to the four'. But this is what he meant: 'As the world cannot endure without winds, so too the world cannot exist without Israel'. R. Hanina said: Therefore, if in the summer one inserted [in the Tefillah the words], 'He causeth the wind to blow', he is not compelled to repeat [the Tefillah]; if, however, he said, 'He causeth the rain to fall', he is compelled to repeat [it]. Similarly, if in winter one did not insert, 'He causeth the wind to blow', he is not compelled to repeat; if, however, he did not say, 'He causeth the rain to fall', he is compelled to repeat. And furthermore, even if he said, 'He causeth the wind to pass and the dew to disappear',² he is not compelled to repeat.

A Tanna taught: The Sages did not make it obligatory to make mention of clouds and winds, but if one desires to make mention he may do so. What is the reason? Is it because they are never withheld? But are they never withheld? Did not R. Joseph learn, 'And He will shut up the heaven,³ means, in respect of clouds and winds. You say that this verse is in respect of clouds and winds, perhaps it is not so but means in respect of rain? When Scripture adds, So that there shall be no rain, rain is thus already referred to. What then is the force of [the words], And He will shut up the heaven? [It must mean] in respect of clouds and winds'. There will then be a contradiction between 'winds and winds' and between 'clouds and clouds'? — There is really no contradiction between clouds and clouds'. In the one case [the reference is] to early clouds⁴ and in the other to late clouds.⁵ Between winds and winds' too there is no contradiction; in the one case they are normal winds and in the other extraordinary winds.⁶ But are not extraordinary winds suitable for⁷ [winnowing] in the barn? — This can be done with sieves [independently of the wind].

A Tanna taught: The clouds and the winds are secondary to rain.⁸ Which are they? 'Ulla said, or as some say, R.⁹ Judah said: Those that come after the rain. Can we then say that these are beneficial? Is it not written, The Lord will make the rain of thy land powder and dust,¹⁰ and on this ‘Ulla, or as some say, R. Judah commented, [This refers to] the wind following the rain?’¹¹ — There is no contradiction; in the one case [it speaks] of when the rain comes down gently and in the other when it comes down with vehemence.¹² In the latter it throws up dust, and in the former it does not.

Rab Judah further said: Wind after rain is as beneficial as rain, clouds after rain as beneficial as rain, sunshine after rain as beneficial as twofold rain. What does this exclude? — The glow after sunset and sunshine between clouds.

Raba said: Snow is beneficial to the mountains as fivefold rain to the earth, as it is said, For he saith to the snow, ‘Fall thou on the earth’; likewise to the shower of rain and to the showers of His mighty rain.¹³

Raba further said: Snow is beneficial to the mountain, heavy rain to the trees, gentle rain to the fruits of the field, drizzling rain [‘urpila] even to the seeds under a hard clod. What is ‘urpila? ‘Uru pili [‘Wake up ye cracks’].

Raba further said: A young scholar may be likened to the seeds under a hard clod; once he has sprouted he soon shoots forth.

Raba further said: If a young scholar gets into a rage it is because the Torah inflames him, as it is said, Is not my word like a fire? said the Lord.¹

R. Ashi said:² A scholar who is not as hard as iron is no scholar, as it is said, And like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces.³ R. Abba said to R. Ashi: You have learnt this from that verse but we have learnt it from the following verse: A land whose stones are iron.⁴ Do not read, abaneha [stones] but boneha [builders].⁵ Rabina said: Despite this, a man should train himself to be gentle, for it is said, Therefore remove vexation from thy heart, etc.⁶

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Three [men] made haphazard requests,⁷ two of them were fortunate in the reply they received and one was not, namely, Eliezer, the servant of Abraham; Saul, the son of Kish; and Jephtha the Gileadite. Eliezer, the servant of Abraham, as it is written, So let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, 'Let down thy pitcher etc.'⁸ She might have been lame or blind, but he was fortunate in the answer given to him in that Rebecca chanced to meet him. Saul, the son of Kish, as it is written, And it shall be, that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter.⁹ [He] might have been a slave or a bastard. He too was fortunate in that it chanced to be David. Jephtha, the Gileadite, as it is written, Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth out of the doors of my house etc.¹⁰ It might have been an unclean thing. He, however, was fortunate in that it so happened that his own daughter came to meet him. This is what the prophet had in mind when he said to Israel, Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there?' And it is further written, Which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it to my mind.¹¹ 'Which I commanded not': This refers to the sacrifice of the son of Mesha, the king of Moab, as it is said, Then he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead and offered him for a burnt-offering.¹² 'Nor spake it'; This refers to the daughter of Jephtha.¹³ 'Neither came it to my mind': This refers to the sacrifice of Isaac, the son of Abraham.

R. Berekiah said: The Congregation of Israel also made a thoughtless request, yet God granted that request,¹⁴ as it is said, And let us know, eagerly strive to know the Lord. His going forth is sure as the morning: and He shall come to us as the rain.¹⁵ The Holy One, blessed be He, said to her [Israel]: My daughter, thou askest for something¹⁶ which at times is desirable and at other times is not desirable, but I will be unto thee something which is desirable at all times, as it is said, I will be as dew unto Israel.¹⁷ She further made another thoughtless request. She said before Him,: O God, Set me as a seal upon thy heart,- as a seal upon thine arm.¹⁸ Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, replied to her: My daughter, thou askest for something which at times can be seen and at other times cannot be seen. I, however, will make of thee something which can be seen at all times, as it is said, Behold I have graven thee upon the palms of My hands.¹⁹

WE PRAY FOR RAIN ONLY etc. [The scholars] were of the opinion that 'praying' and 'making mention' are one and the same thing. Who is the authority for this?-Raba replied: It is R. Joshua, who said, [We begin to make mention of rain] from the time when the Lulab is discarded —²⁰ Abaye said to him: You can even say, that it is R. Eliezer; 'praying', however, is one thing and 'making mention' is another. Others have the reading:

Shall we say it is R. Joshua, who said, From the time when the Lulab is disvow annulled by appealing to Phinehas who was in Gilead for a remission of the vow; cf. Gen. Rab. LX, .] carded? — Raba replied: You can even say that it is R. Eliezer; 'praying', however, is one thing and 'making mention' is another, R. JUDAH SAYS: THE LAST TO STEP BEFORE THE ARK etc. The following was cited in contradiction to this: Until when do we [continue] to pray for rain? R. Judah says: Until Passover is over; R. Meir says, Until the end of Nisan! — R. Hisda replied: The two statements [of R. Judah] are not contradictory; the one refers to 'praying' and the other to 'making mention'; 'praying'¹ one continues [until] the end of Passover] but 'making mention' is discontinued on the first day [of Passover]. 'Ulla said: This [solution of the contradiction] by R. Hisda is as difficult as vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke for the eyes. If one makes mention of rain at such times when it is not permissible to pray for² [it], how much more so should one make mention of rain when it is permissible to pray for it? — It must be, says 'Ulla, that [there is a dispute] between two Tannaim as to the opinion of R. Judah. R. Joseph said: What is the meaning of, 'Until Passover is over'? Until the first reader on the first day of Passover is over [with his prayers].³ Said Abaye to him: Is there then a place in the Festival [Tefillah] for inserting the prayer for rain? He replied to him: Yes, the Meturgeman⁴ 'prays' — Does then the Meturgeman ever pray for something of which the community has no need? Therefore, the better solution is that of 'Ulla.

Rabbah said: What is the meaning of, 'Until Passover is over'? Until the time limit for the slaughtering of the Paschal offering has passed;⁵ and as at its beginning⁶ so at its end; just as at its beginning one makes mention [of rain] although one has not yet [begun] to pray,⁷ so too at its end he makes mention although he no longer has to pray.⁸ Abaye replied: I can understand that one should make mention at the beginning, seeing that making mention is a form of propitiation [prefatory to prayer] but as for the end, what place is there for such propitiation? Therefore, the better solution is that of ‘Ulla.

R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan, The halachah is according to R. Judah. Thereupon R. Zera asked R. Assi: Could then R. Johanan [really] have said so? Have we not learnt: We [begin] to pray for rain on the third of Marcheshvan; Rabban Gamaliel said: On the seventh of the same month — And with reference to this R. Eleazar declared: The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel. He [R. Assi] replied to him: You set one authority against another!⁹ Moreover, if you like I will say there is no contradiction; the one [case] speaks of ‘praying’ and the other of ‘making mention’.¹⁰ But did not R. Johanan say: Whenever one prays one should also make mention? That [rule] applies only to the discontinuation [of ‘praying’].¹¹ But did not R. Johanan say: When one begins to make mention one should also [begin] to pray; when one discontinues to pray one should also cease to make mention? — There is really no contradiction; one statement refers to us [Babylonians] and the other to them [Palestinians],¹² Why should we be different? — Is it because we have produce in the field?¹³ They also have Pilgrims?¹⁴ -R. Johanan speaks [of con — ditions] after Temple times.¹⁵ Now that you have arrived at this conclusion [I can say], Both teachings apply equally to them [Palestinians] and there is no contradiction; the one speaks [of conditions] in Temple times and the other [of conditions] after Temple times. But as for us who observe two days [of the festival],¹⁶ what shall our practice be? — Rab says: He begins [to make men-tion] in the Additional Service of the Eighth Day of the Feast, he discontinues in the Afternoon Service and in the Evening Service and in the Morning Service but resumes in the Additional Service of the second day. Samuel said to them [to the scholars]: Go and say to Abba:¹⁷ After you have declared the day holy¹⁸ can you declare it again a weekday?¹⁹ — Therefore Samuel said: He begins [to make mention] in the Additional Service and in the Afternoon Service and discontinues in the Evening Service and in the Morning Service [of the following day], and resumes it in the Additional Service

The function of this official in Talmudic times was to interpret to the audience in the Synagogue in a popular manner and to enlarge upon the theme of the rabbi lecturing. (14) And therefore mention of rain should be put off as late as possible to enable the Pilgrims to reach home in comfort before the rains set in. MISHNAH. UNTIL WHEN DO WE PRAY FOR RAIN? R. JUDAH SAYS: UNTIL THE PASSOVER IS OVER. R. MEIR SAYS: UNTIL

. Raba said: Once he has begun [to make mention] he should not discontinue. And so said R. Shesheth: Once he has begun he should not discontinue. Rab also retracted his statement. For R. Hananel said in the name of Rab: One counts twenty-one days from New Year¹ and begins to make mention in the same way as one counts Ten Days [of Penitence] from the New Year until the Day of Atonement; and once he has begun he should not discontinue. And the law is, once he has begun he should not discontinue.

THE END OF NISAN, AS IT IS SAID: AND HE CAUSETH TO COME DOWN FOR YOU THE RAIN, THE FORMER RAIN AND THE LATTER RAIN, AT THE FIRST.²

GEMARA. R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: Does then the former rain [fall] in Nisan? The former rain surely [falls] in Marcheshvan. It has been taught: Former rain, [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, This verse³ was fulfilled in the days [of the prophet] Joel, the son of Pethuel, That which the palmer-worm hath left hath the locust eaten etc.⁴ In that year, although Adar had passed yet no rain had fallen, and it was not until the first of Nisan that the first rain, came down. Thereupon the prophet said to Israel, 'Go and sow' — They replied, If a man has a kab⁵ of wheat or two kabim of barley, should he eat them and keep himself alive, or sow them and die? He answered: 'Despite this, go and sow' — A miracle happened for them and they discovered whatever [grain] which was hidden [in the chinks of] the walls and in the ant-holes; they proceeded to sow on the second, on the third, and on the fourth and the second rain came down on the fifth of Nisan; on the sixteenth of Nisan they offered the 'Omer;⁶ and thus it so came about that the grain which should take six months to ripen ripened in eleven days.⁷ To that generation was applied the scriptural verses, They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. Though he goeth on his way weeping that beareth the measure of seed etc.⁸ What is the meaning of, 'Though he goeth on his way weeping that beareth the measure etc.'? — Rab Judah said: When the ox is ploughing, on his forward journey he weeps, but on his return journey he eats the young green from the furrows — And this is the force of the words, 'He shall come home with joy' — What is the meaning of, 'Bearing his sheaves'? — R. Hisda said: Others say it was taught in a Baraitha: The stalk was then one span and the ear two spans.

R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the scriptural verse, For the Lord hath called for a famine, and it shall also come upon the land seven years?⁹ What had they to eat during these seven years? — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, In the first year they ate what was stored up in the houses, in the second what was in the fields, in the third the flesh of clean animals, in the fourth the flesh of unclean animals, in the fifth the flesh of forbidden animals and reptiles, in the sixth the flesh of their sons and daughters and in the seventh the flesh of their own arms and thus the verse of Scripture was fulfilled, They eat every man the flesh of his own arms.¹⁰

Further, R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the scriptural verse, The Holy One in the midst of thee and I will not come in to the city?¹¹ [Surely it cannot be that] because the Holy One is in the midst of thee I shall not come into the city! He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: The Holy One, blessed be He, said, 'I will not enter the heavenly Jerusalem until I can enter the earthly Jerusalem'. Is there then a heavenly Jerusalem?—Yes; for it is written, Jerusalem thou art builded as a city that is compact together.¹²

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, But they are altogether brutish and foolish; the vanities by which they are instructed are but a stock?¹³ — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, There is one thing that brings about the perdition of the wicked in Gehenna¹⁴ and that is, idolatrous worship. Here it is written, 'The vanities by which they are instructed' and elsewhere [of the idols] it is written, They are a vanity, a work of delusion.¹⁵

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, For my people have committed two evils?¹⁶ Were they only two? Has he then ignored the fact that they were twenty-four?¹⁷ — He [R. Isaac] replied: There is one [evil] which is equal to two, and that is, idolatrous worship, for it is written, For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns.¹ And further it is written, For pass over to the isles of the Kittites, and see, and send unto Kedar, and consider diligently etc. Hath nation changed its gods, which are yet no gods? But my people hath changed its glory for that which doth not profit.²

A Tanna taught: The Kittites worship fire and the Kedarites water, and although they know that water extinguishes fire they have yet not changed their gods but my people hath changed their God for that which doth not profit.

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, And it came to pass when Samuel was old.³ Did Samuel ever reach old age? He lived only for fifty-two years. For a Master said: If a man dies in his fifty-second year he is said to have died at the age reached by Samuel, the Ramathite?⁴ — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: Old age came prematurely upon him, for it is written, It repenteth Me that I have set up Saul to be king.⁵ Samuel complained before Him: Sovereign of the Universe! You have made me equal to Moses and Aaron, for it is written, Moses and Aaron are amongst His priests, and Samuel among them that call upon His name.⁶ As in the case of Moses and Aaron the work of their hands did not come to nought in their lifetime, so too let not the work of my hands come to nought in my lifetime. The Holy One, blessed be He, replied: How shall I act? Shall Saul die? Of this Samuel will not approve. Shall Samuel die young? People will speak ill of him.⁷ Shall neither Saul nor Samuel die? The time has come for David to reign and one reign may not encroach on another even by a hair's breadth. Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, said: I will make him prematurely old and this is what is written, Now Saul was sitting in Gibeah, under the Tamarisk tree in Ramah.⁸ How comes Gibeah to Ramah?⁹ This is to teach you that it was the prayer of Samuel the Ramathite that was the cause of Saul's two and a half years'¹⁰ sojourn as king in Gibeah? Should then one man be put aside because of another? — Yes, for R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: What is the meaning of the verse, Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets, I have slain them by the words of my mouth?¹¹ Scripture does not say, by their works,' but, 'by the words of my mouth', this proves that one may be put aside because of another.

R. Nahman and R. Isaac were sitting at a meal and R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: Let the Master expound something. He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: One should not converse at meals lest the windpipe acts before the gullet and his life will thereby be endangered. After they ended the meal he added: Thus said R. Johanan: Jacob our patriarch is not dead. He [R. Nahman] objected: Was it then for nought that he was bewailed and embalmed and buried?—The other replied: I derive this from a scriptural verse, as It is said, Therefore fear thou not, O Jacob, My servant, saith the Lord; neither be dismayed, O Israel,— for, lo, I will save thee from afar and thy seed from the land of their captivity.¹² The verse likens him [Jacob] to his seed [Israel]; as his seed will then be alive so he too will be alive.

R. Isaac said: Whosoever repeats [the name] Rahab, Rahab, becomes immediately subject to an onset of issue.¹³ Thereupon R. Nahman said to him: I have repeated it and was not in any way affected. R. Isaac replied: I speak only of one who knew her intimately (and recalls her likeness).¹⁴ When they were about to part, [R. Nahman] said: Pray Master, bless me. He replied: Let me tell you a parable — To what may this be compared? To a man who was journeying in the desert; he was hungry, weary and thirsty and he lighted upon a tree the fruits of which were sweet, its shade pleasant, and a stream of water flowing beneath it; he ate of its fruits, drank of the water, and rested under its shade. When he was about to continue his journey, he said: Tree, O Tree, with what shall I bless thee? Shall I say to thee, ‘May thy fruits be sweet’? They are sweet already; that thy shade be pleasant? It is already pleasant; that a stream of water may flow beneath thee? Lo, a stream of water flows already beneath thee; therefore [I say], ‘May it be [God’s] will that all the shoots taken from thee be like unto thee’. So also with you. With what shall I bless you? With [the knowledge of the Torah?] You already possess [knowledge of the Torah]. With riches? You have riches already. With children? You have children already. Hence [I say], ‘May it be [God’s] will that your offspring be like unto you’.

Our Rabbis have taught: [‘Former rain is termed] ‘yoreh’,¹ because it warns² people to plaster their roofs and to gather in their fruits and to attend to all their needs.³ Another explanation: It saturates⁴ the ground and waters it right down to its depths, as it is said, Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof, thou makest her soft with showers; thou blessest the growth thereof.⁵ Another explanation: [It is termed] ‘yoreh’ because it comes down⁶ gently and not heavily. Or perhaps [it is termed] ‘yoreh’ because it causes the fruit to fall⁷ and it washes away the seed, and the trees? The text [therefore] adds ‘malkosh’ [‘latter rain’];⁸ just as latter rain is a blessing, so too is former rain. Or perhaps [it is termed] ‘malkosh,’⁹ because It razes the houses to the ground and it shatters the trees and brings up the crickets? The text [therefore] adds ‘yoreh’; just as former rain is a blessing so too is latter rain. How do we know that ‘yoreh’ itself is a blessing? — For it is written, Be glad then ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God; for He giveth you the former rain [moreh] in just measure and He causeth to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain, at the first.¹⁰

Our Rabbis have taught: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. You say, Former rain in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan; perhaps it is otherwise, former rain in Tishri and latter rain in Iyar? The text [therefore] adds, in its due season.¹¹ R. Nehilai b. Idi said in the name of Samuel: [‘Latter rain’ is termed] ‘malkosh’ because it is a thing that removes the stiff-neckedness of Israel.¹² The school of R. Ishmael taught: It is something that fills the stalks with grain.¹³ In a Baraitha it has been taught: [It is] something which falls both upon the ears and upon the stalks.¹⁴

Our Rabbis have taught: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. You say, Former rain in Marcheshvan; perhaps, on Kislev? The text [therefore] adds, ‘in its due season, former rain and latter rain, as latter rain is that which comes in due season (since should Nisan pass and no rain fall, it is not a sign of blessing)¹⁵ so too former is that which comes in due season.

Another [Baraitha] teaches: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan; this is the opinion of R. Meir; but the Sages say: Former rain [falls] in Kislev. Who are the Sages? R. Hisda replied: It is R. Jose. For it has been taught: Which is the first rainfall?¹⁶ The early [rain] falls on the third of Marcheshvan, the intermediate on the seventh, the late on the seventeenth; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: On the seventh, on the seventeenth, and on the twenty-third. R. Jose says: On the seventeenth, on the twenty-third and on the first of Kislev. And likewise R. Jose used to say: The individuals do not begin to fast until the first day of Kislev. R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to the opinion of R. Jose.

Amemar reported R. Hisda's statement in the following version: On the third day of Marcheshvan we pray for rain; Rabban Gamaliel says, On the seventh of the month. R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel. In accordance with whose view then is the following which has been taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: If rain falls on seven days in succession you may consider it as the combination of the first, the second [or the second] and the third rainfall?¹⁷ — It is in accordance with the opinion of R. Jose.¹⁸ R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to R. Jose. The reason for giving a date for the first rainfall is evident seeing that from that date we begin to pray for rain; likewise the date of the third rainfall is given because from that date we begin to fast; but what may be the reason for giving the date of the second rainfall?—R. Zera replied: It has to do with Vows. For we have learnt:

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 6b

If one interdicts himself by a vow [from the enjoyment of anything] until the rainy season or until rain has fallen, then his vow remains operative until the second rainfall.¹ R. Zebid said: It has to do with Olives — We have learnt: When is it permissible for any man to take of the gleanings² [of the field] and of the forgotten sheaves³ and of the corners of the field?⁴ After the nemushot have departed. When [is it permissible to take] of the grapes that have fallen off the branches and of the gleanings of the vine?⁵ After the poor have left the vineyard and have come back again. When of the olives?⁶ After the second rainfall.⁷ Who are the nemushoth?— R. Johanan said: Old People who walk on a staff⁸. Resh Lakish said: Those who glean behind the gleaners.⁹

R. Papa said: [The date of the second rainfall is necessary] so that travellers should know whether they may walk on private paths¹⁰ [across the fields]. For a Master said:¹¹ It is permissible for any one to walk on private paths until the second rainfall. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [The date is necessary] for the disposal of the produce grown during the sabbatical year. For we have learnt: Until when is it permissible to derive benefit from the burning of straw and stubble grown in the sabbatical year? Until the second rainfall.¹² Why? Because it is written, And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land;¹³ so long as there is food for the beast in the field you may feed your cattle in the house, but when there is no more food in the field for the beast to eat, you must withhold food that is in your house from the cattle.

R. Abbahu said: What is the meaning of rebi'ah?¹⁴ That which fructifies the ground — This is according to the teaching of Rab Judah who said: Rain is the husband of the soil, for it is written, For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither except it water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud.¹⁵

R. Abbahu further said: The first rainfall [to be beneficial] should be sufficient to penetrate the soil one handbreadth deep, the second should be sufficient to make of it a stopper for a cask.

R. Hisda said: When it has rained sufficient to make [of the soil] a stopper for a cask then [the curse contained in the words ‘and He will shut up’¹⁶ does not apply.

R. Hisda further said: If rain came down before [the time for reciting in the Shema’], ‘and He will shut up’ then the curse contained in these words does not apply.¹⁷ Abaye thereupon interjected: This only holds good when the rain fell before [the time for the recital of the words,] ‘and He will shut up’ in the evening [Shema’], but if rain fell before [the time for their recital in] the morning [Shema’] then the curse can still be said to apply.¹⁸ For R. Judah b. Isaac said: The morning clouds have no significance, for it is written, O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? For your goodness is as the morning cloud, etc.¹⁹ Said R. Papa to Abaye: But people say, if it rains when the gates are opened [in the morning], ‘lay down thy sack ass-driver and sleep’!²⁰ — This is no contradiction. In the one case the heavens are overcast with thick clouds and the other with light clouds.²¹

Rab Judah said: Happy is the year wherein [the month of] Tebeth is widowed.²² Some say it is so because the gardens do not lie waste²³ [or, because the schools are not empty]; others say, Because the grain will not become subject to blast. Is that so? Did not R. Hisda say: Happy is the year wherein [the month of] Tebeth is muddy!²⁴ — This is no contradiction. The former is the case when rain had already fallen [in the previous months] and the latter when it had not yet fallen.

R. Hisda further said: If rain falls on some parts of the country and not on others then [the curse contained in the words], ‘and He will shut up’ cannot be said to apply. Is that so? Is it not written, And I also have withholden the rain from you, when there were three months to the harvest: and I caused it to rain upon one city and caused it not to rain upon another city; one piece was rained upon etc.²⁵ And referring to this verse, Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Both are a curse! — There is no contradiction. In the one case [Scripture speaks of] abnormal rain and in the other of normal rain. R. Ashi said: This can in fact be proved from the use of the word timoter in the verse, that is to say, it will be a place [flooded by] rain.²⁶ And thus [the interpretation] is proved.

R. Abbahu said: When do we [begin to] recite the benediction over rain?²⁷ When the bridegroom goes forth to meet the bride.²⁸ What benediction should one recite? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: ‘We give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, our God for every single drop which thou hast caused to fall upon us’. And R. Johanan concluded the benediction thus: ‘Though our mouths were full of song as the sea, and our tongues of exultation as the multitude of its waves, etc.!’ until, ‘Let not Thy mercies forsake us O Lord, our God, even as they have not forsaken us. Blessed art Thou to Whom abundant thanksgivings are due’. ‘Abundant thanksgivings' and not 'all the thanksgivings'? — Raba replied: Read, 'The God to Whom thanksgivings are due'. R. Papa said: Therefore we should say both 'the God to Whom thanksgivings are due' and 'to Whom abundant thanksgivings are due'.

R. Abbahu said: The day when rain fails is greater than [the day of] the Revival of the Dead, for the Revival of the Dead is for the righteous only whereas rain is both for the righteous and for the wicked. And he differs from the opinion of R. Joseph who said: As [rain] is equal to the Revival of the Dead the mention of it has therefore been inserted in the section of the Revival of the Dead.¹

Rab Judah said: The day when rain falls is as great as the day when the Torah was given, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain:² and by 'doctrine' surely, Torah is meant as it is said, For I give you good doctrine, forsake ye not my Torah.³ Raba said: It is even greater than the day when the Torah was given, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain.⁴ Who is dependent upon whom? You must needs say, the lesser upon the greater.⁵

Raba pointed out a contradiction. It is written 'My doctrine shall drop as the rain', and immediately on this follows, My speech shall distil as dew.⁶ [The implication here is]. if the scholar is a worthy person then he is like unto dew, but if he is not then drop him like rain.⁷

It has been taught in a Baraitha: R. Banna'ah used to say: Whosoever occupies himself with the Torah for its own sake his learning becomes an elixir of life to him, for it is said, It is a tree of life to them that grasp it;⁸ and it is further said, It shall be as health to thy navel;⁹ and it is also said, For whoso findeth me findeth life.¹⁰ But, whosoever occupies himself with the Torah not for its own sake, it becomes to him a deadly poison, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain, and 'arifa surely means, death, as it is said, And they shall break [we'arfu] the heifer's neck there in the valley.¹¹

R. Jeremiah said to R. Zera: Pray, Master, come and teach. The latter replied: I do not feel well enough¹² and am not able to do so. [Then said R. Jeremiah] Pray, Master, expound something of an aggadic character, and he replied: Thus said R. Johanan: What is the meaning of the verse, For is the tree of the field man?¹³ Is then man the tree of the field? [This can only be explained if we connect the verse with the words immediately before it] where it is written, For thou mayest eat of them, but thou shalt not cut them down; but then again it is written, 'It thou shalt destroy and cut down'?¹⁴ How is this to be explained?-If the scholar is a worthy person learn [eat] from him and do not shun [cut] him, but if he is not destroy him and cut him down.

R. Hama b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the verse, Iron sharpneth iron?¹⁵ This is to teach you that just as in the case of one [iron] iron sharpeneth the other so also do two scholars sharpen each others mind by halachah.

Rabbah b. Hanah said: Why are the words of the Torah likened to fire, as it is said, Is not my word like as fire? saith the Lord?¹⁶ This is to teach you that just as fire does not ignite of itself so too the words of the Torah do not endure with him who studies alone. This is in agreement with what R. Jose b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the verse, A sword is upon the lonely,¹⁷ and they shall become fools?¹⁸ This means, destruction comes upon the enemies¹⁹ of such scholars who confine themselves to private study; and what is even more they become stultified, as it is said, And they shall become fools; and what is more they are guilty of sin. For here it is written, And they shall become fools, and there it is written, For that we have done foolishly and for that we have sinned.²⁰ If you wish, you can infer it from the following verse, The princes of Zoan are become fools . . . they have caused Egypt to go astray.²¹

R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Why are the words of the Torah likened to a tree, as it is said, It is a tree of life to them that grasp it? This is to teach you. just as a small tree may set on fire a bigger tree so too it is with scholars, the younger sharpen the minds of the older. This will be in agreement with what R. Hanina said: I have learnt much from my teachers, and from my colleagues more than from my teachers, but from my disciples more than from them all.

R. Hanina b. Papa pointed out a contradiction . It is written, Unto him that is thirsty bring ye water;²² and it is also written Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water.²³ If he is a worthy disciple, then, ‘Unto him that is thirsty bring ye water’, but if he is not, then, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water’.

R. Hanina b. Hama pointed out a contradiction. It is written, Let thy springs be dispersed abroad,²⁴ and it is also written, Let them be only thine own!²⁵ If he is a worthy disciple. ‘Let thy springs be dispersed abroad,’²⁶ but if not, ‘Let them be thine own’.

R. Hanina b. Ida said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto water-as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye for water’? This is to teach you, just as water flows from a higher level to a lower, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded. R. Oshaia said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto these three liquids, water, wine and milk — as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water’; and it is written, Come ye, buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without money, and without price?²⁷ This is to teach you, just as these three liquids can only be preserved in the most inferior of vessels, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded. This is illustrated by the story of the daughter of the Roman Emperor²⁸ who addressed R. Joshua b. Hanania, ‘O glorious Wisdom in an ugly vessel’. He replied, ‘Does not your father keep wine in an earthenware vessel?’ She asked, ‘Wherein else shall he keep it?’ He said to her, ‘You who are nobles should keep it in vessels of gold and silver’. Thereupon she went and told this to her father and he had the wine put into vessels of gold and silver and it became sour. When he was informed of this he asked his daughter, ‘Who gave you this advice?’ She replied. ‘R. Joshua b. Hanania’ — Thereupon the Emperor had him summoned before him and asked him, ‘Why did you give her such advice?’ He replied, ‘I answered her according to the way that she spoke to me’. But are there not good-looking people who are learned?

— If these very people were ugly they would be still more learned.¹ Another explanation: Just as these three liquids can become unfit for consumption only through inattention,² so too the words of the Torah are forgotten only through inattention.

R. Hania b. Hanina said: The day when rain falls is as great as the day on which heaven and earth were created, as it is said, Drop down, ye heavens from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, that they may bring forth salvation, and let her cause righteousness to spring up together; I the Lord have created it.³ It is not said, 'I created them', but I have created it.⁴

R. Oshaia said: The day when rain falls is great for on it even salvation springs forth and waxes great, as it is said, 'Let the earth open, that they may bring forth salvation'.

R. Tanhum b. Hanilai said, No rain falls unless the sins of Israel have been forgiven, as it is said, Lord, Thou hast been favourable unto Thy land, Thou hast turned the Captivity of Jacob. Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of Thy people, Thou hast pardoned all their sins. Selah.⁵ Ze'iri of Dahabath⁶ said to Rabina: You have learnt it from this verse, but we have learnt from the following verse, Then hear Thou in heaven and forgive the sin etc.⁷

R. Tanhum the son of R. Hiyya of Kefar Acco⁸ said: Rain is withheld only when the enemies of Israel⁹ have merited destruction as it is said, Drought and heat consume the snow waters; so doth the nether world those that have sinned.¹⁰ Ze'iri of Dahabath said to Rabina: You have learnt from this verse, but we have learnt it from the following verse, And He will shut up the heaven . . . and ye perish quickly.¹¹

R. Hisda said: Rain is withheld only because of the neglect to bring heave-offerings and tithes, as it is said, Drought and heat¹² consume the snow waters. How is this derived from the verse? —

In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: Because you have not performed in the summer the things I have commanded you, you shall be denied snow waters in the winter.

R. Simeon b. Pazzi said: Rain is withheld only because of those who talk slander, as it is said, The north wind bringeth forth rain, and a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.¹³

R. Salla said in the name of R. Hamnuna: Rain is withheld only because of the insolent, as it is said, Therefore the showers have been withheld, and there hath been no latter rain; yet thou hadst a harlot's forehead etc.¹⁴

R. Salla further said in the name of R. Hamnuna: Any man who is insolent stumbles in the end into sin, for it is said, 'Thou hadst a harlot's forehead'. R. Nahman said: It is evident that he [actually] stumbled into sin, for it is said 'Thou hadst' and not, 'thou wilt have'. Rabbah the son of R. Huna said: It is permissible to call 'wicked' any one who is insolent, as it is said, A wicked man hardeneth his face.¹⁵ R. Nahman the son of R. Isaac said: One may even hate him, as it is said, And the boldness of his face is changed.¹⁶ Do not read yeshuneh [changed] but yesuneh [hated].

R. Kaltina said: Rain is withheld only because of the neglect of the Torah, as it is said, By slothfulness the rafters sank in [yimak].¹⁷ Because of the sloth displayed by Israel in not occupying themselves with the Torah the enemy of the Holy One, blessed be He,¹⁸ becomes Poor. Mak, actually means, poor, as it is said, But if he be too poor [mak] for thy valuation.¹⁹ Mekoreh actually denotes God, as it is said, Who layest [ha-mekoreh] the beams of Thine upper chambers in the waters.²⁰ R. Joseph derived it from the following verse, And how men see not the light which is bright in the skies; but the wind passeth and cleanseth them.²¹ And 'light' surely means Torah, as it is said, For the commandment is a lamp and the teaching [Torah] is light.²² 'Which is bright in the skies': [With reference to this] it was taught In the school of R. Ishmael: Even when the heavens are full of white spotted clouds ready to cause dew and rain to fall a wind passes and cleanses them.²³

R. Ammi said: Rain is withheld only because of the sin of violent robbery, as it is said, He covereth His hands with the lightning;²⁴ that is to say, for the sin [of violent robbery committed by] their hands He covereth the light. And 'hands' surely signifies, violent robbery, as it is said, And from the violence that is in their hands,²⁵ and 'light' Surely [stands for] rain, as it is said, He spreadeth abroad the cloud of His lightning.²⁶ What is then his remedy? — Let a man make many prayers, as it is said, And giveth it a charge that it strike the mark [be-mafgi'ah],²⁷ and pegi'ah is prayer, as it is said, Therefore pray not thou for this people . . . neither make intercession [tifga'] to me.²⁸

R. Ammi further said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the iron be blunt, and one do not whet the edge?²⁹ If you see the sky hard as iron so that neither dew nor rain fall, this is to be attributed to the deeds of the generation which are corrupt, as it is said, And one do not whet the edge. What then shall be their remedy? Let them make many prayers [for mercy], as it is said, Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct.³⁰ [The latter words indicate,] how much more [efficacious their prayer would prove] if their deeds had originally been to whom his studies are as hard as iron,¹ it is because he has failed to systematize his studies, as it is said, And one do not whet the edge.² What is his remedy? Let him attend the school even more regularly, as it is said, Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct. [The latter words indicate] how much more profitable would his efforts be if he had originally systematized his studies. Thus for example, Resh Lakish made it his practice to repeat in systematic order his studies forty times corresponding to the forty days³ during which the Torah was given, and only then would he come before R. Johanan. R. Adda b. Abbahu made it his practice to repeat in systematic order his studies twenty-four times corresponding to the [twenty-four books⁴ which embody] the Torah, the Prophets and the Hagiographa, and only then would he come before Raba.

Raba said: If you see a student who finds his studies as hard as iron, it is because his teacher does not encourage him,⁵ as it is said, 'and one do not whet the edge'.⁶ What is his remedy? Let him seek many companions [to intercede for him with his teacher], as it is said. 'Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct.' [The latter words indicate,] how much more successful he would have been had his efforts originally found favour with his teacher.

R. Ammi further said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the serpent bite before it is charmed, then the charmer hath no advantage?⁷ If you see a generation over whom the heavens are rust coloured⁸ like copper so that neither dew nor rain falls, it is because that generation is wanting in men who pray softly.⁹ What then is their remedy? Let them go to one skilled in the art of praying softly, as it is written, The noise thereof telleth concerning it.¹⁰ 'Then the charmer hath no advantage' [means]: 'As to him who is skilled in the art of praying softly and does not do so what benefit has he?'¹¹ But if he has prayed softly and was not answered, what is his remedy? Let him go to the most pious man of that generation that he may intercede abundantly for him, as it is said, And giveth it a charge that it strike the mark [be-mafgia'h]. and striking the mark [pegi'ah] is prayer, as it is said, Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession [tifga'] to Me.¹² But if he did pray softly and proved successful and on account of this he becomes overproud he thereby brings divine displeasure upon the world, as it is said, The cattle also concerning the storm that cometh up.¹³

Raba said: Two scholars who reside in the same city but are intolerant of each other in matters of halachah provoke anger and bring it upon themselves, as it is said, The cattle also concerning the storm that cometh up.¹⁴

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the serpent bite before it is charmed, then the charmer hath no advantage? In the Messianic age all animals will assemble and come to the serpent and say to him, 'The lion claws [his victim] and devours him, the wolf tears him and devours him, but as for thee what benefit dost thou derive? His reply will be, The charmer hath no advantage.¹⁵

R. Ammi said: A man's prayer is only answered if he takes his heart into his hand,¹⁶ as it is said, Let us lift up our heart with our hands.¹⁷ [But it is not so. Surely]¹⁸ Samuel appointed an amora¹⁹ to act for him and his exposition ran thus: But they beguiled Him with their mouth, and lied unto Him with their tongue. For their heart was not steadfast with Him, neither were they faithful in His covenant; and yet, But He being full of compassion, forgiveth iniquity etc.²⁰ — This is no contradiction. The one refers to the individual, and the other to the community.²¹

R. Ammi said: Rain falls only for the sake of Men of Faith,²² as it is said, Truth springeth out of the earth and righteousness hath looked down from heaven.²³

R. Ammi further said: Come and see how great the Men of Faith are as is evidenced from the episode of the Weasel²⁴ and the Well. If this is the case with one who trusts in the Weasel and the Well how much more so if one trusts in the Holy One blessed be He!

R. Johanan said: He who leads a righteous life [on earth below]²⁵ is judged strictly [in heaven] above, as it is said, Truth springeth out of the earth and righteousness hath looked down from heaven. R. Hiyya b. Abin in the name of R. Huna [adduced this lesson] from this verse, And Thy wrath according to the fear that is due unto Thee.²⁶ Resh Lakish said: [It may be adduced] from this verse, Thou didst take away him that joyfully worked righteousness, those that remembered Thee in Thy ways — behold Thou wast wroth, and we sinned-upon them have we stayed of old, that we might be saved.²⁷

R. Joshua b. Levi said: He who joyfully bears the chastisements that befall him brings salvation to the world as it is said, ‘Upon them have we stayed of old, that we might be saved’.

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the verse, And He will shut up the heaven?²⁸ — When the heavens are shut up so that neither dew nor rain falls it is like to a woman who is in labour but who cannot give birth. This is in keeping with what Resh Lakish said in the name of Bar Kappara: ‘Withholding’ is applied to rain, and ‘withholding’ is applied to a woman;

The Gemara reads vben (for vben of the Massoretic Text) in the sense of, acquire, and it takes ; t to be a noun meaning anger; and vkug exalted or elated (with pride). The meaning of the verse according to this interpretation would be: He brings upon the world divine displeasure who is overbearing with pride because his prayer was answered.

‘withholding’ is applied to a woman, as it is said, For the Lord had fast closed up all the wombs;¹ and ‘withholding’ is applied to rain, as it is written, ‘And He will shut up the heaven.’ ‘Bearing’ is applied to a woman, and ‘bearing’ is applied to rain; ‘bearing’ is applied to a woman, as it is written, And she conceived and bore a son;² and ‘bearing’ is applied to rain, as it is written, And make it bear³ and bud.⁴ ‘Remembering’ is applied to a woman and ‘remembering’ is applied to rain; ‘remembering’ is applied to a woman, as it is written, And the Lord remembered Sarah;⁵ and ‘remembering’ is applied to rain, as it is written, Thou hast remembered the earth, and watered her, greatly enriching her, with the river of God that is full of water.⁶ What is the meaning of, ‘With the river of God that is full of water’? — A Tanna taught: There is in heaven a kind of chamber from which the rain issues.

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: What is the meaning of the verse, Whether it be for correction, or for His earth, or for mercy, that He cause it to come?⁷ If the rain is ‘for correction,’ [then it falls] upon the mountains and upon the hills; if it is ‘for mercy’, He causes it to come upon His earth, upon the fields and upon the vineyards;⁸ if it is ‘for correction’, upon the trees; if it is upon His earth, upon the seeds [in the ground]; if it is ‘for mercy’, He causes it to come for cisterns, pits and caves.

In the days of R. Samuel b. Nahmani there was a famine and pestilence. People asked, What shall we do? Shall we pray for [the removal] of the two? That is not possible. Let us then pray for [the removal of] the pestilence and we will endure the famine. Thereupon R. Samuel b. Nahmani said to them: Let us rather pray [for the removal of] the famine, because when the All-Merciful gives plenty, He gives it for the living, as it is said, Thou openest Thy hand, and satisfiest every living thing with favour.⁹ How do we know that it is not fitting to pray for two things [at the same time]? — Because it is written, So we fasted and besought our God for this.¹⁰ ‘This’ would indicate that there were other things to pray for. In the West [Palestine] it was reported in the name of R. Haggai that it could be adduced from this verse, That they might ask mercy of the God of heaven concerning this secret.¹¹ ‘This would indicate that there were other things too [to pray for]. In the days of R. Zera there was a religious persecution and fasting was also prohibited. R. Zera said to his colleagues: Let us now resolve to fast and when the decree is rescinded we will observe these fasts. His colleagues asked him: What is your authority for this? He replied: Because it is written, Then said he unto me, ‘Fear not, Daniel, for from the first day when thou didst set thy heart to understand, and to humble thyself before thy God, thy words were heard’.¹²

R. Isaac said: If rain falls on the eve of Sabbath then though the years be [years of drought] as in the days of Elijah¹³ it is yet none-the-less but a sign of [divine] anger.¹⁴ This is in agreement with the statement of Rabbah b. Shila who said: The day when rain falls is as hard [to bear]¹⁵ as a day of Judgment.¹⁶ Amemar said: Were it not that mankind must have rain we would pray and have it cease.

R. Isaac further said: Sunshine on the Sabbath is an act of kindness towards the poor, as it is said, But unto you that fear My name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings.¹⁷

R. Isaac further said: The day when rain falls is great for thereon even the peruta¹⁸ in one's purse is blessed, as it is said, To give the rain of Thy land in its season, and to bless all the work of thy hands.¹⁹

R. Isaac further said: Blessing is only possible in things hidden from sight, as it is said, The Lord will command the blessing with thee in thy barns.²⁰ In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: Blessing is only possible in things not under the direct control of the eye, as it is said, ‘The Lord will command the blessing with thee in thy barns.’

Our Rabbis have taught: On entering the barn to measure the new grain one shall recite the benediction, ‘May it be Thy will O Lord, our God, that Thou mayest send blessing upon the work of our hands’. Once he has begun to measure he says, ‘Blessed be He who sends blessing into this heap’. If, however, he first measured the grain and then recited the benediction then his prayer is in vain, because blessing is not to be found in anything that has been already weighed or measured or numbered, but only in a thing hidden from sight.

(Mnemonic: Gathering of Armies, Charity, Tithes, Sustenance.)

R. Johanan said: The day on which rain falls is as great as the day of the Gathering of exiled [Israel,] as it is said, Turn our captivity: O Lord, as the streams in the dry land.²¹ By 'streams' rain is meant, as it is said, And the channels of the sea appeared.²²

R. Johanan further said: The day when rain falls is great, for thereon even warring armies cease [fighting], as it is said, Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof.²³

R. Johanan further said: Rain is withheld only on account of those who subscribe to charity in public and fail to pay, as it is said, As vapours and wind without rain, so is he that boasteth himself of a false gift²⁴

R. Johanan further said: What is the meaning of the verse

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 9a

, Thou shalt surely tithe?¹ Give tithes that you may be enriched.² R. Johanan met the young son³ of Resh Lakish and said to him, 'Recite to me the Bible verse [you have learnt to-day]. The latter replied, 'Thou shalt surely tithe', at the same time asking, 'What may be the meaning of these words?' R. Johanan answered, 'Give tithes that you may be enriched' . The boy then asked, 'Whence do you adduce this?' R. Johanan replied: 'Go test it [for yourself]'. The boy thereupon asked: Is it permissible to try the Holy One, blessed be He, seeing that it is written, Ye shall not try the Lord?⁴ -R. Johanan replied: Thus said R. Oshaia: The case of tithe-giving is excepted [from the prohibition], as it is said, Bring ye the whole tithe unto the storehouse, that there may be food in My house, and try Me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall be more than sufficiency.⁵ (What is the meaning [of the words], 'That there shall be more than sufficiency?' — R. Rami b. Hama said in the name of Rab: Until your lips grow weary from saying, 'It is enough'.) The boy thereupon exclaimed, Had I reached this verse [in my Bible studies] I should need neither you nor R. Oshaia, your teacher. On another occasion R. Johanan met the young son of Resh Lakish sitting and reciting the verse, The foolishness of man perverteth his way; and his heart fretteth against the Lord.⁶ R. Johanan thereupon⁷ exclaimed in amazement: Is there anything written in the Hagiographa to which allusion cannot be found in the Torah? The boy replied: Is then this verse not alluded to in the Torah, seeing that it is written, And their heart failed them, and they turned trembling one to another, saying: 'What is this that God hath done unto us?'⁸ R. Johanan lifted up his eyes and stared at him, whereupon the boy's mother came and took him away, Saying to him, 'Go away from him, lest he do unto you as he did unto your father'.⁹

R. Johanan further said: Rain may fall even for the sake of an individual but sustenance [is granted] only for the sake of the many. [That] rain [may fall] for the sake of even one man may be learnt from the verse where it is written, The Lord will open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain of thy land;¹⁰ sustenance for the sake of the many, as it is written, Behold I will cause to rain bread for you.¹¹

An objection was raised: R. Jose the son of R. Judah says: Three good leaders had arisen for Israel, namely. Moses, Aaron and Miriam, and for their sake three good things were conferred [upon Israel], namely, the Well,¹² the Pillar of Cloud and the Manna; the Well, for the merit of Miriam; the Pillar of Cloud for the merit of Aaron; the Manna for the merit of Moses. When Miriam died the well disappeared, as it is said, And Miriam died there,¹³ and immediately follows [the verse], And there was no water for the congregation; and it returned for the merit of the [latter] two. When Aaron died the clouds of glory disappeared, as it is written, And the Canaanite, the king of Arad heard.¹⁴ What news did he hear? He heard that Aaron had died, and that the clouds of glory had disappeared; he thought that he was free to make war on Israel. Therefore it is written, And all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead.¹⁵ With reference to which R. Abahu said: Do not read, 'they saw' [wayir-u] but 'they were seen' [wayyero-u].¹⁶ This is also in accordance with the view of Resh Lakish who said: [The word] ki may be used in four different senses, namely, 'if' 'perhaps'. 'but', 'because'.¹⁷ The two [the Well and the Cloud] returned because of the merit of Moses, but when Moses died all of them disappeared, as it is said, And I cut off the three shepherds in one month.¹⁸ Did they then all [three] die in one month? Did not Miriam die in Nisan, Aaron in Ab and Moses in Adar? This therefore is meant to teach you that the three good gifts which were given because of their merit were nullified and they all disappeared in one month. Thus we find that sustenance¹⁹ may be granted for the sake of one individual! — The case of Moses is exceptional; as he prayed on behalf of the many, he himself is regarded as a multitude.

R. Hunah b. Manoah and R. Samuel b. Idi and R. Hiyya of Wastanya²⁰ were wont to attend the discourses of Raba. When Raba died they came to those of R. Papa and whenever he expounded to them a law which did not appeal to them they winked at one another, and thus hurt him greatly.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 9b

In a dream he was made to recite the verse, 'And I cut off the three shepherds'. When next day these disciples took leave of him he said to them, Go in peace.¹

R. Shimi b. Ashi was wont to frequent [the discourses] of R. Papa and used to annoy him, very much with questions. One day he observed that R. Papa fell on his face² [in prayer] and he heard him saying. 'May God preserve me from the insolence of Shimi'. The latter thereupon vowed silence and annoyed him no more [with questions].

Resh Lakish too held the view that rain may fall even for the sake of an individual, for Resh Lakish said: Whence do we adduce that rain may fall even for the sake of an individual? Because it is written, Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain, even of the Lord that maketh lightnings, and He will give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.³ You might have thought, only when all need [it]. therefore Scripture says. 'to everyone'. Further, it has been taught: Had Scripture said, 'to everyone' [only] you might have thought [rain would fall] only when one needs it for all his fields, therefore Scripture adds, 'field'. Had the word 'field' [been used] you might have thought only when the whole field needs [rain] Scripture therefore adds, ‘grass’. This is borne out by the case of Daniel b. Kattina who had a garden which he was in the habit of inspecting daily and he would exclaim, ‘This bed needs water and that one does not’; and rain would fall on those beds that needed water.

What is the meaning of the verse, ‘Even the Lord that maketh hazizim [lightnings]? — R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: This teaches that God provides a haziz for each righteous man. What are hazizim? Rab Judah said: Porehoth.⁴ R. Johanan said: Porehoth are a sign of [coming] rain. What are porehoth? — R. Papa said: A thin cloud under a thick cloud. Rab Judah said: Should fine rain come down before the heavy rain then the rain will continue for some time; should it follow a heavy downpour of rain then the rain will soon cease. If before the rain, the rain will continue, of this the sieve serves as a reminder; if after a heavy rain, the rain will cease, of this goats’ excrement serves as a reminder.⁵

It has been taught: R. Eliezer said: The whole world draws its water supply from the waters of the ocean, as it is said, But there went up a mist from the earth and watered the whole of the ground.⁷ Thereupon R. Joshua said to him: But are not the waters of the ocean salty? He replied: They are sweetened by the clouds. R. Joshua said: The whole world drinks from the upper waters, as it is said, And drinketh water as the rain of heaven cometh down.⁸ If so, what is the force of the verse, ‘But there went up a mist from the earth’? This teaches that the clouds grow in strength as they rise towards the firmament and then open their mouth as a flask and catch the rain water, as it is said, Which distil rain from His vapour,⁹ they are perforated like a sieve and they slowly distil [mehashroth] waters on the ground. as it is said, Distilling [hashroth] of waters, thick clouds of the skies;¹⁰ there is but one hand-breadth space between one drop and another, in order to teach you that the day on which rain falls is as great as the day whereon heaven and earth were created, as it is said, Who doeth great things past finding out;¹¹ and it is written, Who giveth rain upon the earth;¹² and it is also written, Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, the Lord . . . His discernment is past finding out?¹³

Whose view is supported by the verse, Who waterest the mountains from Thine upper chambers,¹⁴ which R. Johanan interprets to mean the upper chambers of the Almighty? Whose view? — It is that of R. Joshua. And R. Eliezer's¹⁵ view?—As [the waters] ultimately find their way above [Scripture] aptly terms them, ‘from Thine upper chambers’¹⁴ For if it were not so, how will you explain, Powder and dust from heaven?¹⁶ What you must [say is] that as these rise upwards [from the ground] the words, ‘from heaven’ are quite aptly applied to them. Likewise as the waters eventually find their way above Scripture aptly refers to them as, from Thine upper chambers'. Whose view supports R. Hanina who said this, He gathereth the waters of the sea together as a heap; He layeth up the deeps in storehouses,¹⁷ [as meaning,] Who caused the storehouses to be filled with grain? The deeps-the view of R. Eliezer. And what of R. Joshua's [view]?¹⁸ — That [verse] refers to Creation of the world.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 10a

Our Rabbis have taught: Palestine was created first and then the rest of the world, as it is said, While as yet He had not made the earth, nor the fields.¹ Palestine is watered by the Holy One, blessed be He, and the rest of the world is watered by a messenger, as it is said, Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the fields.² Palestine is watered by the rain and the rest of the world is watered by the residue,³ as it is said, 'Who giveth rain upon the earth, etc'.⁴ Palestine is watered first and then the rest of the world, as it is said, 'Who giveth rain upon the earth, etc'. This may be compared to a man making cheese; he removes first what is edible and discards the refuse.

The Master said: '[The waters of the ocean] are sweetened by the clouds' — Whence does he learn this? R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: It is written, Darkness of waters, thick clouds of the skies,⁵ and it is also written, Distilling of waters, thick clouds of the skies,⁶ take away the kaf and add it to the [word written with] resh and read haksharath.⁷ As for R.

Joshua what use does he make of these verses? — He is of the opinion that these verses are the basis for the statement made by R. Dimi when he came [to Babylon] and he reported that in Palestine people say, If the clouds are bright they contain little water, but if they are dark they contain much water.⁸ In keeping with whose view is the teaching which has been taught: The upper waters remain suspended by Divine command, and their fruit is the rain-water, as it is said, The earth is full of the fruit of Thy works?⁹ This is according to R. Joshua. And as for R. Eliezer?-[He is of the opinion] that this [verse] refers to the other handiwork of God.

R. Joshua b. Levi said: The whole world is watered by the residue of the Garden of Eden, as it is said, And a river went out of Eden, etc.¹⁰ A Tanna taught: The residue of a kor¹¹ is enough to irrigate a tarkab.¹²

Our Rabbis taught: Egypt is four hundred parasangs by four hundred, and it is one sixtieth of the size of Ethiopia; Ethiopia is one sixtieth of the world, and the world is one sixtieth of the Garden [of Eden].¹³ and the Garden is one sixteenth of Eden, and Eden is one sixtieth of Gehenna;¹⁴ thus the whole world compared with the Gehenna is but as a lid to the pot. Some say that Gehenna has no limit in size; others say that Eden is without limit. R. Oshaia said: What is the meaning of the verse, O thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures?¹⁵ What has brought it about that Babylon's treasures are full of corn? Because it dwells by many waters.¹⁶ Rab said: Babylon is rich because it harvests without rain. Abaye said: We have a tradition, Better is a flooded land than an arid land.

MISHNAH. ON THE THIRD OF MARCHESHVAN WE [BEGIN TO] PRAY FOR RAIN. R. GAMALIEL SAYS: ON THE SEVENTH, [THAT IS.] FIFTEEN DAYS AFTER THE FEAST SO THAT THE LAST ISRAELITE¹⁷ MAY REACH THE RIVER EUPHRATES.

GEMARA. R. Eleazar said: The halachah is according to R. Gamaliel. It has been taught: Hananiah says: In the Diaspora¹⁸ [we do not begin to pray] until the sixtieth day after the [Tishri] cycle.¹⁹ R. Huna b. Hiyya said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is according to Hananiah. Is it really so? Was not a question asked of Samuel: When do we begin to make mention [of the words] 'and give dew and rain'? and he replied, 'When wood is brought into the house of Tabut,²⁰ the fowler'? — Perhaps the two time limits are identical. A question was asked in the school: Is the sixtieth day counted with those that precede it or with those that follow it?²¹ -Come and hear:²² Rab said: The sixtieth day is counted with those that follow it; and Samuel said: With those that precede it.²³ R. Nahman said: The mnemonic for this is, the highlands need water, but the lowlands do not.²⁴ R. Papa said: The halachah is that the sixtieth day is counted with those that follow it.²⁵

MISHNAH. IF THE SEVENTEENTH OF MARCHESHVAN CAME AND NO RAIN FELL THE YEHDIM²⁶ [INDIVIDUALS] BEGIN TO FAST THREE FASTS; THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK AFTER IT GETS DARK²⁷ [AND ON THESE FASTS] IT IS PERMISSIBLE FOR THEM TO DO WORK, TO BATHE, TO ANOINT THEMSELVES WITH OIL, TO WEAR SHOES, AND TO HAVE

GEMARA. Who are the yehidim? R. Huna said: The rabbis. R. Huna further said: The yehidim fast three fasts, [that is to say, on] Monday, Thursday and Monday. What new fact does he teach us? Has it not already been taught to us:²⁸ No fast is ordained upon the community to begin on a Thursday in order to prevent a rise in food prices.²⁹ Hence the order of the first three fasts must be, Monday, Thursday, Monday? You might have thought that this applies only to public fasts but not to those of individuals therefore he teaches us [that it applies] equally to those of individuals. The same has been taught us elsewhere: When the yehidim begin to fast they fast on Monday, Thursday and Monday, and they interrupt³⁰ their fasts on New Moon and on such festive days as are enumerated in the Scroll of Fasts.¹

The Rabbis have taught: Let not a man say, 'I am but a disciple and I am therefore not worthy to consider myself a yahid', since all Disciples of the Wise are accounted yehidim. Who is a yahid? And who is a disciple? A yahid is one worthy to be appointed Leader of the Community; a disciple is one who is asked any question of halachah connected with his studies and can answer it — even though it is on a subject dealt with in the Tractate Kallah.² Our Rabbis have taught: Not everyone desirous to consider himself a yahid may do so;³ a disciple however may do so; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Jose says: Anyone may do so, and may he be remembered for good, because it is not an advantage to him but a hardship. Another [Baraitha] teaches: Not everyone desirous to consider himself a yahid may do so; a disciple however may do so; this is the opinion of R. Simeon son of R. Eliezer. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: This only applies to things which are to his distinction⁴ but in things which cause him hardship any one may do so and may he be remembered for good, because it is not an advantage to him but a hardship.

Our Rabbis have taught: If one fasted on account of some visitation and it passed, or for a sick person and he recovered, he should nevertheless complete his fast. If one journeys from a place where they do not fast to a place where they do, he should fast with them; from a place where they do fast to a place where they do not, he should nevertheless complete his fast. If he forgot and ate and drank let him not make it patent in public nor may he indulge in delicacies, as it is written, And Jacob said to his sons: Why should you show yourself?⁵ Jacob conveyed thereby to his sons' 'When you are fully sated do not show yourselves either before Esau or before Ishmael that they should not envy you'. See that ye fall not out by the way. R. Eleazar said: Joseph said to his brethren, 'Do not busy yourselves with questions of law lest the road become uncertain for you [you lose the way]'.⁶ Is it really so; did not R. Elia b. Berackiah say: Two scholars who are journeying on the road and they do not discuss words of Torah merit to be devoured by fire, as it is written, And it came to pass, as they still went on and talked, that behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, which parted them asunder?⁷ — [They parted asunder] only because they talked [of Torah] but if they had not talked they would have merited to be devoured by fire! — There is no contradiction. The latter case speaks of repeating one's studies, and the former of cogitation.

A Tanna taught: [Joseph said to his brethren] ‘Do not take big strides and bring the sun into the city’. ‘Do not take big strides’: For a Master said: Big strides rob a man of one five-hundredth part of his eyesight. ‘And bring the sun into the city’: As Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Let a man always leave [the city by ‘daylight’,⁸ and enter it by ‘daylight, as it is said, As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away.⁹ Rab Judah said¹⁰ in the name of R. Hiyya: He who journeys on the road should not eat more than one eats in years of famine. Why? Here [in Babylonia] they explained the reason to be in order to prevent digestive troubles¹¹ but in Palestine they said, in order [to make] his provisions last [throughout the whole journey]. What is the difference between the two [reasons]? — The difference is apparent in the case of a man on board ship¹ or of a man journeying from one inn to another.² R. Papa ate a piece of bread at every parasang; he was therefore of the opinion that the reason is in order to prevent digestive troubles.³

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab.⁴ He who starves himself in years of famine escapes unnatural death, as it is said, In famine He will redeem thee from death.⁵ [Scripture should have said] ‘from famine’. This is therefore what [Scripture] meant to convey. As a reward for starving himself in years of famine one will escape unnatural death. Resh Lakish said: A man may not have marital relations during years of famine, as it is said, And unto Joseph were born two sons before the year of famine came.⁶ A Tanna taught: Childless people may have marital relations in years of famine. Our Rabbis have taught: When Israel is in trouble and one of them separates himself from them, then the two ministering angels who accompany every man come and place their hands upon his head and say, ‘So-and-so who separated himself from the community shall not behold the consolation of the community’. Another [Baraita] taught: When the community is in trouble let not a man say, ‘I will go to my house and I will eat and drink and all will be well with me’. For of him who does so Scripture says, And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen and killing sheep, eating flesh and drinking wine — ‘Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die’.⁷ What follows after this [verse]? — And the Lord of Hosts revealed Himself in mine ears; surely this iniquity shall not be expiated by you till ye die. This is the conduct of the ordinary man, but what does Scripture say of the conduct of the wicked? Come ye, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day.⁸ What follows after this [verse]? The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart . . . that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.⁹ But rather a man should share in the distress of the community, for so we find that Moses, our teacher, shared in the distress of the community, as it is said, But Moses’ hands were heavy; and they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat thereon.¹⁰ Did not then Moses have a bolster or a cushion to sit on? This is then what Moses meant [to convey], ‘As Israel are in distress I too will share with them. He who shares in the distress of the community will merit to behold its consolation’.¹¹ Perhaps a man will say, ‘Who is there to testify against me?’ The very stones of his house and its beams testify against him, as it is written, For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it.¹² In the school of R. Shila it was taught: The two ministering angels who accompany every man testify against him, as it is said, For He will give His angels charge over thee.¹³ R. Hidka says: A man’s own soul testifies against him, as it is said, Keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.¹⁴ And some say: A man’s own limbs testify against him, as it is said, Ye are my witnesses saith the Lord.¹⁵

A God of faithfulness and without iniquity.¹⁶ ‘A God of faithfulness’: Just as punishment will be exacted of the wicked in the world to come even for a slight transgression which they commit, So too is punishment exacted in this world of the righteous for any slight transgression which they commit. ‘And without iniquity’: Just as the righteous will receive their reward in the world to come, even for the least meritorious act which they do, so too are the wicked rewarded in this world even for the least meritorious act which they do. Just and right is He.¹⁷ They [the Rabbis] said: When a man departs to his eternal home all his deeds are enumerated before him and he is told, Such and such a thing have you done, in such and such a place on that particular day. And he replies, ‘Yes’. Then they say to him. ‘Sign’ — And he signs, as it is said, He sealeth up the hand of every man.¹⁸ And what is even more, he acknowledges the justice of the verdict and he says. ‘You have judged me well’, in order that the words of Scripture may be fulfilled, That thou mayest be justified when Thou speakest.¹⁹

Samuel said: Whosoever fasts [for the sake of self-affliction] is termed a sinner. He is of the same opinion as the following Tanna. For it has been taught: Eleazar ha-Kappar Berabbi²⁰ Says: What is Scripture referring to when it says [of the Nazirite], And make atonement for him, for that he sinned by reason of the soul.²¹ Against which soul did he sin?²² [It must refer to the fact that] he denied himself wine. We can now make this inference from minor to major: If this man [Nazirite] who denied himself wine only is termed, Sinner, how much more so he who denies himself the enjoyment of ever so many things. R. Eleazar says: He is termed, Holy. as it is said, He shall be holy, he shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow long.²³ If this man [Nazirite] who denied himself wine only is termed, Holy. how much more so he who denies himself the enjoyment of ever so many things — How will then Samuel explain the verse wherein he is termed, Holy? — That refers to the locks growing long. And how will R. Eleazar explain the statement that he is termed, Sinner?—That is because he defiled himself [by contact with the dead]. But did R. Eleazar say so? Did he not say: Let a man always consider himself as if the Holy One dwells within him, as it is said, The Holy One in the midst of thee, and I will not come in fury?¹ — This is no contradiction. The one speaks of him, who is able to bear self-affliction and the other of one who is not able. Resh Lakish says: He is termed, Pious, as it is said, The Pious man² weans his own soul but he that is cruel etc.³ R. Shesheth, said: The young scholar who would afflict himself by fasting let a dog devour his meal.⁴

R. Jeremiah b. Abba said: There are no public fasts⁵ in Babylonia except [the Fast of] the Ninth of Ab.⁶ R. Jeremiah b. Abba further said in the name of Resh Lakish: A scholar may not afflict himself by fasting because he lessens thereby his heavenly work.⁷

THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK AFTER IT GETS DARK etc. R. Ze'ira said in the name of R. Hanina: An individual who has undertaken to fast though he may have eaten and drunk the whole of the [preceding] night, yet on the morrow he should recite the [special] prayer for fast days; if, however, he has continued his fast throughout the following night he may not recite the prayer for fast days [on the next day].⁸ R. Joseph asked: What view does R. Huna take? Does he take the view that one cannot [undertake a] fast for a matter of hours? Or perhaps one can undertake a fast for hours, but if one does so he should not recite the [special] prayer for fast days?⁹ — Abaye replied to him: It is quite definite R. Huna may hold the opinion that one can undertake a fast for a matter of hours and if one does so he may recite the [special] prayer for fast days, but here the case is different since he did not previously take upon himself¹⁰ [to fast]. Mar 'Ukba¹¹ chanced to come to Ganzaka¹² and he was asked: Is fasting for a matter of hours considered a fast or not? and he was unable to answer. [They then asked him] are wine-jars belonging to idolaters prohibited for use or not and he was unable to answer; [he was then asked] in which [garments] did Moses perform the service [in the Tabernacle] during the seven days of consecration¹³ and he was unable to answer. He went and inquired in the House of Learning and he was told, the law is that fasting for a matter of hours is considered a fast and we do recite the [special] prayer for fast days [if one has completed the fast].¹⁴ Further the law is that wine-jars belonging to idolaters may be used after twelve months; Moses performed the service during the seven days of consecration dressed in a white frock. R. Kahana taught: In a white frock without a border.¹⁵

With reference to what you said that one may fast for a matter of hours this only applies if [the man concerned] had not tasted anything until the evening. Abaye said to him: This is then a full fast! — This speaks of a case where the fast was only an after thought.¹

R. Hisda further said: A fast over which the sun has not set cannot be deemed a fast. An objection was raised against this. The men of the Mishmar fast but do not complete [the day]. [There fasting] is merely in order to afflict themselves [in sympathy with the community].²

Come and hear: R. Eleazar b. Zadok said: I am a descendant of Sena'al³ of the tribe of Benjamin; once the [fast of] the ninth of Ab fell on the Sabbath and we postponed it until the day after the Sabbath and we fasted but did not complete the fast because it was our festive day!⁴ — There too the fasting was merely in order to afflict themselves [in sympathy with the community].

Come and hear: R. Johanan [once] said: 'I will fast until I return home'! — There he said this merely in order to evade the hospitality of the house of the Nasi.⁵

Samuel said: A fast which one does not undertake before sunset on the previous day is not deemed to be a fast. But what if a man does observe such a fast? — Rabbah b. Shila replied: It may be compared to a pair of bellows filled with wind.⁶ At what time should one undertake such a fast? — Rab said: During the time that one may read the Afternoon Service, and Samuel said, In the course of the Afternoon Tefillah. R. Joseph said: The view of Samuel appears the more reasonable, since it is written in the Scroll of Fasts: Therefore any man who has been subject to a fast previous to this [i.e., the incidence of these festive days] should build himself⁷ [by an undertaking]. Does this not refer to an undertaking made during prayer?⁸ — No; this only denotes that he is forbidden [to break his fast because of his previous undertaking]. R. Hiyya and R. Simeon b. Rabbi differ on this question. One reads⁹ yesar¹⁰ ['he should bind himself by his under-taking'] and the other reads, yeaser¹¹ [he is forbidden, i.e., to break his fast]. The one who reads, yesar, justifies his view in the way we have just stated, but the one who reads, yeaser, what does this mean? — It has been taught in the Scroll of Fasts: Any man who is subject to a fast previous to this [incidence of these festive days] is forbidden [to break his fast]. How is this to be understood? If a man undertook to fast on Mondays and Thursdays throughout the year and any of the festive days enumerated in the Scroll of Fasts happens to fall on those days, then if his vow was made previous to our decree his vow overrides our decree, but if our decree was made before his vow then our decree overrides his vow.

Our Rabbis taught: Until when may one eat and drink [on the night preceding a fast]? Until the rise of dawn; this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Eliezer b. Simeon says: Until cock crow. Abaye said: This only holds good where a man had not yet finished his meal, but if he had finished his meal he may not eat again.

Raba raised an objection against this: If one had completed his meal and rose from the table, he may eat further! — There it speaks of the case where he had not yet removed the [table].¹² Some say, Raba said: This holds good only when he has not gone to sleep, but if he has gone to sleep he may not eat again. Abaye raised an objection against this: If one had gone to sleep and then got up he may eat again! — There it speaks of the case where he was merely dozing. What constitutes dozing?-R. Ashi replied:

(1) R. Hisda's interpretation of fasting for a matter of hours is this. A man was too occupied for the first half of the day to have a meal and decides that he would end the day without food so as to make it constitute a fast. In such special circumstances the fast is a valid one, though the man had not explicitly undertaken it on the day previous (V. Rashi).

A sleep which is no sleep, a wakefulness which is no wakefulness, he answers when he is called, but cannot recall an argument; when, however, he is reminded of something he remembers it.

R. Kahana said in the name of Rab: An individual who has undertaken a fast is forbidden to wear shoes because we fear that perhaps he has undertaken a public fast.¹ How shall he declare his vow [to be able to wear shoes]?-Rabbah b. Shila said: He should make the following declaration, 'To-morrow I shall observe before Thee a private fast'. The Rabbis said to R. Shesheth: We have seen Rabbis who come to an Assembly on a fast day wearing their shoes. Thereupon he became angry and asked them, Perhaps they even eat? Abaye and Raba used to come [to the Assembly] wearing shoes² without soles. Meremar and Mar Zutra used to change the right [shoe] to the left [foot] and the left to the right.³ The scholars of the school of R. Ashi wore their shoes as usual; they were of the same opinion as Samuel who said: In Babylonia except for the Fast of the Ninth of Ab there are no public fasts.⁴

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: One may borrow a fast and repay it [on another day]; When I repeated this [statement] before Samuel he said to me, Did he then take a vow upon himself that he must pay it?-He merely undertook to afflict himself, if he is able he afflicts himself, if not he does not do so. Some say, Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: One may borrow his fast and repay it. When I repeated this before Samuel he said to me, This is self-evident; even if it is merely a vow, would he not have to pay a vow on the next day or on a later day?

R. Joshua, the son of R. Idi chanced to be with R. Assi, and after they had prepared in his honour a three-year-old calf⁵ they said to him, 'Will the Master partake of it?' He replied. 'I am fasting'. They said to him, 'Let the Master borrow and repay [the fast later]'. Is the Master not in agreement with the view of Rab Judah, who said in the name of Rab: One may borrow a fast and repay it? — He replied: [Mine] is a fast for a [bad] dream, and Rabbah b. Mehasiah said in the name of R. Hama b. Guriah, in the name of Rab: Fasting is as efficacious for the bad dream as fire is for tow, and upon this R. Hisda commented: And [the fast must be] on the same day; and R. Joseph added: Even if [the day] is the Sabbath. What amends shall he make [for having fasted on the Sabbath]? — He should observe an additional fast.⁶

MISHNAH. IF THESE FAST DAYS PASSED AND THERE WAS NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS, THE BETH DIN ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY THREE FURTHER FASTS; [ON DAYS PRECEDING THESE FASTS] THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK [ONLY] WHILST IT IS STILL DAY, AND THEY MAY NOT [ON THESE FAST DAYS] DO WORK, NOR BATHE, NOR ANOINT THEMSELVES WITH OIL, NOR WEAR SHOES, NOR HAVE MARITAL, RELATIONS; AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED. IF THESE [DAYS] PASSED AND THERE WAS [STILL] NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS THE BETH DIN ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FURTHER SEVEN [FASTS]. MAKING THIRTEEN IN ALL. [IN THIS RESPECT ARE] THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER⁷ IN THAT ON THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. ON MONDAYS THE SHUTTERS [OF THE SHOPS] ARE OPENED A LITTLE WHEN IT GETS DARK, BUT ON THURSDAYS THEY ARE PERMITTED⁸ [THE WHOLE DAY]⁹ IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH. IF THESE PASSED AND THERE WAS [STILL] NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS THEN BUSINESS IS RESTRICTED AS ALSO IS BUILDING, PLANTING, BETROTHAL AND MARRIAGE; AND MEN GREET ONE ANOTHER AS PEOPLE LABOURING UNDER DIVINE DISPLEASURE. THE YEHIDIM¹⁰ BEGIN THEIR FASTING ANEW AND CONTINUE UNTIL THE END OF NISAN; IF NISAN PASSES AND RAIN FALLS THIS IS A SIGN OF DIVINE ANGER, AS IT IS WRITTEN, IS IT NOT WHEAT HARVEST TO-DAY, etc.¹¹

GEMARA. It is reasonable that all the other restrictions [should be forbidden] because they give pleasure, but why work which is a source of pain? — R. Hisda replied in the name of R. Jeremiah b. Abba: Scripture says. Sanctify ye a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the elders.¹² This means that [the fast day is to be treated] like a solemn assembly. Just as it is not permissible to do work on a solemn assembly it is likewise not permissible to do work on a fast day. Perhaps just as on the solemn assembly work is forbidden from the preceding evening so too on a fast day work should close on the preceding evening? — R. Zeira replied: R. Jeremiah b. Abba explained the matter to me thus: Scripture says, Gather the elders'; it is to be like a gathering of elders, as the elders foregather by day so too the fast commences on the day. Perhaps [it commences] from noon? — R. Shisha b. Idi replied: This is a support for R. Huna who said: The assembly [of the community on a fast day] takes place in the morning. How do they spend [the day]?-Abaye replied: From morning to midday they look into the affairs of the city;¹³ from then onwards they read for a quarter of the day from the Torah and the Prophets and the rest of the day [is spent] in praying for mercy, as it is said, And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the Law of the Lord their God a fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed and prostrated themselves before the Lord their God.¹⁴

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 13a

Perhaps the order of the day is to be reversed? — This cannot possibly be so, seeing that it is written, Then were assembled unto me everyone that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the faithlessness of them of the captivity etc.;¹ and then follows, And at the evening offering I arose from my fasting . . . and spread out my hands unto the Lord.²

Rafram b. Papa said in the name of R. Hisda: On any fast ordained on account of mourning, as for example the Ninth of Ab and a mourner, it is forbidden to bathe in warm or in cold water, but on any fast ordained merely to prevent indulgence in pleasure, as for example, a public fast day, bathing in warm water is forbidden but permissible in cold water. R. Idi b. Abin said: We too have learnt: AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED? Abaye said to him: If it were forbidden to bathe even in cold water, then it should have stated, 'and the rivers are stopped up'! — R. Shisha the son of R. Idi replied: This was the difficulty which my father felt. [He argued]. Let us see: the Mishnah already states, IT IS NOT PERMISSIBLE TO BATHE, why does it add AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED? Evidently from this is to be concluded that [bathing] in warm water is forbidden but permissible in cold water.

Shall we say that the following supports [R. Hisda]: 'All those who have to take the ritual bath³ immerse in the usual way both on the Ninth of Ab and on the Day of Atonement'. In what [water is here meant]? Is it in warm [water]? Is then [ritual] immersion in warm water permissible, seeing that such water must of a necessity be drawn⁴ [and is therefore unfit for immersion]? It must therefore be in cold [water]; and yet it is only those who have to take the ritual bath who may [immerse] but others may not?⁵ — Said R. Hana b. Kattina [No:] This [passage] has special reference to the hot springs of Tiberias. If this is so how is the concluding statement to be understood? R. Hanina, the Deputy High Priest said: Our House of God merits that a man should for its sake forego an immersion once a year.⁶ Now should you say that bathing in cold water is permissible, let him then bathe in cold water! — R. Papa replied: [It speaks] of a place where cold water is not available.

Come and hear: When the Rabbis declared that it is not permissible to do work [on a public fast day] this applies only to the day but not to the night [preceding]; and when they declared that it is not permissible to wear shoes, this applies only within the city, but on the road it is permissible. How should a man act? When he sets out on a journey he puts his shoes on, but when he enters the city he removes them. And when they declared that it is not permissible to bathe they meant the whole body but he may wash his face, hands or feet. You will find that the same applies to one placed under the ban and also to the mourner. Now does not [this last statement] imply that they are subject to all [the restrictions mentioned previously]? This being so, of what [water does the Baraitha] speak? Shall we say warm water? Is it then permissible [for a mourner] to wash his face, hands or feet [in warm water]? Did not R. Shesheth say: The mourner may not put even his finger into warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water!⁷ — No; it refers indeed to warm water, and as for your difficulty in interpreting, ‘and the same applies to one placed under the ban and also to the mourner’, [you must take] this to refer only to the remaining restrictions⁸ [and not to bathing].

Come and hear: R. Abba the Priest said in the name of R. Jose the Priest: It happened that the sons of R. Jose b. Hanina died and he bathed in cold water throughout the seven days [of mourning]! — In his case one bereavement followed close on the other. For it has been taught: Where a man suffers one bereavement close upon another and his hair weighs heavy upon him he may thin them out with a razor and he may also wash his clothes in water. R. Hisda said: With a razor but not with scissors, in water but not in natron nor in sand.

Raba said: A mourner may bathe in cold water all the seven days in the same way as he may partake of meat and wine. An objection was raised against this:

(1) Ezra IX, 4.

(2) Ezra IX, 5.

(3) E.g. a woman after menstruation or confinement. (V. Num. XIX, 17.)

(4) Ritual immersion takes place only either in running water i.e., in a stream, or in a natural spring or in a ritual bath the waters of which are directly connected with them. To be warmed, waters would have to be ‘drawn’, and this is not permissible.

(5) This supports R. Hisda.

(6) On the ninth of Ab because of national mourning.

(7) [This shows that on a public fast day, as in the case of a mourner, bathing in cold water is forbidden in opposition to R. Hisda.]

(8) I.e., working and wearing shoes.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 13b

A girl who has reached adolescence¹ may not make herself unsightly during the days of mourning for her father.² This implies that a girl who has not reached adolescence may [make herself unsightly]. And in which respect [may she neglect herself]? By not bathing. [This being so], in what water? Shall I say in warm? [Then how can you say that] a girl who has not reached adolescence may not neglect herself [in this respect]? Did not R. Hisda say: A mourner may not put even his finger in warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water!³ — No; [it speaks of] painting the eyelids and dyeing the hair.

Shall we say that the following supports Raba: R. Abba the Priest said in the name of R. Jose the Priest: It happened that the sons of R. Jose b. Hanina died and he bathed in cold water throughout the seven days [of mourning]. The answer is, in his case one bereavement followed close on the other. For it has been taught: Where a man suffers one bereavement close upon another and his hair weighs heavy upon him he may thin them out with a razor and he may also wash his clothes in water. R. Hisda said: With a razor, but not with scissors, In water, but not in natron, nor in sand nor in aloe.

Some say. Raba said: The mourner may not [bathe] in cold water all the seven days. Why this differentiation [between bathing in cold water] and partaking of meat and wine?⁴ — Of these [the mourner] may partake in order to counteract his fear.⁵ Shall we say that support may be adduced from the following passage: A girl who has reached adolescence may not make herself un-sightly [during the days of mourning for her father]. This implies that one who has not reached adolescence may? And in what respect may she neglect herself? [By not bathing]. [This being so], in what water? Is it in warm water? Then how can you say that a girl who has reached adolescence may not neglect herself in this respect? Did not R. Hisda say: A mourner may not put even his finger in warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water! — No; it speaks of painting the eyelids and dyeing the hair. R. Hisda said this proves⁶ that a mourner is forbidden to wash his clothes throughout the seven days of mourning.⁷ The law is, a mourner is forbidden to bathe his whole body either in warm or in cold water all the seven days; his face, hands and feet he may not [wash] in warm water but in cold water he may; anointing is not permitted at all; if, however, it is to remove the dirt it is permissible.

Where is the prayer for the fast day⁸ inserted?⁹ Rab Judah brought his son R. Isaac [to the school]¹⁰ and he expounded as follows: An individual who has taken upon himself a fast should recite the prayer for the fast day. And where does he insert it? Between the benediction for 'Redemption' and the benediction for 'Healing'.¹¹ R. Isaac demurred to this [saying]: Is it proper that an individual should insert [in his prayers] a special benediction for himself? Therefore said R. Isaac: [He includes it] in the benediction 'Thou hearkenest to the prayer'.¹² And so, too, said R. Shesheth: [In the benediction] 'Thou hearkenest to the prayer'. An objection was raised [against this]: The only difference between [the Order of Prayer] of an individual on a fast day and a community is that the former recites eighteen benedictions and the latter recite nineteen. Now what is [meant by] an 'individual' and what by a 'community'? Shall we say that [by] an 'individual' [is meant] literally and [by] 'community' the Representative of the community [leading in prayer]?¹³ If so, are the benedictions [recited by the latter] nineteen? Are they not rather twenty-four?¹⁴ Therefore the [Baraita quoted] should read thus: The only difference between an individual who has undertaken a private fast and an individual who has undertaken a public fast is that the former recites eighteen [benedictions] and the latter nineteen.¹⁵ From which one may infer that an individual may insert a special benediction for himself.¹⁶ No; [by 'community' is definitely meant], the Representative of the Community and as to your difficulty, that the Representative recites twenty-four benedictions [and not nineteen]. [this refers] to the first three fasts when the twenty-four are not [recited]. But is this so? Is it not stated that the only difference between the first three [fasts] and the middle three [fasts] is that work is permissible on the former and forbidden on the latter? Does this not imply that with regard to the recital of the twenty-four [benedictions] both are alike?—The Tanna [of the Baraitha] has stated only one [difference] and has left out [others] — What other differences has he left out besides this one?¹⁷ And further, does he not explicitly state: The only difference etc.? — The Tanna speaks only of differences with regard to things forbidden on the fast days and not [of differences with regard to] prayers. And if you like, I can say that even on the middle three fasts the twenty-four benedictions are also not recited. But is this so? Has it not been taught: ‘The only difference between the second three [fasts] and the last seven is that on the latter the alarm is sounded and the shops are closed.’ Does this not imply that in all other respects they are alike? And should you reply that here too [the Tanna] stated one difference only and left out [others], I would object on the ground that it explicitly states, ‘The only difference’! — Do you assume the expression, ‘The only difference etc.’

to denote the absolute exclusion of any other differences? Has he not left out [mention of the taking out of] the Ark?¹ — [As for the taking out of the] Ark this cannot be considered an omission because [the Baraitha] enumerates only things done in private but not things done in public. R. Ashi said: This² may also be deduced from our Mishnah where it is learnt: IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER?³ IN THAT ON

THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. This would imply that in all other respects they are alike. And should you reply that here too [the Mishnah] has stated only one [difference] and left out [others]. I would object, the Mishnah explicitly states, IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER etc.'!⁴ — Do you assume the expression, 'IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER etc. literally? Has he not also left out [mention of the taking out of] the Ark?— [As for the taking out of] the Ark this cannot be considered an omission because he mentions it in the next chapter. If now that you have arrived at this conclusion [the difference in respect of the recital of] the twenty-four benedictions is also no omission since he mentions it [also] in the next chapter. What is the final decision [with regard to the insertion of the special benediction for fast days]?⁵ R. Samuel b. Sasartai said, and so too R. Hiyya b. Ashi in the name of Rab: [He inserts it] between 'Redemption' and 'Healing'. R. Ashi said in the name of R. Jannai, the son of R. Ishmael: In [the benediction] 'Who hearkenest unto prayer.

One Baraitha teaches: Pregnant women and nursing mothers fast on the first fasts but not on the last; another teaches: They fast on the last but not on the first; and yet another teaches: They fast neither on the first nor on the last! — R. Ashi said: Take it that they fast on the middle set of fasts and in this way all [three Baraithas] will be reconciled.⁶

IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER? IN THAT ON THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. How do we sound the alarm? — Rab Judah said: By the shofar.⁷ Rab Judah the son of R. Samuel b. Shilath in the name of Rab said: By [the recital of the] 'anenu.⁸ The scholars assumed that the authority who said by the 'anenu was opposed to the sounding of the alarm by the shofar and that the one who said by the shofar was opposed to the recital of the 'anenu. But has it not been taught: No less than seven fasts are ordained upon the community upon each of which the alarm is sounded eighteen times; [as] a sign to remember this take Jericho. Now at Jericho the shofar [was used to give the alarm]. This would be a refutation of him who said: By 'anenu [only]! Hence [we must conclude] that all are agreed that the sounding of the shofar constitutes the sounding of an alarm, and that they differ only with regard to [the recital of] the 'anenu; one takes the view that it constitutes the sounding of an alarm, and the other that it does not. The authority who says that the recital of the 'anenu constitutes the sounding of an alarm [will hold] how much more so does the sounding of the shofar, but the authority who says, 'by the shofar', would exclude the recital of the 'anenu. But has it not been taught: In the case of all other visitations that break out [in the world], as for example. Itch, Locusts, Flies, Hornets, Gnats and the invasion by Snakes and Scorpions they did not sound the alarm, but they cried aloud? And as crying can only be by mouth, the sounding of the alarm must consequently be by the shofar! — This forms a subject of dispute amongst the Tannaim, for it has been learnt: In the case of these [calamities] they sound the alarm even on the Sabbath ; when a city is surrounded by a ravaging troop, or is in danger of inundation by a river or when a ship is foundering on the sea, R. Jose said: [We may sound the alarm to summon] help but not for intercession! Now with what [is the alarm sounded]? Shall we say by the shofar? Is then the sounding of the shofar on the Sabbath permissible? It must therefore be by the recital of the 'anenu, and this is termed: 'Sounding the alarm'. This proves it.

; he ordained thirteen fast days and their prayer was not answered. He thought of ordaining additional fasts but R. Ammi said to him, 'Did not [the Sages] declare we should not trouble the community unduly'. Said R. Abba the son of R. Hiyya b. Abba, 'R. Ammi [in saying this] was studying his own interests',¹ for thus did R. Hiyya b. Abba say in the name of R. Johanan: The statement [cited by R. Ammi] holds good only so far [as fasts for] rain are concerned, but in the case of other forms of visitation the fasts are continued until their prayers are answered from heaven. It has been taught to the same effect: When they [the Sages] instituted the order of fasts for [twice] three days, and then a further seven days, they intended these to be applicable only in the case of fasts for rain, but in all other forms of visitation the fasts are to be continued until their prayers are answered from heaven. Shall we say that this will be a refutation of R. Ammi? — R. Ammi can answer you: The Tannaim are divided on this question. For it has been taught: Not more than thirteen fasts are ordained upon the community because we should not trouble the community unduly; this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: This is not the real reason² [why no additional fasts are ordained] but it is because after these thirteen fasts the time of rainfall has gone.

The inhabitants of Nineveh³ sent to enquire of Rabbi: How should we who need rain even in the Tammuz cycle act?⁴ Are we to consider ourselves individuals and [insert the special prayer for rain] in 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. or shall we consider ourselves a community and [insert it] in the 'Blessing of the Years'?⁵ He sent [word] back to them: Consider yourselves individuals and [insert the prayer] in, 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. An objection was raised [against this]: R. Judah said: When did this order of fasts apply? Only at such times when the seasons of the year were normal⁶ and Israel dwelt in their own land, but to-day all depends upon the years, the countries and the seasons! He replied:⁷ You cite a Baraita in refutation of Rabbi; Rabbi is a Tanna and has the right to differ [from a Baraita]. What is the final decision [with regard to this matter]? — R. Nahman said: [The blessing is inserted] in the Blessing of the Years. R. Shesheth said: In 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. The Law is [it is inserted in]. 'Who hearkenest unto prayer’.

ON MONDAYS THE SHUTTERS [OF THE SHOPS] ARE OPENED A LITTLE WHEN IT GETS DARK; BUT ON THURSDAYS THEY ARE PERMITTED⁸ THE WHOLE DAY IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH. The question was raised: How did [the Mishnah] teach? Was it that on Mondays the shutters are opened a little when it gets dark and on Thursdays they are opened [a little] during the whole day in honour of the Sabbath, or perhaps, that on Mondays they are open a little and on Thursdays they are open wide for the whole day? — Come and hear: It has been taught: On Mondays they are opened slightly till the evening and on Thursdays they remain wide open the whole day in honour of the Sabbath; should there be two doors then one is kept open and the other remains closed; should there be a stand⁹ in front of the door he may open [the door] in the usual way without any compunction.

IF THESE ‘PASSED WITHOUT THEIR PRAYER BEING ANSWERED THEN BUSINESS DEALINGS ARE RESTRICTED AS WELL AS BUILDING AND PLANTING. It has been taught: By BUILDING [is to be understood] building for joyous purposes, and by PLANTING planting for joyous purposes. What is ‘building’ for joyous purposes? — Building a house for the marriage-feast of one's own son. What is ‘planting’ for joyous purposes? When one erects a royal banqueting hall.¹⁰

AND GREETING. Our Rabbis taught: Scholars do not greet one another at all; the greetings of the ignorant are reciprocated in an undertone in a solemn manner; people are seated covered in mourner's fashion and like those placed under the ban, and like men labouring under Divine displeasure, until mercy is shown to them from heaven.

R. Eleazar said: A prominent man should not fall upon his face¹¹ unless he is confident that he will be answered like Joshua. as it is said, And the Lord said unto Joshua. ‘Get thee up; wherefore now art thou fallen upon thy face?’¹² R. Eleazar further said: A prominent man should not put on sackcloth unless he is confident that he will be answered like Jehoram, the Son of Ahab, as it is said, And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes — now he was passing by upon the wall — and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh, etc.¹³

R. Eleazar further said: Not everyone [is answered] through rending his garments nor is everyone [answered] through falling [on his face]. Moses and Aaron [were answered] through falling [on the face], Joshua and Caleb through rending [their] garments. Moses and Aaron through falling [on the face]; for it is written, Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces.¹⁴ Joshua and Caleb through rending [their] garments, for it is written, And Joshua the son of Num and Caleb ... rent their clothes.¹⁵ R. Ze'ira and some say, R. Samuel b. Nahmani demurred to this. Had it been written [in the verse] ‘Joshua’. it would be as you say, but seeing that the verse reads ‘And Joshua’, they may have done both.¹⁶

R. Eleazar further said: Not all [will in the Messianic era] rise [before Israel], nor will all prostrate themselves; kings will rise and princes prostrate themselves; ‘Kings will rise’, for it is written, Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, his Holy One to him who is despised of men, to him who is abhorred of nations, to a servant of rulers; kings shall see and arise;¹ 'and princes will prostrate themselves,' for it is written, Princes and they shall prostrate themselves. R. Ze'ira and some say R. Samuel b. Nahmani demurred to this. Had it been written in the verse, 'And princes shall prostrate themselves', it would be as you say, but seeing that the verse reads, 'Princes and they shall prostrate themselves,' they will perhaps do both.

R. Nahman b. Isaac declared: I say furthermore, Not all are destined to share in the light nor all in the gladness. Light shall be for the righteous and gladness for the upright. 'Light for the righteous', for it is written, Light is sown for the righteous;² And gladness for the upright'. for it is written, And gladness for the upright in heart.²

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. WHAT IS THE ORDER [OF SERVICE] FOR FAST DAYS?³ THE ARK IS TAKEN OUT TO THE OPEN SPACE⁴ OF THE CITY, WOOD ASHES ARE PLACED ON THE ARK, ON THE HEAD OF THE NASI⁵ AND ON THE HEAD OF THE AB-BETH-DIN.⁶ EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES ON HIS OWN HEAD; THE ELDER AMONG THEM ADDRESSES THEM WITH WORDS OF ADMONITION [TO REPENTANCE] THUS, OUR BRETHREN, SCRIPTURE DOES NOT SAY OF THE PEOPLE OF NINEVEH, AND GOD SAW THEIR SACKCLOTH AND THEIR FASTING, BUT, AND GOD SAW THEIR WORKS, THAT THEY TURNED FROM THEIR EVIL WAY;⁷ AND IN THE PROPHETS IT IS SAID, AND REND YOUR HEART AND NOT YOUR GARMENTS.⁸ WHEN THEY

STAND UP TO PRAY THEY PLACE [AS READER] BEFORE THE ARK AN OLD MAN CONVERSANT [WITH THE PRAYERS], WHO HAS CHILDREN AND WHOSE HOUSE IS EMPTY [OF FOOD], SO THAT HIS HEART IS CONCENTRATED ON HIS PRAYER; HE RECITES BEFORE THEM TWENTY-FOUR BENEDICTIONS, THE EIGHTEEN RECITED DAILY, TO WHICH HE ADDS SIX AS FOLLOWS, ZIKRONOTH,⁹ SHOFAROTH,¹⁰ AND [THESE PSALMS]: IN MY DISTRESS I CALLED UNTO THE LORD;¹¹ I WILL LIFT UP MINE EYES UNTO THE MOUNTAINS ETC.;¹² OUT OF THE DEPTHS HAVE I CALLED THEE, O LORD;¹³ A PRAYER OF THE AFFLICTED WHEN HE FAINTETH.¹⁴ R. JUDAH SAYS: HE NEED NOT RECITE THE ZIKRONOTH AND SHOFAROTH, BUT INSTEAD HE SHOULD RECITE THE FOLLOWING SCRIPTURAL, PASSAGES, IF THERE BE IN THE LAND FAMINE, IF THERE BE PESTILENCE;¹⁵ THE WORD OF THE LORD THAT CAME TO JEREMIAH CONCERNING THE DROUGHTS;¹⁶ AND HE ENDS EACH [OF THE ADDITIONAL SIX] SECTIONS WITH ITS APPROPRIATE CONCLUDING BENEDICTION. THE FIRST HE CONCLUDES WITH, 'HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM ON MT. MORIAH, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. BLESSED ART THOU O LORD WHO REDEEMEST ISRAEL. THE SECOND HE CONCLUDES WITH, 'HE WHO ANSWERED OUR FATHERS AT THE RED SEA, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. BLESSED ART THOU O LORD WHO HEarkenEST TO CRIES. THE FIFTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, 'HE WHO ANSWERED ELIJAH ON MT. CARMEL, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. BLESSED ART THOU O LORD WHO HEarkenEST UNTO PRAYER. THE SIXTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, 'HE WHO ANSWERED JONAH IN THE BELLY OF THE FISH, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 15b

IN THE DAYS OF R. HALAFTA AND R. HANINA B. TRADYON THAT A MAN STEPPED BEFORE THE ARK AND COMPLETED THE ENTIRE BENEDICTION AND THEY DID NOT RESPOND, 'AMEN'.¹ [THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT CALLED OUT], SOUND A TEKIAH, PRIESTS, SOUND A TEKIAH.² [THEN THE READER EXCLAIMED], HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM OUR FATHER ON MT. MORIAH, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU, AND HEARKEN THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. [THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT CONTINUED], SOUND A TERUAH,³ CHILDREN OF AARON, SOUND A TERUAH. [THEN THE READER EXCLAIMED], HE WHO ANSWERED OUR FATHERS AT THE RED SEA, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEARKEN THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. AND WHEN THE MATTER CAME UP BEFORE THE WISE, THEY DECLARED, THIS⁴ WAS OUR ORDER OF PROCEDURE ONLY AT THE EASTERN GATES AND ON THE TEMPLE MOUNT.⁵

ON THE FIRST THREE [RAIN]⁶ FASTS THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR⁷ FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST, AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB⁸ DO NOT FAST AT ALL. ON THE SECOND THREE [RAIN FASTS]⁹ THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST; ON THE LAST SEVEN⁹ BOTH FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST; THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. JOSHUA. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, SAY: ON THE FIRST THREE FASTS NEITHER FAST AT ALL, ON THE SECOND THREE, THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST; BUT THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB DO NOT FAST AT ALL; ON THE LAST SEVEN, THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST, AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST.

THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR ARE PERMITTED TO DRINK WINE IN THE EVENINGS BUT NOT DURING THE DAY,¹⁰ BUT THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB MAY NOT [DRINK WINE] EITHER ON THE DAY OR ON THE PRECEDING EVENING. BOTH

THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR AND THE MEN OF THE MA'AMAD¹¹ MAY NOT CUT THEIR HAIR NOR WASH THEIR CLOTHES, BUT ON A THURSDAY THEY MAY IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH.

THE RESTRICTION AGAINST MOURNING ON THE DAYS ENUMERATED IN THE SCROLL OF FASTS¹² APPLIES EQUALLY TO THE PRECEDING DAY BUT NOT TO THE DAY FOLLOWING. R. JOSE SAYS: IT IS FORBIDDEN [TO MOURN] BOTH ON THE PRECEDING DAY AND) THE DAY FOLLOWING. AS FOR FASTING IT IS PERMITTED ON THE PRECEDING DAY AND ON THE DAY FOLLOWING. R. JOSE SAYS: IT IS FORBIDDEN ON THE PRECEDING DAY BUT PERMITTED ON THE DAY FOLLOWING.

WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FAST TO COMMENCE ON A THURSDAY IN ORDER NOT TO CAUSE A RISE IN THE MARKET PRICES. HENCE THE FIRST THREE FASTS ARE HELD [IN THIS ORDER], MONDAY, THURSDAY, AND MONDAY; THE SECOND THREE, THURSDAY, MONDAY, AND THURSDAY; R. JOSE SAYS: JUST AS THE FIRST THREE [FASTS] SHOULD NOT COMMENCE ON A THURSDAY SO TOO NEITHER THE SECOND [THREE] NOR THE LAST [SEVEN].

WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FAST ON NEW MOON, ON HANUKKAH, OR ON PURIM, BUT IF THEY HAD ALREADY BEGUN [A SERIES OF FASTS AND ONE OF THESE FESTIVE DAYS INTERVENED] THEY DO NOT INTERRUPT [THEIR FASTS]; THIS IS THE OPINION OF RABBAN GAMALIEL. R. MEIR SAID: EVEN THOUGH R. GAMALIEL IS OF THE OPINION THAT THE [FASTS] SHOULD NOT BE INTERRUPTED HE YET AGREES THAT THEY SHOULD NOT COMPLETE THEIR FASTS. AND THE SAME APPLIES TO THE NINTH OF AB SHOULD IT FALL ON A FRIDAY.

GEMARA. WHAT IS THE ORDER [OF SERVICES] FOR FAST DAYS? THE ARK IS TAKEN out etc. Does all this apply to the first six fasts? If so, is there not a contradiction raised against this? [For it has been taught]: On the first three and also on the second three [fasts] they enter the synagogue and pray there in the same way as they pray all the year round, but on the last seven the Ark is taken to the open space of the city and ashes are placed on the Ark and also upon the head of the Ab-Beth-din, and everyone else puts ashes upon his own head. R. Nathan says: They take wood-ashes!¹³ — R. Papa replied: Our Mishnah also refers to the last seven fasts.

AND ON THE HEAD OF THE NASI: And afterwards [the Mishnah] states, EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES UPON HIS OWN HEAD. But is it so? Has it not been taught: Rabbi says: Where it is a case of doing honour we begin at the most distinguished, but where it is a case of censuring we begin at the least important; as it is said, And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar;¹⁴ but where it is a case of censuring we begin at the least important, (for a Master said:) First the serpent was cursed, and afterwards Eve and [only] then Adam?-Here [in our Mishnah] it is also a case of doing honour, because [by this act] the people convey to them¹⁵ [the thought] you are worthy to entreat for mercy on behalf of us all.

EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES ON HIS OWN HEAD: R. Adda said: Seeing that everyone else puts the ashes on his own head let also the Nasi and the Ab-Beth-din themselves take ashes and place them on their own heads! Why should someone else take ashes and put them on their head? — R. Aba of Caesarea replied: To humiliate oneself is not the same as being humiliated by others.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 16a

And where [on the head] does he put [the ashes]?-R. Isaac said: On the place of the phylacteries, as it is said, To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them a garland for ashes.¹ (Mnemonic: open space, Ark, sackcloth, wood-ashes, dust, cemetery, Moriah.)

Why do they go out to the open space [of the city]?R. Hiyya b. Abba said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We have prayed in private but we have not been answered; we will [therefore] humiliate ourselves in public. Resh Lakish said: We have exiled ourselves [from the House of God] may our exile atone for us. What is the difference between the two explanations? — The difference is when they move from one synagogue to another.²

And why do they take out the Ark to the open space of the city? — R. Joshua b. Levi said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We had a vessel which we kept hidden and now because of our sins it has been rendered common.

And why do they clothe themselves in sackcloth? — R. Hiyya b. Abba said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We consider ourselves animals³ [before God].

And why do they place wood-ashes upon the Ark? — R. Judah b. Pazzi said: As if to say, I will be with him in trouble.⁴ Resh Lakish said: [As if to say] In all their afflictions He was afflicted.⁵ R. Zera said: When I first saw the rabbis placing wood-ashes on the Ark my whole body shook.

And why does everyone else put ashes on his head? — With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina. One says: [To signify thereby], We are merely like ashes before Thee; and the other says: That [God] may remember for our sake the ashes of Isaac.⁶ What is the difference between them? — The difference is with regard to [the use of] ordinary dust.⁷

Why do they go to the cemetery? — With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina. One says: [To signify thereby], We are as the dead before Thee; and the other says: In order that the dead should intercede for mercy on our behalf. What is the difference between them? — The difference is with regard to going to the cemetery of Gentiles.⁸ What is [the meaning of] ‘Mount Moriah’?⁹ — With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina.¹⁰ [One says] because from this mountain instruction went forth unto Israel;¹¹ and the other says: Because it is the mountain whence fear¹² came upon the heathens.

THE ELDER AMONG THEM ADDRESSES THEM WITH WORDS OF ADMONITION. Our Rabbis have taught: If there is an elder present he addresses them; if not, then a scholar addresses them; and if there is no scholar present then a distinguished looking man addresses them. Does the term ‘elder’ here used denote one who is not a scholar? — Abaye replied: This is what is meant: If there is present an elder who is also a scholar then he addresses them, and if not, then a [younger] scholar addresses them, and if not, a distinguished looking man addresses them. [And this is what he says], ‘Our brethren, neither sackcloth nor fastings are effective but only penitence and good deeds, for we find that of the men of Nineveh Scripture does not say, And God saw their sackcloth and their fasting, but, God saw their works that they turned from their evil way.’

But let them be covered with sackcloth, both man and beast.¹³ How did they act? — They separated the animals from their young and they said, Master of the Universe, if Thou wilt not have mercy upon us we will not show mercy to these.

And let them cry mightily unto God!¹⁴ What did they say? — They said, Master of the Universe, If one is submissive and the other is not, if one is righteous and the other is not, who of them should yield?¹⁵

Let them turn everyone from his evil way and from the violence that is in their hands.¹⁶ What is the meaning of, ‘From the violence that is in their hands’? — Samuel said: Even if one had stolen a beam and built it into his castle he should raze the entire castle to the ground and return the beam to its owner.

R. Adda b. Ahaba said: One who has sinned and confesses his sin but does not repent may be compared to a man holding a dead reptile in his hand, for although he may immerse himself in all the waters of the world his immersion is of no avail unto him; but if he throws it away from his hand then as soon as he immerses himself in forty se'ahs of water,¹⁷ immediately his immersion becomes effective, as it is said, But whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall obtain mercy.¹⁸ And it is further said, Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.¹⁹

WHEN THEY STAND UP TO PRAY THEY PLACE BEFORE THE ARK [AS READER] AN OLD MAN etc. Our Rabbis have taught: When they stand up to pray, although there may be present an elder and a scholar, they place before the Ark [as Reader] only a man conversant with the prayers. (Who is considered conversant with prayers)?²⁰ — R. Judah says: One having a large family²¹ and has no means of support, and who draws his subsistence from [the produce of] the field,²² and whose house is empty, whose youth was unblemished, who is meek and is acceptable to the people; who is skilled in chanting, who has a pleasant voice, and possesses a thorough knowledge of the Torah, the Prophets and the Hagiographa, of the Midrash, Halachoth and Aggadot and of all the Benedictions. Thereupon the Rabbis gazed on R. Isaac b. Ammi.²³

(1) Isa. LXI, 3. The Gemara takes the word rtp, garland, to refer to the phylacteries. So Ber. 11a in interpreting Ezek. XXIV, 17.

(2) This would constitute an 'exile' but not a humiliation.

(3) Because sackcloth is woven of the hair of animals (Rashi).

(4) Ps. XCI, 15.

(5) Isa. LXIII, 9. The thought implied is that though God punishes people He yet does not fail to have sympathy with them.

(6) This refers to the sacrifice of Isaac. Cf. Gen. XXII.

(7) For humiliation ordinary dust or earth could be used, but for recalling the sacrifice of Isaac only ashes would do.

(8) In the former case any cemetery would be used but in the latter case only a Jewish cemetery.

(9) The mount on which the Temple was built.

(10) The difference of opinion between R. Levi and R. Hama b. Hanina also in the matter accounts for the inclusion here of this passage.

(11) Taking vhrun from vrh 'to teach'. [The Sanhedrin from which proceeded all legislation governing the life of the people had its seat in the Temple Mount.]

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 16b

Is not one having a large family with no means of support the same as one whose house is empty?
— R. Hisda replied: The latter refers to a man whose house is free from sin.¹

Whose youth was unblemished. Abaye said: This is one against whom no evil reputation had gone forth in his youth.

My heritage is become unto Me as a lion in the forest; she hath uttered her voice against Me; therefore have I hated her.² What is the meaning of, 'She hath uttered her voice against Me'? — Mar Zutra b. Tobiah said in the name of Rab, some say R. Hama said in the name of R. Eleazar: This refers to an unfit person who steps down before the Ark [to act] as Reader.

AND HE RECITES BEFORE THEM TWENTY-FOUR BENEDICTIONS, THE EIGHTEEN RECITED DAILY TO WHICH HE ADDS SIX MORE. Are there only six? Are they not actually seven, as we have learnt: THE SEVENTH [BENEDICTION] HE CONCLUDES WITH BLESSED BE HE WHO HAS MERCY UPON THE EARTH! — R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: [Do you know] which is THE SEVENTH? it is the seventh of the longer benedictions.³ As it has been taught: [The benediction], 'Who redeemest Israel,' is prolonged and at its conclusion [the Reader] adds, He who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He shall answer you and hearken this day unto the voice of your cry. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel, and the congregation respond, Amen. The synagogue attendant⁴ calls out unto them, 'Blow a Teru'ah, ye children of Aaron, blow a Teru'ah, and [the Reader] resumes with, 'He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea, He shall answer you and hearken this day to the cry of your voice. Blessed art Thou O Lord who rememberest forgotten things'; and the congregation responds, Amen. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, O ye children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah. And likewise [he does] with the other benedictions, at one he calls out, sound a Teki'ah, and another, sound a Teru'ah. The order of service⁵ [in which the congregation responds, Amen] holds good for the country generally but not for the Temple, because the response, Amen' is not made use of in the Temple.⁶ And whence can it be adduced that the response, Amen, was not made use of in the Temple? — For it is said, Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting; and let them say: Blessed be Thy glorious Name, that is exalted above all blessing and praise.⁷ You might have thought that there shall be only one form, of praise after all Benedictions, therefore the text adds, 'Exalted above all blessing and praise'; that is to say, Give him 'praise' after every blessing. 'What then was said in the Temple? Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of his glorious kingdom for ever and ever.⁸ The synagogue attendant calls out unto them, Blow a Teki'ah, O Priests, sons of Aaron, blow a Teki'ah, and [the Reader] resumes with, he who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He will answer you and hearken to the voice of your cry. Blessed art Thou, O Lord God of Israel, who remembers forgotten things; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, O Priests, children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah etc. And likewise [he does] with the other benedictions; at one he calls out, Blow a Teki'ah, and at another, Sound a Teru'ah, until he completes them all. R. Halafta made this order of procedure the custom of Sepphoris and R. Hananya b. Tradyon made it the custom of Siknin. When however the matter came to the notice of the Sages they declared that this custom was observed only at the eastern gates and on the Temple mount.

Some report [the passage just cited] in the form taught in the following Baraita: [The Reader] recites before them twenty-four benedictions; the eighteen recited daily, to which he adds six more. 'Where are those six included? Between the benedictions for redemption and Healing the Sick,⁹ the latter benediction being prolonged and the congregation respond, 'Amen', after every benediction. This was the custom in the country generally, but in the Temple they said, Blessed be the Lord, God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou O Lord who redeemest Israel and there was no response, 'Amen', after it. And why all this [long response]? Because it was not customary to respond 'Amen', in the Temple. And whence can it be adduced that they did not respond, 'Amen', in the Temple? For it is said, 'Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting, and let them say: Blessed be Thy glorious name that is exalted above all blessing and praise'; that is to say, Give Him praise after every benediction.

Our Rabbis have taught: When concluding the first benediction he says: Blessed be the Lord, God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel. And the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teki'ah, Priests, Sound a Teki'ah, and [the Reader] then resumes, He who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He will answer you and hearken this day to the voice of your cry. And they blow a Teki'uh and sound a Teru'ah, and blow a Teki'ah [again]. When concluding the second benediction he says: Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who rememberest forgotten things; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant then calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah, and the reader resumes, He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea, He will answer you and hearken this day to the voice of your cry. They then sound a Teru'ah and blow a Teki'ah and sound a Teru'ah [again]; and likewise he [does] after every benediction, at one he calls out, Blow a Teki'ah, and at another, Sound a Teru'ah, until all the benedictions are concluded. R. Halafta made this order of procedure the custom of Sepphoris and R. Hananya b. Tradyon made it the custom of Siknin. When, however, the matter was brought to the notice of the Sages, they declared that this custom was observed only at the eastern gate and on the Temple mount.

R. JUDAH SAYS: HE NEED NOT RECITE THE ZIKRONOTH AND SHOFAROTH etc.: Said R. Adda of Joppa; what may be R. Judah's reason? Because Zikronoth and Shofaroth are recited only on New Year and on the [Day of Atonement of] the Jubilee year and in the time of war.¹ THE FIRST HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM etc.: A Tanna taught: Some reverse the order of the words and attribute 'crying' to Elijah and 'praying' to Samuel. True, of Samuel Scripture uses the words 'praying' and 'crying'.² but of Elijah Scripture uses only [the word] 'praying' but never 'crying'. [When Elijah says], Hear me, O Lord, hear me;³ that is an expression of 'crying'.

THE SIXTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED JONAH etc.; THE SEVENTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED DAVID etc. Let us see, Did not Jonah live after David and Solomon, why then is he placed first? — Because it was desired to conclude [the prayers] with, Blessed art Thou, O Lord who hast mercy upon the earth.⁴ A Tanna taught: It was reported in the name of Symmachos, [that the prayers were concluded] with, Blessed art Thou who humblest the proud.

ON THE FIRST THREE [RAIN] FASTS THE MEN OF THE MISHNAH FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST etc. Our Rabbis have taught: Why have the Sages ruled that the Men of the Mishmar are permitted to drink wine by night and not by day, lest the work weigh too heavily on the men of the Beth-ab and then they will be called upon to help them; why have the Sages ruled that the men of the Beth-ab are forbidden [to drink] both by day and by night because they are continuously at work [in the Temple]. Hence the Sages have declared that any priest who can identify his Mishmar and his particular Beth-ab and who also knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab were participating in the service of the Temple⁵ is forbidden to drink wine on the whole of that day.⁶ If, however, he can identify only his Mishmar but not his particular Beth-ab and yet he knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab were participating in the service of the Temple, he is forbidden to drink wine the whole of that week.⁷ If he cannot identify his Mishmar nor his particular Beth-ab, but he knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab

MISHNAH. SEVEN DAYS BEFORE THE DAY OF ATONEMENT THE HIGH PRIEST WAS REMOVED FROM HIS HOUSE TO THE CELL OF THE COUNSELLORS¹ AND ANOTHER PRIEST WAS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS PLACE IN CASE ANYTHING² HAPPENED TO HIM [THE HIGH PRIEST] THAT WOULD UNFIT HIM [FOR THE SERVICE]. R. JUDAH SAID: ALSO ANOTHER WIFE WAS PREPARED FOR HIM IN CASE HIS WIFE SHOULD DIE. FOR IT IS WRITTEN,³ AND HE SHALL MAKE ATONEMENT FOR HIMSELF AND FOR HIS HOUSE. 'HIS HOUSE THAT MEANS 'HIS WIFE'. THEY SAID TO HIM: IF SO THERE WOULD BE NO END TO THE MATTER.⁴

GEMARA. We learned elsewhere: Seven days before the burning of the [red] heifer⁵ the priest who was to burn the heifer was removed from his house to the cell in the north-eastern corner before the Birah.⁶ It was called the cell of the stone chamber.⁷ And why was it called the cell of the stone chamber? Because all its functions [in connection with the red heifer] had to be performed only in vessels made of either cobble-stones,⁸ stone or earthenware. What was the reason [for that restriction]? Since a tebul-yom⁹ was permitted to [perform the ceremony of] the heifer, as we have learnt:¹⁰ They [deliberately] rendered the priest ritually impure to remove [a false notion] from the minds of the Sadducees, who used to say: 'Only by those on whom the sun has set could it be performed', the Rabbis ordained that only vessels made of cobble-stones, stone, or earthenware which are immune to impurity — should be used in connection with the heifer, lest the ceremony thereof be treated slightly.¹¹

Why [was the ceremony performed] in the north-eastern corner? — Since the heifer was a sin-offering¹² and a sin-offering had to be sacrificed in the northern corner, whereas, on the other hand, it is written about the heifer,¹³ Towards the front of the tent of meeting,¹⁴ the Rabbis ordained [for the heifer] a cell in the northeastern corner, so that [the special importance of this ceremony] be clearly recognized.

What is Birah? — Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan said: There was a place on the Temple mount called Birah. Resh Lakish said: The whole sanctuary is called Birah, as it is written, And to build the Birah for which I have made provision.¹⁵

Whence is it proved¹⁶ that it is necessary to remove the priest [from his house]? — R. Minyumi b. Hilkiyah in the name of R. Mahsiah b. Idi, in the name of R. Johanan said: The text reads:¹⁷ As hath been done this day, so the Lord hath commanded to do, to make atonement for you;¹⁸ the work la'asoth [to do] refers to the matter of the [red] heifer, the words lekapper 'alekem [to make atonement for you] refer to the work of the Day of Atonement. It is obvious that the whole of this text could not be taken as referring to the heifer, because of the words 'to atone' and the heifer has nothing to do with atonement. But let us assume that the whole text¹⁹ refers to the Day of Atonement? — They said [in answer to this suggestion]: One may infer from, the fact that the identical expression ziwvah [he commanded] is used.²⁰ Here²¹ it is written: The Lord ziwvah [commanded] to do,²² and there²³ it is written: This is the statute of the law which the Lord ziwwah [has commanded]:²⁴ just as in the latter [passage ziwwah] refers to the heifer, so does it in the former refer to the heifer, and just as the removal [of the priest is enjoined] in the one, so must the removal [of the priest apply] to the other.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 2b

But perhaps say that [the word] ziwwah¹ [he commanded] has reference to [the word] ziwwah which occurs in connection with the Day of Atonement,² since the verse reads,³ And he did as the Lord ziwwah [commanded] Moses?⁴ — One may infer from [the word] ziwwah used before conformity⁵ for another case in which ziwwah is used also before conformity,⁶ but one may not infer ziwwah is used before conformity⁵ for ziwwah used after conformity.⁷ Perhaps ziwwah¹ has reference to sacrifices,⁸ for it is written, On the day when the Lord zawwotho⁹ [commanded] the children of Israel?¹⁰ — One may fitly infer ziwwah⁶ from ziwwah,⁵ but one may not infer zawwotho¹¹ from ziwwah.¹² But what does it matter? Did not the school of R. Ishmael teach that [in the verse], The priest shall return or the priest shall come in,¹³ 'returning' and 'coming in' mean one and the same thing?¹⁴ — These words [of the school of R. Ishmael] apply only when there is no identical word,¹⁵ but where such a similar word is used, the inference may be made only on the basis of absolute identity of expression. — [We stated above that the word] ‘lekapper’ [to atone] has reference to the Day of Atonement. May it not refer [also]¹⁶ to the atonement resulting from a sacrifice?¹⁷ — How could we know which priest would happen to perform the sacrifice so that he would have to be removed [from his house]?¹⁸ But why should we not really have to postulate such separation for the whole priestly division?¹⁹ — It is proper to make inference from something for which a definite time is appointed²⁰ for something which similarly is fixed for a definite time.²¹ That excludes any inference [from the consecration of the priest, an annual event] to sacrifices which are offered up every day.²² Perhaps [the reference is to] the [three] festivals?²³ — One may infer something which takes place but once a year²⁴ from something else which took place but once a year, but inference for these festivals is excluded since they do not take place but once a year. Perhaps [the reference is] to one festival.²⁵ And if you would answer [by saying], We would not know to which [it has reference], [it would be] either the festival of Passover, which Scripture always mentions²⁶ [as the first of the three], or the feast of Sukkoth, because a great number of commandments apply to it!²⁷ -The point is, however, that you may infer the [law of the priest's] removal [from his house] for seven days before the service which he is to perform on one day²⁸ from [another case in which the priest is] removed also for seven days for the service of one day;²⁹ but one may not fitly infer that [a priest must be] removed for seven days for the service of seven³⁰ days from the fact that a law exists obliging [the priest's] removal for seven days for the service of one day.²⁹ Yet perhaps [the reference is to] the Eighth Day³¹ because there would be a service of only one day? — One may infer [laws concerning] a day which is not immediately preceded by another [festival] sanctity²⁸ from another day,²⁹ which similarly is not preceded by other [festival] sanctity,²⁹ but one may not infer for a day preceded by [festival] Sanctity³² from a day unpreceded by such.

But [even if the inference by analogy be unjustified] is there no legitimate conclusion a minori ad majus, viz., if a day unpreceded by another [festival] sanctity requires [for the officiating priest] a seven day removal [from his family], how much more should a day preceded by another [festival] sanctity require it!³³ — R. Mesharsheya answered: Scripture expressly states this day,³⁴ that means on a day like this.³⁵ R. Ashi said:³⁶ Could there be any festival the major³⁷ part of which would require no removal [of the priest], while its attachment³⁸ would require it. And even according to the one who holds that the eighth day is [not a mere attachment to Sukkoth, but] an independent festival day, that applies only to

(5) As in Lev. VIII, 34 where the phrase is, ‘He commanded to do’.

(6) As in the case of the red heifer where too it is, ‘He commanded to do’.

(7) As in the case with the Day of Atonement, where the text is, ‘and he did as the Lord commanded’.

Pe'Z'R'K'Sh'B,¹ but in matters of complementing the sacrifice of the festival, the eighth day is but a continuation of the first day, as we have learned: He who failed to offer up the festival sacrifice² on the first day of the feast [of Sukkoth], may do so during the entire festive season including the last day of the feast.³

[Perhaps] say [that the reference is to] Pentecost,⁴ because that would also mean removal of the priest for seven days preceding a one-day service?⁵ — R. Abba said: One may fitly infer a case⁶ in which one ox and one ram are offered from another⁷ case in which one ox and one ram are offered, this excludes, however, Pentecost, on which two⁸ rams are to be sacrificed. This would be right according to the opinion that on the Day of Atonement only one ram is being offered up,⁹ but what could be said according to the view that on the Day of Atonement too, two rams were to be offered up?¹⁰ For it has been taught: Rabbi¹¹ said, The ram mentioned here [in Leviticus] is the same as the one mentioned in the Book of Numbers;¹² R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon said: Two rams are here [involved], the one mentioned here and the other mentioned in the Book of Numbers!¹³ — It may be in accord even with the opinion of R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon. Because there¹⁴ one [of the rams] is offered up in fulfilment of the regular sacrifices for that day, and the other as one of the additional sacrifices, whereas in the case of Pentecost both are the regular sacrifices of that day.¹⁵ [Perhaps] say that [the reference is to] New Year¹⁶ which should also imply the removal of the priest for seven days preceding a one-day service? — R. Abbahu said, One may infer a case in which the priest offers up an ox and a ram from his own means¹⁷ from another case in which he offers up an ox and a ram from¹⁸ his own means, that excludes Pentecost¹⁹ and Rosh hashanah²⁰ on which both are offered up from public [congregational] funds. This would be right according to the opinion which holds that the words *kah leka*²¹ [‘take thee’] mean ‘take from thy own means’ and

(1) This is a mnemonical acrostic for: P (payyis allotment, by counting, of the work to be done by the priests in the sanctuary. No such counting took place during the Sukkoth festival, but it was the rule on Shemini ‘Azereth); Z (zeman — the blessing on the entrance of a festival referring to the return of the festive season. This benediction was repeated on the eve of Shemini ‘Azereth, thus constituting it an independent holy day); R (regel-festival with its own name); K (korban — having its own number of sacrifices); Sh (shir — song — Shemini ‘Azereth having its own psalm in the liturgy); B (berakah-blessing — on Shemini ‘Azereth a special prayer was offered up for the life of the king.) V. R.H. 4b. In all these respects Shemini ‘Azereth might be considered an independent festival.

(2) dj means (Jastrow): To turn, to celebrate an anniversary, to observe a festival, to make a periodical pilgrimage, to offer the pilgrim's festive sacrifice.

(3) The conclusion, i.e. , Shemini ‘Azereth, v. Hag. 17a.

(4) ‘Azereth means detention, gathering, concluding feast. ‘Azereth in general designates ‘Azereth Pesah’, i.e., Shabuoth (the Feast of Weeks, Pentecost) to be distinguished from Shemini ‘Azereth, the concluding festival of Sukkoth.

(8) Lev. XXIII, 18.

(9) The question being whether the ram demanded in Lev. XVI, 5 is identical with the one mentioned in Num. XXIX, 8, or whether two different sacrifices are implied.

(10) That would put the Day of Atonement into the same class as Pentecost and would thus preclude inference from the eighth day of the consecration of the priest for the former.

(14) On the Day of Atonement, Lev. XVI,3 does not call the ram a ‘musaf’ or ‘additional’ sacrifice, as in all other cases, where the phrase ‘apart from the morning burnt-offering’ occurs, to indicate that the sacrifice in question is ‘apart’ or ‘additional’ as throughout Num. XXVIII and XXIX.

'aseh leka¹ ['make thee'] mean 'make from thy own means', but what could be said [in the argument above] according to the opinion [that kah leka² means 'take for thyself] from the community funds', for we have been taught:³ The expression 'kah leka' means 'mi-sheleka [from thy own] and 'aseh leka means mi-sheleka [taken from thy own funds], but we-yikehu eleka⁴ means [they shall take for them] from community funds; these are the words of R. Josiah; R. Jonathan said, Both 'kah leka' and 'we-yikehu eleka' mean from community funds, and what is intimated by saying 'kah leka' [take thee]? As it were,⁵ 'I prefer your own [private means expended on this work] to the community's [expenditure]'. (Abba Hanan said in the name of R. Eleazar: One verse reads, Make thee an ark of wood,⁶ and another,⁷ And they shall make an ark of acacia-wood,⁸ how is that?⁹ Here it refers to a time when Israel act in accordance with His will,¹⁰ there it deals with a time when they do not act in accordance with His will) — They¹¹ are disputing only as to the general meaning [of the word 'leka'] in connection with the command to 'take' or to 'do', as e.g., Take thou also unto thee the chief spices,¹² or Make thee two trumpets of silver,¹³ but in the above cases¹⁴ it is clearly indicated in the text that it is from thine own.¹⁵ For consider in [the portion of the Bible dealing with the] consecration of the priests, it is written: And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying: Take ye a he-goat for a sin-offering,¹⁶ why then the passage: And he said to Aaron: Take thee a bull-calf for a sin-offering?¹⁷ Conclude from this 'kah leka' means 'mi-sheleka', from your own. [Similarly] in connection with the Day of Atonement it reads: Herewith shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a young bullock for a sin-offering,¹⁸ etc. Why then the passage, And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel¹⁹ and And Aaron shall present the bullock of the sin-offering which is lo [for himself]?²⁰ Conclude from this that the word 'lo' implies it is to be brought from his own means.

R. Ashi²¹ said: It is legitimate to infer a case in which an ox is offered up as sin-offering and a ram as burnt-offering²² from another case in which an ox is offered up as sin-offering and a ram as a burnt-offering;²³ this excludes from analogy New Year²⁴ and Pentecost,²⁵ [as] in both cases both animals are offered up as burnt-offerings only.

Rabina said: One may infer a service performed by the high priest²⁶ from another service performed by the high priest²⁷ that excludes [the occasions mentioned] in all the questions [raised], because the services mentioned therein are not performed by the high priest.²⁸ Others have this version of Rabina's reply: One may infer [certain rules for] a service held for the first time from a service held for the first time. This excludes all the other cases [referred to above], because none of them took place for the first time. What does this 'first time' mean? — Does it mean that the high priest had first performed service there?²⁹ That would be [the argument of Rabina's in] the first version. No, it means the first service of its kind held in its place, which may fitly be inferred from another service³⁰ held for the first time in its place. When R. Dimi came³¹ [from Palestine], he said: R. Johanan taught one thing, R. Joshua b. Levi two. R. Johanan taught one thing the words 'la'asoth', 'lekapper'³² refer to the service of the Day of Atonement. R. Joshua b. Levi taught two things: 'la'asoth' means the ceremony of the [red] heifer, 'lekapper' refers to the service of the Day of Atonement. How could [you say that] R. Johanan taught [only] one thing? Have we not learnt in our Mishnah: SEVEN DAYS BEFORE THE DAY OF ATONEMENT, and in another Seven days before the burning of the heifer?³³ — That³⁴ is only a special provision.³⁵ But did not R. Minyumi b. Hilkiyah in the name of R. Mahsiah b. Idi, [and the latter] in the name of R. Johanan report the [interpretation of the text], 'As hath been done this day, so hath the Lord commanded la'asoth [to do] lekapper 'alekem [to make atonement for you]'. 'La'asoth' refers to the ceremony of the heifer and 'lekapper' to the service of the Day of Atonement?³⁶ This interpretation was that of his teacher.³⁷ For when Rabina came [from Palestine]³⁸ he said: R. Johanan reported in the name of R. Ishmael that 'la'asoth' referred to the ceremony of the heifer, and 'lekapper' to the work of the Day of Atonement.

Said Resh Lakish to R. Johanan: Whence do you infer this interpretation? From the Consecration Service?³⁹ Hence, just as with the Consecration Service, the omission of any prescribed form would render the service invalid [would you say that] here too⁴⁰ the omission of anything prescribed [by inference from congruity of text] for that service, would render it invalid? And if you said: Yes, indeed, surely we learnt: ANOTHER PRIEST IS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS PLACE, not another priest is removed from his house!⁴¹ And if you would say MATHKININ [one prepares] and MAFRISHIN [one removes] mean the same thing, then the Mishnah ought to use in both passages either mathkinin or mafrishin!⁴² — [R. Johanan] said to him: And whence do you, Sir, infer it?⁴³ — He answered: From [the account concerning] Sinai. For the Scriptural text reads, And the glory of the Lord abode upon Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered him⁴⁴ six days, and He called unto Moses on the seventh day.⁴⁵ Now consider: Since it is written 'and He called unto Moses on the seventh day', what do the 'six days' mean? They establish a rule⁴⁶ for anyone who enters the camp of the Shechinah⁴⁷ that he must remove himself from his house for six days. But we have learnt SEVEN?⁴⁸ — Our Mishnah conforms to the opinion of R. Judah b. Bathyra who considers the possibility of the high priest's

(30) The service of the Day of Atonement took place in the Holy of Holies, which had never been entered before the first service on the first Day of Atonement, just as the Consecration Service included the first sacrifice on the outer altar, in priestly garments.

(40) With regard to the ceremony of the red heifer.

(41) So that, if the high priest were prevented from officiating the substitute priest would perform the service without the necessary previous separation, which would render his service invalid and the ceremony unprovided with a priest.

(42) Since the Mishnah deliberately uses two terms, their meaning must be different, hence Resh Lakish's question remains.

(43) The obligation to remove the priest from his house.

becoming ritually impure through family contact.¹ R. Johanan said to Resh Lakish: It is right according to me who infer² from the Consecration; for this agrees with what we are taught: 'On both of them [the Priests]³ we sprinkle throughout the seven days[water] from all the sin-offerings⁴ that were there';⁵ but according to you who infer from Sinai, was there any sprinkling done on Sinai? — But⁶ according to your own reasoning, it would not be right either, for in the consecration [ceremony the sprinkling was done with] blood, whereas here with water? — That⁷ is no difficulty. For R. Hiyya taught: 'The water takes the place of blood', but according to you, was there any sprinkling on Sinai? — He answered: It was a mere additional provision.⁸

We have a teaching in accord with R. Johanan,⁹ and we have a teaching in accord with Resh Lakish.¹⁰ 'In accord with R. Johanan we have a teaching'; Scripture reads: Herewith [bezoth] shall Aaron come into the holy place,¹¹ i.e., with that mentioned in that section, the section of the Consecration. And what is mentioned in the section about the Consecration? Aaron was removed for seven days and then officiated for one day, and Moses handed over to him¹² throughout the seven days to train him in this service. Also for the future the high priest is to be removed for seven days and to officiate for one day, and two scholars of the disciples of Moses¹³ [this excludes Sadducees]¹⁴ transmitted to him throughout the seven days to train him in the service. Hence [the Rabbis] ruled that seven days before the Day of Atonement the high priest was removed from his house to the cell of the counsellors. And just as the high priest was removed, so was the priest burning the heifer removed to the cell lying in the north-eastern corner before the Temple and each of them was throughout the seven days sprinkled [with water] from all the sin-offerings that were there. And if you should ask: But during the Consecration the sprinkling was done with blood and here water, [remember] that the water takes the place of the blood. And it further says: 'As hath been done this day so the Lord hath commanded la'asoth [to do], lekapper [to make atonement] for you'.¹⁵ 'La'asoth' refers to the ceremony of the heifer, 'lekapper' means the service of the Day of Atonement.¹⁶ But the word 'be-zoth' is required for the verse itself,¹⁷ i.e., with a young bullock for a sin-offering and a ram for a burnt-offering? — Answer:¹⁸ If 'be-zoth' were meant to refer only to the sacrifices, the text should have said ba-zeh [with this] or ba-eleh [with these], why [was] 'be-zoth' [chosen]? So that you may learn both things from it.¹⁹ Why was it necessary to cite the other verse?²⁰ — You might have said only the first Day of Atonement requires that the high priest be removed at the Consecration, but on all future Days of Atonement no such removal is necessary; or [you might say] only the first²¹ high priest needed such removal but all future high priests do not require it; come and hear:²² 'As hath been done this day etc.'²³

'We have a teaching in accord with Resh Lakish': Moses went up in a cloud, was covered by the cloud, and was sanctified by the cloud in order that he might receive the Torah for Israel in sanctity, as it is written: And the glory of the Lord abode upon Mount Sinai,²⁴ this took place after the Ten Commandments, which were at the beginning of the forty days,²⁵ this is the view of R. Jose the Galilean. R. Akiba said [with reference to] ‘And the glory of the Lord abode’ from the beginning of the [third] month, and the cloud wa-yekasehu [covered it],²⁶ i.e., the mountain,²⁷

 - (19) Zoth is feminine, the words for bullock and ram are masc., hence ba-zeh or ba-eleh would have been more correct. The choice of be-zoth indicates that something else is implied.
 - (20) The citing of an additional verse, where the first or first ones seemed to convey sufficient information, is an indication that erroneous inference might be made, which the additional verse, through its information, prevents.

 - (26) Wa-yekasehu may be translated ‘covered him’ or ‘covered it’, Moses or the mountain, the Hebrew word har (mountain) being also masculine.
 - (27) Moses came down to speak to Israel (Ex. XIX, 3f), hence it would be wrong to say that the cloud covered him six days before the Revelation.

then ‘He called unto Moses on the seventh day’. Moses and all Israel were standing there,¹ but the purpose of Scripture was to honour Moses.² R. Nathan says: The purpose of Scripture was that he [Moses] might be purged of all food and drink in his bowels so as to make him equal to the ministering angels.³ R. Mattiah b. Heresh⁴ says, The purpose of Scripture here was to inspire him with awe, so that the Torah be given⁵ with awe, with dread, with trembling, as it is said: Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling.⁶ What is the meaning of 'And rejoice with trembling'?⁷ — R. Adda b. Mattena says in the name of Rab: Where there will be joy, there shall be trembling.⁸

In what do R. Jose the Galilean and R. Akiba differ? — In the controversy of these Tannaim. For we have been taught:⁹ On the sixth day of the month¹⁰ was the Torah given to Israel. R. Jose says on the seventh. He who says that the Torah was given on the sixth day holds that on the sixth it was given and on the seventh Moses ascended the mountain;¹¹ he who holds that the Torah was given on the seventh assumes that on the seventh both the Torah was given and Moses ascended, as it is written, And He called unto Moses on the seventh day.¹² Now R. Jose the Galilean is of the same opinion as the first Tanna,¹³ who held that the Torah was given on the sixth of the month, therefore this¹⁴ happened after the giving of the Ten Commandments: 'The glory of the Lord abode on mount Sinai and the cloud covered him six days' 'him' meaning Moses- 'And He called unto Moses on the seventh day' to receive the remainder of the Torah.¹⁵ For if the thought should come to you that 'And the glory of the Lord abode' from the New Moon [of Sivan], so that 'And the cloud covered him' referred to the mountain, and 'The Lord called unto Moses on the seventh day' to receive the Ten Commandments, surely they had received the Torah on the sixth day already and also the cloud had departed on the sixth day! — R. Akiba, however, held with R. Jose that the Torah was given to Israel on the seventh.¹⁶ Quite in accord with R. Akiba's teaching is the statement¹⁷ that the Tablets were broken on the seventeenth of Tammuz, for the twenty-four days of Sivan¹⁸ and the sixteen of Tammuz make up the forty days he was on the mountain, and on the seventeenth of Tammuz he went down and came¹⁹ to break the Tablets. But according to R. Jose the Galilean who holds that there were six days of the separation²⁰ in addition to forty days [spent] on the mountain, the Tablets could not have been broken before the twenty-third of Tammuz? — R. Jose the Galilean will answer you: The six days of the separation are included in the forty days on the mountain.

The Master said: "'And He called Moses", whilst Moses and all Israel were standing' there'. This interpretation supports the view of R. Eleazar, for R. Eleazar said: 'And He called unto Moses' whilst Moses and all Israel were standing there; the only purpose of Scripture is to do honour to Moses. They²¹ raised the following objection: [He heard the voice speaking] elaw [unto him] not lo [to him];²² hence we know that Moses heard, but all Israel did not hear?²³ - This is no difficulty. The one passage speaks of Sinai, the other of the tent of meeting.²⁴ Or, you might say, the one statement refers to the call, the other to the speech.²⁵ R. Zerika asked a question concerning the contradiction of scriptural passages in the presence of R. Eleazar, or, according to another version, he asked the question in the name of R. Eleazar. One passage reads: And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of meeting because the cloud abode thereon,²⁶ whereas another verse says: And Moses entered into the midst of the cloud?²⁷ It teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, took hold of Moses and brought him into the cloud. The school of R. Ishmael taught: Here²⁸ the word be-thok [in the midst] appears and it also appears elsewhere: And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea,²⁹ just as there [the word be-thok] implies a path, as it is written: And the waters were a wall³⁰ unto them,²⁹ so here too there was a path, [for Moses through the cloud].

And the Lord called unto Moses, and spoke unto him;³¹ why does Scripture mention the call before the speech? — The Torah teaches us good manners: a man should not address his neighbour without having first called him. This supports the view of R. Hanina, for R. Hanina said: No man shall speak to his neighbour unless he calls him first to speak to him. Rabbah said: Whence do we know that if a man had said something to his neighbour the latter must not spread the news without the informant's telling him 'Go and say it'? From the scriptural text: The Lord spoke to him out of the tent of meeting, lemor [saying] .³² At any rate it is to be inferred³³ that both hold that the omission of any detail mentioned in connection with the priest's Consecration renders the ceremony invalid, for it was said: With regard to the ceremony of Consecration R. Johanan and R. Hanina are disputing; one says: The omission of any form prescribed in connection with the ceremony renders it invalid, whilst the other holds only such matter as is indispensable on any future occasion is indispensable now, whereas such detail as is dispensable in future generations, is dispensable even the first time. One may conclude that it is R. Johanan who holds that the omission of any detail whatsoever that is mentioned in connection with the Consecration ceremony renders such ceremony invalid, because R. Simeon b. Lakish said to R. Johanan³⁴ [in the course of the argument]: 'And just as with the ceremony of Consecration the omission of any prescribed detail renders the ceremony invalid. And R. Johanan did not retort at all'. That proof is conclusive.³⁵

What is the [practical] difference between the opinions?

- (1) Moses did not ascend the mountain nor did he separate from his circle till after the Revelation.
 - (2) All Israel were present, why then does Scripture report that the word of God came to Moses alone? — The answer is: To show him special regard.
 - (3) R. Nathan is of the opinion of R. Jose the Galilean that the call to Moses referred to in the verses was for separation after the Revelation, yet this offers no basis for necessitating separation before entering into the Sanctuary, as the object of Moses' separation was that he might be like the ministering angels.
 - (4) He too shares the opinion of R. Jose the Galilean.
 - (5) To Moses and through him to Israel.
 - (6) Ps. II, 11.
 - (7) The terms seem contradictory.
 - (8) The Torah is a source of joy. The precepts of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart, Ps. XIX, 9, cited by Rashi. But there shall also be awe, reverence for the numen, the Lord, the Lawgiver. Tosaf. cites I Chron. XVI, 27 Strength and gladness are in His Place.
 - (9) Shah. 86b.
 - (10) Of Sivan, the first day of Shabuoth.
 - (11) Sinai.
 - (12) Ex. XXIV, 16.
 - (13) The anonymous Tanna of the Baraitha
 - (14) Moses' ascent on the mount.
 - (15) The other laws (beside the Ten Commandments) and the Oral Law.
 - (16) So that the 'Seventh day' refers to the seventh day on which the Torah was given.
 - (17) V. Ta'an. 26a.

- (18) From the seventh to the thirtieth.
- (19) Either 'came to the camp of Israel, saw the dances and broke' or paraphrastic for 'broke'.
- (20) After the Revelation.
- (21) The teachers (students) in the academy.
- (22) The passage, Num. VII, 89 reads: Moses . . . heard the voice speaking elaw (to him, which is the longer form, lo being the normal one) from above the ark-cover etc. The use, in this passage, of the longer form, seemed to suggest a closer or exclusive communication. According to Hayyug, quoted Otzar ha-Geonim VI, 1, n. 4, there is a difference of meaning derivable in accord with grammatical principles, in 'lo' and 'elaw' respectively.
- (23) So that all Israel, indeed, did not hear God's message. If so, then the only purpose of the statement ' . . . Scripture is to honour Moses' is unjustified. For Scripture does not change the fact. It was Moses alone whom the message reached.
- (24) In the tent of meeting only Moses could hear the voice. On Mount Sinai all Israel heard it, but to honour Moses, Scripture mentions him only as having done so.
- (25) The call proper, the honour of the individual call, was vouchsafed to Moses alone, the speech following was heard by all.
- (26) Ex. XL, 35.
- (27) Ibid. XXIV, 18.
- (28) The apparent contradiction is removed by the suggestion that he entered the cloud on this occasion with divine help.
- (29) Ex. XIV, 22.
- (30) The water being piled up like a wall, Israel walked along a path. The inference is from similarity of expression.
- (31) Lev. I, 1.
- (32) Lemor here is taken to mean 'to say it (to others)', or else the next few words are illustratively, not logically implied: Speak (unto the children of Israel).
- (33) From Resh Lakish's question to R. Johanan: '... just as with the Consecration service the omission of any prescribed form would render the service invalid' and R. Johanan's tacit acceptance of this view, supra 3b.
- (34) Supra 3b.
- (35) Had he held a different view, he would surely not have permitted his opponent's statement to go unchallenged.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 5a

R. Joseph says the putting¹ of the hands [upon the head of the sacrifice] is the difference. According to the one who holds that the omission of any detail renders the ceremony invalid, [failure] to lay the hand upon the head of the sacrifice would render the ceremony invalid. According to him who holds that only the omission of what is indispensable in the future renders the ceremony invalid, [omission of] the putting of the hand on the animal's head did not render the ceremony invalid. Whence do we know that in the future [the omission of] the putting of the hands [on the animal's head] is not indispensable? - For it has been taught: And he shall lay his hand . . . and it shall be accepted for him [to make atonement for him].² Does the laying on of the hand make atonement for one? Does not atonement come through the blood, as it is said: For it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life!³ Why, then, is it written: 'And he shall lay his hand on . . . and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him'? To say that if he performed the laying on of the hands as an unimportant part⁴ of the commandment, Scripture would account it to him as if he had not obtained proper atonement.⁵ R. Nahman b. Isaac said:

The waving⁶ is the difference. According to him who holds whatever detail is prescribed for the ceremony is indispensable, the waving is indispensable; according to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all the future is indispensable now, the waving is not indispensable. Whence do we know that for all time to come the waving is not indispensable? — For we have been taught:⁷ To be waved, to make atonement for him.⁸ Does the waving make atonement? Is it not the blood which makes atonement, as it is written, ‘For it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life’? Then why does Scripture say, ‘To be waved, to make atonement for him’? To say that if he treats the waving as an unimportant part of the ceremony, Scripture accounts it to him as if he had not obtained proper atonement.

R. Papa said: The separation for seven days is the [practical] difference between the two opinions. According to the opinion that whatsoever is prescribed for the ceremony is indispensable, the separation, too, is indispensable; according to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all time to come is indispensable now, the separation is not indispensable. Whence do we know that the separation is not indispensable for all time to come? Because the Mishnah reads, [another priest] IS MADE READY FOR HIM, instead of is ‘separated for him’.⁹ Rabina said: The difference lies in the increase [in the number of garments]¹⁰ and of the anointments¹¹ necessary during the seven days. According to the opinion that whatever is prescribed in connection therewith is indispensable, the increase [in the number of garments] and anointments during the seven days, too, is indispensable. According to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all time to come, is indispensable now, these things too are not indispensable. Whence do we know that they are not indispensable for all time to come? — For it was taught: And the priest who shall be anointed and who shall be consecrated to be priest in his father's stead, shall make the atonement.¹² What does the passage come to teach?¹³ From the text: Seven days shall the son that is priest in his stead put them on [etc.],¹⁴ I would know that a priest who had put on the required larger number of garments and who had been anointed on each of the seven days¹⁵ was permitted to [‘minister in the holy place’]¹⁶ at the Consecration. Whence would I know that if he had put on the larger number of garments for but one day, and had been anointed on each of the seven days; or, if he had been anointed but one day, but has put on the larger number of garments for seven days, [he would also be permitted]? To convey that teaching, Scripture says, ‘Who shall be anointed and who shall be consecrated’, that means anointed and consecrated in whatever way.¹⁷ We have now found evidence that the larger number of garments is necessary in the first instance for the seven days. Whence do we know that anointment on each of the seven days is in the first instance required? You may infer that either from the fact that a special statement of the Torah was necessary to exclude it; or, if you wish, from the scriptural text itself, And the holy garments of Aaron shall be for his sons after him, to be anointed in them, and to be consecrated in them.¹⁸ In this passage the anointing and the donning of the larger number of garments are put on the same level. Hence, just as the donning of the larger number of garments is required for the seven days, so is the anointing obligatory for the seven days.

What is the reason of the man who holds that the forms prescribed for the ceremonies are indispensable?— R. Isaac b. Bisna said: Scripture reads And kaka [thus] shalt thou do to Aaron and his sons, — ‘thus means indispensableness.’¹⁹

Technically the ceremony had achieved its purpose, because essentially it is the blood which makes atonement, but since laying the hands on the animal's head is part of the ceremony (although not essential to it) and he has been negligent about it, he has obtained atonement for himself, but has not attained re-atonement with his creator, whose command he has treated slightly.

form prescribed in this context . Whence do we know that forms not prescribed¹ here in this context are also indispensable? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We infer that from [the fact that in both contexts the same word] petah [is used].² R. Mesharsheya said: And keep the charge of the Lord³ indicates the indispensableness [of the prescribed forms]. R. Ashi said: For so am I commanded⁴ indicates indispensableness.

Our Rabbis taught:⁵ For so am I commanded,⁶ As I commanded,⁷ As the Lord commanded.⁸ [Of these passages], 'For so am I commanded' that they eat⁹ it whilst in mourning; 'As I commanded' [this] he said to them at the time¹⁰ of the occurrence;¹¹ 'As the Lord commanded', and not on my own authority.

R. Jose b. Hanina said: Breeches are not mentioned in the section.¹² But when it says, And this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister,¹³ it includes the breeches and the tenth part of an ephah.¹⁴ It may rightly be said that breeches are included in the general term 'garments',¹⁵ but whence do we know about the tenth of an ephah? — [This we know] by inferring [the meaning of the word] zeh [used here]¹⁶ from zeh [in the verse], Zeh [this] is the offering of Aaron and his sons which they shall offer unto the Lord . . . the tenth part of an ephah.¹⁷

R. Johanan in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai said: Whence do we know that also the reading of the portion¹⁸ was indispensable? To teach us that it is said, This is the dabar [thing] which the Lord has commanded to be done,¹⁹ i.e., the speaking²⁰ thereof is indispensable. — In what order did he put the garments on them? — What is past, is past!²¹ Rather, [the question is] in what order will he put the garments on them in the future?²² — In the future, too,²³ when Aaron and his sons will come, Moses will come with them. But [the question is] how did he put the clothes on them [if we are] to understand the scriptural account?²⁴ -The sons of R. Hiyya and R. Johanan held different opinions about it. One said: Aaron was first clothed and afterwards his sons; whilst the other said: Aaron and his sons were clothed simultaneously. Said Abaye: With regard to the tunic and the mitre none disputes the fact that Aaron came first and his sons afterwards,²⁵ for both in the [text containing] the command and [the account of the] actual performance Aaron is mentioned first. What they are disputing is [the order of] the girdle.²⁶ He who says Aaron [came first] and then his sons [is of this opinion] because it is written, And he girded him with the girdle,²⁷ and only after this is it written, And he girded them with a girdle,²⁸ whereas he who holds that the girding took place without any interruption, [is of this opinion] because It is written, And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons.²⁹ According to the opinion that Aaron and his sons were girded at the same time, does not Scripture first say, 'And he girded him with a girdle' and then only later is it written, 'And he girded them with a girdle'?³⁰ —

(1) In Ex. XXIX, 5, there are Instructions relative to the Consecration, such as putting on Aaron the tunic, the robe of the ephod and the ephod, the breastplate, the mitre on his head, the holy crown on the mitre. These are not mentioned in the ceremony described in Lev. VIII.

(18) The section on the Consecration. It was to be read as part of the ceremony.

(19) Lev. VIII, 5' Dabar may mean both 'word' and 'thing'. No further reference to the ceremony being necessary, the suggestion is made that dabar, the word, the reading of the word is commanded. Support may be found in the fact that the preceding verse speaks of The congregation assembled at the door of the tent of meeting, such 'assembly' for the purpose of hearing scriptural reading being expressly enjoined in Deut. XXXI, 28 and esp. at the Sukkoth festival in the year of release.

(23) There is no need for speculation. Moses will be in charge and he knows the law.

(24) There are apparent contradictions between the command as given in Ex. XXIX and the account of the ceremony in Lev. VIII respectively. In Ex. XXIX, 9: And thou shalt gird them with a girdle, Aaron and his sons intimates that this girding of father and sons took place in close succession to one another. I.e., he girded Aaron only after he had first clothed the sons with the other garments apart from the girdle, so that the girding of Aaron and his sons were, so to speak, at the same time (v. infra); whereas in Lev. VIII, 7: And girded him with the girdle and clothed him with the robe . . . and placed the breastplate upon him and set the mitre upon his head to be followed by ibid. v. 13: And Moses brought Aaron's sons and clothed them with tunics and girded them with girdles shows the girding of Aaron took place before the clothing of the sons had even begun.

(25) [Moses clothed Aaron with the tunic and the mitre before he began to clothe the sons with these garments. These would also include the breeches, as these were always to come first, v. infra 23b.]

He will tell you: This is to teach you that the girdle of the high priest was not the same [material] as that of the average priest.¹ According to the opinion that Aaron was girded and afterwards his sons,² does not Scripture say, 'And thou shalt gird them with a girdle'?- He will tell you this³ informs us that the girdle of the high priest was of the same [material] as the average priest. Was it then necessary to state: 'And he girded him with a girdle' and [then] 'And he girded them'? From that we infer that Aaron came first and then his sons. But how could it have been possible simultaneously?⁴ — This only means to indicate that [Aaron] came first.⁵

THE HIGH PRIEST WAS REMOVED. Why was he removed?[You ask] why was he removed!⁶ [Is it not] as you have said, either according to the derivation of R. Johanan, or to that of Resh Lakish? — No, this is⁷ the question: Why was he separated from his house? — It was taught: R. Judah b. Bathyra said: Let his wife be found under doubt of being a menstruant and he have congress with her.⁸ Do we speak of wicked people?⁹ — Rather, perhaps he will have congress with his wife and she will then be found to be doubtfully a menstruant.¹⁰ [The Rabbis] were discussing the decision before R. Hisda: According to whom was it made?-Obviously according to R. Akiba, who said: A menstruant makes him who had congress with her impure

[retrospectively].¹¹ For, according to the Rabbis, behold they say: A menstruant does not render impure him who had congress with her [retrospectively]. R. Hisda said to them: It may be in accord even with the Rabbis. For they conflict with R. Akiba only in the case in which [the blood stains are found] much later¹² [than the congress], but, [if they be found] very soon afterwards,¹³ they agree with him. R. Zera said: Hence it is evident that to one who had congress with a menstruant do not apply the same restrictions as do to the menstruant herself and he may bathe [for purification] in day time.¹⁴ For, if you were to say that to one who had congress with a menstruant applied the same laws that apply to her, when could he bathe? Only at night. How could he, then, officiate on the morrow,¹⁵ since he would have to await sunset for becoming ritually pure? Hence it must be [clear] that one who had intercourse with a menstruant is not subject to the same restrictions as the menstruant herself. Said R. Shimi of Nehardea: You might even say [that the above decision is in accord with the view] that one who has intercourse with a menstruant is like the menstruant, yet [would the high priest be able to officiate at the service] for we would separate him from his house an hour before sunset.¹⁶ An objection was raised: All those who are obliged to take the ritual bath must take the bath at night.¹⁷ A menstruant and a woman after confinement immerse during the day. A menstruant, then, only, but not one who had intercourse with her?¹⁸ — [No, it means], A menstruant and all whom one may include in that term.¹⁹ Another objection was raised: One to whom pollution has happened is like one who touched an unclean [dead] reptile. One who had intercourse with a menstruating woman is like one who was made unclean through a corpse.²⁰ Is it not concerning the bath?²¹ — No, it is concerning [the conditions of] their uncleanness.²² But [surely] concerning their uncleanness²³ there are direct statements in Scripture! In the first case it is written that it lasts for seven days,²⁴ and in the second case also the seven days' duration is prescribed.²⁵

(1) The girdle as described in Ex. XXXIX, 29 was to be made of fine twined linen, and blue and purple and scarlet, the work of the weaver in colours. The separate mention made of Aaron's girdle and that of his sons serves to indicate that they were not alike and that this description referred to the girdle of the high priest alone: the girdle of other priests was made of lesser material.

(2) From which one may infer that they are to be girded simultaneously, 'them', i.e., together.

(3) The answer is: The emphasis is not on the time or interval, but on the fact that father and son shall be girded with the same girdle, no distinction being allowed between the girdles worn by high priest and ordinary priest respectively.

(4) Taking the word simultaneously literally (cf. p. 21, n. 13), the question is, How could Moses have girded five men simultaneously?

(5) The Torah does not command any simultaneity. Aaron is mentioned in one passage and his sons in another, in order to emphasize that he must come first—whether in the clothing of the garments or in the girding.

(6) The first question was misunderstood. The answer implies that the source of the commandment to remove the priest was being sought.

(7) What was really intended was the practical motive of the enactment.

(8) Tosef. Yoma I.

(9) No good Jew (v. Sheb. 18b; Shulhan Aruk, Yoreh Deah 184, 2) would approach his wife unless her ritual purity were beyond doubt, how much less a high priest. Hence such contingency is unthinkable. Dealing with high priests, are we dealing with wicked men?

(10) Bloodstains may be found on the bed after congress and the doubt would arise, whether the discharge occurred before or after congress. Such a doubt would render her husband impure for seven days and ritually unfit to enter the sanctuary.

(11) [For twenty-four hours, so that should the stain be found after congress, the husband would be considered unclean for seven days, v. Nid. 14a.]

(12) Lit., 'after after', v. next note.

(13) [Lit., 'one after' this interval is defined in Nid. 12b as time enough to get down from the bed and rinse her face (euphemistically).]

(14) A menstruant is not permitted to bathe during the seventh day of her menstrual impurity, but only at night, after sunset, the beginning of the eighth day. But he who had congress with her would be permitted to bathe during the seventh day, without having to await the sunset of the seventh day. Hence he needs to be separated for but seven days. And if on the day of the separation he had congress and the doubt of her being a menstruant arose, he would count from the day of the separation until the day before the Day of Atonement, when he would take the bath during the day, await the sunset, and then be fit to enter the sanctuary on the Day of Atonement (Rashi).

(15) He would ritually be impure at the night of the Day of Atonement, hence there would have been no sunset before the Day of Atonement when he was pure and he would be unfit to officiate on the following day; thus the whole separation would be futile.

(16) That is, on the even before the eighth day before the Day of Atonement. One hour is a very short period and unimportant, hence the separation would still be called 'one of seven days'. He could bathe on the evening before the eve of the Day of Atonement (the seventh day after having become ritually impure) and be fit to officiate on the Day of Atonement, having awaited the sunset on the day before his bath.

(17) Meg. 20a, based on Num. XIX, 19, for the law that all may bathe during the day: And on the seventh day he shall purify him and bathe himself in water and be clean at even. — That a menstruant must not bathe before the night of the seventh day is inferred from Lev. XV,19: And if a woman have an issue, she shall be in her impurity seven days. A woman after confinement is compared to a menstruant in Lev. XII, 2: If a woman be delivered . . . , then she shall be unclean for seven days; as in the days of the impurity of her sickness shall she be unclean.; v. infra 88a (18) Here would be a Tannaitic text invalidating an Amora's inference.

(19) Since the menstruant by contact communicates her impurity, it is logical to assume that the conditions of purification would be identical. Hence the implicit statement is sufficient.

(20) Zab. V, 11.

(21) That the bath could be taken in day-time.

(22) One to whom defilement has happened is like one who touched a dead reptile in that both become clean in the evening, and are unclean in the first degree of uncleanness; and he who had intercourse with a menstruant is afflicted with uncleanness for seven days and is one of the original causes of uncleanness like him who was made unclean through a corpse.

(23) I.e., that of one who has intercourse with a menstruant.

(24) Lev. XV, 24. Her impurity be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days.

(25) Num. XIX, 11: He that toucheth the dead, even any man's dead body, shall be unclean seven days.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 6b

Must one not hence assume that the comparison concerns their bath?¹ No, indeed it refers only to [the conditions of] their uncleanness, and it was necessary to mention that only because of the latter clause [of that Mishnah, viz.,] that one who had intercourse with a menstruant is afflicted with a graver form of impurity than he [who has become unclean through a corpse] in that he causes uncleanness of couch and seat² [such uncleanness being of a lighter nature] so as to affect only foods and liquids.³

Come and hear:⁴ For R. Hiyya taught: A man or a woman afflicted with gonorrhoea or with leprosy, one who had intercourse with a menstruant, and one made unclean through a corpse, may take the bath during the day; a menstruant and a woman after confinement take their bath at night.⁵ This is [indeed] a refutation.⁶ Now whilst removing him from the [possible] impurity due to his house,⁷ remove him from the [possibility of] uncleanness through a corpse!⁸ R. Tahlifa, father of R. Huna, said in the name of Raba: This teaches that in the case of a community [the law of] corpse uncleanness is inoperative.⁹ Rabina said: You might also say that [the law of] corpse uncleanness is only suspended in case of a community,¹⁰ yet uncleanness due to contact with a corpse is infrequent,¹¹ whereas uncleanness due to marital life happens often. It has been said: As [to the law of] corpse-uncleanness R. Nahman said: It is inoperative in case of a community. R. Shesheth said: It is only suspended in case of an entire community. Whenever there are in the same priestly family-division¹² men, both clean and unclean ones, nobody disputes the fact that the clean ones do the service and the unclean ones forego it. The dispute concerns only the question as to whether one is obliged to make an endeavour to obtain, clean ones from another family-division. R. Nahman said: [The law of] corpse-uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, hence we need make no such effort. R. Shesheth says: That law is only suspended in case of a community and hence we must endeavour [to find clean priests for the service].

Some hold that even in a case in which there are both clean and unclean priests in the same family-division, R. Nahman insists that even the unclean ones may officiate

(1) Since a statement as to the duration of their uncleanness, from its express form in the Torah, seems superfluous. But such repetition is illogical and hence the interpretation that it applies to the bathing is justified which proves that he who has intercourse with the menstruant may immerse by day.

(2) [As many couches as are under him become unclean although they had not been in direct contact with him, which is not the case with one who suffers corpse-uncleanness. He defiles only those couches which his body actually touches.]

(3) All original causes of uncleanness (vtnuyv , uct) render, by touch, man and vessels unclean, whereas the derived first and second and third causes affect only foods and liquids, but neither human beings nor 'vessels' (apparel, etc.).

(4) This phrase in our case introduces a refutation.

(5) Infra 88a.

(6) This Tannaitic tradition is beyond the argument of any Amora. The refutation is complete.

(7) i.e., his wife.

(8) Keep away from him every company, lest someone die whilst in the same room with the high priest and render him unclean for seven days.

(9) Lit., 'permissible'.

(10) It is only suspended as by emergency and every effort is due to effect a proper service in its stead.

(11) Hence no precautionary measures, such as, so to speak, quarantining the priest, are necessary.

(12) Beth-Ab. V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 7a

because the Torah has rendered all levitical impurity caused through a corpse inoperative in case of a community.¹

R. Shesheth said: Whence do I know that?² Because it has been taught: If the priest was standing and offering up the sheaf of the 'Omer³ and it became unclean in his hands⁴ let him tell and another one is brought in its place. And if there be none but this, one would say to him: 'Be clever and keep quiet'.⁵ At all events he teaches, He should tell about it and another one is brought in its place!⁶ — R. Nahman said: I admit⁷ that where there is a remnant to be eaten [one would have to make an effort to procure a substitute sacrifice].⁸ Another objection was raised: If he was offering up the meal-offering of the bullocks or rams or sheep, and it became unclean in his hand, he should say so and one brings another one in its place; but if there be none [available] but the first, one tells him, 'Be wise and keep quiet'.⁹ Does this not refer to the bullocks, rams and sheep offered up on the feast [of Sukkoth]?¹⁰ — R. Nahman will answer you: No, the word 'bullock' refers to the bullock offered up in expiation of idolatry,¹¹ and although it is a community sacrifice, since there is no definite time fixed for it, one endeavours [to find a substitute offering]; the word 'rams' refers to the ram of Aaron¹² and although it is appointed to be sacrificed at a definite time, yet, since it is the offering of an individual, one endeavours [to procure a substitute]; the word 'lambs' refers to the lamb offered up together with the 'Omer-sheaf, of which¹³ there are remnants to be eaten. — Another objection was raised:¹⁴ If [sacrificial] blood became unclean and one sprinkled it, if by mistake, it is accepted;¹⁵ if wilfully, it is not accepted!¹⁶ — This teaching refers to the sacrifice of an individual. Come and hear: For what [mistake at sacrifice] does the priest's plate¹⁷ effect pardon?¹⁸ Concerning blood, flesh, fat, which become unclean, whether by mistake or wilfully, whether by accident or voluntarily,¹⁹ whether [the sacrifice] was offered up by an individual or by the entire community.²⁰ Now if it enter your mind that the law of uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, what need is there for [the priest's plate] to effect pardon?— R. Nahman will answer you: What has been taught about the plate's effecting pardon, refers only to the sacrifice of an individual. Or, if you like, one might say, it refers also to such community sacrifices for which no definite time has been set. — Another objection was raised:²⁰ [Touching on] And Aaron shall bear the iniquity committed in the holy things. Does he bear any kind of iniquity? If you mean the iniquity of piggul [— a sacrifice rejectable²¹ because of the intended disposal beyond the legal limits of space], concerning this Scripture has said already, It will not be accepted.²² If you mean the iniquity of nothar,²³ concerning that Scripture has said already, It shall not be imputed!²⁴

(1) The source is Num. IX, 10: If any person . . . shall be unclean by reason of a dead body or be in a journey afar off, he could postpone the offering up of his paschal lamb until the fourteenth of the month of Iyar. From this R. Shesheth infers that a person (an individual) is suspended (postpones the celebration of Passover), but not a community. Pes. 66b.

(2) That the law is only suspended, not inoperative.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) The rendering in our text seems defective. In Men. 72a it reads: If he was standing and offering up the flour-offering of the 'Omer and it became unclean, if there is another (available), he may say to him, — bring the other' in its place. And if not he says to him — 'Be clever and keep quiet'. The Tosef. reads: If he offered up the 'Omer and it became unclean he tells it and one brings another one in its place. If there be none besides the first, one says to him, 'Be clever and keep quiet about it'.

- (5) Since no substitute is available, silence is wisdom, for the priest's frontplate procures forgiveness for such mishap. V. infra.
- (6) Hence it is clear that even in the case of a community the law concerning corpse-uncleanness is but suspended, not rendered inoperative, which contradicts R. Nahman.
- (7) Although a communal sacrifice may indeed be offered up also in a state of congregational impurity, it may not be eaten in a state of impurity. V. Pes. 77b.
- (8) In the case of an 'Omer offering, where the priest takes a fistful, I admit that remnants to be consumed must be consumed in cleanliness.
- (9) This text is apparently taken from the Tosef. Men. II, yet in that text the word for 'rams' is omitted.
- (10) V. Num. XXIX, 12ff. These are community sacrifices, with a definite time appointed for them, yet the law of impurity is only suspended, for 'one brings another one in its place'.
- (11) The passage in Num. XV, 22f: And when ye shall err and not observe all these commandments, then it shall be, if done in error by the congregation . . . that all the congregation shall offer up one bullock for a burnt-offering, is assumed to refer to the main and most potent error: idolatry.
- (12) Offered up on the Day of Atonement.
- (13) The meal-offering brought with the 'Omer lamb, of which a fistful was taken by the priest and the remnants eaten.
- (14) V. Pes. 16b.
- (15) And the flesh thereof may be eaten.
- (16) [In so far that the flesh may not be eaten, though pardon is effected by means of the priest's plate (v. infra). This proves that the law of uncleanness does operate in the case of a community (which is apparently included in the general terms of this teaching).]
- (17) The source is Ex. XXVIII, 36-38: And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold and engrave upon it, like the engravings of a signet: HOLY OF THE LORD. And thou shalt put it on a thread of blue, and it shall be upon the mitre: upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be. And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead and Aaron shall bear the iniquity committed in the holy things which the children of Israel hallow.
- (18) Lit., 'Make (the sacrifice) acceptable.'
- (19) The word iumr (free-will) after shzn (wilfully) is tautologous, but it is a matter of Talmudic style, since xbt (accident) is mentioned, its opposite is also included, illustratively rather than logically.
- (20) Men. 25b.
- (21) Lev. VII, 18: And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings (which according to the preceding verse may be eaten only in the day that it is offered on and on the morrow) be at all eaten on the third day, it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an abhorred thing (piggul) and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity. The term piggul although generally denoting the intention in the mind of the officiating priest to dispose of the sacrifice beyond the proper time (vbnzk . uj) signifies here according to Rashi the intended disposal thereof beyond the legal limits of space, (unuenk . uj). V. Zeb. 28a. Tosaf. explains differently.
- (22) V. note 5.
- (23) [Lit., 'left over', generally portions of sacrifice left over beyond the legal time and here with the special meaning of the intended disposal of the sacrifice beyond the legal time, so Rashi.]
- (24) Lev. VII, 18.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 7b

Is it not hence that there is no iniquity which he bears except that concerning levitical uncleanness which has been declared inoperative in its general rule whenever a community sacrifice is involved, and the difficulty remains for R. Shesheth?¹ Concerning this matter the Tannaim differ,² for it has been taught:³ The front plate effects pardon⁴ whether it be on the high priest's forehead or not; these are the words of R. Simeon. R. Judah said: As long as it is on his forehead it effects pardon, if it is not on his forehead, it does not effect pardon. R. Simeon said to him: The case of the high priest on the Day of Atonement proves [your contention wrong], for the plate⁵ is then not on his forehead and yet it effects pardon — R. Judah answered him: Leave the case of the high priest on the Day of Atonement alone, for to him, because the community is concerned,⁶ the law of uncleanness has been rendered inoperative. Hence it is to be inferred that according to R. Simeon⁷ the law of uncleanness is only suspended in case of a community.⁸

Abaye said: If the front plate was broken there is no conflicting opinion, all agreeing that it effects no pardon. The dispute concerns only the case when it is hung up on a peg, R. Judah holding, And it shall be upon the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear,⁹ whilst R. Simeon bases his opinion on, And it shall be continually upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord.¹⁰ Now what does 'continually' mean? Shall I say that it shall indeed be continually on his forehead? How is that possible? Must he not enter the privy¹¹ occasionally, must he not sleep at times?¹¹ Rather must it all imply that [the front plate] 'continually'¹² effects pardon. According to R. Judah,¹³ does not Scripture say 'continually'?¹⁴ — That word implies that he should never dismiss it from his mind;¹⁵ this is in agreement with Rabbah son of Huna, for Rabbah son of Huna said: A man is obliged to touch his tefillin¹⁶ every hour. This may be learned by inference ad majus from the front plate.

(1) Who holds that that law is only suspended, not abrogated, where a community sacrifice is involved.

(2) So that R. Shesheth may have the benefit of the support of the Tanna whose opinion he held.

(3) Pes. 77a.

(4) For uncleanness of a sacrifice.

(5) On that day, when the high priest enters the Holy of Holies, he doffs his golden garments, including the front plate, and wears simple linen.

(6) He offers up the sacrifice to make atonement for the whole congregation.

(7) Who opposes the view of R. Judah.

(8) And it is the front plate that effects the pardon. This is the dispute of the Tannaim.

(9) Ex. XXVII, 38.

(10) Ibid., the pardon dependent upon the high priest's bearing the plate.

(11) Respect for the holy garment would necessitate its removal at that time.

(12) The evidence of the text seems to favour R. Simeon's interpretation.

(13) Not only does his own interpretation appear wrong when confronted with R. Simeon's argument.

(14) The word 'continually', which cannot be referred to the wearing of the plate, needs must be applied to its efficacy.

(15) Not the outward efficacy of the plate; the attitude of the high priest towards its function is what the Torah prescribes here.

(16) Originally the tefillin were worn all day. V. Shab. 130a.

If touching the front plate, on which the mention [of God] is but inscribed once,¹ the Torah prescribes ‘And it shall be continually upon his forehead,’ i.e., he shall not dismiss it from his mind, how much more does this apply to the tefillin which contain the mention [of God] many a time!² But according to R. Simeon who says the front plate effects pardon always, does not Scripture intimate [in the passage], ‘On the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear’ [that the effecting of pardon depends on his bearing the plate]?- No, that passage merely serves to indicate the place of the plate. Whence does R. Judah know that there is a definite place prescribed for the front plate?³ He infers that from ‘On his forehead’. Why should not R. Simeon infer it from the passage too?⁴ -Indeed he does. Then how does he interpret ‘On the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear’?- He will tell you: [It means to say that] whatsoever is fit to rest ‘on the forehead’, can effect pardon, whatsoever is not fit to rest on the forehead cannot effect it. This excludes a broken plate, which, indeed, cannot effect a pardon. Whence now does R. Judah infer the law concerning a broken plate? — He derives it from the [fact that instead of] ‘the forehead’ the text has ‘his forehead’.⁵ R. Simeon, however, does not attach any significance to [the words] ‘the forehead’, [and] ‘his forehead’.⁶

Are the above Tannaim disputing the principle of the following Tannaim? For it has been taught: On both of them⁷ throughout the seven days they would sprinkle from all the sin-offerings⁸ that were there;⁹ these are the words of R. Meir. R. Jose said: They sprinkled him only on the third and seventh days. R. Hanina, the deputy high priest¹⁰ said: The priest that was to burn the red heifer they sprinkled on each of the seven days, but the high priest that was to officiate on the Day of Atonement was sprinkled only on the third and seventh day.¹¹ Is it not that their difference rests on this principle: R. Meir holds the law concerning ritual uncleanness to be only suspended in the case of community, whilst R. Jose considers it inoperative in that case.¹² But how can you understand the case of a community?¹³ If R. Jose holds that the law concerning ritual uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, why is any sprinkling necessary? — Rather, you must assume that all agree that these Tannaim hold that law to be only suspended in case of a community and the point of issue here between them is this: R. Meir holds that we say that it is obligatory¹⁴ for the ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time,¹⁵ and R. Jose holds we do not say that it is obligatory for the ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time.¹⁵ But does R. Jose hold that we do not maintain that it is obligatory for the ritual immersion to take place in its proper time? Surely, it has been taught: One who has the name [of God] inscribed on his flesh must not bathe¹⁶ nor anoint himself nor stand at a place of filth. If he happens to have an obligatory ritual bath, he should place reed grass on that part and thus bathe.¹⁷ R. Jose says: He may go down to bathe as usual, provided he does not rub that part.¹⁸ And it is established that they are disputing the question as to whether it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to take place in its proper time; the first Tanna holding we do not say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time, and R. Jose affirming that we do say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper place.¹⁹ — Rather: Everybody agrees that those two Tannaim²⁰ both hold we do say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time, and their dispute above concerns the following principle: R. Meir is of the opinion that we compare²¹ the [law concerning] ‘sprinkling’ to [that concerning] the immersion²² and R. Jose holds we do not compare ‘sprinkling’ to immersion’. What about R. Hanina, the deputy high priest? If he compares ‘sprinkling’ to ‘immersion’, the high priest on the Day of Atonement too [should be sprinkled on every day]. And if he does not compare ‘sprinkling’ to ‘immersion’ the priest who burns the heifer [should] neither [be sprinkled on every day]? — In truth he does not make that comparison, the enactment²³ touching the priest who burns the heifer being a mere special stringency.²⁴

According to whose opinion is the following teaching: There is no difference between the priest who burns the heifer and the high priest on the Day of Atonement except

- (1) In the inscription 'HOLY UNTO THE LORD'.
 - (2) In the four excerpts from the Torah, which they contain. Hence the obligation to touch tefillin all the time, as a reminder of the lessons they convey.
 - (3) Since he interprets 'On the forehead and he shall bear' as indicating interdependence of pardon and plate, whence does he know the place of the plate?- Perhaps it may be worn elsewhere too.
 - (4) The passage is simple and direct enough and untouched by the controversy.
 - (5) In the phrase 'On his forehead continually', R. Judah derives the law of the broken plate from the use of the possessive.
 - (6) There is nothing abnormal calling for special attention in the use of the possessive.
 - (7) V. supra p. 12 notes.
 - (8) With water from the ashes.
 - (9) Which remained from red heifers from the time of Moses until that period (Bertinoro). V. also Parah III, 5. From the ashes of every heifer some part was kept for future use.
 - (10) Segan. V. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 91, n. 1.
 - (11) Cf. Num. XIX, 19.
 - (12) Which shows that R. Jose and R. Meir differ on the same principle as R. Judah and R. Simeon.
 - (13) Lit., 'Can you hold that opinion?'
 - (14) Mizwah may mean 'commandment', 'good deed', 'ought', 'is obligatory'.
 - (15) [On the day prescribed by the law, and the same applies to the sprinkling which for the reason explained infra must take place every day.]
 - (16) Lest he blot out the name of God.
 - (17) Lest he blot out 'the name of God.
 - (18) V. Shab. 120b.
 - (19) From here it would appear that R. Jose held the ritual bath should be taken as soon as it is due.
 - (20) R. Meir and R. Jose.
 - (21) Lit., 'analogy', 'comparison', usually based on the close connection of two subjects in one and the same passage of the Torah. Arguments from Hekesh are, in general, regarded as being more conclusive than those from Gezerah Shawah, the former not admitting of refutation. Both could be applied only for the purpose of supporting a traditional law. Mielziner, l.c.
 - (22) Cf. supra p. 12.
 - (23) That he be sprinkled on the third and fifth days.
 - (24) As to the stringency v. p. 10, n. 2, but even so the sprinkling was not indispensable on any definite day; all that was prohibited was too long an interval between the first and the second sprinkling (Rashi).

that the latter is removed for the purpose of sanctity,¹ and his fellow priests were permitted to touch him, whilst the former is removed for purposes of ritual and his colleagues forbidden to touch him. According to whom [is this teaching]? According to the opinion either of R. Meir or of R. Jose. For if it were in accord with the opinion of R. Hanina, deputy high priest, there would be one more point of difference.²

R. Jose, the son of R. Hanina demurred to this: It is quite right that we sprinkle him on the first day,³ because that may be the third of his impurity; similarly on the second, because that may be the third day of his impurity; on the third, because that may be the third day of his impurity; on the fifth, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity; on the sixth, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity; on the seventh, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity. But on the fourth day why should there be any sprinkling at all? That day could not be in doubt as being either the third day⁴ or the seventh day⁵ of his impurity? — But, according to your own point of view, how can there be sprinkling throughout the seven days? For have we not an established rule that the sprinkling is forbidden as shebuth⁶ and as such cannot override the Sabbath?⁷ — But you must then needs say: ‘Seven days with the exception of the Sabbath’, similarly here, ‘Seven⁸ with the exception of the fourth day.’ Rabah said: For that reason since the matter of the high priest on the Day of Atonement does not depend on us but on the fixing of the calendar,⁹ he ought to be separated on the third of Tishri, and on whatever day the third of Tishri falls, we would remove him; but as to the priest who burns the heifer, since the matter depends on us,¹⁰ we should remove him on the fourth of the week, so that his fourth day would fall on the Sabbath.

TO THE CELL OF THE COUNSELLORS etc. R. Judah said, Was it the ‘cell of the parhedrin [counsellors], was it not rather the ‘cell of the buleute¹¹ [senators]’? Originally, indeed, it was called the ‘cell of the buleute’ but because money¹² was being paid¹³ for the purpose of obtaining the position of high priest and the [high priests] were changed every twelve¹⁴ months, like those counsellors, who are changed every twelve months,¹⁵ therefore it came to be called ‘the cell of the counsellors’.

We learnt elsewhere: upon the bakers¹⁶ the Sages imposed only the duty of setting apart¹⁷ enough for the heave-offering of tithe¹⁸ and hallah.¹⁹ Now, it is quite right [that they did not impose] the great heave-offering, because it has been taught:

(1) As the high priest was about to enter the sanctuary, he was removed from all, in order that he may, in solitude, take upon himself the holiness of the day, shed all pride of office and concentrate on his great responsibility viz., to obtain forgiveness of sin for Israel. As for the priest of the heifer, v. p. 2, n. 2.

(2) For according to R. Hanina, there is this additional difference that the high priest is sprinkled on the third and seventh day only, whereas the priest who is to burn the heifer is sprinkled on each of the seven days.

(3) Of the priest's separation, Num. XIX, 19: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean person on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day shall he purify him. Ibid. 12: But if he purify himself not on the third day and on the seventh day, he shall not be clean.

(4) For, since he became separated he did not touch a corpse.

(5) For if the fourth day of his separation were the seventh day of his impurity, then the day before his separation would needs have been the third day of his impurity, and not having been sprinkled on that day, he could not be sprinkled on the seventh day of his impurity (the fourth day of his separation) for a first sprinkling on the third day of the impurity is indispensable for the second sprinkling on the seventh day.

- (6) Lit., 'rest', work forbidden by the Rabbis on the Sabbath and festivals as being out of spirit with the ceremony of the day.
- (7) I.e., the prohibition of work on the Sabbath. Pes. 65a.
- (8) 'Seven' must be understood to mean exceptis excipiendis, with the exception of those days on which the sprinkling is not lawful or not necessary.
- (9) Lit., 'month'. His entering the sanctuary on the Day of Atonement on the tenth of Tishri depends only on the fixing of the new moon by the Sanhedrin (Cf. Sanh. 2a), from which the tenth would be counted.
- (10) There is no definite time prescribed for the burning of the red heifer.
- (11) [, the members of the , the administrative body of the city of Jerusalem. V. Buchler, Synedrion p. 232.]
- (12) To the Hasmonean kings and their satellites.
- (13) [So Rashi cur. ed. (lit.), 'they gave money for it' etc. The phrase 'for it' (לכך) is obscure.]
- (14) This is not to be taken literally. On an average, as the Talmud tells later on, these high priests lasted twelve months, no longer. [MS.M. reads: 'They were changed by Heaven'. I.e., they did not survive the twelve months. Others: 'They were removed by the king when a higher price was offered him for the priesthood.' Rashi reads: 'They changed it,' 'it' referring to the chamber. Each new priest on his accession would set up a new chamber for himself.]
- (15) Rashi: The king removed his counsellors annually.
- (16) Bakers who were 'Fellows' of the pharisaic order. As such they had to undertake scrupulous observance especially of the laws of levitical purity. The haberim (fellows) were distinguished from the great mass of the 'amme ha-arez, the untrained multitude, who were suspects as to levitical purity and also as to the payment of tithe. V. infra.
- (17) From the doubtfully tithed fruit which they had brought of the 'amme ha-aretz.
- (18) Terumath Ma'aser. V. Glos. s.v. terumah. Terumah Gedolah. V. Glos. s.v. terumah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 9a

Because he¹ sent into all the districts of Israel and he found that they² were separating only the great heave-offering;³ [it is also right that the Sages did not impose upon these bakers] the first tithe and the poor man's tithe,⁴ because [of the principle that] the claimant must produce evidence,⁵ but the second tithe, let then [the baker] separate, take it up to Jerusalem and eat it there! 'Ulla said: Because these *parhedrin*⁶ were beating them all the twelve months⁷ and telling them 'sell cheap, sell cheap,' the Sages did not burden them [to set apart the second tithe and take it up to Jerusalem].⁸ What does parhedrin mean? — Porase [managers].⁹ Rabbah b. Bar Hana said: What is the meaning of the passage, 'The fear of the Lord prolongeth days,' but the years of the wicked shall be shortened?¹⁰ 'The fear of the Lord prolongeth days' refers to the first Sanctuary, which remained standing for four hundred and ten years and in which there served only eighteen¹¹ high priests. 'But the years of the wicked shall be shortened'¹⁰ refers to the second Sanctuary, which abided for four hundred and twenty years and at which more than three hundred [high] priests served. Take off therefrom the forty years which Simeon the Righteous served,¹² eighty years which Johanah the high priest served,¹³ ten, which *Ishmael b. Fabi*¹⁴ served, or, as some say, the eleven years of R. Eleazar b. Harsum.¹⁵ Count [the number of high priests] from then on and you will find that none of them completed his year [in office].¹⁶ *R. Johanah b. Torta*¹⁷ said: Why was *Shiloh*¹⁸ destroyed? Because of two [evil] things that prevailed there, immorality and contemptuous treatment of sanctified objects. [Proof that] immorality prevailed because it is written, Now Eli was very old, and he heard all that his sons did unto Israel, and how that they lay with the women that did service at the door of the tent of meeting. Notwithstanding R. Samuel b. Nahmani who said in the name of R. Johanan: Whosoever says, The sons of Eli sinned¹⁹ is but mistaken; it is

(1) Johanan, the high priest.

(2) The great mass of the people, exclusive of the Haberim. V. Glos. s.v. haber.

(3) V. Sot. 48a.

(5) The heave-offering of the tithe, like the terumah (v. Glos.) itself, was, on penalty of death through divine action, forbidden to be eaten by a non-priest. With regard to the poor man's tithe, the baker could say: If you want to assert legal claim thereto, you will have to prove that the 'am ha-arez, from whom I bought it, has failed to give tithe thereof before he sold it to me. Unless such proof was forthcoming, there was no legal claim on the part of the Levite on the non-Levite poor to its possession.

(6) Paredroi-assessors, counsellors. The Mishnah J. reads paledroi. The Tosef. paredroi. These assessors had a bad reputation from their oppressive measures at the market places, over which, as commissioners, they had jurisdiction. So that, apart from the fact that the high priests, during the second Temple, were changed as often as these officials, the fact that they were dubbed paredroi indicates that there must have been more than one point of contact between these officials and the priests.

(7) Usually their office was of twelve months' duration. As the next line shows, these officials made full use of their twelve months' opportunity for abuse of power.

(8) The Sages preferred to give the baker haberim the benefit of the doubt that the 'amme ha-arez, as a rule, do give the tithe.

(9) Cf. ", supervisor, purser, collector, which is logical rather than etymological.

(10) Prov. X, 27.

(11) [Var. lec., eight priests. Cf. I Chron. V, 36ff. Jehozadak who was taken to exile not being counted. V. Tosaf. s.v. tku and Rashi I Chron. V, 36.]

(12) Simeon the Just, High Priest Simon I, c. 300 b.c.e. ' v. Aboth, Sonc. ed., p. 2.

(13) John Hyrcanus, the Hasmonean high priest (Jastrow). V. Ber. He succeeded Simeon the Righteous as high priest (Bertinoro, Ma'as. Sh., 5, end). After eighty years serving as high priest he became a Sadducee (Ber. 29a). That makes it difficult to identify him with John Hyrcanus.

(14) V. Tosef. cf. Yoma 1. [High priest in the days of Agrippa II. He is not to be confused with the high priest of the same name who is reported by Josephus (Wars VI 2, 2) to have been executed in Cyrene after the destruction of the Temple. V. Buchler. op. cit. p. 98.]

(15) V. ibid. I. The Tosef. reads Harsoth. In Yoma 35b he is described as a model rich man who forsook his financial interests to devote himself to the Torah.

(16) Bah, in his marginal notes, inserts on the basis of text on parallel passages the following interpolation here: R. Johanan b. Torta said: 'And why all that? Because they bought the priestly office for money, for R. Assi reported that Martha, the daughter of Boethus, brought King Jannai two kabful of denars to nominate Joshua b. Gamala as one of the high priests. And R. Johanan b. Torta said (further). The same statement is made, infra 18a, in the name of R. Assi.

(17) An interesting account of Torta is given in the Pesik. Rab. XIV: (tortah being taken as the feminine of tora, hence cow. It occurs in this form in the Targum Num. XIX, 2.) He said: If a cow that has no speech and no mind, recognized her Creator, should I, whom my Maker created in His image, not go and acknowledge Him. He became a Jew, studied, grew efficient in the Torah and they named him Johanan b. Torta.

(18) The seat of the Tabernacle after the conquest.

(19) As the text indicates. The same apologetics are elsewhere used to defend Reuben, the sons of Samuel, David, Solomon. (Shab. 55b).

because they delayed offering up their sacrificial¹ birds Scripture accounts it to them as if they had lain with them. The [sacred] offerings were treated contemptuously, as it is written,² Yea, before the fat was made to smoke, the priest's servant came and said to the man that sacrificed: 'Give flesh to roast for the priest,' for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.' And if the man said unto him: 'Let the fat be made to smoke first of all, and then take as much as thy soul desireth': then he would say: 'Nay, but thou shalt give it me now, and if not, I will take it by force.' And the sin of the young men was very great before the Lord, — for the men dealt contemptuously with the offering of the Lord.

Why was the first Sanctuary destroyed? Because of three [evil] things which prevailed there: idolatry, immorality, bloodshed. Idolatry, as it is written: For the bed is too short for a man to stretch himself and the covering too narrow when he gathereth himself up.³ What is the meaning of 'For the bed is too short for a man to stretch himself'? R. Jonathan said: It is: This bed⁴ is too short for two neighbours to stretch themselves. And [what is the meaning of] 'the covering too narrow when he gathereth himself up'? — R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: When R. Jonathan [in his reading] came to this passage, he would cry and say: To Him, concerning Whom it is written, He gathereth the waters of the sea together like a heap,⁵ the cover became too narrow! Immorality [prevailed] as it is written: Moreover the Lord said: Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and make a tinkling with their feet.⁶ 'Because the daughters of Zion are haughty', i.e., they used to walk with proud carriage. 'And wanton eyes' i.e., they filled their eyes with kohl.⁷ 'Walking and mincing as they go', i.e., they used to walk with the heel touching the toe. 'And make a tinkling with their feet', R. Isaac said: They would take myrrh and balsam and place it in their shoes⁸ and when they came near the young men of Israel they would kick, causing the balsam to squirt at them and would thus cause the evil desire to enter them like an adder's poison.

Bloodshed [prevailed] as it is written: Moreover Manaseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another.⁹ They were wicked, but they placed their trust in the Holy One, blessed be He.¹⁰ For it is written, The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money; yet will they lean upon the Lord and say 'Is not the Lord in the midst of us? No evil shall come upon us'.¹¹ Therefore the Holy One, blessed be He, brought them three evil decrees as against the three evils which were their own:¹² Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest. But why was the second Sanctuary destroyed, seeing that in its time they were occupying themselves with Torah, [observance of] precepts, and the practice of charity? Because therein prevailed hatred without cause. That teaches you that groundless hatred is considered as of even gravity with the three sins of idolatry, immorality, and bloodshed together. And [during the time of] the first Sanctuary did no groundless hatred prevail? Surely it is written: They are thrust down to the sword with my people; smite therefore upon my thigh,¹³ and R. Eleazar said: This refers to people who eat and drink together and then thrust each other through with the daggers of their tongue! — That [passage] speaks of the princes in Israel, for it is written, Cry and wail, son of man; for it is upon my people,¹³ etc. [The text reads] ‘Cry and wail, son of man’. One might have assumed [it is upon] all [Israel], therefore it goes on, Upon all the princes of Israel.

R. Johanan and R. Eleazar both say: The former ones whose iniquity was revealed¹⁴ had their end¹⁵ revealed, the latter ones whose iniquity was not revealed have their end still unrevealed.

R. Johanan said: The fingernail of the earlier generations¹⁶ is better than the whole¹⁷ body of the later generations. Said Resh Lakish to him: On the contrary, the latter generations are better,¹⁸ although they are oppressed by the governments, they are occupying themselves with the Torah. — He [R. Johanan] replied: The Sanctuary will prove [my point] for it came back to the former generations, but not to the latter ones.

The question was put to R. Eleazar: Were the earlier generations better, or the later ones? — He answered: Look upon the Sanctuary! Some say he answered: The Sanctuary is your witness [in this matter].¹⁹

Resh Lakish was swimming in the Jordan. Thereupon Rabbah b. Bar Hana came and gave him the hand.²⁰ Said [Resh Lakish] to him: By God! I hate you. For it is written: If she be a wall, we will build upon her a turret of silver; if she be a door, we will enclose her with boards of cedar.²¹ Had you made yourself like a wall and had all come up in the days of Ezra, you would have been compared to silver, which no rottenness can ever affect. Now that you have come up like doors,²² you are like cedarwood, which rottenness prevails over. What is erez [‘cedar’]?- ‘Ulla said: It is sasmagor.²³ What is ‘sasmagor’?-R. Abba says it is the divine²⁴ voice as it has been taught: After the later prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi had died, the Holy Spirit²⁵ departed from Israel, but they still availed themselves of the Bath Kol.²⁶ — But did Resh Lakish talk with Rabbah b. Bar Hana?²⁷ Even with R. Eleazar, who was the master of the land of Israel, Resh Lakish did not converse²⁸ [for anyone with whom Resh Lakish conversed in the street could get merchandise without witnesses]²⁹ would he engage in conversation with Rabbah b. Bar Hana?-R. Papa said: ‘Throw a man between them’.³⁰ It was either Resh Lakish and Ze’iri or Rabbah b. Bar Hana and R. Eleazar.³¹ When he [Resh Lakish] came before R. Johanan, he said to him: This is not the reason.³² Even if they had all come up in the time of Ezra, the Divine Presence would not have rested over the second Sanctuary, for it is written:³³ God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem, [that means],

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 10a

although God has enlarged Japheth,¹ the Divine Presence rests only in the tents of Shem.² Whence do we know that the Persians are derived from Japheth? — Because It is written: The sons of Japheth: Gomer, and Magog, and Madai and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshek, and Tiras.³ ‘Gomer’, i.e. Germania;⁴ ‘Magog’, i.e. Kandia;⁵ ‘Madai’, i.e. Macedonia; ‘Javan’,⁶ in its literal sense; ‘Tubal’, i.e. Beth-Unyaki;⁷ ‘Meshek’, i.e. Mysia;⁸ ‘Tiras’ — its identification is a matter of dispute between R. Simai and the Rabbis, or, according to another report, between R. Simon and the Rabbis, one holding that it is to be identified with Beth Tiryaka,⁹ and the other [authorities] declaring it is Persia. R. Joseph learnt: ‘Tiras’ is Persia, Sabtah and Raamah, and Sabteca.¹⁰ R. Joseph learnt: I.e. the inner Sakistan and the outer Sakistan.¹¹ Between the two there is [a distance] of one hundred parasangs and its circumference one thousand parasangs.¹² And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh in the land of Shinar.¹³ ‘Babel’ in its usual sense; ‘Erech’ i.e. Urikath;¹⁴ ‘Accad’, i.e. Baskar;¹⁵ ‘Calneh’, i.e. Nupar —¹⁶ Ninpi. Out of that land went Ashur.¹⁷ R. Joseph learnt: ‘Ashur’, i.e. Silok.¹⁸ And builded Nineveh and Rehoboth-ir, and Calah.¹⁹ ‘Nineveh in its usual Sense; ‘Rehoboth-ir’, i.e. Perath of Meshan.²⁰ ‘Calah’ i.e., Perath de Borsif.²¹ And Resen between Nineveh and Calah — the same is the great city.²² ‘Resen’, i.e., Ctesiphon.²³ ‘The same is the great city’. [From here] I do not know yet whether by ‘the great city’ Nineveh or Resen is meant. But, as Scripture says, Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city unto God, of three days’ journey,²⁴ say that by ‘the great city’ Nineveh is meant.

Ang²⁵ Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmi the children of Anak, were there.²⁶ A Tanna taught: ‘Ahiman’, i.e., the most skilful²⁷ of the brethren; ‘Sheshai’,²⁸ ie, he made the ground [he stepped on] like pits; ‘Talmi’, i.e., he made the ground full of ridges. Another comment:²⁹ Ahiman built Anath, Sheshai built Alush; Talmi built Talbush.³⁰ [They were called] ‘the children of Anak’, because they lorded it over the sun by reason of their height.³¹

R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of Rabbi said: Rome is designed to fall into the hand of Persia, as it was said: Therefore hear ye the counsel of the Lord, that He hath taken against Edom; and His purposes that He hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: surely the least of the flock shall drag them away, surely their habitation shall be appalled to them.³² Rabbah b. ‘Ullah demurred to this: What intimation is there that ‘the last of the flock’ refers to Persia? [Presumably] because Scripture reads: The ram which thou sawest having two horns, they are the kings of Media and Persia.³³ But say [perhaps] it is Greece, for it is written, And the rough he-goat is the king of Greece?³⁴ — When R. Habiba b. Surmaki came up,³⁵ he reported this interpretation before a certain scholar. The latter said: One who does not understand the meaning of the passage asks a question against Rabbi. What does, indeed, ‘the least of the flock’ mean? The youngest of his brethren, for R. Joseph learnt that Tiras is Persia.³⁶

Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan, on the authority of R. Judah b. Ila'i, said: Rome is designed to fall into the hands of Persia, that may be concluded by inference a minori ad majus: If in the case of the first Sanctuary, which the sons of Shem [Solomon] built and the Chaldeans destroyed, the Chaldeans fell into the hands of the Persians,³⁷ then how much more should this be so with the second Sanctuary, which the Persians built and the Romans destroyed, that the Romans should fall into the hands of the Persians.³⁸ Rab said: Persia will fall into the hands of Rome. Thereupon R. Kahana and R. Assi asked of Rab: [Shall] the builders fall into the hands of the destroyers? — He said to them: Yes, it is the decree of the King.³⁹ Others say: He replied to them: They too are guilty for they destroyed the synagogues. It has also been taught in accord with the above, Persia will fall into the hands of Rome, first because they destroyed the synagogues, and then because it is the King's decree that the builders fall into the hands of the destroyers. Rab also said: The son of David will not come until the wicked kingdom of Rome will have spread [its sway] over the whole world for nine months, as it is said: Therefore will He give them up, until the time that she who travaileth hath brought forth; then the residue of his brethren shall return with the children of Israel.⁴⁰

Our Rabbis taught: All the cells in the Sanctuary were without a mezuzah⁴¹ with the exception of the cell of the counsellors, for therein there was a residence for the high priest. R. Judah said: Were there not a number of cells in the Sanctuary which had a compartment for a dwelling, yet had no mezuzah? Rather, the [reason for the] mezuzah on the cell of the counsellors was due to a preventive measure, What was the reason for R. Judah's statement? — Rabbah said, R. Judah is of the opinion, any house which is not made to serve both as a summer-home and a winter-home, is not a house.⁴² Abaye raised an objection: But it is written: And I will smite the winter-house with the summer-house!⁴³ — He answered: They are called summer-house or winter-house, but not by the general name house. Abaye raised the following objection: ‘The sukkah⁴⁴ used at the Feast [of Tabernacles] according to R. Judah renders [the fruit brought during the Feast] liable to tithe, whereas the Sages exempt it [from such duty]’,⁴⁵ and it has been learnt in connection with it: R. Judah considers [a sukkah] liable to ‘erub,⁴⁶ a mezuzah to tithe.⁴⁷ And if you should say he considers it liable to these duties only on rabbinic enactment, that could apply to ‘erub and mezuzah, but as regards tithe, can one say that it is but a rabbinic enactment, [should we not fear]

- (45) V. Ma'as. VII, 3. The liability to tithes begins only from the moment the produce is brought into the house, v. Ma'as. I, 3 and the point at issue between R. Judah and the Sages is whether a sukkah is considered a house in what concerns tithes.
- (46) For the purpose of regulating Sabbath limits of movement a legal community or continuity is symbolically established for the inhabitants of a city, a court etc. If the sukkah opens out into a court in which there are other dwellings too, the inhabitants of all these dwellings will contribute their share towards a dish to be deposited in one of the dwellings, by which act the dwellings are considered as common to all, and the carrying of objects across the court and from one dwelling to another will be permitted.
- (47) Only a house needs 'erub and mezuzah.

that he may come to set aside tithe from where it is obligatory for where it is exempt and from where it is exempt for where it is obligatory?¹ -Rather, said Abaye, there is no dispute concerning the seven days [of the separation], all agreeing that [the cell] is liable [to have a mezuzah];² what the dispute is concerned with is the other days of the year; the Rabbis would institute it as a precautionary measure on account of the seven days, whilst R. Judah does not see the need for such a measure. Raba said to him: But the teaching [of the Mishnah]³ reads, 'The sukkah of the Feast during the Feast'! Therefore says Raba: On all other days of the year they all agree that there is no obligation [for a mezuzah at the sukkah and cell], the dispute touches only the seven days, and there is a special ground in the case of the sukkah and there is a special reason in the case of the cell. There is a special reason in the case of the sukkah: R. Judah, holding in accordance with his own principle, that the sukkah must have the character of a permanent residence, hence considers [the sukkah] is liable to a mezuzah, whilst the Rabbis, following their own principle, hold that the sukkah must have the character of an incidental residence, and hence requires no mezuzah. There is also a special reason for the dispute in the case of the cell [of the counsellors]; the Rabbis hold that a dwelling not freely chosen is called a dwelling whilst R. Judah is of the opinion that such dwelling is not included in the term dwelling; only rabbinically it was arranged that a mezuzah be affixed at the cell lest the people say the high priest is being kept in prison.⁴

Who has taught the following which our Rabbis have taught:

- (1) He might take off the tithe from something that is liable to tithe only by rabbinic enactment for some other heap (of produce), which is liable by the law of the Torah, and vice versa, thus invalidating the former and the latter.
 - (2) Even as at the sukkah.
 - (3) V. supra p. 45, n. 5. And yet it is said: 'The Sages exempt it from tithe', hence even during the seven days, according to one view, there would be exemption from the duty.
 - (4) Since only a dwelling not freely chosen does not need a mezuzah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 11a

All the gates that were there¹ had no mezuzah, with the exception of the gate of Nicanor,² within which the cell of the counsellors was situated. Apparently this teaching is in agreement with the Rabbis³ and not with R. Judah. For, if it were to be R. Judah's opinion [surely] he holds that [the mezuzah at the cell] itself is only a rabbinical enactment, shall we enact a preventive measure⁴ to guard another preventive measure?⁵ — You might even say it is in accord with R. Judah. [They are not two separate enactments, rather] the whole is but one measure.⁶

Our Rabbis taught: And upon thy gates:⁷ alike upon the gates of houses, upon the gates of courts, upon the gates of provinces, upon the gates of cities rests the dutiful obligation⁸ to the Omnipresent, as it is said, 'Upon the doorposts of thy house and upon thy gates'. Said Abaye to R. Safra: Why did the Rabbis not affix a mezuzah on the city gateways of Mahoza?⁹ — He answered: They serve only as supports for the Fort of Turrets [of that city].¹⁰ But the Fort of Turrets itself should have a mezuzah, for it contains a residence-compartment for the keeper of the prison! For it has been taught: A synagogue, which contains a dwelling-place for the synagogue attendant¹¹ must have a mezuzah! Rather, said Abaye, it¹² is due to a fear of danger.¹³ For it has been taught: The mezuzah of an individual's [house] should be examined¹⁴ twice every seven years, and of public buildings twice every fifty years. It happened to an Artaban¹⁵ who was examining mezuzoth in the upper market of Sepphoris¹⁶ that a quaestor found him and took from him a thousand zuz.¹⁷ But R. Eleazar said: Messengers engaged in a mizwah do not come to harm? — Where danger is to be expected, it is different, for it is written: And Samuel said: How can I go? If Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the Lord said: Take a heifer with thee, and say: I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord.¹⁸ R. Kahana recited before Rab Judah: The straw-magazine, the stable, the wood-shed, and the store-house are exempt from the mezuzah, because the women make use of them.¹⁹ What does ‘they make use [of them]’ mean? — They bathe [therein].²⁰ Rab Judah said to him: The reason for the exemption is that they bathe [therein], but [had they been restricted to their] ordinary use, these places are liable to a mezuzah. But has it not been taught that an ox-stable is exempt from a mezuzah? Rather we must say that ‘they make use [of them]’ means they adorn themselves therein and this is what it teaches: Although the women adorn themselves therein, they are exempt from mezuzah.²¹ Said R. Kahana to him: But are the [places] wherein women adorn themselves exempt [from a mezuzah]? Surely it has been taught: An ox-stable is exempt from mezuzah, and [places] where women adorn themselves are liable to a mezuzah — What then remains now for you to say [is that] the case of [dwellings] wherein women adorn themselves is being disputed by Tannaim,²² and so on my view too²³ concerning these places [when limited to their] ordinary use, there is a dispute of Tannaim — For it has been taught: ‘Thy house’²⁴ means ‘a house appointed for thee’, thus excluding the straw-magazine, the ox-stable, the wood-shed, and the store-house which are exempt from the mezuzah. Some however declare them liable [to have a mezuzah]. In truth, they said, the privy, the tannery, the bathhouse, the house for ritual immersion are exempt from a mezuzah. Now R. Kahana explains [this teaching] according to his view, and Rab Judah explains it according to his view. ‘R. Kahana explains it according to his view’ thus: ‘Thy house’ means ‘the house appointed for thee’, thus excluding a straw-magazine, ox-stable, woodshed and store-house which are exempt from a mezuzah. Some however declare them liable. In truth, they said, the privy, the tannery, the bath-house, the house for ritual immersion and the rooms which the women make use of to adorn themselves are exempt from the mezuzah. But if this is so, it is the same as merhaz? — We are informed about public and about private bath-houses. For the thought may have occurred that only public bath-houses are exempt because they are full of uncleanness, but private bathhouses, where there is less thereof, are liable to a mezuzah, therefore he lets us know [that even private bath-houses are exempt]. ‘Rab Judah explains it in accord with his view’: This is how it is taught: ‘Thy house’ means ‘a house appointed for thee’, that excludes the straw-magazine, ox-stable, wood-shed, and store-house as exempt from mezuzah, even though women adorn themselves [therein].²⁵ Some consider houses wherein the women adorn themselves obliged to have a mezuzah. But [when restricted to their] ordinary use, all agree that they are exempt. In truth they said: The privy, the tannery, the private or public bathhouse, even though the women adorn themselves therein, are exempt from mezuzah, because they contain a great deal of uncleanness. But would, according to Rab Judah, all agree that [these places when restricted to their] ordinary use are exempt? Surely it has been taught: ‘In your gates’,²⁶ that implies alike the gates of houses, of courts, of provinces, of cities, cattle-sheds, hen-roosts, shed for straw, store-house for wine, store-house for oil — they all are liable to a mezuzah — One might assume this includes also the porter's lodge,¹ a veranda² and a balcony, therefore the text reads, 'house' — [meaning] just as 'house' means a building appointed for a dwelling it thus excludes all other buildings not appointed for a dwelling. One might have wanted to include also the privy, the tannery, the bath-house and the house for ritual immersion, therefore the text says, 'house': just as a 'house is made for dignity, so only all such are implied, which also are made for dignity, to the exclusion of these, which are not made for dignity. One might have wanted to include the mountain of the Sanctuary,³ the cells and the courts.⁴ Therefore the text says 'house': just as a 'house' is for common use so are only such [houses] as are for common use [liable] to a mezuzah — to the exclusion of these which are sacred!⁵ This is a refutation.

R. Samuel son of Rab Judah recited before Raba: Six gates are exempt from the mezuzah.- [the gates of] the straw-shed, the stable, the wood-house, the store-house, the Median⁶ gate, a gate without beams and a gate that is not ten handbreadths high. He [Raba] said to him: You started by saying six and you ended up with seven?-He replied: There is Tannaitic division of opinion concerning the Median gate, for it has been taught: An arched doorway⁷ — R. Meir declares it liable to the mezuzah, while the Sages exempt it.⁸ All agree, however, that, if the posts are ten handbreadths⁹ [high], it is liable to the mezuzah.¹⁰ Said Abaye: All agree that if the [whole] doorway is ten handbreadths in height, but the post is not even three¹¹ it is considered nothing;¹² again, if the post is three handbreadths in height, but the [whole] doorway not even ten, it is also considered nothing.¹² They are disputing only concerning doorways the [whole] height of which is ten, with the posts three in height, but with a width less than four handbreadths, space however being left to extend it to four handbreadths.¹³ R. Meir holds one may extend¹⁴ it by digging [to the required minimum of four handbreadths], whilst the Sages hold that we do not extend it by digging it. Our Rabbis taught: The synagogue, the women's apartment, and the house belonging to partners are liable to mezuzah — Is that not self-evident? — You might have said [the scriptural] ‘Thy house’¹⁵ [means] her — but not [the woman's] house; ‘thy house’ but not their [partners'] house, hence we are taught [that they are included in the law of mezuzah]. But would you expound similarly: That your days may be multiplied and the days of your sons?¹⁶ Do only their [sons] need life, not the others [women and their daughters]? What then is the significance of ‘Thy house’? — It is as Raba said: For Raba said: The way thou enterest [thy house], and when a man moves, he moves with the right foot first.¹⁷

Another [Baraita] taught:¹⁸ The synagogue, the house belonging to partners, and the women's compartment are subject to uncleanness from house plagues. Is that not self-evident? You might have said: Then shall come he who has the house to him;¹⁹ to him’ [implies] but not ‘to her’ [woman], ‘to him’ but not ‘to them’ [partners], therefore we are told [that this is not so]. Perhaps it is really so? — Scripture says, In a house of the land of your possession,²⁰ [which includes both] — Why then ‘to him’? [That means to say that] if one devotes his house to himself exclusively, refusing to lend his belongings by pretending he did not own them, the Holy One, blessed be He, exposes him as he removes his belongings.²¹ Thus ‘to him’ excludes [from the infliction of the house plague] him who lends his belongings to others.²²

But is a synagogue subject to uncleanness from house plagues? Has it not been taught: One might assume that synagogues and houses of learning are subject to uncleanness from house plagues, therefore Scripture says: ‘He who has the house to him’, i.e., he to whom alone the house belongs, that excludes those [houses] which do not belong to him alone? — This is no difficulty: The first teaching is in accord with R. Meir, the second with Rabba, for it has been taught: A synagogue which contains a dwelling for the synagogue attendant²³ is liable to a mezuzah, but one which has no dwelling apartment, R. Meir declares it liable but the Sages exempt it. Or, if you wish, you might say: Both teachings are in accord with the Rabbis. In the one case the synagogue referred to has a dwelling [apartment], in the other it has no dwelling apartment. Or, if you wish, you might say [in accounting for the discrepancy] that in both cases the synagogue has no dwelling apartment

(2) Exedra.

(3) The Temple mount.

(4) In the singular: The Temple court. In the plural the various compartments there, as the men's compartment, the women's compartment.

(5) [This proves that the places enumerated in the teaching of R. Kahana, even when restricted to their ordinary use, are also subject to a difference of opinion of Tannaim whether or not they are liable to a mezuzah, which contradicts Rab Judah.]

- (6) The Median gate was usually made with an arched doorway, hence gates with such doorways came to be called Median.
- (7) Which is the same as a Median gate.
- (8) [Since it narrows down at the arch to less than four handbreadths, the required minimum of a gate, v. n. 10.]

- (10) 'Er. 11b.
- (11) It began to narrow down at less than three handbreadths from the ground.
- (12) And requires no mezuzah, for the minimum for any doorway is ten in height for the whole doorway, four in width, three for the posts; below it is but 'solid' earth.
- (13) Within the ten handbreadths, the minimum required height of the doorway.
- (14) By legal fiction. As long as the doorway starts on a breadth of four by three, allowing space for continued dimension up to ten, we look upon it as continuing in the same size, hence as entitled to the designation 'door', with the implication of being subject to the law of mezuzah
- (15) The possessive suffix in the Hebrew is masc. sing.
- (16) Deut. XI, 21. If you press the text so hard, excluding woman because the possessive is in the masculine form, then you should consistently expound: In order that your days, may be, where the possessive suffix, too, is masculine, that God holds out no promise for the prolongation of women's life. Perhaps benekem, which literally means 'your sons', although it is understood to include 'daughters', being usually translated as 'children' might render the consequence of such pedantic interpretation more absurd still.
- (17) Read ad hoc: instead of betheka, bi'atheka, i.e., 'thy coming in' instead of 'Thy house', to infer thence that the mezuzah should be affixed on the door-post at the right hand of him who enters. In this manner, indeed, the mezuzah is affixed, in the upper third of the post.

, the first teaching referring to big cities, the second to villages.¹ But are synagogues in big cities really not subject to uncleanness from house plagues? Has it not been taught: 'In the house of the land of your possession,'² i.e., the house of the land of your possession could become defiled through leprosy, but Jerusalem³ could not become defiled through leprosy. R. Judah said: I have heard that only the place of the Sanctuary is unaffected by the law of leprosy?⁴ Now does not that imply that synagogues and houses of learning are subject to the law of leprosy even though they be in large cities? — Read R. Judah said: I have heard that only sacred places⁵ are not subject to the law of leprosy. What principle are they disputing? — The first Tanna holds Jerusalem was not divided amongst the tribes⁶ and R. Judah holds Jerusalem was divided among the tribes, the basis of their difference being the principle on which these Tannaim differ, for it has been taught: What lay in the lot of Judah? The Temple mount, the cells, the courts. And what lay in the lot of Benjamin? The Hall,⁷ the Temple⁸ and the Holy of Holies. And a strip of land went forth from Judah's lot and went into Benjamin's territory, and on this the Temple was built — Benjamin the Righteous was longing to swallow it every day as it is written: He coveteth him all day,⁹ therefore he obtained the privilege of becoming the host of the Omnipotent,¹⁰ as it is said: And He dwelleth between his shoulders¹¹.

The following Tanna holds that Jerusalem was not divided amongst the tribes, for it has been taught: One does not rent houses in Jerusalem, because it [the city] does not belong to them, [the inhabitants]. R. Eleazar son of R. Zadok said: Nor any beds. Therefore the innkeepers take the skin of the sacrificial animals by force.¹² Abaye said: We may learn from this that it is usual for a man to leave to his host the empty wine pitcher and the hide.¹³

But are the synagogues of the villages subject to the laws of leprosy? Has it not been taught: As a possession,¹⁴ i.e., until they conquer it. If they have conquered but not yet divided it among the tribes, or even divided it among the tribes but not divided it among the families, or even divided it among the families but before each man knows where his lot is, whence do we know [that the laws of leprosy do not apply yet]? To teach us that Scripture says: 'Then he who has the house to him' i.e., he to whom alone the house is belonging, excluding these [houses] which do not belong to him [the owner] alone.¹⁵ — It is more correct as we have answered at first.¹⁶

AND ANOTHER PRIEST IS PREPARED FOR HIM: It is obvious that if any disqualifying mishap occurred to the high priest before the morning [daily] offering, that one¹⁷ initiates the other priest with the morning burnt-offering. But if the mishap should have occurred after the morning sacrifice, how could he be initiated?¹⁸ — R. Adda b. Ahabah said: With the girdle.¹⁹ That will be in accord with him who holds that the girdle of the high priest is identical with that of the common priest,²⁰ but according to the opinion that the girdle of the high priest was not the same as that of the common priest,²¹ what can be said?²² — Abaye said: He would put on the eight garments and turn²³ with the hook, in accordance with what R. Huna said. For R. Huna said: If a non-priest turns with the hook, he incurs penalty of death.²⁴ R. Papa said:

(1) In the metropolis people from many cities assemble in the synagogue, it therefore seems to belong to everybody, i.e., to nobody, whilst in the villages those who attend are known to all, being like partners in the synagogue (Rashi).

(2) Lev. XIV, 34.

(3) Jerusalem was not divided among the tribes, but was kept in trust for all Israel and could therefore not be subject to a law applying to privately owned houses only.

(4) Meg. 26a.

(5) Instead of 'Sanctuary'. 'Sacred places' include synagogues and houses of learning.

(6) V. supra p. 52, n. 6.

(7) Ulam, leading to the interior of the Temple.

(8) The Hall containing the golden altar, Mid. IV, 1.

(9) Deut. XXXIII, 12. The ad hoc translation, lit., 'to bend over', thus to be anxious, hence (Rashi): he scratched himself in despair, was anxious to conquer it.

(10) The Ark stood in his lot.

(11) Ibid.

(12) I Tosef. Ma'as. Sh. I.

(13) Of the animal which he slaughters and consumes in the house of his host (Rashi).

(14) Lev. XIV, 34.

(15) Obviously then the synagogues in the villages are not subject to levitical uncleanness, hence the alternate answer above, 'One speaks of' synagogues in metropolises, the other of synagogues in villages', is unsatisfactory.

(16) The distinction is rather between synagogues with a dwelling for the synagogue attendant and those without it.

(17) He should officiate at the morning burnt-offering in the eight garments of the high priest.

(18) The rest of the service of the Day of Atonement is performed in four garments, how will his office of high priestly function be indicated?

(19) The high priest's girdle, which on the Day of Atonement is of fine linen (Lev. XVI, 4).

(20) [I.e. the material for the girdle prescribed for the high priest in Ex. XXXIX, 29 was also intended to be used for the girdle of the common priests, so that the girding of a linen girdle by the priest on the Day of Atonement would serve to indicate his high priestly function.]

(21) [I.e., the girdle of the common priest was of linen, the material of the girdle described in Ex. XXXIX, 29 being restricted to the high priest, so that the girding by the priest of a linen girdle on the Day of Atonement would indicate no particular high priestly function.]

(22) How would it be recognizable that he is initiated into performing the high priest's service?

(23) Rashi: Before starting on the service of the day, he puts on the eight garments, and turns on the outer altar one of the limbs of the daily burnt-offering with an iron hook. By reason of such turning that limb is more speedily consumed. He has thus done the initiative work for the office of high priest which he is to assume anon.

(24) This is only preparatory work, but since a non-priest, performing it in accord with R. Huna's opinion incurs the penalty of death, it is obviously considered as of even importance with the service proper, hence serving to initiate the newcomer into the high priest's office.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 12b

His service¹ initiates him — Has it not been taught: All the vessels which Moses made became sanctified through being anointed. From then on they become sanctified through being used at a service.² Similarly here his service initiates him.

When R. Dimi came [from Palestine] he reported: Concerning the girdle of the common priest there is a dispute between Rabbi and R. Eleazar b. Simeon, one said it was of kil'ayim [wool and linen in the same web],³ the other said it was of fine linen.⁴ It may be ascertained that it was Rabbi who said the girdle was made of kil'ayim, for it has been taught: There is no difference between the high priest and the common priest except in the girdle, this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon said: Not even in the girdle is there any distinction. Of what time [does this teaching speak]? If during the rest of the year, there are many points of difference, [as e.g.] the high priest [officiates] in eight garments, the common priest in four; you must say, then, that [the time discussed is] the Day of Atonement.⁵ We can tell you: In fact the discussion deals with the other days of the year, and it refers to such garments which both wear alike⁶ [the only difference being the girdle].

When Rabin came [from Palestine] he reported: Everybody agrees that the girdle of the high priest on the Day of Atonement was made of fine linen, and during the rest of the year of kil'ayim. The discussion concerned only the common priest's girdle, both on the Day of Atonement and during the rest of the year; concerning that Rabbi said it was made of kil'ayim and R. Eleazar b. Simeon of fine linen. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We also have: Upon his flesh.⁷ Why the repetition of 'he shall put on'? To include the mitre and the girdle for the removal of the ashes, this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Dosa said: It is to include the provision that the [four] garments of the high priest on the Day of Atonement may be used by the common priest [during the rest of the year]. Rabbi says: There are two valid objections to this: First, that the girdle of the high priest on the Day of Atonement is different from that of the common priest; secondly, shall the garments worn for the service of most solemn sanctity be worn for ministration of lesser holiness? Rather 'he shall put on' [was repeated] to include worn-out garments.⁸ R. Dosa adheres to his principle, for it has been taught: And shall leave them there,⁹ that teaches that they must be hidden.¹⁰ R. Dosa said: [It means that] he [the high priest] shall not use them on another Day of Atonement.¹¹ Our Rabbis have taught: If a disqualifying accident occurred to him, and another was appointed in his place then the former returns [afterwards] to his office, whilst the latter has upon himself all the obligations touching the high priesthood,¹² this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Jose says: The first returns to his office, the second becomes unfit for the office of either high priest or common priest.¹³ R. Jose said: It happened to Joseph b. Elam¹⁴ of Sepphoris that after a disqualifying accident had happened to the high priest, he was appointed in the former's place, and the Sages said: The former returns to his office, the latter is unfit to be either common priest or high priest. He cannot be high priest for the sake of preventing ill-feeling,¹⁵ nor can he any more be a common priest, for 'we may promote in [a matter] of sanctity, but not degrade'.¹⁶ Rabbah b. The reading there is corrupt, and to be corrected in accord with the reading in Tosef. s.v. VF and in J.Yoma 38a: It happened to Joseph ben Ulam of Sepphoris (not 'in Sepphoris', for it could have happened only in Jerusalem) who served for an hour (or: little while) as high priest and as he went out he said to the King: My lord and King: Whose were the bullock and the goat which were offered up to-day, did they come from me or from the high priest? The King understood (the trend) of his question and he replied: What is this, ben Ulam? Are you not satisfied with having served in the high priest's place for one hour before Him Who spoke and the world was created, so that you seek to obtain the high priest's office for yourself? In that moment ben Ulam understood that he was deposed from the high priesthood. V. Hor., Sonc., ed. p. 89 notes, and Meg. p. 59, n. 2.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 13a

The halachah is in accord with R. Jose, but R. Jose admits that if [the substitute high priest] transgressed that injunction and officiated, his service is valid. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: The halachah is in accord with R. Jose, but R. Jose admits that if the first [high priest] dies, the second [the substitute] returns to his service. Is that not self-evident?¹ — You might have said: This would involve for him a rivalry in his lifetime,² hence he informs us³ [that this is not so].

R. JUDAH SAYS: ONE PROVIDES FOR HIM ALSO ANOTHER WIFE. But the Rabbis, too, are considering a possibility!⁴ — The Rabbis will tell you: Levitical impurity is frequent,⁵ death is infrequent.

THEY SAID TO HIM: IF SO THERE IS NO END TO THE MATTER. They gave a good answer to R. Judah! What then about R. Judah? — He will tell you: One may consider the possibility of one death, but one would not [go so far as to] consider the possibility of two [successive wives'] deaths. And the Rabbis? — [They hold that] if enactment [on the basis of consideration of the possibility] of death is justified, such [possibility] should be considered to include also two.⁶ But the Rabbis ought to apply that consideration to themselves!⁷ The Rabbis will answer you: The high priest is careful. If he be careful, why was another priest prepared [to take his place in case of accidental impurity]? — Since 'ye make the latter his rival, he will be all the more careful.

But is this arrangement⁸ sufficient? The Divine Law said: His house⁹ and that [substitute wife] is not 'his house'.¹⁰ -He betroths her [unto himself]. — But [still] as long as he does not marry her,¹¹ she is not 'his house'? — He marries her. — But then he has 'two houses' and the Divine Law said: And make atonement for himself and for his house,¹² but not for 'two houses'? — He divorces her again. If he divorces her, our question reverts to its place?¹³ — No, the provision applies to the case that he divorces her on condition; [namely], he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce¹⁴ [to be valid] in case thou diest.¹⁵ But perhaps she dies and he will have 'two houses'? — Rather, the case is that he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thou diest. If she does not die, then she is divorced;¹⁶ and if she does die, there is [still] the other one alive. But perhaps she will not die, so that her letter of divorce is valid and the other [the first] one die, and he will stay without a 'house'? Say rather: He says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if one of you die, so that if the one dies there is [still] the other one alive, and if the other one dies there is [still] this one alive. But perhaps neither of them will die and he will have 'two houses'? Furthermore on such a condition¹⁷ it, [the divorce,] is really not valid; has not Raba said: If he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce to be valid if thou drinkest no wine all the days of my life and thy life, it is not valid;¹⁸ but if he said: 'All the days of the life of So-and-so', then it is valid?¹⁹ — Rather say that he said to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thy fellow [wife] does not die. If her fellow does not die, she [the second wife] is divorced, and if she does die, then there is still the other [the second wife] alive [to be his house']. — But perhaps her fellow wife will die in the middle of the service and it will become

 - (6) The death of one within a day is a rather infrequent occurrence. The only reason for considering it would be a principle, according to which we must consider possibilities, even remote. On such basis the death of two successive wives may not be said to be outside the sphere of possibility, hence: 'IF SO, THERE IS NO END.
 - (7) With even logic the Sages ought to admit that, since we are considering the possibility of accidental impurity disqualifying the incumbent high priest, it is perfectly within the sphere of possibility that the substitute, too, may suffer such accidental disqualification, hence, here too there is no end to it!

retrospectively revealed that the letter of divorce of the other one was not valid and he would then have been officiating¹ at the service with 'two houses'? — Rather assume, then, that he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thy fellow dies. — But perhaps the fellow wife will die and the letter of divorce of the first wife will be valid and he will stand there without a 'house'? — Rather [say that] we speak of the case that he divorced them both, to the one he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] in case thy fellow wife does not die; and to the other one he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thou dost not enter the synagogue.² But perhaps her fellow will not die and she will not enter the synagogue, and the letter of divorce of both will be valid and he will stand without a 'house'? — Rather: To the one he says: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] in case thy fellow does not die; and to the other one: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if I enter the Synagogue, so that if the one die, the second be available, and if the second die the first be available. What will you say in the case that her fellow wife dies in the midst of the service and retrospectively he will have officiated at the service with two 'houses'? If he saw that she was about to die, he would at once enter the synagogue and would render the divorce retroactively valid. — R. Assi or, as some say, R. 'Awira, demurred to this: Consequently, if this be so, two widows of one brother should not be married by the brother-in-law?³ — Scripture repeats 'his sister-in-law' twice, to intimate [that even in the case of] two sisters-in-law the law of levirate marriage applies. But then a woman betrothed⁴ should not be married to her levir?⁵ — [By emphasizing] 'abroad'⁶ the betrothed woman is meant to be included.

Our Rabbis taught: The high priest may offer up a sacrifice as a mourner,⁷ but may not eat thereof. R. Judah said: Throughout the day.⁸ What does 'throughout the day' signify? — Said Raba: It means to indicate that he should be brought from his house.⁹ Abaye said to him: But now, according to R. Judah we even remove him¹⁰ [from the Sanctuary], for it has been taught: If he was standing and offering up a sacrifice on the altar, and he hears that one [of his close relatives]¹¹ died, he should leave the service and go out. This is the opinion of R. Judah; R. Jose says: He should complete his service.¹² How can you then say that we bring him from his house?¹³ — Rather, says Raba, 'throughout the day'

(1) I.e., the first part of the service.

(2) On the Day of Atonement.

(3) So shall it be done unto the man that doth not build up his brother's house. Deut. XXV, 9. Here also the word 'house' is used for 'wife' and since 'house' is taken to mean but one wife, no brother would be able to perform the levirate marriage where his dead brother had left two wives.

(4) 'Arusah', betrothed, engaged, but not 'brought home'. The betrothal carries with it almost all the legal consequences of marriage. V. Glos. s.v. Erusin.

(5) If 'house' is to be taken to refer to wife, why should a betrothed sister-in-law be subject to levirate marriage?

(6) If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not be married abroad unto one not of his kin. The word 'abroad' here is superfluous and is taken to indicate that even one who was 'still outside', not having been married properly, but only betrothed, is included in the law of the levirate marriage, v. Yeb. 13b.

(7) 'Onen' is a mourner before the burial of his kinsman, to be distinguished from 'abel', a mourner during the seven days after burial. With regard to the high priest, Lev. XXI, 11 reads: Neither shall he go into any dead body, nor defile himself for his father or for his mother; neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, nor profane the sanctuary of his God. Scripture thus permits his officiating but he is forbidden to eat of any sacred meat whilst in mourning. This is inferred ad majus from Deut. XXVI, 14 which, referring to tithe, is of lesser sanctity than the meat of sacrifices, as the Israelites say: I have not eaten thereof in my mourning.

(8) V. Hor. 12b.

(9) He should be deliberately brought to the Sanctuary from his house, so that his pre-occupation with the sacrifices may help to lessen his grief.

means to say that he does not officiate all that day,¹ as a preventive measure lest he eat.² Said R. Adda b. Ahabah to Raba: But did R. Judah enact a preventive measure lest he eat? Have we not learnt, R. Judah said: WE ALSO PROVIDE ANOTHER WIFE FOR HIM, LEST HIS WIFE DIE? Now when his wife dies he may perform the service [on the same day] without R. Judah becoming apprehensive lest he eat?—He replied: Now is this so?³ There, because it is the Day of Atonement, on which all the world does not eat, he, too, would not be likely to eat, but here [on any day] when all the world is eating, he would also be ready to eat — But under such conditions⁴ what mourning would be coming upon him because of her, since she is divorced from him? — Granted that no mourning would be obligatory, but he would surely be distracted.⁵ MISHNAH. THROUGHOUT THE SEVEN DAYS HE SPRINKLES THE BLOOD⁶ AND BURNS THE INCENSE⁷ AND TRIMS THE LAMPS⁸ AND OFFERS THE HEAD AND THE HIND LEG;⁹ ON ALL OTHER DAYS HE OFFERS ONLY IF HE SO DESIRES; FOR THE HIGH PRIEST IS FIRST IN OFFERING A PORTION¹⁰ AND HAS FIRST PLACE IN TAKING A PORTION.¹¹

GEMARA. Who is the authority [for our Mishnah]? — R. Hisda said: It is not in accord with R. Akiba, for if it were, R. Akiba Surely holds that if some of the sprinkling¹² fell upon a clean person, it rendered him unclean! How could he then officiate at the service?¹³ — For it has been taught: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean,¹⁴ i.e., [if sprinkled] ‘upon the unclean’, [he becomes] clean, [if sprinkled] upon the clean [he becomes] unclean, this is the opinion of R. Akiba. But the Sages hold that these matters [concerning sprinkling]¹⁵ apply only to such things as are susceptible to uncleanness. I What is it about? — As we have learnt: If he intended sprinkling an animal and [happened to] sprinkle a man, then, if there be sufficient water on the hyssop, he may repeat [the sprinkling].¹⁶ If he intended sprinkling a man and he [happened to] sprinkle an animal, then, if there be enough water on the hyssop, he may not repeat [the sprinkling].¹⁷ What is the reason for R. Akiba's view? — Let the Divine Law write ‘And the clean person shall sprinkle upon him’, what is the meaning of ‘upon the unclean,’? Infer from this that [if sprinkled] the unclean becomes clean, and [if sprinkled] the clean becomes unclean. And [what is the reason for the view of] the Rabbis? — These words emphasize that [sprinkling is right] only upon matter susceptible to uncleanness. But this¹⁸ case can be deduced a minori ad majus: If sprinkling upon an unclean makes clean, how much more shall sprinkling upon a clean [keep or make more] clean! And R. Akiba? — It is with reference to this that Solomon said: I said, I will get wisdom, but it is far from me.¹⁹ — And the Sages? [They explain] this [passage to refer] to [the fact that] he who sprinkles and he who is sprinkled are clean, whereas he who touches them [the waters of purification] is rendered unclean.²⁰ — But is he who sprinkles clean? Surely it is written, And he that sprinkleth the water of sprinkling shall wash his clothes?²¹ — ‘Sprinkleth’ here means ‘toucheth’. — But the text reads ‘sprinkleth’ and also mentions ‘toucheth’;²¹ furthermore, he who ‘sprinkleth’ must wash his clothes, whereas he who ‘toucheth’ need not wash his clothes? — Rather ‘sprinkleth’ here means ‘carrieth’ — Then let the Divine Law write ‘carrieth’, why is ‘sprinkleth’ written? — That [is meant] to let us know that there must be a quantity sufficient for the sprinkling.²² That will be right according to him who holds that a definite minimum is necessary in the sprinkling,²³ but according to him who holds there is no required minimum in the sprinkling,²³ what is there to be said? Even according to him who holds there is no required minimum [it will be right], for that refers only to the back of the man,²⁴ but in the vessels there must be a definite quantity, as we have learnt: How much water is necessary to be sufficient for the sprinkling? Enough for dipping

- (4) Since he would rush to the synagogue during her coma so that she would be divorced from him as soon as he entered it (v. infra), hence how could he be considered a mourner for his divorced wife. It is interesting to observe that sudden death does not enter among the many possibilities considered in this discussion. It would invalidate the suggestion of his leaving for the synagogue as soon as his wife was near death.

All this work during the seven days was performed by the high priest.

- (14) Num. XIX, 19: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean, the words 'upon the unclean' seem superfluous, 'upon him' would have been clear enough. From this R. Akiba infers that only upon the unclean has the sprinkling a cleaning effect, with opposite effect on the clean.
- (15) The Sages also consider the words superfluous, but they find in them the intimation that sprinkling has its effect only upon things susceptible to uncleanness, hence, if sprinkled upon things unsusceptible to uncleanness it has been misused, and whatever is left of the water is invalid and may no more be used for sprinkling and cleansing.

- (17) V. Par. XIII, 3. [The hyssop must be dipped anew if the priest desires to perform with it another sprinkling. In having been sprinkled on the animal the water on the hyssop became disqualified as water of purification with which work has been done, and can no longer be used for ritual sprinkling. Thus the Sages infer from the superfluous words 'upon the unclean' that the water of purification may be used only for such things as are susceptible to uncleanness, and by being sprinkled on things not so susceptible it becomes invalid (Rashi). R. Hananel on the basis of another reading explains differently.]

the buds therein and for the water to be sprinkled.¹ Abaye said: [The Mishnah] may be in accord even with R. Akiba: He [the high priest] officiates all day, [and] in the evening is he sprinkled, then he takes the immersion and awaits the sunset.²

AND BURNS THE INCENSE AND TRIMS THE LAMPS. Hence [you may infer that] the incense came first and the lamps afterwards. A contradiction is raised against this:³ He to whom it fell to clear the inner altar of ashes . . . he to whom it fell to clean the candlesticks . . . he to whom it fell to burn the incense?⁴ R. Huna said: Who is the Tanna of [the Tractate] Tamid?⁵ R. Simeon of Mizpah.⁶ But surely we have learnt exactly the opposite.⁷ For we have learnt:⁸ As he⁹ came to the north-eastern corner [of the altar], he sprinkled to the east and north;¹⁰ then he came to the south-western corner and sprinkled it to the west and south. And with reference to this [Mishnaic statement] it was taught: Rabbi Simeon of Mizpah has this change in Tamid:¹¹ As he came to the north-eastern corner he sprinkled it to the east and to the north; then he came to the south-western corner, and sprinkled it to the west and afterwards to the south.¹² — Rather, said R. Johanan: Who is the authority for the order [given] in [the Tractate] Yoma? R. Simeon of Mizpah. But here is a contradiction between the order [given] in [the Tractate] Yoma and the order [given] in another passage therein: The second count decided who should slaughter, who should sprinkle [the blood], who should remove the ashes from the inner altar, who should remove the ashes from the candlestick, who should take up the limbs [of the burnt-offering] to the ramp [of the altar]. The third count: 'Fresh ones, come and be counted for the incense!'¹³ -Abaye said: This is no difficulty. The one case speaks of the trimming of the five lamps, the other of the trimming of the two lamps.¹⁴ Shall we say that the incense interrupted the trimming of the lamps? But Abaye was recounting the order [of the daily Temple service] in the name of a tradition¹⁵ and he has the trimming of the lamps interrupted by the blood of the regular daily offering?¹⁶ — I will tell you: This is no difficulty, the one refers to the [order of the daily Temple service] in accord with Abba Saul, the other in accord with the Sages, for it has been taught: He should not trim the lamps and after that burn the incense, but he should offer the incense first and then trim the lamps. Abba Saul says: He should first trim and then offer [the incense] — What is the reason for Abba Saul's view? — For it is written: Every morning, when he dresseth the lamps,¹⁷ and afterwards [it says], he shall burn it?¹⁸ — And the Sages?¹⁹ What the Divine Law intends here is that at the time the lamps are being trimmed there shall — [still] be a burning of the incense. For, if you would not interpret thus, [how will you account for 'at dusk'], as it is written: And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at dusk, he shall burn it.¹ Would you say here too that he shall first light the lamps and afterwards offer up the incense due at dusk? And if you will say, 'Indeed, so it is,' but has it not been taught:² From evening to morning,³ i.e., provide a sufficient quantity [of oil] that it may burn all night from evening to morning; or, according to another interpretation: 'From evening to morning', i.e., there is no service which is proper [to be performed] 'from evening to morning' except this.⁴ What then the Divine Law intends is that at the time of the lighting there shall [still] be a burning of the incense. Here also: at the time of the trimming there shall [still] be a burning of the incense. And Abba Saul?⁵ It is different there, because Scripture Says: otho [it].⁶ R. Papa said: This⁷ is no difficulty. The one account agrees with the Sages, the other with Abba Saul.⁸ How do you place the matter now: Our Mishnah in accord with the Sages, and [the Mishnah of] the count in accord with Abba Saul? Then consider the second part:⁹ They brought to him the daily sacrifice. He made the incision and another finished the slaughtering for him. He entered to burn the incense and to trim the lamps.¹⁰ That is in accord with the Sages. The beginning and the end [is then] in accord with the Sages and the middle in accord with Abba Saul?¹¹ — R. Papa will tell you: Yes, the beginning and end are in accord with the Sages and the middle with Abba Saul.¹² It is clear why Abaye does not agree with [the interpretation of] R. Papa: because he will not explain the first and last part [of the Mishnah] as being in accord with the Sages, whilst the middle with Abba Saul. But why does not R. Papa take Abaye's point of view? He will tell you: Would he [the Tanna] teach first¹³ of the trimming of two lamps and only afterwards¹⁴ of the trimming of five lamps? And Abaye? — He will tell you: First he teaches in a general fashion [of the obligation of the high priest to be occupied during the seven days],¹⁵ and afterwards he describes the order [of the service].¹⁶

The text [above states]: He came to the north-eastern corner, and sprinkled the east and the north; then [as he came to] the south-western corner, he sprinkled the west and south, and in connection with that it was taught that R. Simeon of Mizpah had this changed in Tamid. As he came to the north-eastern corner he sprinkled the east and north; then as he came to the south-western corner he sprinkled the west and afterwards the south.¹⁷ What is the reason of R. Simeon of Mizpah? — R. Johanan in the name of one of the school of R. Jannai said: Scripture said, And one he-goat for a sin-offering unto the Lord: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt-offering, and the drink-offering thereof.¹⁸ It¹⁹ is a burnt-offering and the Divine Law²⁰ says, Deal with it as with a sin-offering — How is that to be done? He sprinkles one in such a manner as to constitute two [sprinklings], as is prescribed for a burnt-offering and he sprinkles two separate ones as is prescribed for the sin-offering. But let him make two sprinklings in such a manner as to constitute four, as is prescribed for a burnt-offering, and four full sprinklings as is prescribed for a sin-offering? — We do not find anywhere that blood brings atonement and then brings atonement again. But we do find blood, half of which is sprinkled after the manner of a sin-offering, and the other half after the manner of a burnt-offering? What you must of needs [say is] that Scripture has brought them under the same category! Here too one might say 'of needs Scripture has brought them under one category'? — Here it is a case of merely 'splitting' the sprinkling.²¹ But let him sprinkle one so as to constitute two below, as is prescribed for a burnt-offering and two separate sprinklings above as is prescribed for sin-offerings?²² — We do not find that any blood is sprinkled, half above, and half below. Not indeed? Have we not learnt: He sprinkled thereof once upwards, and seven times downwards? That was done ke-mazlif [like the movement of swinging a whip]. What does 'ke-mazlif' mean? Rab Judah showed it by [imitating the movements of] a lasher.²³ But [do we] not [find any blood sprinkled half above and half below]? surely we have learnt: He sprinkled thereof upon the tohar of the altar seven times.²⁴ Don't you think it means upon the middle [of the front] of the altar, as people say 'the noon-light' shines, meaning by 'tihara' the middle of the day? — Rabbah b. Shila said: No, it refers

(5) How does he meet this argument?

(6) Ex. XXVII, 21. Only this ('it') may be done from evening to morning and no other work, so that you are compelled to give this interpretation to the text, but with regard to the verse dealing with the trimming, no such necessity arises.

(7) He refers to the question from the apparent contradiction of the two Mishnahs in Yoma — our Mishnah and the

to the top of the altar itself,¹ for it is written: And the like of the very heaven for clearness.² Why does he just sprinkle first as due with the burnt-offering, and afterwards as due with the sin-offering? Let him first sprinkle as due in case of a sin-offering and after that as due with a burnt-offering! — Because it³ is a burnt-offering, it comes first.⁴ And why does he just sprinkle north-east and south-west. Let him sprinkle south-east and then north-west? — I will tell you: The burnt-offering requires the [projecting] base⁵ [of the altar], and the south-eastern corner has no [projecting] base. — Why does he sprinkle first north-east and then south-west, let him sprinkle south-west and then northeast? — Since a master said:⁶ All the turns you make in the Temple must be to the right, the east, he comes first to that [north-east].⁷ Whence do you know that it is with the burnt-offering that the Divine Law states that it should be offered up in the manner due to a sin-offering? May it not be that it is with regard to the sin-offering⁸ that the Torah says: Offer it up after the manner of the burnt-offerings? — Let not that thought arise in you. For it is written: Beside the continual burnt-offering and the drink-offering thereof.⁹ What does the Divine Law mean by this? Apply the measures [forms] of the sin-offering to the burnt-offering.

We have learnt there: The memuneh¹⁰ said to them: Go and bring a lamb from the Cell of the Lambs.¹¹ Now the Cell of the Lambs was in the north-western corner. Four cells were there: one was the Cell of the Lambs; one the Cell of the Seals,¹² one the Cell of the Fireplace,¹³ and one cell, in which the shewbread was made.¹⁴

They raised an objection: There were four rooms in the Cell of the Fireplace, like small rooms opening into a reception room; two on holy ground, two outside of holy ground; and the ends of the flagstones [in the pavement] indicated the mark between the sacred and the secular grounds. What was their use? The south-western was the Cell of the Lambs for offerings;

(7) In the case of a sin-offering (the blood of which is applied to the corner of the altar), as he goes up to the ramp of the altar and turns right, he comes to the south-eastern corner first, but he may not sprinkle the blood there, because that corner has no projecting base. He therefore goes on to the north-eastern corner, where he sprinkles. The same order is also followed with a burnt-offering, although there is no ascent of the ramp since the blood thereof was sprinkled below the line round the middle of the altar. He approaches the front of the altar from the south, then turns to the right. [The words 'the east' do not apply here, as the first sprinkling is made, as stated, in the north-east. They are mentioned as a current phraseology arising from the context in which the phrase 'all the turns you make etc.' is first used. V. infra 58b.]

Anyone who wished to obtain drink-offerings would go to Johanan who was in charge of the seals, give him money and receive from him a seal, go from him to Ahiyah who was in charge of the drink-offerings, give him the seal and receive from him the drink-offering. Talmud - Mas. Yoma 16a the south-eastern was the cell wherein they made shewbread; in the north-eastern the Hasmoneans hid the stones of the altar, which the Greek kings had defiled;¹ through the north-western they went down to the chamber of immersion!² — R. Huna said: Who is the authority for [the anonymous Mishnahs in] Middoth? R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for we have learnt: The court of the women was one hundred and thirty-five cubits long and one hundred and thirty-five cubits wide. At its four corners there were four cells. What was their use? The south-eastern was the Cell of the Nazirites, where the Nazirites cooked their peace-offerings, and cut off their hair and cast it under the pot;³ the north-eastern was the Cell of the Wood-shed, wherein priests afflicted with a blemish were standing to examine the wood for worms—for any wood wherein a worm was found is unfit for the altar; the north-western was the Cell of the Lepers; as to the south-western, R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: I forget what its use was, whilst Abba Saul said: There they put wine and oil and it used to be called the Cell of the House of Oils.⁴ It may also be proved by reasoning that the authority for [the anonymous Mishnahs in] Middoth is R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for we have learnt: All the walls that were there [in the Temple] were high with the exception of the eastern wall, because the priest who burns the heifer stands on the Mount of Olives and looks towards the entrance of the Temple at the time the blood [of the heifer] is sprinkled.⁵

And we have learnt: All the entrances that were there; were twenty cubits high and ten cubits wide.⁶ And we have learnt: Inside this⁷ was the Soreg [a railing of lattice work].⁸ And we have learnt: Inside this was the Hel [rampart],⁹ ten cubits broad. There were twelve steps there,¹⁰ the height of each step was half a cubit and the depth of each step was half a cubit. [Furthermore]: Fifteen steps which led from the Court of the Israelites to the Court of the Women, the height and depth of each step being half a cubit.¹¹ [Furthermore we learnt]: Between the Hall¹² and the altar there were twenty-two cubits, there were twelve steps, the height and depth of each half a cubit;¹³ and we have learnt: R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: There¹⁴ was a step one cubit high and the platform¹⁵ was set thereon and on it were three steps half a cubit high each.¹⁶ Now, if you can say that the authority for the anonymous¹⁷ [Mishnahs in Tamid] is R. Eliezer b. Jacob then it will be quite right, because according to him the door is concealed;¹⁸ but if you should say that it is in accord with [the other] Rabbis, there would be left half a cubit through which the door would be visible!¹⁹ — R. Adda b. Ahaba said: It is R. Judah, for it has been taught:²⁰ R. Judah said: The altar was placed exactly in the centre of the Temple Court, measuring thirty-two cubits;

(2) Mid. I, 6. An obvious contradiction of the first account above.

(3) Num. VI, 18: And the Nazirite shall shave his consecrated head at the door of the tent of meeting, and shall take the hair of his consecrated head, and put it on the fire which is under the sacrifice of peace-offerings.

(4) Mid. II, 5. R. Eliezer b. Jacob's statement, 'I forget what its use was' indicates that he was the authority of the anonymous Mishnah.

(5) V. Mid. II, 4. (5) The following statement should make what follows clear. All the entrances of the buildings on the Temple mount were twenty cubits high. Inside the Hel were twelve steps, each half a cubit high. From the Court of the Women to the Court of Israel led fifteen steps, and twelve from the Hall to the Temple. Together thirty-nine steps, each half a cubit high, making nineteen and one half cubits in toto. According to this Tanna one need not assume that the eastern wall was lower, for since the height of the entrance is twenty cubits, there would still remain one half cubit of the door, which the steps (being only nineteen and one half cubits high) could not hide, so that the priest burning the heifer could look directly from the top of the Mount of Olives into the entrance to the Temple through the various entrances which were all exactly one against the other. But since we learnt that the eastern wall was lower, the Mishnah must be in accord with Eliezer b. Jacob, according to whom two and one half cubits were added to the height of the steps, for we have learnt in his name: There was a step, one cubit high, on which stood the platform with three steps of half a cubit height each. If we add that to the nineteen and a half cubits of the combined heights of the steps, we get twenty-two cubits (v. Tosaf. Jesh.) and that height would hide from view the entrance which was only twenty cubits high. The high priest burning the heifer looked westwards from the Mount of Olives, i.e. towards the eastern wall of the Temple, that is why, according to R. Eliezer b. Jacob, the eastern wall had to be lower, and that is the conclusive evidence that the anonymous Mishnah of Tamid is in accord with R. Eliezer.

ten cubits opposite the door of the Temple, eleven cubits toward the north, and eleven cubits toward the south. With the result that the altar was exactly opposite the Temple and its walls.¹ But, if you should consider that the authority for Middoth is in accord with R. Judah, how could the altar possibly have stood in the centre of the Temple? Surely we have learnt: The Temple Court in all had a length of a hundred and eighty-seven cubits and a width of a hundred and thirty-five cubits. From east to west it extended over a hundred and eighty-seven cubits; the space which [lay] Israelites trod was eleven cubits; eleven cubits was the space which the priests trod; the altar occupied thirty-two; between Hall and altar were twenty-two cubits; the Sanctuary a hundred cubits and eleven cubits behind the place of the mercy seat.² From north to south was a hundred and thirty-five cubits; the ramp and the altar occupying sixty-two cubits, from the altar to the rings³ eight cubits; the place of the rings twenty-four; from the rings to the tables four; from the tables to the columns four;⁴ from the columns to the walls of the Temple Court eight cubits and the remainder lay between the ramp and the wall and the place of the columns.⁵ Now if you were to consider that the authority for Middoth is R. Judah, how is it possible that the altar be in the centre of the Temple, since the bigger part of the altar lies towards the south?⁶

(1) The inside of the Temple was twenty cubits, the walls were six cubits in depth, and the height of the altar was nine cubits to which must be added the thirteen and a half cubits rise in the level of the Court of the Israelites where the altar stood making a total of twenty-two and a half cubits; thus the altar would hide the Temple door, hence the lower eastern wall. V. Zeb. 58b.

- (2) [An empty space beyond the Holy of Holies, the purpose of which is not stated anywhere.]
- (3) They were set in the ground in the slaughter-house, north of the altar, and the necks of the animals were placed in them. The most holy sacrifices were slain on the north side of the altar, Zeb. 47a.
- (4) Low columns placed in the ground, to which iron hooks were attached, on which the animals were hung for flaying.
- (5) Mid. V, 1, 2.
- (6) [The figures given here as from south to north make a total of a hundred and ten cubits. To this must be added the space of four cubits occupied by the table, which is not mentioned here, then leaving a remainder of twenty-one cubits which lay equally between the ramp and the wall and the place of columns. This allows for ten and a half cubits for the space between the ramp (which was on the south of the altar) and the southern wall of the court. Deducting this from sixty-seven and a half cubits which was half the breadth of the court from south to north, we are left with fifty-seven cubits within which lay the ramp, thirty cubits in length, and twenty-seven out of the thirty-cubits of the altar proper, with the result that the larger part of the altar lay in the southern half of the court. V. Rashi.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 17a

Must one not rather infer that the authority [for Middoth] is R. Eliezer b. Jacob?¹ That is the right inference.

R. Adda,² the son of R. Isaac said: That cell³ was removed [from both] corners;⁴ to him that came from the north it appeared to be in the south and to him who came from the south it appeared to be in the north — It is to be proved by inference that it lay more in the south-west. Whence [can this be proved]? From a contradiction from [one statement about the] Cell of the Shewbread to [another statement about the] Cell of the Shewbread and the answer given by R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua: 'One teacher considers it as lying to the right, and the other as lying to the left'.⁵

(1) [And the entrance of the Sanctuary was covered from the sight of the priest, who burnt the heifer on the Mount of Olives, by the extra step and not by the altar, for according to him the whole altar lay in the southern half of the court. V. infra 37b.]

(2) R. Adda wishes to reconcile the two contradictory Mishnahs in regard to the position of the Cell of the Lambs.

(3) The Cell of the Lambs.

(4) [Situated on the west side it extended from north to south, though removed from both extremities.]

(5) The Tanna in Tamid (supra 15b) mentions the Cell of the Lambs in the north-west, and assuming that he is counting towards the right, the Cell of the Seals would be in the south-west, the Cell of the Fireplace in the south-east, and the Cell of the Shewbread in the north-east. Against that the objection was raised, viz., the Mishnah in Middoth places the Cell of the Shewbread in the south-east. Whereupon R. Huna said: The Tanna of Middoth counts from the right, whereas the Tanna of Tamid counts from the left. Now, if we say that the Tanna of Tamid, who says that the Cell of the Lambs lay in the north-western corner, admits that it lay more to the south-west, but that it appeared (as the Gemara above has it) to the north-west, and he started in reality counting from the south-west, that will explain the contradictory statements in Tamid and Middoth; but if you say that his statement, the Cell of Lambs lay in the north-western corner, is to be taken literally, there is no sense in the answer, for even if one counted towards the left, that cell would be lying in the south-western corner.

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. THE BEARER OF A BILL OF DIVORCE [GET] FROM [A HUSBAND IN] FOREIGN PARTS¹ [TO THE LAND OF ISRAEL] IS REQUIRED TO DECLARE [ON PRESENTING IT TO THE WIFE]. 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED.' RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS: [THIS DECLARATION IS] ALSO [REQUIRED] IF HE BRINGS IT FROM REKEM OR FROM HEGAR.² R. ELEAZAR SAYS: EVEN IF HE BRINGS IT FROM KEFAR LUDIM TO LUD.³ THE SAGES, HOWEVER, SAY THAT THE DECLARATION 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED' IS REQUIRED ONLY FROM ONE WHO BRINGS A BILL OF DIVORCE [FROM FOREIGN PARTS TO THE LAND OF ISRAEL] OR WHO TAKES IT [FROM THE LAND OF ISRAEL TO FOREIGN PARTS].⁴ THE BEARER [OF SUCH A DOCUMENT] FROM ONE PROVINCE TO ANOTHER IN FOREIGN PARTS IS ALSO REQUIRED TO DECLARE, IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED.' RABBAN SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAYS IT IS REQUIRED EVEN IF HE TAKES IT FROM ONE GOVERNORSHIP⁵ TO ANOTHER. R. JUDAH SAYS: [FOREIGN PARTS EXTEND] FROM REKEM EASTWARDS, REKEM BEING INCLUDED; FROM ASKELON SOUTHWARDS, ASKELON INCLUDED; AND FROM ACCO⁶ NORTHWARDS, ACCO INCLUDED. R. MEIR, [HOWEVER,] HELD THAT ACCO COUNTS AS ERETZ ISRAEL IN THE MATTER OF BILLS OF DIVORCE. THE BEARER OF A BILL OF DIVORCE [FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER] IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL IS NOT REQUIRED TO DECLARE, 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED;' IF ITS VALIDITY IS CHALLENGED IT MUST BE ESTABLISHED THROUGH THE SIGNATURES.⁷ GEMARA.

What is the reason [for this requirement]? Rabbah Says:

(1) Lit., 'province of the sea': a name given to all countries outside of Palestine and Babylonia.

(2) The Biblical Kadesh and Bared (Gen. XVI, 14), on the southern border of Palestine, [v. Targum Onkelos loc. cit. Josephus (Ant. IV. 7, 1) who names the place Arekem (cf. oerv in our Mishnah) identifies it with Petra. Hegar is identified by Hildesheimer, Beitrage zur Geographie Palastinas (pp. 53 and 68) with the wilderness of Shur on the South-western Palestine border of Egypt].

(3) Lydda. Two neighbouring places on opposite sides of the border. [Kefar Ludim was about two hours walking distance from Lud on the north-west, v. Kaftorhwa-Ferah (Luncz ed.) p. 128].

It is because [the Jews in foreign parts] are [for the most part] ignorant of the rule of 'special intention'.¹ Raba says: It is because it is not easy to find witnesses who can confirm the signatures.² What difference does it make [in practice] which reason we adopt? — [It does] in the case where the Get has been brought by two persons;³ or again, where it has been taken from one province to another in the Land of Israel;⁴ or again, from one place to another in the same foreign country.⁵ Seeing that Rabbah's reason is that Jews abroad are ignorant of the rule of 'special intention', why does he not require that the Get should be brought by two bearers, so as to bring this case into line with the general rule of the Torah regarding evidence?⁶ — One witness is sufficient where the question at issue is a ritual prohibition.⁷ But presumably the rule that one witness is sufficient where the question at issue is a ritual prohibition applies for instance to the case of a piece of fat of which we do not know whether it is permitted or forbidden, there being no prima facie ground for declaring it prohibited. Here, however, since there is prima facie ground for assuming the prohibition regarding a married woman,⁸ the question becomes one of prohibited sex relationship, and for disproving such a relationship the evidence of two witnesses is required?⁹ — Most [of the Jews abroad] are acquainted [with the rule of 'special intention'].¹⁰ And even if, following the practice of R. Meir, we take account of the exceptions, [it will make no difference.] for most of the scribes of the Beth din know the law, and it was the Rabbis who [on their own authority] insisted [on this declaration], and in this case,

- (1) vna Lit., 'for her name': the rule that the Get must from its inception have been intended expressly for that woman.
- (2) In case the husband comes and questions the validity of the Get, and the declaration of the bearer is regarded as an authentication of the signatures by two witnesses.
- (3) Rabbah would still require the declaration, Raba not.
- (4) Here Raba would require the declaration, Rabbah not.
- (5) Here Rabbah would require the declaration, Raba not.
- (6) By the mouth of two witnesses a matter shall be established, Deut. XIX, 15.
- (7) As opposed to a pecuniary liability.
- (8) Since the recipient of the Get is a married woman she is prima facie (until we know that the Get is valid) forbidden to all other men.
- (9) V. Sot. 3.
- (10) Hence we do not suspect the husband of having broken this rule.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 3a

on account of the danger of the woman becoming a 'deserted wife', those [same] Rabbis made a concession¹ [by allowing one bearer to suffice]. You call this a concession? It is rather a hardship. since if you require that the Get should be brought by two [bearers], there is no danger of the husband coming and challenging it² and getting it declared invalid; but if only one is required, he will be able to do so? — No. You know what a Master has told us:³ ['On the question] how many persons must be present when he [the bearer] gives [the writ] to her [the wife], there was a difference of opinion between R. Johanan and R. Haninah, one holding that [at least] two were required, and the other that [at least] three.' This being so, [the bearer] will make sure [of the husband's intentions] from the first, and [the husband] will not come [and invalidate the Get] and bring himself into trouble later.⁴ Since Raba's reason is that it is not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures, why does not he also require two [bearers]. so as to bring this document into line with all others [which may require such confirmation]? — One witness is sufficient where the question at issue is a ritual prohibition. But presumably the rule that one witness is sufficient where the question at issue is a ritual prohibition applies for instance to the case of a piece of fat of which we do not know whether it is permitted or forbidden, there being no prima facie ground for declaring it prohibited. Here, however, since there is prima facie ground for assuming the prohibition regarding a married woman, the question becomes one of prohibited sex relationship, and for disproving such a relationship the evidence of two witnesses is required? — By rights no witnesses should be required for confirming [the signature on] other documents⁵ either, as may be inferred from the dictum of Resh Lakish, that signatures of witnesses to a document are just as reliable as if their evidence had been sifted in the Beth din. It is the Rabbis who on their own authority insisted [on two witnesses for this], and here on account of the danger of the woman becoming a ‘deserted wife’, these [same] Rabbis made a concession. You call this a concession? It is rather a hardship, since if you require that the Get should be brought by two bearers, there is no danger of the husband coming and challenging it and getting it declared invalid; but if only one is required, he will be able to do so? — No. You know what a certain Master has told us: [‘On the question] how many persons must be present when he gives her the Get, there was a difference of opinion between R. Johanan and R. Haninah, one holding that [at least] two were required and the other [at least] three.’ This being so, the bearer will make sure of the husband’s intentions, and [the husband] will not come [and invalidate the Get] and bring himself into trouble later.

Why did not Raba give the same reason that Rabbah gave? — He will tell you: Does the Mishnah then require him to declare, ‘In my presence it was written in her name, in my presence it was signed in her name’? And Rabbah? — He might retort that by rights the formula ought to run thus, and the reason why it does not is because if you give the bearer too many words to say, he will leave out some. As it is he may leave something out? — He might omit one word out of three,⁶ he will hardly omit one word from two.⁷

Why did not Rabbah give the reason which Raba gave? — He will tell you: If this were the reason the Mishnah should require the bearer to declare simply, ‘In my presence it was signed’ and no more, the fact that he has also to say, ‘In my presence it was written’ shows that ‘Special intention’ is required. And Raba? — He might retort that by rights the formula should run thus, but if it did the impression might be created that the confirmation of signatures to documents in general requires only one witness. And Rabbah? — He might rejoin that the two cases⁸ are not similar. There the formula is, ‘We know [this to be So-and-so’s signature],’ here it is, ‘In my presence etc.’; there a woman is debarred,⁹ here a woman is not debarred;¹⁰ there the party concerned¹¹ is debarred, here the party concerned is not debarred.¹² And Raba? — He could rejoin that here also if [the bearer] says ‘I know etc.’ his word is accepted, and since this is so there is a danger¹³ of creating the impression that confirmation of signatures to documents in general requires only one witness.

According to Rabbah, as we have seen, the reason [for requiring the declaration] is that [Jews outside the Land of Israel] are not familiar with the rule of ‘special intention’. [Assuming that this is so,] who is the authority that requires the Get to be both written

(1) To enable her to remarry.

- (2) Finding some flaw in the drafting or procedure.
- (3) Infra 5b.
- (4) [Lit., 'do injury' to himself (i.e., to his reputation). Rashi and Adreth, Hiddushim a.l., and infra p. 14, n. 2.]
- (5) I.e., relating to money matters.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 3b

and signed with special reference to that woman? It cannot be R. Meir, for he requires only that it should be signed, but not that it should be written with this intention, as we learn:¹ 'A Get must not be written on something still attached to the soil. If it was written on something still attached to the soil, then torn off, signed and given to the woman, it is valid.'² Nor again can it be R. Eleazar, for [as we know] R. Eleazar requires that it should be written but not necessarily that it should be signed with 'special intention'.³ Nor can you maintain that after all it is R. Eleazar, and that in saying that 'special intention' is not required, he means 'not required by the Torah', but he admits that it is required by the Rabbis. This cannot be; for there are three kinds of Get [which the Rabbis have declared invalid, though they are not invalid according to the Torah], and R. Eleazar does not include among them one which has not been signed with 'special intention', as appears from the following Mishnah:⁴ Three kinds of Get are invalid, but if a woman marries on the strength of one of them, the child is legitimate. [One,] if the husband wrote it with his own hand but it was attested by no witnesses; [a second,] if there are witnesses to it but no date; [a third,] if it has a date but the signature of only one witness. These three kinds of Get are invalid, but if the woman remarries on the strength of one of them, the child is legitimate. R. Eleazar says that even though it was not attested by witnesses at all, so long as he gave it to her in the presence of witnesses it is valid, and on the strength of it she may recover her kethubah from mortgaged property, since signatures of witnesses are required to a Get only as a safeguard.⁵ Are we to say then that after all R. Meir is the authority, and that he dispenses with 'special intention' only as a requirement of the Torah but not as a requirement of the Rabbis? How can this be, in view of what we have been told by R. Nahman, that R. Meir used to rule that even if the husband found a Get ready written on a rubbish heap

- (1) Infra 21b.
 - (2) Which shows that if the signing is in order, the writing does not matter.
 - (3) Because according to R. Eleazar, it is not necessary that the Get should be signed at all.
 - (4) V. infra 86a.
 - (5) This shows that R. Eleazar does not require the Get to be signed with 'special intention'.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 4a

and signed it and gave it to her, it is valid? Nor can you say that this ruling means ‘valid as far as the Torah is concerned,’ for in that case R. Nahman should have said not, ‘R. Meir used to rule,’ but ‘It is a rule of the Torah’? — After all, we come back to the opinion that R. Eleazar was the authority, and [we say that] where he dispenses with the requirement of ‘special intention’ is in the case where there are no witnesses at all, but if [the Get] is signed, it must be signed with such intention. This accords with the statement of R. Abba, that R. Eleazar admitted that a Get which contains a flaw in itself¹ is invalid.

R. Ashi said: Shall I tell you who the authority [of the Mishnah] is? It is R. Judah, as shown by the following Mishnah: R. Judah declares the Get invalid unless it has been both written and signed on something not attached to the soil.² Why did we not at the outset declare R. Judah to be the authority? — We tried if possible [to base ourselves on the authority of] R. Meir because, where a Mishnah is stated anonymously [its author is] R. Meir.³ We also try if possible [to base ourselves on the authority of] R. Eleazar, because it is generally agreed that his ruling is decisive in questions of writs of divorce.

Our Mishnah says: RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS, THE DECLARATION MUST ALSO BE MADE BY ONE WHO BRINGS A GET FROM REKEM AND FROM HEGAR. R. ELEAZAR SAYS, EVEN IF HE BRINGS IT FROM KEFAR LUDIM TO LUD. [Commenting on this passage,] Abaye said that it refers to places adjoining⁴ the Land of Israel and to places within the ambit of⁵ the Land of Israel.⁶ Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said: I have myself seen that placed and am able to state that the distance⁷ is the same as from Be Kubi to Pumbeditha. Now [from the words of the Mishnah just quoted] we infer that the first Tanna⁸ was of opinion that in these cases the declaration was not necessary. May we assume that the point of divergence between them is that one authority⁹ holds that the reason why the declaration is required is because [Jews outside of the Land of Israel] are not familiar with the rule of ‘special intention’, and he excepts [the Jews of] these places because they are familiar,¹⁰ whereas the other authority¹¹ holds that the reason [why the declaration is required] is because it is not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures, and he [includes the Jews of] these places because here too it is not easy?¹² — No. Rabbah can account for the difference in his way and Raba in his way. Rabbah can account for it thus: All the authorities are agreed that the reason for requiring the declaration is because of the unfamiliarity [of the Jews outside Eretz Israel] with the rule of ‘special intention’, and the point of divergence between them is that the first Tanna is of opinion that in these places on account of their proximity to Eretz Israel the Jews are familiar with the rule, whereas Rabban Gamaliel held that this was so only in the case of places which lay within the ambit of Eretz Israel but not in those which merely adjoined it, and R. Eleazar would not allow it to be so even in the case of places which lay within the ambit, no distinction being made among places which belong to ‘foreign parts’. Raba accounts for the difference thus: All the authorities are agreed that the reason for requiring the declaration is because it is not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures, and the point of divergence between them is that the first Tanna is of opinion that in these places, on account of their proximity to the Land of Israel, it is easy to find witnesses, whereas Rabban Gamaliel held that this was so only in places which lie within the ambit of Eretz

Israel, but not in those which only adjoin it, and R. Eleazar would not allow it to be so even in places lying within the ambit, as no distinction is to be made among places which belong to 'foreign parts'.

Our Mishnah says: [THE SAGES SAY] THE DECLARATION, 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED IS REQUIRED ONLY FROM ONE WHO BRINGS A GET FROM FOREIGN PARTS AND FROM ONE WHO TAKES IT THERE. We infer from this that in the opinion of the first Tanna the bearer [of a bill of divorce] to foreign parts is not required to make the declaration. May we assume that the point of divergence between the two authorities is that one holds that the reason why the declaration is required is because [Jews in foreign parts] are not familiar with the rule of 'Special intention', and he excepts the bearer of a Get from Eretz Israel because there they are familiar, whereas the other authority held the reason to be because it is not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures, and this applies to 'foreign parts' also? — No. Rabbah¹ can account for the difference in his way and Raba in his way. Rabbah explains thus: Both authorities are agreed that the reason for requiring the declaration is because of the unfamiliarity [of the Jews outside Eretz Israel] with the rule of 'special intention', and where they diverge is on the question whether we extend the obligation properly meant for the bearer from foreign parts to the bearer to foreign parts, one holding that we do make this extension, the other that we do not. Raba explains thus: Both authorities agree that the reason for requiring the declaration is because it is not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures, and the Rabbis mentioned in the second clause merely made explicit what was in the mind of the first Tanna.

Our Mishnah says: THE BEARER OF A GET FROM ONE PROVINCE TO ANOTHER IN FOREIGN PARTS IS REQUIRED TO DECLARE, 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED'; from which we infer that if he takes it from one place to another in the same province 'in foreign parts'. he need not make the declaration. This conforms with the view of Raba but conflicts with that of Rabbah, [does it not]? — No. You must not infer [that if the Get is taken] from one place to another in the same province ‘in foreign parts’, the declaration is not required. What you have to infer is that if it is taken from one province to another in the Land of Israel the declaration is not required. But this is stated distinctly in the following clause of the Mishnah: THE BEARER OF A GET [FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER] IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL IS NOT REQUIRED TO DECLARE, ‘IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED’! — If I had only that to go by I should say that while this omission does not invalidate the Get retroactively. It is not permissible in the first instance; now I know that this is also the case.²

The objection here raised is also stated in the following form: I infer that the bearer of a Get from one province to another in the Land of Israel is not required to make the declaration. This is in conformity [is it not] with the view of Rabbah but conflicts with that of Raba? — You must not infer that [if it is taken] from one province to another in the Land of Israel the declaration is not required. The proper inference to draw is that it is not required from the bearer from one part to another of the same country in foreign parts. What then? From the bearer from one province to another in the Land of Israel it is required? Then it would be sufficient for the Mishnah to say, ‘The bearer of a Get from one province to another’ [without mentioning ‘foreign parts’]? — The fact is that it is not necessary for the bearer from one province to another in the Land of Israel either,³ since on account of the festival pilgrimages [to Jerusalem] it is always possible to find witnesses. This may have been a good reason so long as the Temple was standing, but what of the time when there is no Temple? — Since there are [Jewish law] courts regularly established, witnesses can always be found.

We have learnt: Our Mishnah says: RABBAN SIMEON BEN GAMALIEL SAYS, EVEN THE BEARER FROM ONE GOVERNORSHIP TO ANOTHER, and commenting on this R. Isaac said that there was a certain city in Eretz Israel, ‘Assasioth by name,⁴ in which were two Governors at variance with each other,⁵ and that is why the Mishnah had to put in the clause ‘from governorship to governorship’. Now this ruling conforms with the view of Raba, [does it not,] but conflicts with that of Rabbah? — Rabbah accepts Raba's reason also.⁶ Where then does a difference arise between them in practice? — If the Get was brought by two bearers, or if it was brought from one place to another in the Same province in a ‘foreign country’.⁷

We have learnt: Where the bearer of a Get from foreign parts is not able to declare, ‘in my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed’, if the Get has been signed by witnesses, its validity can be established through the signatures.⁸ We were perplexed by the expression, ‘is unable to say’.

(3) And yet this does not conflict with the view of Raba.

(4) [Horowitz, I. Palestine p. 63 identifies it with Essa, east of the Lake Kinnereth, which was in his view divided into two governorships, Essa and Gerasa.]

(5) So that there was no intercourse between them.

(6) So that Rabbah requires the declaration to be made in all cases in which Raba requires it, but not vice versa.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 5a

Shall we say it refers to a deaf-mute? But can a deaf-mute be the bearer of a Get, seeing that we learn, 'All persons are qualified to be bearers of a Get except a deaf-mute, a lunatic, and a minor'? And this difficulty was solved by R. Joseph, who said that we are dealing here with a case in which he gave the woman the Get while he was still in possession of his faculties, but before he could say the formula was struck deaf and dumb. Now this conforms with the view of Raba, [does it not,] but conflicts with that of Rabbah?¹ — [This Mishnah was formulated] after the rule [of 'special intention'] had become generally known. If that is the case, even if the bearer is able to repeat the formula, [what need is there for him to do so]? — This was a precaution in case there is a return of the abuse. If that is the case, even if the bearer is not able to repeat the formula [it should still be required]? — For a man to be suddenly struck dumb is an exceptional occurrence, and the Rabbis did not take precautions against such exceptional cases. [Is that so?] For a woman to be the bearer of her own Get is very exceptional, and yet we learn:² The wife can act as bearer of her own Get [to a specified Beth din], and she is equally required to declare, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed'? — The reason for this is to avoid making any distinction between bearer and bearer. If that is so, the same rule [should apply to the] husband; why then has it been taught: If the husband brings the Get personally, he is not required to declare, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed'? — The reason why the Rabbis insisted on this declaration in the first instance was to provide against the danger of the husband coming to challenge and invalidate the Get. In this case, seeing that he brings it himself, is it conceivable that he should raise objections against it?

Come and hear: Samuel put the following question to R. Huna: If a Get is brought from foreign parts by two bearers, are they required to declare, 'In our presence it was written and in our presence it was signed', or are they not? And [R. Huna] answered that they are not required, because should they declare, 'In our presence he divorced her,' would their word not be accepted? This conforms, [does it not,] with the view of Raba and conflicts with that of Rabbah? — This Mishnah was formulated after the rule [of 'special intention'] had become generally known. If that is so, even if there is only one bearer, [the declaration should not be required]? — This was a precaution in case there is a recurrence of the abuse. If that is so, the same precaution should be taken when there are two bearers? — For a Get to be brought by two persons is exceptional, and the Rabbis did not take precautions against exceptional cases. [Is this so?] For a woman to be the bearer of her own Get is very exceptional, and yet we learn: The wife can act as bearer of her own Get, but she is equally required to declare, 'In my presence, etc.'? — The reason for this is to avoid making any distinction between bearer and bearer. If that is so, the same rule should apply to the husband; why then is it taught, If the husband brings the Get personally, he is not required to declare, 'In my presence, etc.'? — The reason why the Rabbis insisted on this declaration in the first instance was to provide against the danger of the husband coming to challenge and invalidate the Get. In this case, seeing that he brings it himself, is it conceivable that he should raise objections against it?

Come and hear: If the bearer of a Get from foreign parts gave it to the wife but did not declare,

'In my presence etc.', if the genuineness of the signatures [attached to the Get] can be established, it is valid, and if not it is invalid. From this we deduce that the purpose of requiring this declaration is to make the process of divorce easier and not more difficult.³ This conforms, [does it not,] with the opinion of Raba and conflicts with that of Rabbah? — This Mishnah was formulated after the rule [of 'special intention'] became generally known. But you yourself have maintained that it is necessary to take precautions in case there is a recurrence of the abuse? — We are dealing here with the case where the woman has remarried.⁴ If so, how can you say, 'From this we deduce that this requirement is intended to make the process of divorce easier and not more difficult'? The reason why we allow the validity of the Get to be established through its signatures is because she has remarried? — We must read the passage thus: '[The Get is valid if the signatures can be confirmed.] And should you think that if she has remarried we should be more strict and force [her husband] to put her away, we must bear in mind that the purpose of requiring this declaration is to make the process of divorce easier and not more difficult. The whole reason

(1) [For according to Rabbah even if the signatures are authenticated it does not follow that the Get was written with 'special intention'.]

(2) Infra 23b.

(3) It saves the trouble of securing a witness to attest the signatures.

(4) And her disregard of the precaution does not warrant the enforcement of a separation.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 5b

why it is required is as a precaution against the risk of the husband coming to challenge and invalidate [the Get]. Seeing that here the [first] husband is raising no objection, shall we go out of our way to do so?

[An identical] difference of opinion [had already been recorded] between R. Johanan and R. Joshua b. Levi,¹ one of whom held that the reason [for requiring the declaration] was because the Jews outside the Land of Israel were not familiar with the rule of 'special intention', and the other that it was because witnesses could not easily be found to confirm the signatures. We may conclude that it was R. Joshua b. Levi who gave the reason, 'because they are not familiar with the rule of "special intention",' from the following incident. R. Simeon b. Abba once brought a Get before R. Joshua b. Levi, and said to him: Am I required to declare, 'I was present when it was written and present when it was signed'? and he replied: You need not make the declaration. It was only required in former generations, when the rule of 'special intention' was not generally known, but not in these times when the rule is known. We may therefore conclude [that it was R. Joshua b. Levi who gave this reason]. [Was this a good ruling,] seeing that Rabbah accepts Raba's reason also, and further that, as we have said, precaution should be taken in case there is a recurrence of the abuse? — There was another man with him,² although he is not mentioned [in the passage quoted] out of respect for R. Simeon.

It has been stated: [On the question] how many persons must be present when the bearer of the Get gives it to the wife there was a difference of opinion between R. Johanan and R. Haninah, one holding that a minimum of two were required and the other a minimum of three. It may be concluded that it was R. Johanan who held that two were sufficient, [from the following incident]. Rabin son of R. Hisda brought a Get before R. Johanan, and the latter said to him: Go and give it to her in the presence of two persons, and say to them, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed.' We may therefore conclude [that R. Johanan held two to be sufficient]. May we assume that the point on which R. Johanan and R. Haninah diverge is that the one who held two persons to be sufficient considered the reason for requiring the declaration to be the general ignorance of the rule of 'special intention',³ while the one who insisted on three considered the reason to be the difficulty of finding witnesses?⁴ — [Can this be so?] We have found that it is R. Joshua who assigns as the reason ignorance of the rule of 'special intention', and so it must be R. Johanan who assigns as the reason the difficulty of finding witnesses. How then can it be R. Johanan who here says that two persons are sufficient? Moreover [is it not a fact] that Rabbah also accepts Raba's reason? No. [The reason of the declaration is because] we need witnesses who should be available to validate the Get, and the point at issue here is whether it is permitted to an agent to act as a witness and a witness as a judge. The authority who says that two persons are sufficient holds that an agent may act as witness and a witness may act as judge,⁵ whereas the one who insists on three holds that while an agent may act as witness, a witness may not act as judge. But has it not been laid down that in the case of evidence required only by the Rabbis⁶ [but not by the Torah] a witness may act as judge? No. The real point at issue is this, that one authority held that since a woman is qualified to bring the Get there is a danger [if only two persons are required] that we may rely upon her,⁷ while the other held that everyone knows that a woman is not qualified [to complete a Beth din], and therefore there is no danger.

It has been taught in agreement with R. Johanan: If the bearer of a Get from foreign parts gave it to the wife without declaring, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed,' if she marries again the second husband must put her away and a child born from the union is a mamzer.⁸ This is the opinion of R. Meir. But the Rabbis say that the child is not a mamzer. What should be done [to rectify matters?] The bearer should take the Get back from the woman, and then present it to her in the presence of two persons, declaring at the same time, In my presence it was written, and in my presence it was signed. [Are we to suppose then that] according to R. Meir, because the bearer failed [in the first instance] to make this declaration, the second husband has to put away the woman, and the child is a mamzer? — Yes: R. Meir in this is quite consistent; for so R. Hammuna has told us in the name of 'Ulla, that R. Meir used to affirm: If any variation whatever is made in the procedure laid down by the Sages for writs of divorce, the second husband has to put the woman away and the child is a mamzer.

Bar Hadaya once desired to act as bearer of a Get.⁹ Before doing so he consulted R. Ahi, who was a supervisor of writs of divorce.¹⁰ Said R. Ahi to him: You must watch the writing of every letter of the document. He then consulted R. Ammi and R. Assi, who said to him: This is not necessary, and if you think to be on the safe side, you must consider that by doing so you will be discrediting previous writs of divorce.¹¹ Rabba b. Bar Hanah once acted as bearer of a Get¹² of which half had been written in his presence and half not. He consulted R. Eleazar, who told him that even if only one line of it had been written with 'special intention' that was sufficient. R. Ashi said:

(1) Two Amoraim of an earlier generation than Rabbah and Raba.

- (2) And therefore Raba's reason did not apply.
- (3) And therefore it is sufficient if two can testify to the delivery of the Get, after having heard the bearer make, in their presence, the proper declaration.
- (4) And therefore we require three persons to be available (in case the husband comes and challenges the Get), since the confirmation of signatures must take place in the presence of three, constituting a kind of Beth din; (v. Keth. 21b).
- (5) And therefore the bearer of the Get may join with the two witnesses of the delivery to form a Beth din.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 6a

Even if he only heard the scratching of the pen and the rustling of the sheet,¹ it is sufficient. It has been taught in agreement with R. Ashi: 'If a Get is brought from foreign parts, even if the bearer was downstairs while the scribe was upstairs, or upstairs while the scribe was downstairs, the Get is valid, or even if he was going in and out all day, the Get is valid.' [Now in the case where] he is downstairs and the scribe is upstairs [you may ask, how can this be,] seeing that the bearer cannot have seen him [while writing]?² Obviously [what is meant is] that he, for instance, heard the scratching of the pen and the rustling of the sheet.³

The Master said: 'Even if he was going in and out all day the Get is valid'. Who is referred to by 'he'? Shall I say it is the bearer? Hardly; for if the Get is valid even when he was in a different room and so did not see it at all, is there any question that it is valid when he simply was going in and out [of the same room]? [Shall I say] then it is the scribe? Surely this is self-evident. Because he leaves the room sometimes [in the middle of writing]. is that any ground for declaring the Get invalid? — It is not [so self-evident]. It is necessary to state the case where he went out into the street and returned. You might say that another man [of the same name] has come across him and commissioned him to write a Get.⁴ Now we know [that this objection is not maintained].

It has been stated: Babylonia has been declared by Rab to be in the same category with the Land of Israel in respect of writs of divorce, and by Samuel to be in the same category with foreign parts.⁵ May we assume their point of divergence to be this, that one of them held the reason for requiring the declaration to be that [Jews outside the Land of Israel] are not familiar with the rule of 'special intention', so that [the Babylonians,] being familiar, [are in the same category with the Palestinians], whereas the other held the reason to be the difficulty of finding witnesses to confirm [the signatures], and the same difficulty is found [in Babylonia]? — Can you really presume this, seeing that Rabbah also accepts Raba's reason? No. Both [Rab and Samuel] agree that the Get requires confirmation. Rab, however, is of opinion that since there are Talmudical Colleges in Babylonia witnesses can always be found,⁶ while Samuel is of opinion that the Colleges are taken up with their studies.⁷ It has also been stated that R. Abba said in the name of R. Huna: 'In Babylonia we have put ourselves on the same level as Eretz Israel in respect of bills of divorce from the time when Rab came to Babylon.'⁸ R. Jeremiah raised an objection: R. JUDAH SAYS, FOREIGN PARTS EXTEND FROM REKEM EASTWARDS, REKEM BEING INCLUDED; FROM ASKELON SOUTHWARD, ASKELON BEING INCLUDED: AND FROM ACCO NORTHWARDS, ACCO BEING INCLUDED. Now Babylon is north of Eretz Israel, as we learn from the verse of the Scripture, And the Lord said to me, Out of the north the evil shall break forth.⁹ It is true, the Mishnah continues: R. MEIR SAYS, ACCO COUNTS AS PART OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL IN THE MATTER OF BILLS OF DIVORCE; but even R. Meir only excepted Acco, which is close to Eretz Israel, but not Babylon, which is remote!¹⁰ — R. Jeremiah asked the question and he himself answered [by saying that] 'Babylon is an exception.

How far does Babylon extend? — R. Papa says: On this question there is the same difference of opinion in respect of bills of divorce as there is in respect of family descent.¹¹ R. Joseph, however, says that the difference of opinion exists only in respect of family descent, but in respect of bills of divorce all parties are agreed that Babylonia extends to the second boat of the [floating] bridge.¹² R. Hisda required [the declaration to be made by the bearer of a Get] from Ktesifon to Be-Ardashir, but not [by one who brought it] from Be-Ardashir to Ktesifon.¹³ May we presume that he considered the reason [for requiring the declaration to be that Jews in foreign parts] are not familiar with the rule of 'special intention', and that the people of Be-Ardashir are familiar? — How can you presume this, seeing that Rabbah accepts Raba's reason also? But in point of fact all authorities are agreed that confirmation [of the Get] is required, and the reason of R. Hisda is that as the people of Be-Ardashir go to Ktesifon to market, the inhabitants of the latter are familiar with their signatures,¹⁴ but not vice versa, because the Be-Ardashir [buyers] are busy with their marketing. Rabba b. Abbuha required [the declaration to be made if the Get was brought] from one side of the street to the other; R. Shesheth if it was brought from one block [of buildings] to another; and Raba even [from one house to another] within the same block. But was it not Raba who said that the reason was because it was not easy to find witnesses to confirm the signatures? — The people of Mahuzah¹⁵ are different, because they are always on the move.¹⁶

R. Hanin related the following: R. Kahana brought a Get either from Sura to Nehardea or from Nehardea to Sura, I do not know which, and consulted Rab as to whether he was required to declare, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed.' Rab said to him: You are not required,

(2) [It is assumed that where the bearer is upstairs he can see the scribe who is working downstairs. V. Trani, who preserves a reading to this effect.]

(4) And therefore the Get was not written expressly for the woman to whom the bearer is intended to take it.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 6b

but if you have done so, so much the better. What [did Rab] mean by these last words? — [He meant] that if the husband came and raised objections against the Get, they would pay no attention to him;¹ as it has been taught: A man once brought a Get before R. Ishmael, and asked him whether he was required to declare, 'In my presence etc. Said R. Ishmael to him: My son, from where are you? He replied: Rabbi, I am from Kefar Sisai. Whereupon R. Ishmael said to him: It is necessary for you to declare that It was written and signed in your presence, so that the woman should not require witnesses [in case the husband raises objections]. After the man left, R. Ila'i came in to R. Ishmael and said to him: Is not Kefar Sisai² within the ambit of the border-line of Eretz Israel, and is it not nearer to Sepphoris than Acco is, and does not the Mishnah tell us that R. MEIR HELD THAT ACCO COUNTS AS ERETZ ISRAEL IN MATTERS OF BILLS OF DIVORCE,³ [and even the Rabbis differ from R. Meir only in regard to Acco, which is some distance away, but not in regard to Kefar Sisai which is near?]⁴ R. Ishmael said to him: Say nothing, my son, say nothing; now that the thing has been declared permissible, let it remain so. [Why should R. Ila'i have thought otherwise], seeing that [R. Ishmael] also gave as a reason 'that the woman should not require witnesses'? — [R. Ila'i] had not been told of these concluding words.

R. Abiathar sent to R. Hisda [the following instruction:] [The bearers of] writs of divorce from there [Babylon] to here [Eretz Israel] are not required to declare, 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed.' May we presume that he was of opinion that the reason for requiring the declaration is because the [Jews outside Palestine] are not familiar with the rule of 'special intention', while these [the Babylonians] are familiar? — Can you really presume this, seeing that Rabbah accepts Raba's reason? No. All agree that [the reason is] because we require someone who can confirm the signatures if necessary, and in this case, as there are always people going to and fro between Babylon and Eretz Israel, witnesses can easily be found.

Said R. Joseph: Can it be maintained that R. Abiathar is an authority who can be relied upon? [Have we not] moreover evidence to the contrary? For it was he who sent a statement to Rab Judah, [running,] ‘Jews who come from there [Babylon] to here [Eretz Israel] fulfil in their own persons the words of the Scripture: They have given a boy for a harlot and sold a girl for wine and have drunk,⁵ and he wrote the words from Scripture without ruling lines under them, although R. Isaac has said that a quotation of two words [from Scripture] may be written without lines but not of three (in a Baraita it was taught that three may be written without lines but not four)? — Said Abaye to him: Because a man does not know this rule of R. Isaac, is he therefore not to be counted a great scholar? If it were a rule established by logical deduction, we might think so.⁶ But it is purely a tradition,⁷ and it is a tradition which R. Abiathar had not heard. Nay more, R. Abiathar is the authority whose view was confirmed by his Master,⁸ [in the following way]. Commenting on the text, And his concubine played the harlot against him,⁹ R. Abiathar said that the Levite found a fly with her, and R. Jonathan said that he found a hair on her. R. Abiathar soon afterwards came across Elijah and said to him: ‘What is the Holy One, blessed be He, doing?’ and he answered, ‘He is discussing the question of the concubine in Gibe’a.’ ‘What does He say?’ said Elijah: ‘[He says], My son Abiathar says So-and-so, and my son Jonathan says So-and-so,’ Said R. Abiathar: ‘Can there possibly be uncertainty in the mind of the Heavenly One?’ He replied: Both [answers] are the word of the living God. He [the Levite] found a fly and excused it, he found a hair and did not excuse it. Rab Judah explained: He found a fly in his food and a hair in loco concubitus; the fly was merely disgusting, but the hair was dangerous. Some say, he found both in his food; the fly was not her fault, the hair was.

R. Hisda said: A man should never terrorise his household. The concubine of Gibe’a was terrorised by her husband and she was the cause of many thousands being slaughtered in Israel. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: If a man terrorises his household, he will eventually commit the three sins of unchastity,¹⁰ blood-shedding,¹¹ and desecration of the Sabbath.¹² Rabba b. Bar Hanah said: ‘The three things which a man has to say to his household just before Sabbath commences, ‘Have you set aside the tithe? Have you placed the ‘Erub? Light the lamp,’¹³ should be said by him gently, so that they should obey him readily. R. Ashi said: I was never taught that rule of Rabba b. Bar Hanah, but I observed it because my own sense told me to.

R. Abbahu said: A man should never terrorise his household. For there was a certain great man who terrorised his household, and in consequence they fed him with a thing to eat which is a great sin. This was R. Hanina b. Gamaliel. Do you mean to say they actually fed him with it? Why, even the beasts of the righteous are not allowed by the Holy One, blessed be He, to offend;¹ how then shall the righteous themselves be allowed so to sin? — Say, they wanted to feed him. And what was it they set before him? A piece of flesh cut from an animal still living.²

Mar 'Ukba³ sent for advice to R. Eleazar, saying: Certain men are annoying me, and I am able to get them into trouble with the government; shall I do so? He traced lines on which he wrote [quoting], I said, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue, I will keep a curb upon my mouth while the wicked is before me;⁴ [that is,] he added, although the wicked is before me, I will keep a curb on my mouth. Mar 'Ukba again sent to him saying: They are worrying me very much, and I cannot stand them. He replied [with the quotation], Resign thyself unto the Lord, and wait patiently [hitholel] for him;⁵ [that is to say,] he added, wait for the Lord, and He will cast them down prostrate [halalim] before thee; go to the Beth-Hamidrash early morning and evening and there will soon be an end of them. R. Eleazar had hardly spoken the words when Geniba⁶ was placed in chains [for execution].⁷

An inquiry was once addressed to Mar 'Ukba: Where does Scripture tell us that it is forbidden [in these times] to sing [at carousals]? He sent back [the following quotation] written on lines: Rejoice not, O Israel, unto exultation like the peoples, for thou hast gone astray from thy God.⁸ Should he not rather have sent the following: They shall not drink wine with music, strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it?⁹ — From this verse I should conclude that only musical instruments are forbidden, but not song; this I learn [from the other verse].

R. Huna b. Nathan asked R. Ashi: What is the point of the verse, Kinah and Dimonah and Adadah?¹⁰ — He replied: [The text] is enumerating towns in the Land of Israel. Said the other: Do I not know that the text is enumerating towns in the Land of Israel? But I want to tell you that R. Gebihah from [Be]Argiza¹¹ learnt a lesson from these names: 'Whoever has cause for indignation [kinah] against his neighbour and yet holds his peace [domem], He that abides for all eternity ['ade 'ad] shall espouse his cause; said the other: If that is so, the verse Ziklag and Madmanah and Sansanah¹² should also convey a lesson? — He replied: If R. Gebihah from [Be] Argiza were here, he would derive a lesson from it. R. Aha from Be Hozae¹³ expounded [it as follows]: 'If a man has just cause of complaint against his neighbour for taking away his livelihood [za'akath legima] and yet holds his peace [domem], He that abides in the bush [shokni sneh] will espouse his cause.

The Exilarch¹⁴ said to R. Huna: On what ground is based the prohibition of garlands? — He replied: This was imposed by the Rabbis on their own authority. For so we have learnt: At the time of the invasion of Vespasian they prohibited the wearing of garlands by bridegrooms and the [beating of] drums [at weddings].¹⁵ R. Huna then got up to leave the room. R. Hisda¹⁶ thereupon said to him [the Exilarch]: There is scriptural warrant for it: Thus saith the Lord God, The mitre shall be removed and the crown taken off this shall be no more the same; that which is low shall be exalted and that which is high abased,¹⁷ [It may be asked, he continued] what the mitre has to do with the crown. It is to teach that when the mitre is worn by the High priest,¹⁸ ordinary persons can wear the crown,¹⁹ but when the mitre has been removed from the head of the High priest, the crown must be removed from the head of ordinary persons. At this point R. Huna returned, and found them still discussing the matter. He said: I swear to you that the prohibition was made by the Rabbis on their own authority, but as your name is Hisda [favour], so do your words find favour. Rabina found Mar son of R. Ashi weaving a garland for his daughter. He said to him: Sir, do you not hold with the interpretation given above of ‘Remove the mitre and take off the crown’? — He replied: The men [have to follow] the example of the High Priest, but not the women.

What is the meaning of the words in this passage, ‘This not this’?²⁰ R. ‘Awira gave the following exposition, sometimes in the name of R. Ammi and sometimes in the name of R. Assi: When God said to Israel, ‘Remove the mitre and take off the crown’, the ministering angels said, Sovereign of the Universe, is ‘this’ for Israel who at Mount Sinai said ‘we will do’ before ‘we will hear’?²¹ Should not ‘this’ be for Israel, replied the Holy One, blessed be He, who have made low that which should be exalted and exalted that which should be low, and placed an image in the sanctuary? R. ‘Awira also gave the following exposition, sometimes in the name of R. Ammi and sometimes in the name of R. Assi; What is the meaning of the verse, Thus saith the Lord, though they be in full strength and likewise many, even so shall they be sheared off²² and he shall cross etc.?²³ If a man sees that his livelihood is barely sufficient for him, he should give charity from it, and all the more so if it is plentiful.²⁴ What is the meaning of the words, ‘Even so they shall be sheared and he shall cross’? — In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: Whoever shears off part of his possessions and dispenses it in charity is delivered from the punishment of Gehenna. Picture two sheep crossing a river, one shorn and the other not shorn; the shorn one gets across, the unshorn one does not.

And though I have afflicted thee:¹ Mar Zutra said: Even a poor man who himself subsists on charity should give charity. I will afflict thee no more:² R. Joseph learnt: If he does that, [Heaven] will not again inflict poverty upon him.

R. JUDAH SAYS, FROM REKEM EASTWARDS etc. This would seem to imply that Acco is at the [extreme] north of Eretz Israel. Does not this conflict with the following: '[Suppose a traveller] follows the road from Acco to Chezib.³ Then all the country on his right, east of the road, partakes of the uncleanness of the "land of the Gentiles",⁴ and the obligations of tithe and sabbatical year do not apply to it, save where it is definitely known to be liable.⁵ The country on his left hand, west of the road, does not partake of the uncleanness of the "land of the Gentiles", and is subject to the rules of tithe and sabbatical year, save where [the reverse] that it is exempt, is definitely known.⁶ Up to what point [does this hold good]? As far as Chezib. R. Ishmael the son of R. Jose says in the name of his father, As far as Lablabu.'⁷ — Said Abaye: A narrow strip does in fact jut out [beyond Acco].⁸ And is this important enough for the Tanna to define it so precisely?⁹ — It is, for the Scripture also gives indications in the same way, in the following passage: And they said, Behold there is the feast of the Lord from year to year in Shiloh. which is on the north of Bethel, on the east side the highway that goeth up from Bethel to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah;¹⁰ And R. Papa pointed out, that it means 'the east side of the highway.'¹¹

One [Baraita] teaches: 'If a man brings a Get by boat¹² he is in the same category as if he brought it [from place to place] in Eretz Israel;¹³ and another [Baraita] teaches that he is in the same category with one who brings it [from place to place] in foreign parts.¹⁴ Said R. Jeremiah: The contradiction can easily be explained: the latter view is based on the ruling of R. Judah, the former on that of the Rabbis, as we have learnt: [Plants grown in] earth from foreign parts which is carried in a boat in Eretz Israel are subject to the obligations of tithe and Sabbatical year. R. Judah says: This is the case only if the boat touches bottom, but if not, the obligations do not apply.¹⁵ Abaye says that both [authorities] follow R. Judah, and there is no contradiction between them, the one¹⁶ referring to a boat which does not touch bottom and the other to one which does.

Said R. Ze'ira: The case of a plant pot with a hole in the bottom resting on a stand¹⁷ may be variously decided according as we follow R. Judah or the Rabbis [in this case]. Said Rabba: This is open to question. Possibly R. Judah would say [that actual contact with the soil was necessary to make the plant liable to tithe] only in the case of a boat, which is usually on the move, but in the case of a pot which is motionless it is not necessary. And again, perhaps the Rabbis would say that only in the boat [is there this obligation even if it is not touching bottom], since there is no air in between [the boat and the bottom], the water being reckoned as earth for purposes of contact, but not in the case of the pot where the air underneath breaks its contact with the earth. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: In regard to a boat on a river in Eretz Israel there is no difference of opinion between the authorities.¹ Where the difference arises is in the case of a boat in the open sea, as may be seen from the following: What do we reckon as Eretz Israel and what do we reckon as foreign parts? From the top² of the Mountains of Ammanon³ inwards is 'Eretz Israel', and from the top of the Mountains of Ammanon outwards is 'foreign parts'. [For determining the status of] the islands in the sea, we imagine a line drawn from the Mountains of Ammanon to the Brook of Egypt.⁴ All within the line belongs to Eretz Israel and all outside the line to foreign parts. R. Judah, however, holds that all islands fronting the coast of Eretz Israel are reckoned as Eretz Israel, according to the verse of Scripture, And for the western border, ye shall have the Great Sea for a border; this shall be your west border.⁵ [To determine the status of] the islands on the border line,⁶ we imagine a line drawn [due west] from Kapluria⁷ to the Ocean⁸ and another from the Brook of Egypt to the Ocean. All within these lines belong to Eretz Israel and all outside to foreign parts. How do the Rabbis expound the superfluous words, 'and for the border'? They say it is required to [bring in] the islands.⁹ And R. Judah? — He will rejoin that for the inclusion of the islands no special indication is required.¹⁰

R. MEIR SAYS: ACCO IS IN THE SAME CATEGORY AS ERETZ ISRAEL etc. The following inquiry was propounded to R. Hiyya b. Abba: If a man sells his slave into Syria,¹¹ is he reckoned as selling him into foreign parts or not? — He replied: You have learnt it: R. MEIR SAYS: ACCO IS IN THE SAME CATEGORY AS ERETZ ISRAEL IN RESPECT OF BILLS OF DIVORCE; in respect of bills of divorce, that is, but not in respect of slaves. And if this is the case with Acco, how much more so with Syria, which is much further from Eretz Israel.

Our Rabbis have taught: 'In three respects Syria is in the same category as Eretz Israel and in three others in the same category as foreign parts.' (Mnemonic: 'AB Bor Rek').¹² Its earth is unclean like that of foreign parts, and to sell a slave to Syria is like selling him to foreign parts, and a Get brought from Syria is reckoned as one brought front foreign parts. [On the other hand,] it is in three respects like Eretz Israel: It is subject to the obligations of tithe and Sabbatical year like the Land of Israel, it is permissible for an Israelite to enter it in a state of ritual purity, and a field bought in Syria is like one bought on the outskirts of Jerusalem.’¹

[Our authority says that Syria] ‘is subject to the obligations of tithe and Sabbatical year’: [obviously] he is of opinion that the conquest of an individual² is a valid conquest.³ [He further says that] ‘it is permissible to enter Syria in a state of ritual purity.’ How can this be, seeing that you say that its earth is unclean? — What is meant is that he may enter it in a box, chest, or portable turret, as has been taught: If one enters the land of the Gentiles in a box, chest, or portable turret, Rabbi declares him to be unclean, but R. Jose son of R. Judah does not. And even Rabbi makes this rule only for the land of the Gentiles, the soil and the air of which were proclaimed unclean by the Rabbis, but in regard to Syria they proclaimed only the soil unclean but not the air.⁴

[Our authority further says that] ‘a field bought in Syria is like one bought on the outskirts of Jerusalem’. What rule of conduct can be based on this? — R. Shesheth Says: It means that a contract for selling it [to a Jew] can be drawn up even on Sabbath. What? On Sabbath? — You know the dictum of Raba, ‘He tells a non-Jew to do it.’ So here, he tells a non-Jew to draw up the contract. And although there is a Rabbinical prohibition⁵ against telling a non-Jew to do things on Sabbath [which we may not do ourselves], where it was a question of furthering the [Jewish] settlement of Eretz Israel the Rabbis did not apply the prohibition.

Our Rabbis have taught: If a slave brings before the Beth din his deed of manumission⁶ in which is written, ‘Your own person and my property are made over to you’, he becomes [ipso facto] his own master⁷ but not owner of the property.⁸

The question was propounded: [Suppose the document ran:] ‘All my property is made over to you’,⁹ what is the ruling? — Abaye said: Since the document makes him his own master, it makes him owner of the property also.¹⁰ Said Raba to him: I agree that he becomes his own master, because [in respect of himself his document] is on a par with the Get of a wife. But he must not become owner of the property, because [in respect of the property his Get] requires confirmation like any other document. Abaye then corrected himself and said: Since he does not become by means of his document the owner of the property, he does not become his own master either. Said Raba to him: I agree that he should not become owner of the property, because in respect of the property [his document] requires confirmation like any other document; but he should become his own master, because [in respect of himself, his document] is on a par with the Get of a wife. The fact of the matter is, continued Raba, that both with the one [wording] and the other, he becomes his own master but not owner of the property.

Said R. Abba b. Mattena to Raba: This ruling accords with the principle laid down by R. Simeon, that a single statement may receive two diverse applications, for we have learnt: If a man assigns all his property to his slave, the latter becomes ipso facto free, but if he excepted a piece of land, however small, he does not become free.¹¹ R. Simeon, however, holds

(10) And we do not give the statement two diverse applications, one in respect of himself and one in respect of the property.

(11) Because we say that since he excepts the land he excepts the slave also.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 9a

that in any case the slave becomes free¹ unless he declares [in writing] 'All my property is left to So-and-so my slave except one ten-thousandth part thereof.'² [But can Raba then rule thus, Seeing that] R. Joseph b. Manyumi said in the name of R. Nahman: Although R. Jose commended R. Simeon, the halachah follows R. Meir.³ For it has been taught: When the discussion was reported to R. Jose, he applied to him [R. Meir] the Scriptural words, He shall be kissed upon the lips that giveth a right answer.⁴

But was this R. Nahman's opinion?⁵ Has not R. Joseph b. Manyumi said in the name of R. Nahman: If a man lying dangerously ill assigned all his possessions to his slave and then recovered, he may retract the grant of the property but not the grant of freedom. He may retract the grant of the property because it is a gift made on a death bed.⁶ He may not retract the grant of the freedom because the slave has already become known as a free man!⁷ — In fact, said R. Ashi, [R. Nahman's reason] in the former case [where he said that in practice R. Meir was to be followed] was because the document did not expressly sever the connection between the slave and his master,⁸ [and not because the same statement cannot receive two applications].⁹ IF ITS VALIDITY IS CHALLENGED, IT MUST BE ESTABLISHED THROUGH THE SIGNATURES. Challenged by how many? Shall I say by one person? Has not R. Johanan laid down that a challenge must come from two at least? Shall I say then two? In that case there are two on each side, and why should you give credence to one set rather than to the other? — The challenge meant is that of the husband.

MISHNAH. WHERE THE BEARER OF A GET FROM FOREIGN PARTS IS NOT ABLE TO DECLARE 'IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS WRITTEN AND IN MY PRESENCE IT WAS SIGNED, IF THE GET HAS BEEN SIGNED BY WITNESSES, ITS VALIDITY CAN BE ESTABLISHED THROUGH ITS SIGNATORIES. WRITS OF DIVORCE AND WRITS OF EMANCIPATION ARE SUBJECT TO THE SAME RULES WHEN TAKEN [FROM THE LAND OF ISRAEL TO FOREIGN PARTS] OR VICE VERSA,¹⁰ THIS BEING ONE OF THE POINTS IN WHICH WRITS OF DIVORCE ARE ON A PAR WITH WRITS OF EMANCIPATION.

GEMARA. What is the meaning of the expression, 'IS NOT ABLE TO DECLARE'? Shall I say it means that the bearer is a deaf-mute? Can a deaf-mute then be the bearer of a Get, seeing that we have learnt:¹¹ ‘All persons are qualified to be bearers of a Get except a deaf-mute, a lunatic, and a minor?’ — R. Joseph said: Here we are dealing with a case in which he gave the woman the Get while he was still in possession of his faculties, but before he could utter the formula was struck deaf and dumb.

WRITS OF DIVORCE AND WRITS OF EMANCIPATION etc. Our Rabbis taught: ‘In three points writs of divorce are on a par with writs of emancipation. One is in the matter of being taken [from Eretz Israel to foreign parts] or vice versa.¹² [Secondly,] any document witnessed by a Cuthean¹³ is invalid, except writs of divorce and emancipation. [Thirdly,] all documents

 - (3) R. Simeon's disputant and the anonymous first Tanna of the Mishnah, that the slave should not go free.
 - (4) Prov. XXIV, 26.
 - (5) That we do not give two diverse applications to a single statement.
 - (6) Which can be nullified by the dying man on recovery. v. B.B. 146b.
 - (7) Thus R. Nahman applies the instruction diversely to the slave and to the property.
 - (8) Since the grant of the slave's freedom was not specifically mentioned in the document, and we require such severance, because a Get of emancipation is on the same footing as a Get of divorce, which is termed in the Scripture ‘a document of severance’ or ‘cutting off’ (Deut. XXIV, 1).
 - (9) [Seeing that R. Meir denies the slave his freedom even if the property specifically excepted was land, his view being that since the master limited the scope of this document by excluding ‘some thing’, whatever it may be, the Get is no longer effective as an instrument of complete severance (Rashi).]

entered in heathen courts, even if the signatures in them are those of heathens, are valid, except writs of divorce and of emancipation. According to R. Meir there are four points [the fourth being this]: If a man says, Give this Get to my wife and this writ of emancipation to my slave, he is at liberty, if he wishes, to retract from both. So says R. Meir'.¹ We can understand the Rabbis [specifying the number] three, [because they desired] to except the point stated by R. Meir. But what did R. Meir desire to except by specifying the number [four]? — [He desired] to except the following case which has been taught: If the witnesses are not able to sign their names, we make dents on the sheet and they fill them in with ink. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says: This applies only to writs of divorce. With writs of emancipation and all other documents, if the witnesses are able to read and to sign their names, they sign, and if not, they do not sign. How does ‘reading’ come in here? — There is something omitted, and the passage should run thus: ‘If the witnesses cannot read, the document is read to them and they then sign, and if they are unable to sign, dents are made for them.’

Are there no more points [of resemblance]? Is there not [for example this one]: ‘If a man says, Give this Get to my wife and this writ of emancipation to my slave and he dies [before they were given], they should not be given after his death. If, however, he said, Give a maneh to So-and-so, it should be given after his death’?² — [The passage above was] dealing only with points which do not apply to documents in general,³ not with such as apply to all documents. [And this is such a point;] for Rabin sent [the following message] in the name of R. Abbahu: ‘Be it known to you that R. Eleazar sent to the Diaspora⁴ in the name of Our Master⁵ the following instruction: If a dying man said, Write down and give a maneh to So-and-so, and then died, his words are not committed to writing nor is the gift made, since perhaps he intended only to make the gift through the instrumentality of the document, and a document does not confer possession after the death [of the author].’⁶

But is there not the point of ‘special intention’ [in which writs of divorce and of emancipation are on a par]? For Rabbah, indeed, this raises no difficulty, since it is identical with the point of bringing to and from [Eretz Israel],⁷ but for Raba it does raise a difficulty. And again, whether we accept Rabbah's view or Raba's, there is the law of mehubar?⁸ — [The passage above] reckoned only the flaws laid down by the Rabbis⁹ [on their own authority], not those deriving from the Torah. But [the fact of originating in] a Gentile court is a flaw [in the Get] according to the Torah, and yet this point is also reckoned above? — [We are dealing there with the case where there are] witnesses to the delivery [of the document], and the passage follows the opinion of R. Eleazar, who said that it is the witnesses to the delivery [of the Get] who really make it effective.¹⁰ [Is that so?] It says later in the passage:¹¹ R. Simeon says that these also [writs of divorce signed by non-Jews] are valid; and [commenting on this] R. Zera said that R. Simeon was here following the view of R. Eleazar, who said that the witnesses to the delivery [of the Get] make it effective; from which we gather that the first Tanna¹² was not [of this opinion]?¹³

(6) V. B.B. 152a. Just as in the case of writs of divorce and emancipation.

(7) Since according to Rabbah the declaration was required only because of the general ignorance of the rule regarding ‘special intention’.

(8) Lit., ‘attached (to the soil)’, viz., that both the writ of emancipation and the writ of divorce must be written on something not attached to the soil.

(9) [The requirement of the declaration ‘in my presence it was written etc.’ is Rabbinical and so is the disqualification of a Samaritan for evidence purposes in case of other documents likewise only Rabbinical.]

(10) Lit., ‘who cut asunder’. And therefore the fact of its originating in a heathen court is a flaw only according to the Rabbis and, not the Torah.

(11) In the Mishnah dealing with documents drawn up in heathen courts, infra 10b.

(12) In that Mishnah who says that these are not valid.

(13) That the witnesses to delivery make the Get effective, and therefore a non-Jewish signature is a flaw according to the Torah.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 10a

Where he and the first Tanna differed was in the case where the names are obviously heathen.¹ But what of the point about retracting, which [invalidates the Get even] according to the Torah, and yet is reckoned in this passage? — The proper answer [to the original question] is that only those points are reckoned which did not apply to betrothals, but not such as are found in connection with betrothals also.² But this very point of retracting applies to betrothals also?³ — We are dealing here with a case where the whole commission is to be carried out without the consent of the recipient; this is possible in the case of divorces but not of betrothals.

MISHNAH. NO DOCUMENT ATTESTED BY THE SIGNATURE OF A CUTHEAN⁴ IS VALID,⁵ UNLESS IT IS A WRIT OF DIVORCE OR A WRIT OF EMANCIPATION. IT IS RELATED THAT A WRIT OF DIVORCE WAS ONCE BROUGHT BEFORE RABBAN GAMALIEL AT KEFAR 'UTHNAI⁶ AND ITS WITNESSES WERE CUTHEANS, AND HE DECLARED IT VALID.

GEMARA. Who is [the Tanna] of our Mishnah? For it cannot be either the first Tanna, or R. Eleazar or Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel [in the following Baraitha]: For it has been taught: 'It is permissible to eat [on Passover] unleavened bread made by a Cuthean, and the eating of such bread satisfies the requirement of the Passover.'⁷ R. Eleazar forbids [the eating of such bread], because [the Samaritans] are not familiar with the minutiae of the precepts. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says that in all the precepts which the Cutheans do observe they are much more particular than the Jews themselves.' Whom now does our Mishnah follow? Shall I say the first Tanna? In that case other documents also should be valid [if attested by a Cuthean]. Shall I say R. Eleazar? In that case a writ of divorce should also be invalid. Shall I say Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel? In that case, if they observe [the regulations of documents], then other documents attested by them should also be valid, and if they do not observe [these regulations], then even a writ of divorce attested by them should not be valid. And should you reply that in fact Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel is the authority and that our Mishnah holds that the Cutheans observe the regulations concerning writs of divorce and emancipation but not concerning other documents — in that case why [does the Mishnah] speak of one [Cuthean witness only]? [The Get should be equally valid] even if there were two;⁸ and if that were so, why has R. Eleazar said [that a Get of this kind] has been declared valid only if there is not more than one Cuthean signature to it? — The authority followed by our Mishnah is in fact R. Eleazar, and it speaks of the case where an Israelite signs last,⁹

(1) R. Simeon holding that no danger can arise from this of heathens also being asked to witness the delivery of the Get, while the Rabbis held that there was such a danger.

(2) [The law of 'special intention' and in regard to mehubar applies to writs of betrothals equally with writs of divorce, whereas the declaration, 'In my presence it was written, etc.' is limited to Get as explained supra 2b-3a. Similarly the validity of the signature of a Samaritan witness is limited to Get (v. infra 10b); nor would the Rabbis invalidate a writ of betrothal originating in a heathen court, provided Jewish witnesses were present at the delivery.]

(3) I.e., if a man gives a written agreement of betrothal to a bearer, he can withdraw it so long as it has not been delivered.

- (4) Samaritan.
- (5) Because they were looked upon as untruthful.
- (6) [Identified with Kefr Kud (Capar Cotani) on the border of Galilee and Samaria. V. Klein, Beitrage p. 29, n. 2.]
- (7) That the unleavened bread eaten on the first night should be expressly prepared for it in accordance with the words, And ye shall watch the unleavened bread (Ex. XII, 17).
- (8) I.e., if both witnesses were Samaritan and neither an Israelite.
- (9) After the Samaritan.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 10b

for we assume in that case that if the Cuthean were not a Haber¹, the Israelite would not let him sign before him. In that case, why are not other documents also valid? Consequently the truth is that we say, 'he left room for someone senior to himself.'² But if that be so cannot we say here too that he left room for someone senior to himself? — Said R. Papa: This proves that the witnesses to a Get do not sign save in one another's presence.³ What is the reason for this? — R. Ashi says that it is to prevent any infringement of the rule concerning 'all of you'.⁴

The text above [states]: 'R. Eleazar said [that a Get of this kind] has been declared valid only if there is not more than one Cuthean signature to it.' What does he teach us by this statement? Has not the Mishnah already told us that NO DOCUMENT ATTESTED BY THE SIGNATURE OF A SAMARITAN etc.? — If I had only the Mishnah to go by, I should say that even with two [Cuthean signatures the Get is valid], and that the reason why one [only is mentioned] is to show that other documents are rendered invalid even by one Samaritan signature; hence [R. Eleazar's statement] is necessary. But [is a Get] with two [Cuthean signatures] invalid? Does not the Mishnah say: IT IS RELATED THAT A WRIT OF DIVORCE WAS BROUGHT BEFORE RABBAN GAMALIEL [AT KEFAR 'UTHNAI] AND ITS WITNESSES WERE CUTHEANS, AND HE DECLARED IT VALID? — Abaye says: Read 'its witness Raba says: It is quite correct that there were two, and the fact is that Rabban Gamaliel differs [from the first authority], and there is an omission [in the Mishnah, which should] read as follows: 'Rabban Gamaliel declares [a Get] valid with two [Cuthean signatures], and it is actually related that a Get was brought before Rabban Gamaliel at Kefar 'Uthnai and its witnesses were Cutheans and he declared it valid.'

MISHNAH. ALL DOCUMENTS WHICH ARE ACCEPTED IN HEATHEN COURTS,⁵ EVEN IF THEY THAT SIGNED THEM WERE GENTILES, ARE VALID [FOR JEWISH COURTS] EXCEPT WRITS OF DIVORCE AND OF EMANCIPATION. R. SIMEON SAYS: THESE ALSO ARE VALID; THEY WERE ONLY PRONOUNCED [TO BE INVALID] WHEN DRAWN UP BY UNAUTHORISED PERSONS.

GEMARA. [Our Mishnah] lays down a comprehensive rule in which no distinction is made between a sale and a gift. We can understand that the rule should apply to a sale, because the purchaser acquires the object of sale from the moment when he hands over the money in their⁶ presence, and the document is a mere corroboration; for if he did not hand over the money in their presence, they would not take the risk⁷ of drawing up a document of sale for him. But with a gift [it is different]. Through what [does the recipient] obtain possession? Through this document, [is it not]? And this document is a mere piece of clay?⁸ — Said Samuel: The law of the Government is law.⁹ Or if you prefer, I can reply: Instead of ‘except writs of divorce’ in the Mishnah, read, ‘except [documents] like writs of divorce.’¹⁰

R. SIMEON SAYS: THESE ALSO ARE VALID etc. How can this be, seeing that to heathens the act of ‘severance’¹¹ is not applicable? — Said R. Zera: R. Simeon here accepts the view of R. Eleazar, who said that the separation is actually effected by the witnesses to the delivery [of the document]. But has not R. Abba said that R. Eleazar used to admit [that a Get] which in itself contained a flaw was invalid?¹² — We are dealing here

- (1) V. Glos. In which case R. Eleazar's objection does not apply.
 - (2) The Jew signed first below thinking that another Jew would sign above, but the lender got the signature of a Samaritan instead.
 - (3) So that it is impossible for us to say that the husband brought a Samaritan to sign without the knowledge of the Jewish witness.
 - (4) That if he said to ten persons, ‘All of you write’, one writes and all the rest sign in one another's presence, otherwise the Get is not valid; infra, 66b.
 - (5) , utfrg, GR. , ‘office’ ‘registry’.
 - (6) The non-Jewish judges’.
 - (7) Lit., ‘do injury to themselves (to their reputation)’.
 - (8) Assuming a deed originating in a non-Jewish court does not constitute an instrument of acquisition, why should the deed be deemed valid?
 - (9) V. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 222, n. 6.
 - (10) I.e., all which in themselves make the transaction effective, such as the record of a gift.
 - (11) Lit., ‘cutting’, Deut. XXIV, 1.
 - (12) And the signature of witnesses who are not competent to sign would be counted by R. Eleazar as a flaw because it might give the impression that these were competent as witnesses to the delivery.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 11a

with signatures which are obviously those of heathens.¹ Can you give some examples of names which are obviously those of heathens? — Said R. Papa: For instance, Hannez and Abudina, Bar Shibthai, Bar Kidri, Batti and Nakim and Una. What then if the signatures are not obviously those of heathens? [The document, you will say,] is invalid? If so, instead of going on to say, ‘THEY WERE ONLY PRONOUNCED TO BE INVALID WHEN DRAWN UP BY UNAUTHORISED PERSONS, R. Simeon should draw a distinction between [the signatures] themselves, and should continue thus: ‘when I say [they are valid, I mean] when the names are obviously [heathen], but otherwise they are invalid!’ — This in fact is what he does mean, viz.: ‘When I say [they are valid I mean] when the names are obviously [heathen], but where they are not so, the document is on a par with one drawn up by unauthorised persons and is invalid.’ Or if you like I can reply that the last clause [of the Mishnah] refers to monetary documents, and the meaning is as follows: ‘Monetary documents were not pronounced to be invalid save when they were drawn up by unauthorised persons.’ It has been taught: R. Eleazar said in the name of R. Jose: Thus did R. Simeon say to the Rabbis in Sidon: R. Akiba and the Sages were agreed in reference to all documents entered in heathen courts that even if those that signed them were heathens they are valid, including also writs of divorce and of emancipation. They differed only in the case where they were drawn up by unauthorised persons, R. Akiba declaring all such documents to be valid and the Sages declaring them all invalid, save only writs of divorce and of emancipation. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says that these too are valid only in places where Jews are not allowed to sign documents,² but where Jews are allowed to sign documents they are not valid. Why does not Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel declare them invalid even in places where Jews are allowed to sign, for fear lest they should come to be deemed valid even in places where they are not? — Names may be confused but not places. Rabina had a mind to declare valid a document which had been drawn up in a gathering³ of Arameans. Said Rafram to him: ‘We learnt [distinctly] "COURTS".’

Raba said:⁴ A document drawn up in Persian which has been handed over in the presence of Jewish witnesses is sufficient warrant for recovering from property on which there is no previous lien. But the witnesses to the transfer cannot read it? — We speak of the case where they can. But we require writing which cannot be erased? — We speak of a case where the sheet has been dressed with gall-nut juice.⁵ But we require the rule [to be observed] that the gist of the document must be summarised in the last line?⁶ — We speak of a case where this has been done. If so, why not recover from mortgaged property also? — [The contents of a document of this kind] do not become generally known.⁷

- (1) In which case there is no danger that their witnessing to the Get would create a wrong impression as to their competence.
 - (2) Where there is no danger that the witnesses who signed the Get will be deemed competent to attest delivery.
 - (3) I.e., not an official body.
 - (4) V. infra 19b.
 - (5) So that the ink cannot be erased.
 - (6) E.g., ‘I have received from So-and-so all the sums mentioned above’. This was not the custom with Persian documents.
 - (7) Lit., ‘it has no voice’. Since there are no Jewish witnesses to the deed to give publicity to the transaction, thus keeping off prospective buyers from the property; v. infra 19b. And therefore the creditor from the first never expected to recover from such property.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 11b

‘If a Get¹ is attested by witnesses with heathen names, how do we proceed?’ — He replied: ‘The only [heathen names] that have come before us in this way were Lucus and Lus, and in both cases we declared [the Get] valid.’² This ruling applies strictly to names like Lucus and Lus³ which are never borne by Israelites, but not to heathen names which are also borne by Israelites.⁴ He [thereupon] raised an objection [from the following]: ‘Writs of divorce brought from foreign parts and attested by signatures, even if the names are like those of heathens, are valid, because most Jews in foreign parts bear heathen names!’⁵ — There the reason is as given, because most Jews in foreign parts bear heathen names.⁶ According to another version, Resh Lakish put the question to R. Johanan on the lines of the Baraitha [just quoted],⁷ and he answered him by quoting [the second] clause of the Baraitha.⁸

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS: GIVE THIS WRIT OF DIVORCE TO MY WIFE AND THIS BILL OF EMANCIPATION TO MY SLAVE, HE IS AT LIBERTY IF HE PLEASES TO COUNTERMAND BOTH INSTRUCTIONS.⁹ THIS IS THE RULING OF R. MEIR. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, SAY THAT HE MAY COUNTERMAND IN THE CASE OF THE GET BUT NOT IN THAT OF THE WRIT OF EMANCIPATION, ON THE PRINCIPLE THAT A BENEFIT MAY BE CONFERRED ON A MAN IN HIS ABSENCE BUT A DISABILITY MAY BE IMPOSED ON HIM ONLY IN HIS PRESENCE; FOR IF HE DOES NOT WANT TO MAINTAIN HIS SLAVE HE IS NOT BOUND TO DO SO,¹⁰ BUT IF HE DOES NOT WANT TO GIVE MAINTENANCE TO HIS WIFE HE IS STILL BOUND TO DO SO. SAID R. MEIR TO THEM: DOES HE NOT DISQUALIFY HIS SLAVE FROM EATING THE PRIESTLY HEAVE-OFFERING [BY EMANCIPATING HIM] IN THE SAME WAY AS HE DISQUALIFIES HIS WIFE [BY DIVORCING HER]?¹¹ — THEY REPLIED: [THE SLAVE IS DISQUALIFIED] BECAUSE HE IS THE PRIEST'S PROPERTY.

GEMARA. R. Huna¹² and R. Isaac b. Joseph were sitting [studying] before R. Jeremiah whilst R. Jeremiah was sitting and dozing, when R. Huna remarked that we learn from the ruling of the Rabbis [in our Mishnah] that if a man seizes the goods [of a third party] on behalf of a creditor, he acquires [them].¹³ Said R. Isaac b. Joseph to him: Even if by doing so he causes loss to others?¹⁴ — He replied: Yes. At this point R. Jeremiah woke up [and overheard them]. He said: Youngsters, this is what R. Johanan said: If a man seizes goods on behalf of a creditor when by so doing he causes loss to others, he does not acquire. If you ask [how this can be reconciled with] our Mishnah,¹⁵ [the answer is that] for a man to say 'give' is equivalent to saying 'acquire on behalf of'.

R. Hisda says: [The case of the man] who seizes goods on behalf of a creditor and by so doing causes loss to others admits of the same difference of opinion as we find between R. Eliezer and the Rabbis. For we learnt:¹⁶ If a man garners the corner [of his field], and said: This is for such-and-such a poor man, he acquires it on his behalf. The Sages, however, say that he must give it to the first poor man that comes along. Said Amemar (others say it was R. Papa:)

(1) Coming from Palestine.

(2) I.e., I relied upon the witnesses to delivery.

(3) Lucius and Gaius (Jast.).

(4) Because in that case the witnesses, even if Gentiles, might be presumed to be competent.

(5) This apparently contradicts R. Johanan.

(6) Hence it is safe to presume that the witness with a Gentile name is a Jew, but this is not the case in Palestine.

(7) Viz., 'What is the rule about writs of divorce brought from foreign parts with heathen signatures.'

(8) Viz., 'they are valid etc.'

(9) Because this is a disability for both of them, and the agent does not become possessed of the bills, on the principle that 'a disability may not be inflicted on a man save in his presence.'

(10) Hence emancipation involves no disability for the slave.

(11) Vid. Lev. XXII, 11; Num. XVIII, 11. So that emancipation does involve a disability for the slave even as divorce for the wife.

(12) Tosaf. points out that this is not the R. Huna usually mentioned in the Talmud, who was much senior to R.

Jeremiah.

(13) For the creditor and the owner cannot recover from him any more than he can withdraw the bill of emancipation from the agent.

(14) I.e., if the man had other creditors also.

(15) Which seems to say that he does become legal possessor.

(16) For notes v. B.M. (Sonc. ed.) p. 49 ff.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 12a

Perhaps the two cases are not on all fours. R. Eliezer's reason there [for allowing the owner of the field to acquire on behalf of the poor man] may be only because if he desires he can declare his field public property and so become himself a poor man and entitled to [the gleanings], and since he can acquire it for himself [we concede that] he can acquire it for his fellow; whereas [this reasoning] does not apply to our present case. And the Rabbis' reason in the case of the poor man may be only that in the text it is written thou shalt not glean, for the poor man,¹ 'thou shalt not glean for the poor man', but here they would not [apply the same principle]. What lesson then does R. Eliezer derive from these words, 'thou shalt not glean, for the poor'? — He sees in them an admonition to a poor man [who himself owns a field] in regard to his own gleanings.²

FOR IF HE CHOOSES NOT TO MAINTAIN HIS SLAVE, etc. We understand from this, [do we not,] that a master can say to his slave: Work for me but I will not support you! — [No!] Here we deal with the case in which the master says: Keep what you can earn as the equivalent of your maintenance. Similarly in the case of the woman³ we likewise must suppose that the husband says to her: Keep what you can earn as the equivalent of your maintenance. [But if this is so] why, in the case of the wife should he not [be permitted to refuse to maintain her]? — Because she cannot earn enough [for her keep]. But a slave too may not be able to earn enough for his keep? — If a slave's [work] is not worth the food he eats, what do his master and mistress want him for!

Come and hear: If a slave has fled to one of the cities of refuge,⁴ his master is under no obligation to support him; and moreover whatever he earns belongs to his master. We understand from this, do we not, that a master can say to a slave, 'Work for me, but I will not support you'? — We are dealing here with the case in which the master said to him, 'You may keep what you earn as the equivalent of your maintenance'. In that case why does it say that what he earns belongs to the master? — This applies to what he earns over and above his keep. There is surely no need to tell us that? — [There is, because otherwise] you might think that, since the master does not give him anything when he does not earn, he should not take anything from him when he does earn; but now you know [that this is not so]. But why should this rule apply specially to cities of refuge? — I might think [that cities of refuge are an exception],⁵ because the words 'that he might live' [used in connection with them⁶ are interpreted to mean that] special provision must be made [for one who is exiled there]; but now I know [that they are no exception].⁷ But now look at the continuation [of the passage quoted]: But if a woman is exiled to a city of refuge, her husband is under obligation to maintain her. Obviously this speaks of a case where the husband did not say to her, ['You may keep your earnings etc.'], because if he did, why should he have to support her? And since that is the case here, then we presume that the first part of the passage also deals with the case in which the master did not say to the slave, ['Keep your earnings' etc.]?⁸

— No. [The cases considered are those in which the master or husband] did say so, and the reason In the case of the wife⁹ is because she cannot keep herself. But look at the further continuation [of the passage]: If he says to her, I allow you to keep your earnings in place of your maintenance, he is within his rights. This shows, does it not, that the preceding clause deals with the case where he did not say so? — We interpret [the last clause] thus: If she can earn sufficient [for a living] and he said to her: Keep your earnings in place of your maintenance, he is within his rights. What is the point of bringing in the case where she can earn sufficient [for a living]? — You might think that even so she should not go about to earn a living because, as Scripture says, the honour of the king's daughter [i.e. the Jewish woman] lies in privacy;¹⁰ but now you know [that this is not so].

May we say that the same difference of opinion is found between the Tannaim [mentioned in the following passage]? [For it was taught:] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says: A slave can say to his master in a year of scarcity, 'Either maintain me or let me go free'; whereas the Sages say that the master can do as he pleases. Shall we say that the point at issue between them is this, that the one authority holds that a master can say to his slave, 'Work for me but I will not support you', and the other holds that he cannot? — Do you really think so? In that case why does it say, 'either maintain me or let me go free'? It should say, 'either maintain me or let me keep my earnings in place of my maintenance'. And besides, why should the rule apply specially to years of scarcity? The fact is that the case put is one in which the master has said to the slave, 'Keep your earnings as the equivalent of your maintenance',¹¹ and in a year of scarcity he cannot earn enough. [In that case] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel holds that the slave can say to the master, 'Either maintain me or let me go free, so that people may see me and have pity on me', whereas the Rabbis hold the view that those who pity free men pity also slaves.¹²

Come and hear: Rab said: If a man dedicates to the Sanctuary¹³ the hands of his slave, that slave may borrow money, eat, work and repay [his loan with his earnings].¹⁴ We may conclude from this, [may we not,] that the master can say to the slave, 'Work for me, but I will not maintain you'? — [No.] The case contemplated here is one in which the master provides the slave with his keep. If so, why

(1) Lev. XXIII, 22. [They join 'for the poor man' with 'Thou shalt not glean on the principle of Siddur she-nehelak, mentioned in the Mishnah of H. Eliezer b. Jose the Galilean, that a context which has been disrupted by a disjunctive accent is reconnected for exegetical purposes.]

(2) He must leave gleanings in his own field.

(3) Mentioned in our Mishnah.

(4) Having killed someone by accident.

(5) To the rule that the master may take the slave's earnings.

(6) Deut. IV. 42.

(7) In respect of allowing the slave the excess of his earnings over and above his keep.

(8) Which proves that a master can say to a slave 'work for me but I will not support you'.

(9) That the husband has still to keep her.

(10) Ps. XLV, 14.

(11) And both authorities hold that the master may not say, 'Work for me etc.'

(12) And therefore there is no need to let him go free.

(13) Lit., 'sanctifies'; cf. Lev. XXVII.

(14) Cf. p. 44, nn. 1-2.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 12b

does he borrow for his food? — He borrows for extras. But the Sanctuary can say to him, 'Just as you could do without extras hitherto, so you can do without extras now'? — The Sanctuary itself prefers this, so that its slave should be in good condition. You say that he works and pays from his earnings. How can he do this, seeing that every penny as he earns it becomes sanctified?¹ — [He keeps on paying his earnings] before they amount to a perutah.² This view [that Rab's dictum refers to the case where the master provides the slave's keep] is borne out by this other dictum of Rab: If a man sanctifies the hands of his slave, that same slave can go on working for his keep, for if he does not work, who will look after him? If you say that the first dictum refers to the case where the master provides [the slave's keep], and that in consequence a master is not at liberty [to say to his slave, 'Work for me, but I shall not maintain you'], and that the latter dictum refers to a case where he does not provide for him, all is plain; but if you say that the first dictum refers to the case where the master does not provide the slave's keep, and [so we rule that] he can say [to the slave, 'You must work for me etc.'], what is the sense of saying [in the second dictum], 'if he does not work who will look after him?' Let anyone who will look after him!³ We conclude therefore that the ruling is that a master cannot say [to his slave, 'Work for me, but I shall not support you.']

Come and hear: R. Johanan says that if a man cuts off the hand of another man's slave, he must make good to his master his 'loss of time'⁴ and the cost of his medical attendance, and the slave must live on charity. We understand from this,⁵ [do we not,] that the master can say to the slave, 'Work for me, but I shall not maintain you'? — No. Here we are dealing with a case in which the master does provide the slave's keep. If that is so, why [does it say that] he must live on charity? — This refers to extras. If that is so, it should say not 'live on' but 'be supported by'? We therefore conclude that the master can say [to the slave, 'You must work for me etc.']. This proves it.

The Master said: 'He must make good to his master "loss of time" and the cost of his medical attendance'. [What need is there to tell me this in] the case of the 'loss of time', which is obvious? — The 'loss of time' is mentioned because the medical costs [had to be mentioned]. Surely the medical costs go to the slave, for he needs them for his cure? — This must be stated in view of a case where it was calculated that he requires five days [treatment] and by the application of a painful remedy he was cured in three. You might think that in this case [the whole of the estimated medical cost goes to the slave since] the extra pain is his; but now know [that it does not].

It has been taught R. Eliezer said: We said to R. Meir, Is it not a benefit for the slave to obtain his liberty? — He replied, It is a disability for him, since if he was the slave of a priest he can no longer eat of the terumah. We said to him: If the priest chooses not to give him his keep, is he not at liberty to do so?⁶ — He replied: If the slave of a priest runs away, or if the wife of a priest flouts her husband,⁷ they can still eat of the terumah, but this one cannot. For a woman, however, certainly it is a disadvantage [to be divorced] since she becomes disqualified to eat the terumah [if she was married to a priest] and forfeits her maintenance [in any case].⁸ What did they mean by their question and what was the point of [R. Meir's] remark, [If a priest's slave runs away etc.]? — What he said in effect was this: 'You have refuted me in the matter of maintenance,⁹ but what answer can you give in the matter of the terumah? For if you should say that, if the master likes, he can throw the writ of emancipation to the slave and so disqualify him [and therefore giving the writ to a bearer is not a disadvantage to the slave], [I answer that] the slave can [prevent this by] leaving him and running away.¹⁰

- (1) I.e., as the property of the Sanctuary, it must not be touched by outsiders.
 - (2) Because a sum less than a perutah cannot become sanctified.
 - (3) As much as to say: Let him starve!
 - (4) V. Ex. XXI, 19 and B.K. 83b.
 - (5) From the fact that the master takes the money he is capable of earning even in his maimed condition, while he is living on charity.
 - (6) And what does he lose therefore by being emancipated?
 - (7) I.e., refuses him his conjugal rights.
 - (8) Tosef. Git. I.
 - (9) I.e., I admit that the slave does not necessarily lose maintenance by being emancipated.
 - (10) And as he is still a priest's slave, he can still eat the priestly dues.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 13a

Seeing then that a priest's slave who runs away and a priest's wife who flouts her husband can still eat of the terumah while this one [who is emancipated] cannot, [is it not a disadvantage to him to be emancipated]?' This was a good rejoinder, [was it not]? — Said Raba: That is the point of the answer of the Rabbis [recorded] in the Mishnah, 'BECAUSE HE IS HIS PROPERTY,' [by which they meant to say] that if the master wants he can take four zuz from a non-priestly Israelite [as the price of the slave], and so disqualify him wherever he is. Let us grant that R. Meir has made out his case with regard to the slave of a priest; how does he make it out with regard to the slave of an ordinary Israelite? — Said R. Samuel son of R. Isaac: [Emancipation is a disadvantage to the slave] because it disqualifies him from marrying a Gentile bondwoman. [On the contrary it is a benefit] because it qualifies him to marry a free woman? — A slave prefers a common woman; she allows him to take liberties, she is at his beck and call, she is not coy with him.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS, GIVE THIS GET TO MY WIFE, THIS DEED OF EMANCIPATION TO MY SLAVE, AND DIES [BEFORE THEY ARE GIVEN], THEY ARE NOT TO BE GIVEN AFTER HIS DEATH. [IF HE SAID], GIVE A MANEH TO SO-AND-SO AND DIED, THE MONEY SHOULD BE GIVEN AFTER HIS DEATH.

GEMARA. R. Isaac b. Samuel b. Martha said in the name of Rab: [This money is] only [to be given] if it has actually been put aside in a special place.¹ With what case are we dealing here? Shall I say the man was in health [when he gave the instruction]? What difference does it make that the money is available, seeing that the recipient has not yet performed the act of 'pulling'?² And if he was on his death bed, why must the money have been put on one side? Even if it has not been put on one side, it is to be given, because the instruction of a man on his death bed has the same force as a written document formally handed over!³ R. Zebid said: We are in fact [dealing here] with the case of a man in health, and [our Mishnah is] in agreement with [the following dictum enunciated by] R. Huna in the name of Rab: [If a man says], You owe me a maneh, give it to So-and-so, [if he said this] in the presence of the third party,⁴ [the last named] becomes legally entitled to it.⁵ R. Papa said that we are indeed dealing here with the case of a man on his death bed, and [the Mishnah is] in agreement with another dictum of Rab, Viz.: 'If a man on his death bed says, Give a maneh to So-and-so out of my belongings, if he said, give this maneh, it is to be given, but if he said simply a maneh it is not to be given, because perhaps he was thinking of a buried maneh. The law is, however, that we do not suspect that anything is buried. Why did not R. Papa take the same view as R. Zebid?

Similarly in the Mishnah it is necessary for the money to be specially set aside.]

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 13b

— R. Papa was of opinion that Rab's dictum was meant to apply equally whether [the sum in question was] a loan¹ or a deposit. Why did not R. Zebid adopt the view of R. Papa? — Because [the language of] the Mishnah is not consistent with [the theory that it speaks of a man on his death bed]. How do we make this out? — Because it says: IF A MAN SAYS, GIVE THIS GET TO MY WIFE AND THIS DEED OF EMANCIPATION TO MY SLAVE, AND DIES BEFORE THEY WERE GIVEN, THEY ARE NOT TO BE GIVEN AFTER HIS DEATH. The reason is that he died; had he continued alive, they would have been given. And the reason why we say this² is that he said 'Give' [and not merely 'write']; had he not said 'give', they would not have to be given,³ whereas in the case of a man on his death bed, although he did not use the word 'give', [the Get] is still to be given, as we learn [from the following Mishnah]: 'At first it was laid down that if a man was being led out in fetters [to execution] and said, "Write a Get for my wife", [the Get] was to be written and delivered. Later they laid down that the same rule applied to one who was leaving for a sea journey or joining a caravan [across the desert]. R. Simeon Shezuri said: It also applies to a man lying dangerously ill.'⁴ To this R. Ashi demurred: How do we know, he said, that our Mishnah adopts the View of R. Simeon Shezuri? Perhaps it adopts the view of the Rabbis.⁵

The text above stated: 'R. Huna said in the name of Rab: If a man says, You owe me a maneh, give it to So-and-so, [if he said this] in the presence of the third party, [the last-named] becomes legally entitled to it.' [Commenting on this,] Raba said, This dictum of Rab appears to be sound where [the money in question] is a deposit but not where it is a loan.⁶ But, by God! Rab said that it applies even where it is a loan. It has also been stated that Samuel said in the name of Levi: If a man says. You owe me some money, give it to So-and-so, [if he said so] in the presence of the third party. [the last-named] becomes the legal owner. What is the reason? — Amemar said: [The borrower in such case] is regarded as having pledged himself at the time of borrowing the money to repay it either to the lender or to anyone coming on his behalf. Said R. Ashi to Amemar: But on your showing, if the lender transferred the debt to children who had not yet been born when the loan was made, they would not acquire possession?⁷ For even according to R. Meir, who said that it is possible to transfer possession of things that do not yet exist,⁸ [the transference must be] to something that is existing, not to something that does not yet exist: The truth is, said R. Ashi,

(1) [Though it cannot be regarded as being in the possession of the creditor, since the debtor is entitled to spend it. Consequently where a transfer is made by means of ma'amad shlashtan there would be no need for the money in question to be specially set aside.]

(2) That they would have to be given if he continued alive.

that for the sake of the benefit which the borrower derives from the difference [in time of payment] between the old debt and the new one, he willingly pledges himself to the new creditor.¹ Said Huna Mar the son of R. Nehemiah to R. Ashi: If that is so, what of people like those from the house of Bar Eliashib, who force their debtors to pay at once? Do they not acquire possession in such a case as this?² And if you say they do, then you apply different standards to different people? — The truth is, said Mar Zutra, that there are three laws which the Rabbis have laid down arbitrarily without [giving] a reason. One is this one. A second is the one laid down by Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: If a [dying] man assigns in writing all his property to his wife, he only makes her a trustee for it.³ The third is the one laid down by R. Hananiah: If a man celebrates the marriage of his son who is over age in a special house, the son becomes the owner of the house.⁴

Rab once said to R. Aha Bardala: You have a kab of saffron of mine, give it to So-and-so, and I am telling you in his presence that I do not mean to change my mind. Are we to understand from this that if he had desired to change his mind he could have done so? — What Rab meant was that instructions such as these⁵ cannot be retracted. But this has already been laid down by Rab, since R. Huna said in the name of Rab: If a man says to another, You have a maneh of mine in your possession, give it to So-and-so, if he says this in the presence of the third party, [the latter] becomes legal owner? — If I had only that dictum to go by, I should suppose that this rule applies only to a big gift, but that for a small one it is not necessary for the third party to be present: now I know [that this is not so].

Some market gardeners [who were in partnership] once squared accounts with one another, and found that one had five staters⁶ too much. Said the others to him in the presence of the owner of the land, 'Give it to the owner of the land',⁷ and they duly acquired' from him.⁸ Afterwards he reckoned up by himself, and found that he had nothing over. He went to consult R. Nahman. Said [the latter] to him: What can I do for you? For one thing, there is the rule laid down by R. Huna in the name of Rab,⁹ and for another thing, they¹⁰ duly 'acquired' from you. Said Raba to him: Does this man say. I am unwilling to pay? What he pleads is, I do not owe the money. Whereupon R. Nahman said: If so, possession has been transferred in error, and in such a case the money must always be returned.

It has been stated: If a man says to another, 'Take to So-and-so the maneh which I owe him', Rab says. he continues to be responsible for it, and he is not at liberty to retract the commission, whereas Samuel says that since he is still responsible he is at liberty to retract. May we presume that the point at issue between them is this, that one authority¹¹ was of opinion that 'take' is equivalent to 'accept on behalf of',¹² and the other¹³ was of opinion that 'take' is not equivalent to 'accept on behalf of'? — No. Both are agreed that 'take' is equivalent to 'accept on behalf of', and the point at issue is this, that one was of opinion that we make one ruing¹⁴ because of another,¹⁵ and the other was of opinion that we do not. It has been taught in agreement with Rab:¹⁶ If a man says to another, Take to So-and-so the maneh which I owe him, give So-and-so the maneh which I owe him, take to So-and-so the maneh which he has given me in trust, give So-and-so the maneh which he has given me in trust, he remains responsible for the money, yet if he wishes to retract the commission he is not at liberty to do so. Why should he not be able to retract in the case of trust money, on the plea that [the depositor] does not desire his money to be in the hand of another [party]? — R. Zera answered: We assume that [the sender in this case] is known as a man who denies [his obligations].¹⁷ R. Shesheth had some money owing to him in Mahuza for some cloaks [which he had sold there]. He said to R. Joseph b. Hama [who was going there]: When you come back from there, bring the money with you. [R. Joseph] went [to them] and they gave him the money. They said to him: 'Give us a quittance'.¹⁸ At first he said, 'yes', but afterwards he excused himself. When he returned, R. Shesheth said to him: You acted quite rightly,¹⁹ not to make yourself a borrower [who] is the slave of the lender.²⁰ According to another version he said to him: You acted quite rightly: 'a borrower is the slave of the lender.'²¹

He said to R. Doseithai the son of R. Jannai and to R. Jose b. Kifar [who were going there]: When you come back from there, bring it with you. They went and got it [from the people who had it]. They said to them: 'Give us a quittance'. They said, 'No'. 'Then give it back', they said. R. Doseithai the son of R. Jannai was willing, but R. Jose b. Kifar refused. They gave him a thrashing,¹ and said to R. Doseithai: 'See what your friend² is doing'. He replied: 'Thrash him well'.³ When they returned to R. Ahi, R. Jose said: 'Look, sir, not only did he not assist me, but he said to them, "Thrash him well". He said to R. Doseithai: 'Why did you do so?' He replied: 'Those people are like posts, and their hats as long as themselves.⁴ Their voice comes from their boots,⁵ and their names are outlandish — Arda and Arta and Pili Baris.⁶ If they give the order to arrest, you are arrested; to kill, you are killed. If they had killed [poor] Doseithai, who would have given Jannai my father a son like me?' 'Have these men', he asked, 'influence with the Government?' 'Yes', he replied. 'Have they a retinue [mounted on] horses and mules?'⁷ 'Yes'. 'If that is so', he said, 'you acted rightly'.

If a man said to another, Take a maneh to So-and-so, and he went and looked for him, but did not find him [alive], one [Baraita] teaches he must return the money to the sender, and another [Baraita] teaches he must give it to the heirs of the man to whom it was sent. Shall we say that the point at issue [between the two authorities] is that one is of opinion that 'take' is equivalent to accept on behalf of', and the other that it is not? — Said R. Abba b. Memel: No. Both are agreed that 'take' is not equivalent to accept on behalf of', and there is no difference of opinion between them, as the one speaks of a sender who is in health and the other of one who is on a death bed.⁸ R. Zebid said: Both speak of a sender who is on a death bed, but the one [has in mind the case] where the recipient is alive at the time when the money was given [to the bearer], and the other [the case] where he was not alive at the time. R. Papa says: Both speak of a case where the sender was in health,⁹ but the one [had in mind the case] where the recipient died while the sender was still alive,¹⁰ and the other [the case] where the sender died¹¹ while the recipient was still alive.¹²

May we assert that the question whether 'take' is equivalent to accept on behalf of' is one on which there was a difference of opinion among the Tannaim, as it has been taught: [If a man said to another,] Take a maneh to So-and-so, and he went and looked for him and did not find him [alive], he must return the money to the sender. If the sender has also died meanwhile, R. Nathan and R. Jacob say that he should return it to the heirs of the sender; or as some say, to the heirs of the person to whom the money was sent; R. Judah the Prince said in the name of R. Jacob, who said it in the name of R. Meir, that it is a religious duty to carry out the wishes of the deceased: The Sages say that the money should be divided: while here [in Babylon]¹³ they say that the bearer should use his own discretion. R. Simeon the Prince said: I had to deal with a case of this kind, and it was decided that the money should be returned to the heirs of the sender. May we regard the point at issue here as being this, that the first Tanna was of opinion that ‘take’ is not equivalent to ‘accept on behalf of’, and that R. Nathan and R. Jacob were of the same opinion and also held that even where the sender has died in the meanwhile we do not in this case say that it is a religious duty to carry out the wishes of the deceased; that the ‘some’ [authorities] held that ‘take’ is equivalent to ‘accept on behalf of’; that R. Judah the Prince speaking in the name of R. Jacob who again spoke in the name of R. Meir held that ‘take’ is not equivalent to ‘accept on behalf of’, only where the sender has died [in the meanwhile] we do say that it is a religious duty to carry out his wishes; that the Sages who say they should divide are in doubt [as to which principle to adopt], while here [in Babylon, other authorities] think that the bearer can best estimate for himself; and as for R. Simeon the Prince, he simply desired to give an illustration? — No. If the sender is in health, all authorities are agreed [that ‘take’ is not equivalent to ‘accept on behalf of’]. Here, however, we are dealing [with the case] where [the sender is] on a death bed, and the dispute here is analogous to the dispute between R. Eleazar and the Rabbis. For we learnt: If a man divides his property among his heirs by word of mouth, R. Eleazar says that whether he is in health or dangerously ill, immovable property can be transferred to the new owners only by money payment, by document, or by act of possession, and movable property only by ‘pulling’, whereas the Sages say that transference of ownership is effected in both cases by his mere word of mouth. Said [the Sages] to him: There is the case of the mother of the sons of Rokel who was ill and said, Let my brooch be given

(1) Lit., ‘they vexed him’.

(2) Lit., ‘the master’.

(3) Al. ‘He deserves his thrashing’.

(4) Lit., ‘they are a cubit and their hats are a cubit’.

(5) Lit., ‘they speak from their middles’.

(12) And the money now goes to the heirs of the recipient.

(13) [This is quoted by Chajes in support of Sherira's view in his Epistle that Babylon was a centre of Torah studies from the earliest days, ever since the first deportation of Jews in 596 B.C.E. V. supra p. 17, n. 3 and Halevy, Doroth II, pp. 82ff.]

to my daughter, it is worth twelve maneh; and then she died and the Sages carried out her instruction? He replied: The sons of Rokel — may their mother bury them!¹ The first Tanna [in our passage] holds with R. Eleazar,² and R. Nathan and R. Jacob also hold with R. Eleazar, [so much so] that although the owner dies, we do not say that it is a religious duty to carry out his wishes. ‘Some’ [authorities] hold with the Rabbis. R. Judah speaking in the name of R. Jacob who himself spoke in the name of R. Meir held with R. Eleazar, only where the sender had died in the meanwhile he applied the principle of carrying out the wishes of the deceased. The Sages said the money should be divided, because they were in doubt. ‘Here’ [in Babylon] they said that the bearer could best estimate for himself, while R. Simeon the Prince merely desired to give an illustration.

A question was asked in the Beth Hamidrash: Was R. Simeon the Prince really a prince,³ or did he speak in the name of the Prince? — Come and hear: R. Joseph said that the halachah follows the ruling of R. Simeon the Prince. But the question still remains whether he was a Prince or only spoke in the name of a Prince? — Let it stand over.

The text above says: R. Jose said that the halachah follows the ruling of R. Simeon the Prince. But is it not an established rule that the words of a man on his death bed have the same force as if they were written and delivered? [R. Joseph] understands [the Baraitha] to be speaking of the case [where the sender was] in good health. But R. Simeon said it should be returned ‘to the heirs of the sender’. though all are agreed it is a fixed rule that it is a religious duty to carry out the instructions of the deceased? — Read⁴: ‘returned to the sender’.

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. IF THE BEARER OF A GET FROM ‘FOREIGN PARTS’ DECLARES: ‘IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE BUT NOT SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’, [OR]. ‘IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE BUT NOT WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE’, [OR] ‘THE WHOLE OF IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE BUT ONLY ONE OF THE WITNESSES SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’,⁵ [OR] ‘ONLY HALF WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE THOUGH BOTH WITNESSES⁶ SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’ — IN ALL THESE CASES THE GET IS INVALID.⁷ IF ONE [PERSON] DECLARES ‘IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE AND ANOTHER SAYS, ‘IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’. THE GET IS INVALID. IF TWO [PERSONS] DECLARE, ‘IT WAS WRITTEN IN OUR PRESENCE AND ANOTHER SAYS, ‘IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’, IT IS INVALID: R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID. IF ONE DECLARES, ‘IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE’ AND TWO SAY, ‘IT WAS SIGNED IN OUR PRESENCE’, IT IS VALID.

GEMARA. Why this repetition? Is it not all included in what we have already learnt: The bearer of a Get from ‘foreign parts’ is required to declare, ‘In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed’?⁸ — If I had only that to go by, I might think that [though] he is required [to make this declaration], yet if he omitted [to do so the Get is still] valid. Now I know that [this is not the case].

ONLY HALF OF IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE THOUGH BOTH WITNESSES SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE. Which half is referred to? If you say the first half, what of the dictum of R. Eleazar, that if only one line⁹ is written with special reference to the woman for whom it is intended, the rest requires no such [‘special intention’]? — R. Ashi therefore said that the second half is meant.

THE WHOLE WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE BUT ONLY ONE WITNESS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE. R. Hisda said: Even if two other persons attest the signature of the second witness, the Get is still invalid. What is the reason for this? — In regard to both signatures alike¹⁰ we must either insist on confirmation¹¹ or follow the regulation of the Rabbis.¹² Raba demurred strongly to this [reasoning]. Is there anything, he said, which is declared valid on the word of one witness¹³ and invalid on the word of two? No, said Raba; what we must say is that even

(1) As much as to say, they are men of such bad character that their name is not fit to be mentioned in the Beth Hamidrash, and they do not form a precedent. For fuller notes v. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 679.

(2) Who makes no distinction between a man in health or dying, while ‘take’ is not treated as ‘accept on behalf’.

(3) Nasi, the title of the officially recognised head of the Jewish community in Palestine under the Roman Empire, corresponding to the Resh Galutha in Babylonia. [The name of Simeon the ‘Prince’ does not occur elsewhere, hence the question whether his designation was ‘the Prince’ or whether the words ‘in the name of the Prince’ are omitted from the text. For a similar omission cf. B.K. 39b, 1, v. Tosaf.]

(5) Lit., ‘half of it was signed in my presence’.

(6) Lit., ‘the whole of it was signed’.

(7) The rule being that it must all be written and signed by two witnesses in his presence.

(8) Which implies that it was completely written and completely signed in his presence. (Rashi).

(9) Viz., the line containing the name of the man and of his wife and the date.

(10) Lit., ‘the whole of it’.

(11) By the attestation of two witnesses. V. supra 2b.

(12) Which requires a declaration from the bearer.

(13) Viz, the bearer, whose word is taken if he says that he recognises the signature of the witness; supra 3a.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 15b

if the bearer and another person confirm the signature of the second witness,¹ [the Get] is invalid,² because this might be taken as a precedent for the attestation of other documents, and in this way three-quarters³ of a sum in dispute might be assigned on the word of one witness.⁴ R. Ashi strongly demurred to this [reasoning]. Is there anything, he said, which if stated by one persons is valid, but becomes invalid if another joins with him? No, said R. Ashi, what we have to say is that even if the bearer Says. ‘I myself am the second witness’, [the Get] is invalid, because in regard to both signatures alike we must either insist on confirmation or follow the regulation of the Rabbis.

We learnt: [IF HE DECLARES.] ‘THE WHOLE WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE BUT ONLY ONE WITNESS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE’, THE GET IS INVALID. What now about the other witness? Do we presume that there is no-one who attests his signature? That cannot be; for even where one [person declares] 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE' AND ANOTHER SAYS 'IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE', in which case one testifies to the whole of the writing and the other to the whole of the signing [— even in that case the Get] is invalid; how much more so then if only half [of the signing is attested]? No; this shows that the proper explanation is either that of Raba or of R. Ashi, and that R. Hisda's is to be excluded.⁵ And R. Hisda? — He can rejoin: On your theory,⁶ what need is there to specify the case of 'in my presence it was written but not signed' [etc.]? Obviously the Mishnah was giving first a weaker and then a stronger instance;⁷ so here, the Mishnah gives first a weaker and then a stronger instance.⁸

R. Hisda said: An embankment five handbreadths deep and a fence [on it] five handbreadths high are not reckoned together [to form a single partition of ten handbreadths];⁹ the whole of the ten must be contained either in the embankment or in the fence. Meremar, however, in an exposition, [taught] that an embankment of five handbreadths and a fence on it of five handbreadths are reckoned together; and the law is that they are reckoned together.

Ifa inquired: Can the hands be half clean and half unclean, or can they not be? How is this question to be understood? Does it mean that two persons wash their hands from a revi'ith?¹⁰ Regarding this we have already learnt that a revi'ith is sufficient for washing the hands of one [person] and even of two.¹¹ Is the case then that he washes one hand at a time? In regard to this too we have learnt¹² that if a man washes one hand by pouring water over it and the other by dipping [it in a river] the hands are clean. Is it then that he washes a half of his hand at a time? Regarding this it has been laid down in the school of R. Jannai that the hands cannot be made clean by halves. — The question may still be asked in regard to the case where the water is still dripping [from one hand¹³ when he washes the second]. And suppose the water is dripping, what does it matter? Have we not learnt:

(1) I.e., declare that they know this to be his signature.

(2) In spite of the fact that if the bearer testifies alone, it is valid.

(3) Lit., 'deducting a fourth'.

(4) If a document is brought into court signed by two witnesses, A and B, of whom B is dead, and if A together with a third party attests the signature of B, then if money were to be awarded on the strength of that document, three-quarters of it would be awarded on the evidence of the one witness A, which is against the rule, as each witness must be responsible for a half, v. Keth. 21b.

(5) The Mishnah quoted above ('if he says the whole was written in my presence but only one witness signed in my presence') has just been shown to be superfluous, and we are therefore entitled to infer some lesson from it. That inference, however, should be restricted to a minimum, and therefore the opinions of Raba and R. Ashi are preferable to that of R. Hisda.

(6) That an apparent superfluity must be made the basis of some lesson.

(7) Lit., 'not only this (but) also this'. I.e., first 'in my presence it was not signed (at all)', and then 'in my presence only one witness signed', the first case being contained in the second.

(8) First where one attests the writing and the other the signatures, and then where one signature is left unattested.

(9) So as to enclose a space which can be considered as 'private domain' for the purposes of transportation on Sabbath.

(10) A quarter of a log, about 1 1/2 eggs; the minimum required for the ritual washing of the hands before meals.

(11) Naz. 382. Yad. I, 2.

(12) Yad. II, 1.

(13) So that it is possible still to regard the hands as being washed together.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 16a

‘A jet of water [from a jug] or water flowing down a slope, or dripping water, does not form a connection so as to make [the water] unclean¹ or clean?² — The question is still required for the case where the dripping is considerable.³ But regarding this also we have been taught that where the dripping is considerable, it does form a connection. — Perhaps this dictum refers only to a mikweh,⁴ and follows the opinion of R. Judah: For we learnt: ‘If a mikweh contains exactly forty se’ahs of water and two persons bathe in it, if they both are in the water together they are both clean, but if one enters after the other has left, the first is clean but the second not’.⁵ R. Judah said that if the feet of the first were still touching the water [when the second entered], the second is also clean.⁶

R. Jeremiah said: It has been laid down that if a person plunges the greater part of his body in water drawn [through a pipe],⁷ or if three logs of such water are poured over the greater part of the body of a clean person, he is unclean.⁸ R. Jeremiah then propounded: Suppose he plunges half of his [body into such water] and three logs of it fall on the other half, is he unclean? This question was left unanswered. R. Papa said: It has been laid down that if a sick person had a seminal emission and nine kabs of water are thrown over him, he is clean. R. papa then asked: If he dips half his [body in water] and [water is] thrown over the other half, is he clean? This question was also left unanswered.

IF ONE DECLARES, ‘IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE AND THE OTHER, etc.’ R. Samuel b. Judah said in the name of R. Johanan: This rule applies only to the case where the Get was not brought by both as joint bearers, but if it is brought by both of them

(1) I.e., if water is falling or dripping from a receptacle containing ‘clean’ water into one containing ‘unclean’ it does not thereby communicate the uncleanness of the lower to the upper.

(2) [I.e., if a mikweh has less than 40 se’ahs, water dripping from another mikweh it cannot make up the deficiency; but v. Tosaf. s.v. eumhbv]

(3) Lit., ‘enough to make wet’.

(4) V. Glos. And not to the washing of the hands.

(5) [Because the first had taken away some water on the body and thus rendered the mikweh deficient from the minimum of 40 se’ahs.]

it is valid. We conclude that he was of opinion that if a Get was brought by two bearers from 'foreign parts', they are not required to declare 'In our presence it was written and in our presence it was signed.'¹ Said Abaye to him: Taking this view [as correct], let us look at the clause which follows: IF TWO SAY, 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN OUR PRESENCE', AND ONE SAYS, 'IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE', IT IS INVALID; R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT TO BE VALID. The reason, you say, why the Rabbis declare it invalid is because it was not brought by both of them as bearers. Are we to suppose then that if both of them did act as bearers, the Rabbis hold the Get to be valid? — He replied: That is so. In the case then where both do not act as bearers of the Get, what is the ground of the difference [between R. Judah and the Rabbis]? — One authority [the Rabbis] held that there is a risk of the procedure [in the case of a Get] being taken as an example for allowing one witness to confirm [signatures] of documents in general, and the other held that there is no such danger.

Another version [of the above passage is as follows]. R. Samuel b. Judah said in the name of R. Johanan: Even if both witnesses have acted as bearers of the Get, it is invalid. We conclude that he was of opinion that if two persons act as joint bearers of a Get from 'foreign parts', they are required to declare, 'In our presence it was written and in our presence it was signed'. Said Abaye to him: Accepting this view [as correct], let us look at the next clause: IF TWO SAY, 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN OUR PRESENCE, AND ONE SAYS, 'IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE', IT IS INVALID. R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID. Then the Rabbis declare it invalid even if both have acted as bearers? — He replied: That is so. What is the point at issue between R. Judah and the Rabbis? — One authority [the Rabbis] was of opinion that the reason why the declaration is required is because [the Jews outside Palestine] are not familiar with the rule of 'special intention',² and the other [R. Judah], because witnesses cannot easily be found to attest the signatures.³ May we infer from this that the dispute between Rabbah and Raba goes back to the Tannaim? — No. Raba adopts the first version of the passage just quoted.⁴ Rabbah, [adopting the second], can maintain that both authorities require the declaration on account of the rule of 'special intention', and here we are dealing with the period when this had become generally known, and the point at issue between R. Judah and the Rabbis is whether there is a danger of a reversion to the former ignorance, one [the Rabbis] holding that there was such a danger and it was necessary to take precautions against it, and the other that it was not. But according to this, R. Judah should join issue in the first clause⁵ also? — This is in fact the case, as has been stated: 'Ulla said that R. Judah differed from the Rabbis in the first case also. R. Oshiah raised an objection to 'Ulla. [It has been taught:] R. Judah declares [the Get] valid in this case, and not in the other. Does he not mean by this, [he said,] to except the case where one says 'It was written in my presence' and one says 'it was signed in my presence'? — No. He means to except the case where one says, 'It was signed in my presence but not written in my presence'. I might think that since R. Judah does not think it necessary to guard against the danger of a recurrence of the ignorance,⁶ so also he does not think it necessary to guard against the danger of confusing writs of divorce with other documents through allowing confirmation by one witness.⁷ Now I know [that this is not the case]. It has also been stated:⁸ Rab Judah said: In the matter of a Get which is brought by two bearers from 'foreign parts', we find a difference of opinion between R. Judah and the Rabbis.

Rabbah b. Bar Hanah was once ill, and Rab Judah and Rabbah went to inquire how he was. While with him, they put to him the question: If two bearers' bring a Get from 'foreign parts', are they required to declare, 'In our presence it was written and in our presence it was signed', or are they not required? — He replied: They are not required. For if they were to say, 'In our presence he divorced her', would we not take their word? At this point a Gueber⁹ came in

- (1) Since the reason for this declaration (which is because there may not be witnesses available to attest the signatures, v. supra 2b) does not apply where there are two bearers.
 - (2) And therefore where there are two bearers, they must make the whole declaration.
 - (3) And therefore two bearers are not required.
 - (4) According to which two bearers are not required.
 - (5) If one says that it was written in his presence and one that it was signed in his presence. Since the bearers are two and he does not fear the reversion to their former ignorance.
 - (6) By declaring the Get invalid if one declares that he has seen it written and one that he has seen it signed.
 - (7) If one witness is allowed to confirm the signature to the Get.
 - (8) In support of the second version of R. Johanan.
 - (9) A member of the fanatical sect of fire-worshippers who became powerful in the Persian Empire in the fourth century.

Talmud - Mas. Gittin 17a

and took away their lamp;¹ whereupon Rabbah b. Bar Hanah ejaculated: 'O All Merciful One! either in Thy shadow or in the shadow of the son of Esau!'² This is as much as to say, [is it not,] that the Romans are better than the Persians? How does this square with what R. Hiyyah taught: 'What is the point of the verse, God understood her way and he knew her place?'³ It means that the Holy One, blessed be He, knew that Israel would not be able to endure the persecution of the Romans, so he drove them to Babylon'⁴ — There is no contradiction. One dictum refers to the period before the Guebers came to Babylon, the other to the period subsequent to their coming.⁵

IF ONE SAYS, 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN MY PRESENCE' AND TWO SAY IT WAS SIGNED IN OUR PRESENCE, IT IS VALID. R. Ammi said in the name of Johanan: This applies only to the case in which the Get is produced by the witness to the writing [as bearer]. since in that case there is the equivalent of two witnesses⁶ to the writing and two to the signing. If, however, it is produced by the witnesses to the signing [as bearers], [the Get] is invalid. This would show, [would it not,] that he is of opinion that if two [bearers] bring a Get from 'foreign parts', they are required to declare, 'It was written in our presence and signed in our presence'? Said R. Assi to him: Accepting this view, look at the preceding clause: IF TWO SAY, 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN OUR PRESENCE' AND ONE SAYS, 'IT WAS SIGNED IN MY PRESENCE', IT IS INVALID: R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID. Do the Rabbis declare it invalid even if the Get is produced by both [as bearers]? — He replied: That is so. At another time R. Assi found R. Ammi poring [over the Mishnah] and saying that even if the Get [is produced] by the witnesses to the signing [as bearers],⁷ it is valid. This seemed to show that he was of opinion that if two [bearers jointly] brought a Get from foreign parts, they are not required to declare, 'It was written in our presence and signed in our presence'. Said R. Assi to him: If that is so, what of the preceding clause: IF TWO SAY, 'IT WAS WRITTEN IN OUR PRESENCE'

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. A MAIDEN IS MARRIED¹ ON THE FOURTH DAY [OF THE WEEK] AND A WIDOW ON THE FIFTH DAY, FOR TWICE IN THE WEEK THE COURTS OF JUSTICE² SIT IN THE TOWNS, ON THE SECOND DAY [OF THE WEEK] AND ON THE FIFTH DAY, SO THAT IF HE [THE HUSBAND] HAD A CLAIM AS TO THE VIRGINITY [OF THE MAIDEN-BRIDE] HE COULD GO EARLY [ON THE MORNING OF THE FIFTH DAY OF THE WEEK] TO THE COURT OF JUSTICE.

GEMARA. R. Joseph said: Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said: Why did they [the Rabbis] Say. A MAIDEN IS MARRIED ON THE FOURTH DAY? Because we have learned:³ 'If the time [appointed for the marriage] arrived and they⁴ were not married,⁵ they⁴ eat of his [food]⁶ and they eat⁷ of terumah⁸ — you might think that if the time arrived on the first day in the week he would have to supply her with food, therefore have we learned, A MAIDEN IS MARRIED ON THE FOURTH DAY.⁹ Said R. Joseph: Lord of Abraham!¹⁰ He [Samuel] attaches a Mishnah which was taught, to a Mishnah which was not taught! Which was taught and which was not taught? This was taught and this was taught! — But [put it this way]: he attaches a Mishnah, the reason of which was explained,¹¹ to a Mishnah, the reason of which was not explained.¹² But if it was said,¹³ it was said thus; Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said: Why did they say, A MAIDEN IS MARRIED ON THE FOURTH DAY? Because IF HE HAD A CLAIM AS TO THE VIRGINITY HE COULD GO EARLY [NEXT MORNING] TO THE COURT OF JUSTICE — well, let her be married on the first day in the week, so that if he had a claim as to virginity he could go early [on the morning of the second day of the week] to the court of justice! [The answer is:] The Sages watched over the interests¹⁴ of the daughters of Israel so that [the bridegroom] should prepare for the [wedding.] feast three days, [namely] on the first day in the week, the second day in the week, and the third day in the week, and on the fourth day he marries her. And now that we have learned 'shakedu',¹⁵ that [Mishnah] which we have learned: If the time arrived and they were not married, they eat of his [food] and they eat of terumah, [is to be understood as implying that if] the time arrived on the first day in the week, since he cannot marry [her, on the first day of the week, on account of the ordinance], he does not give her food [on the three days, from the first day of the week to the fourth day]. Therefore¹⁶ [R. Joseph concludes], if he became ill or she became ill, or she became menstruous,¹⁷ he does not give her food.

Some [scholars] there are who put this as a question: If he became ill, what is [the law]?¹⁸ [Shall I say:] There.¹⁹ the reason [he need not support her,] is because he is forced,²⁰ and here, he is also forced?²¹ Or shall I say] perhaps, there.²² he is forced²³ by an ordinance which the Rabbis ordained,²⁴ [but] here, [he is] not?²⁵ And if you will say:²⁶ If he became ill he supplies her with food, [then the question would still be:] if she became ill, what is [the law]? Can he say unto her, 'I am here ready to marry you'? Or, perhaps, she can say unto him, 'His field²⁷ has been flooded'?²⁸ And if you will say [that] she can say to him [when she falls ill], 'His field has been flooded.' [then the question is,] if she became menstruous, what is [the law]? During her regular time there is no question

 - (6) The man has to maintain them.
 - (7) If the man (the bridegroom) is a priest.
 - (8) The priest's share of the crop. v. Glos.
 - (9) And thus to teach that it is not his fault that he does not marry her on the first day in the week, because the Rabbis ordained that he has to wait with the marriage till the fourth day (in the case of a maiden), or the fifth day (in the case of a widow).

 - (22) When the appointed date of the marriage falls on the first day of the week.
 - (23) To postpone the marriage.
 - (24) And therefore he need not support her.
 - (25) I.e., in this case he would have to support her since the postponement of the marriage is due to his illness.
 - (26) Lit., 'And if you may be able (or, find it possible) to say.'
 - (27) Another reading is 'thy field'. The sense is, of course, the same.
 - (28) I.e., it is his bad luck that she became ill, and consequently he must support her.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 2b

that she cannot say to him, 'His field has been flooded'. When is the question asked? [If she became menstruous] not during her regular time, what is [the law]? Since it is not during her regular time, she can say unto him, 'His field has been flooded'? Or, perhaps, since there are women who change their periods. It is as if it was her regular time? R. Ahai explained:¹ [We learnt:] When the time came and they were not married, they eat of his food and they eat of terumah.² It does not state. 'They [the men] did not marry them [the women]' but [it says] 'They [the women] were not married.' In what case? If they prevent,³ why do they eat of his food and eat of the terumah? Hence, you must say [must you not].⁴ that they were forced as in this case,⁵ and it states 'they eat of his food and they eat of terumah'? — R. Ashi said: Indeed I can say⁶ [that] in the case of an accident⁷ she does not eat [of his].⁸ And [here]⁹ they [the men] prevented.¹⁰ And by right he ought to have stated, ‘they [the men] did not marry [the women].’¹¹ But since the first clause¹² speaks of them [the women] the latter clause also speaks of them [the women].¹³

Raba said: And with regard to divorce¹⁴ it is not so.¹⁵ Accordingly Raba holds [that] accident is no plea in regard to divorce.¹⁶ Whence does Raba get this [rule]? Shall I say, from what we have learned: ‘Behold this is thy bill of divorce if I come not [back] from now until twelve months,’¹⁷ and he died within the twelve months, there is no divorce.¹⁸ [And we would conclude from this that only if] he died there is no divorce,¹⁹ but if he became ill²⁰ there is a divorce!²¹ But perhaps indeed I might say [that] if he became ill there would also be no divorce.²² and [the Mishnah]²³ lets us hear just this [rule], that there is no divorce after death.²⁴ [That] there is no divorce after death, a previous Mishnah²⁵ teaches: ‘Behold, this is thy bill of divorce if I die,’ [or] ‘behold, this is thy bill of divorce from this illness,’²⁶ [or] ‘behold, this is thy bill of divorce after [my] death,’ he has not said anything.²⁷ [But] perhaps [that²⁸ is] to exclude from that²⁹ of our teachers, for it has been taught: Our teachers allowed her to marry again.³⁰ And we said: Who are ‘our teachers’? Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said: The court that allowed the oil [of the heathen]:³¹ they³² hold like R. Jose who said, ‘the date of the document shows it.’³³ But from the later clause:³⁴ ‘[This is thy bill of divorce]³⁵ from now if I come not [back] from now [and] until twelve months’, and he died within the twelve months, it is a divorce. [And we may deduce] ‘if he died’, and the same rule applies if he became ill.³⁶ [But] perhaps [the divorce is effective] only when he died, because it was not pleasing to him that she should become subject to³⁷ the yabam!³⁸ — But [the deduction can be made] from this: There was a certain [man]³⁹ who said unto them:⁴⁰ ‘If I do not come [back] from now until thirty days it shall be a divorce.’⁴¹ He came [back] at the end of thirty days but the ferry stopped him.⁴² He said unto them,⁴³ ‘Look, I have come [back]; look, I have come [back]!’⁴⁴ Said Samuel: This is not regarded as having come back.⁴⁵ But perhaps an accident which is frequent⁴⁶ is different,⁴⁷ for since he ought to have stipulated it⁴⁸ and he did not stipulate it, he injured himself!⁴⁹ — But [we must say] Raba expressed an opinion of his own:⁵⁰ On account of the chaste women and on account of the loose women.⁵¹ On account of the chaste women,⁵² because if you will say that it should not be a divorce.⁵³

(1) I.e., ‘answered’.

(2) Mishnah 57a: v. supra.

(3) If the women cause the hindrance to the marriage taking place now..

(4) Lit., ‘but is it not’.

(5) Lit., as in this manner’, that is, when menstruation appeared outside the regular time.

(6) Lit., ‘always I say unto thee’.

(7) As irregular menstruation (v. n. 10). The accident is a mishap that comes from the woman.

(8) Lit., ‘every accident, she does not eat.’

(9) In the Mishnah quoted by R. Ahai.

(10) The marriage from taking place now’.

(11) And not ‘they (the women) Here not married’.

(12) Of the Mishnah, quoted by R. Ahai: V. infra 57a.

(13) I.e., since that Mishnah speaks in the first clause of ‘maiden’ and ‘widow’, it uses in the clause that follows the passive ‘they were not married’ the subjects of which are the ‘maiden and the ‘widow’ to use the active ‘they did not marry’, referring to the men, would have required more words in that clause.

- (14) Lit., 'deeds (of divorce).'
- (15) I.e., an accident, as explained infra, does not invalidate a divorce.
- (16) Lit. , 'there is no accident with divorce'.
- (17) These words the husband says to the wife. 'From now until twelve months, means 'within twelve months,.
- (18) Lit., 'it is not a Get,' (v. Glos.) that is, the divorce does not take effect: v. Git. 76b.
- (19) Because there can be no divorce after death.
- (20) And he could not come back within the twelve months through his illness.
- (21) Which proves that we do not admit a plea of force majeure to invalidate a Get.
- (22) For the plea of accident does apply to divorce.
- (23) Git. 76b.
- (24) And no other deduction, e.g.. as to illness, is to be made from that Mishnah.
- (25) Git. 72a. Lit., 'beginning', 'first clause', denoting here a previous Mishnah.
- (26) This phrase is not clear. V. Rashi here and Git. 72a. The phrase seems to mean, 'If I die from this illness.' v. Tosaf. a.l.
- (27) I.e., his words have no effect.
- (28) I.e., the Mishnah of Git. 76b quoted above.
- (29) I.e., from the view of our teachers. If this is the object of (the first clause of) the Mishnah of Cit. 76b, Raba cannot deduce from this Mishnah that if he (the husband) became ill the divorce took effect: v. supra, also note 9.
- (30) 'Our teachers' regard her as divorced (against the Mishnah) and allow her to marry again without halizah. If she is regarded as a widow and she has no children she requires halizah before she can re-marry. As to halizah v. Deut. XXV. 5-10. and Glos.
- (31) V. A.Z. 36a and 37a.
- (32) I.e., the members of the court of justice.
- (33) [B.B. 136a: and so here the date inserted for the Get is intended to make it effective from the time of the delivery thereof. For further notes v. Git. (Sonc. ed.) p. 136].
- (34) I.e., Raba deduces the rule that the plea of accident does not apply to divorce from the second clause of the Mishnah, cf. Git. 76b.
- (35) v. Git. 76b.
- (36) And he could not come back on account of his illness.
- (37) Lit. , 'that she should fall before' (the yabam).
- (38) The husband's brother, who, if she was regarded as a widow (and not as divorced), would have to marry her or let her perform halizah.
- (39) A husband.
- (40) Certain persons who might be witnesses.
- (41) I.e., the bill of divorce given now shall become effective.
- (42) The ferry was on the other side of the river and he could not get across, and he was thus prevented (by this accident) from arriving in his town within the thirty days.
- (43) To persons standing near by.
- (44) The divorce should therefore not take effect.
- (45) Lit., 'Its name is not come back'" — the divorce, therefore, takes effect. This proves that force majeure is no plea in regard to Get.
- (46) I.e., an accident which is likely to occur, as the ferry being on the other side of the river.
- (47) Does not bar the divorce from becoming effective.
- (48) That if the ferry should be on the other side of the river and he could not get across and come into his town, it should be regarded as if he had arrived in the town and come back within the meaning of his condition, which would thus be regarded as not fulfilled, and the divorce would, consequently, not take effect.

(49) He has himself to blame. The attempted deduction from the ferry case is therefore refuted.

(50) Since the rule of Raba, that an accident is no bar to the effectiveness of the divorce, cannot be derived from any Mishnah or from the ferry case, it is attributed to himself that is to his own reasoning.

(51) By 'loose women' are meant women who would not be particular about marrying again even if the validity of the divorce was not established.

(52) The divorce should be effective.

(53) That the divorce should not become effective because of the accident.

sometimes [it may happen] that he was not held back by an accident,¹ and she would think that he was held back by an accident² and she would be tied, and sit.³ And on account of the loose women, because if you will say [that] it should not be a divorce, sometimes [it may happen] that he was held back by an accident⁴ and she would say⁵ that he was not held back by an accident⁶ and she would go and get married, and the result would be⁷ [that] the divorce was invalid⁸ and her children [from the second marriage] would be bastards.⁹ But is it possible¹⁰ that according to the law of the Bible it would not be a divorce¹¹ and on account of 'the chaste women' and on account of the 'loose women' we should allow a married woman¹² to the world?¹³ — Yes, every one who betroths in accordance with the sense of the Rabbis he betroths,¹⁴ and the Rabbis have annulled his betrothal.¹⁵ Said Rabina to R. Ashi: This might be well¹⁶ [if] he betrothed her with money,¹⁷ [but if] he betrothed [her] by act of marriage, what can one say [then]? — The Rabbis have made¹⁸ his act of marriage non-marital.¹⁹

Some, [however,] say²⁰ [as follows]: Raba said: And so [also] with regard to divorce. Accordingly Raba holds [that the plea of] accident applies to divorce.²¹ An objection was raised: 'Behold this is thy bill of divorce if I come not [back] from now [and] until twelve months,' and he died within the twelve months, there is no divorce. [Now] if he dies there is no divorce, but if he became ill there would be a divorce! — Indeed I might say [unto thee] that if he became ill there would be no divorce either, and [the Mishnah] lets us hear just this [rule]: that there is no divorce after death. [That] there is no divorce after death a previous Mishnah teaches! — Perhaps [that is] to exclude from that of our teachers. Come and hear:²² From now if I have not come [back] from now [and] until twelve months,' and he died within the twelve months, it is a divorce. Would not the same rule apply if he became ill? No, Only if he died, because it was not pleasing to him that she should become subject to the yabam. Come and hear: A certain [man] said unto them: 'If I do not come [back] from now [and] until thirty days it shall be a divorce.' He came [back] at the end of thirty days but the ferry stopped him. And he said unto them, 'Look, I have come [back]; look, I have come [back]!' And Samuel said: This is not regarded as having come back! — An accident which is frequent is different, for since he ought to have stipulated it and he did not stipulate it, he injured himself.

R. Samuel b. Isaac said: They have only taught²³ since the institution of Ezra²⁴ and after, [according to which] the courts of justice sit²⁵ only on the second day and on the fifth day [of the week]. But before the institution of Ezra, when the courts of justice sat every day, a woman²⁶ could be married on any day. Before the institution of Ezra, what there was there was!²⁷ — He means it thus: If there are courts of justice that sit now as before the institution of Ezra,²⁸ a woman may be married on any day. But what of shakedu?²⁹ [We suppose] that he³⁰ had [already] taken the trouble.³¹

- (1) Lit. 'that he was not forced.' The divorce would therefore certainly be effective.
- (2) And the divorce would, in her view, not take effect (if the rule would have been that an accident is a bar to the divorce becoming effective).
- (3) Lit. , 'and she will be tied'. I.e., she would regard herself as tied to her absent husband and would not marry again. An 'agunah is a woman tied to an absent husband'. The Rabbis endeavoured to prevent the state of 'agunah; v. Git. 33a.
- (4) And the divorce would not take effect.
- (5) The use of 'she would say' here in contradistinction to 'she would think' in the case of the 'chaste women' is no doubt intentional. She (the loose woman) would say this, although she would not think so in her heart.
- (6) In which case the divorce would become effective.
- (7) Lit 'and it is found.'
- (8) If the divorce should not become effective because of an accident.
- (9) The children of a married woman and a man who is not her husband are bastards, mamzerim; v. Yeb. 49a. This would be the case if the divorce would not become effective because of an accident and the first husband should turn up and say that he was held back by an accident. To prevent such evil results Raba established the rule that an accident should not be a bar to the divorce taking effect.
- (10) Lit., 'and is there anything?'
- (11) [The Plea of force majeure as recognized in the Bible, v. Deut. XXII, 26.]
- (12) Lit., 'the wife of a man.'
- (13) I.e., to marry another man.
- (14) Lit., 'he sanctifies.' 'he consecrates.' To sanctify, to consecrate a woman to oneself means to marry her. Kiddushin 'sanctifications' means 'betrothal,' 'marriage.' I.e every one who marries a woman marries her on the basis that the marriage is sanctioned by the law of the Rabbis.
- (15) Lit. , 'and the Rabbis have caused the betrothal to be released from him,' that is retrospectively. As the marriage is subject to the sanction of the Rabbis, the Rabbis can, if the necessity arises, annul the marriage. Such a necessity has arisen when an accident would be a bar to the divorce becoming effective.
- (16) The answer just given might be regarded as satisfactory.
- (17) V. Kid. 2a.
- (18) I.e., have declared it to be, or regard it.
- (19) Lit 'an intercourse of prostitution.' The Rabbis have in either case the power to annul the marriage. The argument that Raba arrived at his views through his own reasoning stands.
- (20) Lit., 'There are some who say.'
- (21) According to this version. Raba holds that an accident is a bar to the divorce becoming effective.
- (22) From here till 'he injured himself' the text is practically identical with the corresponding text on folio 2b. There are only one or two omissions and one or two slight variations. For interpretation, v. notes on the translation of 2b. The difference of the arguments is obvious.
- (23) That a maiden marries on the fourth day of the week.
- (24) V. B.K. 82a.
- (25) Lit., 'are fixed. ,
- (26) Even a maiden.
- (27) That is past and does not matter!

- (28) Every day.
 (29) Lit., ‘we require they watched”. V. supra 2a.
 (30) The bridegroom.
 (31) Of preparing for the wedding.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 3b

What is [the reference to] shakedu? [For] it has been taught: Why did they say that a maiden is married on the fourth day? ‘Because if he had a claim as to virginity he could go early [next morning] to the court of justice. But let her be married on the first day in the week and if he had a claim as to virginity he could go early [on the morning of the second day in the week] to the court of justice? — The Sages watched over the interests of the daughters of Israel so that [the man] should prepare for the [wedding-]feast three days, the first day in the week, and the second day in the week, and the third day in the week, and on the fourth day he marries her. And from [the time of] danger and onwards the people made it a custom to marry on the third day and the Sages did not interfere with them. And on the second day [of the week] he shall not marry; and if on account of the constraint¹ it is allowed. And one separates the bridegroom from the bride on the nights of Sabbath at the beginning,² because he makes a wound.³

What [was the] danger? If I say that they⁴ said, ‘a maiden that gets married on the fourth day [of the week] shall be killed’, [then how state] ‘they made it a custom’? We should abolish it entirely! — Said Rabbah: [That] they said, ‘a maiden that gets married on the fourth day [of the week] shall have the first sexual intercourse with the prefect.’⁵ [You call] this danger? [Surely] this [is a case of] constraint!⁶ — Because there are chaste women who would rather surrender themselves to death and [thus] come to danger. But let one expound to them⁷ that [in a case of] constraint [it] is allowed?⁸ — There are loose women⁹ and there are also priestesses.¹⁰ But [then] let one abolish it?¹¹ A decree¹² is likely to cease, and [therefore] we do not abolish an ordinance of the Rabbis on account of a decree. If so, on the third day he [the prefect] would also come and have intercourse [with the bride]? — Out of doubt he does not move himself.¹³

[It is stated above:] ‘And on the second day [of the week] he shall not marry; and if on account of the constraint it is allowed.’ What constraint [is referred to]? Shall I say [that it is] that which we have said?¹⁴ There,¹⁵ one calls it ‘danger’ ‘and here, one calls it [mere] ‘constraint’! And further, there [it states], ‘they made it a custom’, [whilst] here, ‘it is allowed’!¹⁶ — Said Raba: [it is that] they say ‘a general has come to town.¹⁷ In what case? If he comes and passes by,¹⁸ let it be delayed!¹⁹ — It is not necessary [to state this but] that he came and stayed. Let him, [then], marry on the third day [of the week]!²⁰ — His²¹ vanguard arrived on the third day. And if you wish I may say: What is [the meaning of] ‘on account of the constraint’? As it has been taught: If his bread was baked and his meat prepared and his wine mixed²² and the father of the bridegroom²³ or the mother of the bride died,²⁴ they bring the dead [person] into a room and the bridegroom and the bride into the bridal chamber,²⁵ and he performs the dutiful marital act¹ and [then] separates [himself from her].² And [then] he keeps the seven days of the [wedding-]feast³ and after that he keeps the seven days of mourning.³ And [during] all these days he sleeps among the men and she sleeps among the women.⁴ And they do not withhold ornaments⁵ from the bride all the thirty days.⁶ [But that is] only [if] the father of the bridegroom or the mother of the bride [died], because there is [then] no one who should prepare for them [for the wedding], but not [in case of] the reverse.⁷ Rafram b. Papa said [that] R. Hisda said: They taught [this] only when water had [already] been put on the meat, but if water had not [yet] been put on the meat, it is to be sold. Raba said: And in a city, although water had been put on the meat, it is sold.⁸ R. Papa said: And in a village, although water had not been put on the meat, it is not sold.⁹ But where [then] will you find [the rule] of R. Hisda [to apply]? Said R. Ashi: For instance, [in] Matha Mehasia,¹⁰ which is neither a city nor a village.¹¹

It has been taught according to R. Hisda: If his bread was baked and his meat prepared and his wine mixed and water had been put on the meat and the father of the bridegroom or the mother of the bride died, they bring the dead [person] into a room and the bridegroom and the bride into the bridal chamber, and he performs the dutiful marital act and [then] separates [himself from her]. And [then] he keeps the seven days of the [wedding-]feast and after that he keeps the seven days of mourning. And all these days he sleeps among the men and she sleeps among the women. And so [also] if his wife became menstruous does he sleep among the men and she sleeps among the women. And they do not withhold ornaments from the bride all the thirty days. In any case he must not perform the [first] marital act on the eve of Sabbath or in the night following the Sabbath.

The Master said [above]: ‘He sleeps among the men and she sleeps among the women.’ This supports R. Johanan, for R. Johanan said: Although they said [that] there is no mourning on a festival, yet matters of privacy he keeps.¹² R. Joseph the son of Raba lectured in the name of Raba: They taught¹³ only if he had yet no intercourse [with her],¹⁴ but if he had [already] intercourse, his wife may sleep with him.¹⁵ But here we deal with a case when he had intercourse, and still it teaches [that] he sleeps among the men and she sleeps among the women? — When did he¹⁶ say [it]? With regard to his wife becoming menstruous. But it says. ‘And so [also if his wife became menstruous]’!¹⁷

(14) And he may feel tempted.

(15) In one room.

(16) Raba

(17) And this would seem to show that there is no difference between the time of mourning and the period of menstruation.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 4b

— Thus he¹ means to say:² And so [also], if his wife became menstruous and he had not yet had intercourse [with her] he sleeps among the men and she sleeps among the women. Is this [then] to say that he treats mourning more lightly than menstruation?³ Surely. R. Isaac the son of Hanina said that R. Huna said: All kinds of work⁴ which a wife performs for her husband, a menstruant⁵ may perform for her husband, except the mixing of the cup⁶ and the making⁷ of the bed and the washing of his face, his hands and his feet,⁸ while with regard to mourning it has been taught:

Although they⁹ said: No man has a right to force his wife¹⁰ to paint [her eyes] or rouge [her face], in truth¹¹ they said: She mixes him the cup¹² and she makes him the bed and she washes his face, his hands and his feet?¹³ — [This is] not difficult; here¹⁴ [it speaks] of his mourning,¹⁵ there¹⁶ [it speaks] of her mourning.¹⁷ But it says:¹⁸ ‘The father of the bridegroom or the mother of the bride [died]’?¹⁹ — This refers to the rest.²⁰ But is there a difference between his mourning and her mourning? Surely it has been taught: If a man's father-in-law or mother-in-law died,²¹ he cannot force his wife to paint [her eyes] and to rouge [her face]. but he lowers his bed²² and keeps mourning with her. And so [also] if a woman's father-in-law or mother-in-law died²³ she is not allowed to paint [her eyes] and to rouge [her face], but she lowers her bed and keeps mourning with him!²⁴ — Teach with reference to his mourning ‘he sleeps among the men and his wife sleeps among the women’.²⁵ But it says: ‘And so [also]’?²⁶ — This refers to painting and rouging.²⁷ But it says ‘with him’! Does this not mean,²⁸ with him in one bed? — No, [it means] with him in one house, and as Rab said to his son Hiyya: In her presence²⁹ keep mourning, in her absence do not keep mourning.³⁰ R. Ashi said: Can you compare this mourning³¹ with ordinary mourning?³² Ordinary mourning is strict and one would not deal lightly³³ with it. [But] this mourning, since the Rabbis were lenient [about it], one might deal lightly with it. What is the leniency? Shall I say. because it says he performs the dutiful act of marriage and separates [himself from her]? That is³⁴ because the mourning has not rested upon him³⁵ yet; [namely] if according to R. Eliezer, [the mourning does not begin] until the body has been taken out of the house,³⁶ and if according to R. Joshua, [the mourning does not begin] until the golel³⁷ has been closed!³⁸ — But [the leniency is this,] because it says: He keeps [first] the seven days of the [wedding-]feast and after that he keeps the seven days of mourning.

The Master said: ‘In any case he must not perform the [first] marital act on the eve of Sabbath or in the night following the Sabbath. It is right [that he may not perform it] on the eve of Sabbath, because of a wound.³⁹ But in the night following the Sabbath, why not? — Said R. Zera:

(1) The Tanna of the cited Baraitha.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 5a

Because of accounts.¹ Said Abaye to him: And are accounts of a religious nature forbidden?² Surely R. Hisda and R. Hammuna both said: Accounts of a religious nature, one is allowed to calculate them on Sabbath; and R. Eleazar said: One may assign charity to the poor on Sabbath; and R. Jacob said [that] R. Johanan said: One may go to synagogues and to schoolhouses to watch over public affairs³ on Sabbath; and R. Jacob the son of Idi said [that] R. Johanan said: One may do any work to save a life⁴ on Sabbath; and R. Samuel the son of Nahmani said [that] R. Jonathan said: One may go to theatres and circuses⁵ to watch over public affairs on Sabbath; and [a scholar] of the school of Menashia taught: One may negotiate about the girls to be betrothed on Sabbath⁶ and about a boy to teach him the book⁷ and to teach him a trade? — But, said R. Zera, it has been prohibited⁸ lest he might slaughter a fowl.⁹ Said Abaye to him: But if this were so, then the Day of Atonement which fell on the second day of the week should be postponed¹⁰ for fear¹¹ lest he might slaughter a fowl?¹² — There,¹³ that [he has to prepare only] for himself he is not troubled [so much],¹⁴ [but] here,¹⁵ that [he has to prepare] for others,¹⁶ he is troubled.¹⁷ Or: there, he has an interval,¹⁸ [but] here, he has no interval.¹⁹ Now that you have come so far,²⁰

the eve of Sabbath²¹ also is prohibited²² for fear lest he might slaughter a fowl.²³

The question was asked:²⁴ [Does the Mishnah mean:] A maiden is married on the fourth day [of the week], and the intercourse takes place on the fourth day, and we are not afraid that he might be pacified?²⁵ Or perhaps [the meaning is] a maiden is married on the fourth day [of the week], and the intercourse takes place on the fifth day²⁶ because we are afraid that he might be pacified? — Come and hear: Bar-Kappara taught: A maiden is married on the fourth day [of the week] and the intercourse takes place on the fifth day²⁶ because on it [the fifth day] the blessing for the fishes was pronounced.²⁷ A widow is married on the fifth day [of the week] and the intercourse takes place on the sixth day²⁸ because on it [the sixth day] was pronounced the blessing for man.²⁹ [We thus see that] the reason is on account of the blessing, but as to [his] being pacified we are not afraid. If so,³⁰ [in the case of] a widow also the intercourse should take place on the fifth day [of the week], because on it [the fifth day] was pronounced the blessing for the fishes?³¹ — The blessing for man is better for him.³² Or on account of ‘they have watched,’³³ for it has been taught: Why did they³⁴ say [that] a widow is married on the fifth day [of the week] and the intercourse takes place on the sixth day? Because, if you will say that the intercourse should take place on the fifth day, in the morning³⁵ he will rise and go to his work;³⁶ therefore the Sages watched over the welfare³⁷ of the daughters of Israel that he should rejoice with her³⁸ three days, [namely] on the fifth day of the week,³⁹ on the eve of Sabbath⁴⁰ and [on] Sabbath.⁴¹ What is the difference between ‘the blessing’ and ‘they have watched’?⁴² The difference is this:⁴³ [in the case of] a man of leisure,⁴⁴ or [in the case] when a festival falls on the eve of Sabbath.⁴⁵

Bar-Kappara expounded: The work of the righteous⁴⁶ is greater than the work⁴⁷ of heaven and earth, for in [regard to] the creation of heaven and earth it is written, Yea, My hand hath laid the foundation, of the earth, and My right hand hath spread out the heavens,⁴⁸ while in [regard to] the work of the hands of the righteous it is written, The place which Thou hast made for Thee to dwell in, O Lord, the sanctuary, O Lord, which Thy hands have established.⁴⁹ Replied⁵⁰ one Babylonian, and R. Hiyya [was] his name: [It is written.] And the dry land his hands formed?⁵¹ — It is [to be] written, ‘His hand’.⁵² But it is written, they formed?⁵³ — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: ‘His fingers formed,’⁵⁴ as it is written. When I behold Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou hast established.⁵⁵

An objection was raised: [It is written,] The heavens declare the glory of God, and the work of His hands the firmament shows?⁵⁶ — Thus he said:⁵⁷ The handiwork⁵⁸ of the righteous, who shews [it]?⁵⁹ The firmament. And what is it? Rain.⁶⁰

Bar-Kappara [also] expounded: What [is the meaning of what] is written. And thou shalt have a peg among thy implements?⁶¹ Do not read,⁶² thy implements,⁶³ but ‘upon thy ear’;⁶⁴ [this means to say] that if a man hears an unworthy thing⁶⁵

(1) If he will consummate the marriage in the night following the Sabbath he will give a dinner in the evening and he will make accounts (in his mind) on Sabbath as to the cost of that festive meal.

(2) I.e., is it forbidden to make calculations for a religious purpose on Sabbath?

(3) Lit., ‘the affairs of many’.

(4) Lit., ‘one removes a person’ from under debris. The meaning is: One may do any work on Sabbath to save a life.

(5) Theatres and circuses were also places of general assemblies. in the same way public meetings were also held in synagogues and schoolhouses.

(6) I.e., one may negotiate the betrothal of them on Sabbath.

(7) I.e., the book, the Bible.

(8) Lit., 'a preventive measure'. To have the first intercourse in the night following the Sabbath.

(9) Lit 'the child of a fowl', that is a young fowl. There is also the reading וּכ 'on it' i.e., on Sabbath for יכ. He would be so busy thinking of the festive meal on Sabbath night that he might forget that it was Sabbath and slaughter a fowl for the dinner in the evening.

(10) For one day; v. Rashi.

(11) 'As a preventive measure'.

(12) On Sabbath, since he would be busy thinking of the preparations for the meal on Sunday, which would be the eve of the Day of Atonement. On the eve of the Day of Atonement it is a religious duty to have a festive meal.

(13) In the case of the Day of Atonement.

(14) And he will not forget that it is Sabbath and he will not slaughter a fowl on Sabbath.

(15) In the case of the wedding-feast on Sabbath night.

(16) For the guests of the evening.

(17) And he might forget that it is Sabbath and he might slaughter a fowl on Sabbath.

(18) Sabbath night and Sunday morning. He does not have the important meal before midday or later on the day of the eve of the Atonement Day.

(19) The wedding-dinner would take place on Sabbath night as soon as Sabbath is out.

(20) To this result, namely that he must not perform the first intercourse in the night following the Sabbath because he might profane the Sabbath by slaughtering a fowl on Sabbath.

(21) Friday night.

(22) To have the first intercourse.

(23) On Friday evening, after Sabbath had already begun.

(24) Lit 'it was asked by them'.

(25) Lit 'cooling off to the (his) mind.' That is, if he has intercourse on Wednesday and he has reason to complain as to virginity, his anger might cool off by Thursday morning and he might not go on Thursday to the court of justice; v. supra 2a.

(26) I.e., Wednesday evening, which belongs to the fifth day.

(27) Lit., said (by God).' Cf. Gen. I, 20-23, especially 22.

(28) Thursday evening. v. n. 13.

(29) Cf. Gen. I, 26-28, especially 28.

(30) If the reason is on account of the blessing.

(31) It means this: If the reason is the blessing, why should not intercourse, in the case of a widow, take place on the same day as the marriage, namely on the fifth day? And on the fifth day there was the blessing for the fishes. And if that blessing is good enough for a maiden it should be good enough for a widow.

(32) For Bar Kappara. He considered the blessing for man a stronger reason. In the case of a maiden it is different, as, if her intercourse should take place on Friday, we should be afraid that he might be appeased by Monday, the first court-day after Friday. 'Therefore the blessing for the fishes has to suffice in the case of the maiden.

(33) Shakedu, v. supra pp. 2 and 8. The ordinance that in the case of a widow the intercourse should take place on Friday was made in the interests of the daughters of Israel.

(34) The Sages.

(35) The next morning. In case of a widow the marriage festivities last only one day. V. infra 7a bottom.

- (36) Lit., 'he rises unto his trade (work) and goes his way. That is, he walks out of the house and leaves the whole wedding atmosphere behind him. This had to be prevented.
- (37) Lit., 'ordinance (for the welfare).'
- (38) With the widow-bride.
- (39) The day of the marriage.
- (40) Friday, the day of the intercourse.
- (41) The religious day of rest.
- (42) What is the difference between these two reasons?
- (43) Lit., 'there is between them.'
- (44) Lit., 'an idle man.' 'They have watched' would not apply to a man of leisure, as he need not go to work next day. But the intercourse would have to take place on Friday if the reason was 'the blessing'.
- (45) In which case Friday is a religious day of rest, and he would not go to work. But the reason of 'the blessing' would still operate for intercourse on Friday.
- (46) Pious men.
- (47) The creation.
- (48) Isa. XLVIII, 13. There 'My hand' is written.

- (52) [The kethib in some texts is ush ('his hand').]

- (54) 'Fingers' is implied as subject.
- (55) Ps. VIII, 4.
- (56) Ps. XIX, 2. [Thus we have 'hands' written also in connection with creation.]
- (57) Thus the Psalmist meant.
- (58) Lit., 'the work of their hands.'
- (59) Who tells them, announces them?
- (60) Rain comes because the pious pray for it. The handiwork of the righteous is called the 'work of His hands', because in the rain the work of God and the work of the righteous meet. The rain is the work of God, but it comes as the result of the good deeds of the pious, whose prayers God fulfills.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 5b

he shall plug his finger¹ into his ears. And this is the same that R. Eleazar said: Why do the fingers of man resemble pegs? Why?² Shall I say because they are divided?³ [Surely] each one has been made for its own purpose!⁴ For a Master said: This one⁵ [Is used for measuring] the span;⁶ this one⁷ [is used for] taking a fistful of the meal-offering,⁸ this one⁹ [is used for defining] the cubit measure,¹⁰ this one¹¹ [is used for taking the measure of] 'a finger',¹² [and] this one¹³ [is used for service with] the thumb!¹⁴ — But [the question is] why¹⁵ [are the fingers] pointed like pegs? [The reason is] that if a man hears an unworthy thing he shall plug his fingers into his ears. [A member] of the school of R. Ishmael taught: Why is the whole ear hard and the ear-lap soft? [So] that if a man hears an unworthy thing he shall bend the ear-lap into it.¹⁶

Our Rabbis taught: A man shall not let his ears hear idle things,¹⁷ because they are burnt first of [all] the organs.¹⁸

The question was asked: Is it allowed¹⁹ to perform the first marital act on Sabbath?²⁰ Is the blood [in the womb] stored up,²¹ or is it the result of a wound?²² And if you will say²³ [that] the blood is stored up [in the womb, then the question arises:] is he concerned about the blood,²⁴ and it is allowed: or is he concerned with the opening,²⁵ and it is forbidden?²⁶ And if you will say [that] he is concerned with the blood and the opening comes of itself, [then the question arises:] Is the halachah²⁷ according to R. Simeon who says: A thing which is not intended²⁸ is allowed; or is the halachah according to R. Judah who says: A thing which is not intended is forbidden?²⁹ And if you will say [that] the halachah is according to R. Judah [then the question arises], does he do damage in regard to the opening, or does he improve in regard to the opening?³⁰ Some say:³¹ And if you will say that the blood is the result of a wound [then the question arises], is he concerned about the blood and it is forbidden,³² or is he concerned with his own pleasure, and it is allowed? And if you will say [that] he is concerned with his own pleasure and the blood comes out of itself,³³ [then the question arises] is the halachah according to R. Judah or is the halachah according to R. Simeon? And if you will say [that] the halachah is according to R. Judah, [then the question arises,] does he do damage by [making] the wound, or does he improve by [making] the wound? And if you will say [that] he does damage by [making] the wound, [then the question arises,] with regard to one who does damage, is the halachah according to R. Judah,

(1) The finger is pointed like a peg.

(2) Lit., 'what is the reason?' I.e., what is the meaning of the question? With regard to what are the fingers of man like pegs?

(3) I.e., shall I say that the question is: Why are the fingers divided? They might have been joined together.

(4) Lit., 'for its thing.'

(5) The little finger.

(6) I.e. the distance from the little finger to the thumb of a spread hand.

(7) The finger next to the little finger.

(8) vmhne the taking of a fistful of the meal-offering. v. Lev II, 2.

(9) The middle finger.

(10) The cubit is a measure equal to the distance from the elbow to the tip of the middle finger.

(11) The fourth from the little finger.

(12) And also for priestly service with the 'finger'; cf. Lev. IV, 6.

(13) The fifth from the little finger.

(14) V. Lev. VIII, 23, 24; XIV, 14, 17, 25, 28. We thus see that every finger has a definite purpose. They therefore had to be divided and function as separate fingers!

(15) Lit., 'what is the reason (that)?'

(16) Into the ear. He will thus close the ear and not hear the unworthy thing.

(17) Not only unworthy things. but even idle things a man should not hear, e.g. tittle-tattle.

(18) Lit., 'of the limbs.' 'Because they are burnt first of (all) the organs' seems to have a figurative meaning. From hearing unworthy or idle things he may proceed to speak unworthy or idle things and then to do unworthy or idle things. The ear is thus the first organ to 'be burnt', to 'catch fire'. c.f. Prov. VI, 27-28. If the English phrase, 'to burn one's fingers.'

(19) Lit 'How is it?

(20) When the intercourse could not take place here Sabbath, (Tosaf.)

(21) And the intercourse would be allowed, since the blood flows out of its own accord, no wound having been made.

(22) Lit 'or is it wounded?' And the intercourse would be forbidden.

(23) Lit 'And if you should be able to say.'

(24) Is his aim to release it? Lit., 'is it the blood he requires?' [According to Tosaf.: In order to see whether she is a virgin.

(25) Or is his aim to make an opening?

(26) It is forbidden to make an opening on Sabbath. [Such an act comes under the category of 'building'.]

(27) 'Adopted opinion', 'rule'.

(28) An act which is in itself forbidden but is the unintended though unavoidable result of an act which is permitted. Thus one may, according to R. Simeon, push a couch on the floor, on Sabbath, if one has not the intention to make a rut in the floor, although, as a matter of fact, such a rut is made as the unavoidable result of pushing the couch.

(29) R. Judah's view is opposed to that of R. Simeon; v. n. 4.

(30) Is the making of the opening considered to be to the advantage or disadvantage of the woman? If it is to her disadvantage it would be allowed even according to R. Judah. [Based on the principle that an act of damage does not constitute labour in regard to Sabbath. V. Shab. 106a.]

(31) Lit., 'there are who say', that the questions were with regard to the assumption that the blood is the result of a wound.

(32) To have the intercourse on Sabbath.

(33) The coming of the blood is therefore an unintended but unavoidable result of an act, the intended object of which is the pleasure.

or is the law according to R. Simeon?¹ In the school of Rab² they said: Rab allowed³ and Samuel forbade.³ In Nehardea⁴ they said: Rab forbade and Samuel allowed. Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: And your [mnemotechnical] sign [is]: These make it lenient for themselves, and these make it lenient for themselves.⁵ But does Rab allow it? Surely R. Shimi b. Hezekiah said in the name of Rab: [As regards] that stopper of the brewing boiler, it is forbidden to squeeze it in⁶ on a festival day!⁷ — In that [case]⁸ even R. Simeon admits [that it is forbidden], for Abaye and Raba, both of them say: R. Simeon admits [that it is forbidden] in [a case of] 'Let his head be cut off, and let him not die!'⁹ [But] R. Hiyya the son of Ashi said [that] Rab said: The halachah is according to R. Judah,¹⁰ and R. Hanan the son of Ammi [said that] Samuel said: The halachah is according to R. Simeon.¹¹ And R. Hiyya the son of Abin taught it without [naming the] men:¹² Rab said [that] the halachah is according to R. Judah. and Samuel said [that] the halachah is according to R. Simeon? — Still, Rab holds like R. Judah, [but] according to that version that says, 'the blood is stored up [in the womb],' he does damage in regard to the opening,¹³ [and] according to that version that says, 'the blood is the result of a wound,' he does damage in [making] the wound.¹³

R. Hisda objected: If a girl, whose period¹⁴ to see [blood] had not arrived yet, got married,

Beth Shammai¹⁵ say: One gives her four nights,¹⁴ and the disciples of Hillel say: Until the wound is healed up.¹⁶ If her period to see [blood] had arrived¹⁷ and she married, Beth Shammai say: One gives her the first night,¹⁸ and Beth Hillel say: Until the night following the Sabbath [one gives her] four nights.¹⁹

(1) According to R. Simeon he who does damage by making a wound had to bring a sin-offering; v. Shab. 106a.

(2) In Sura. Before the words 'in the school of Rab', some texts have the word 'it has been said (that)'.
(3) To have the first intercourse on Sabbath.

(4) The place of Samuel.

(5) In Sura they said that Rab allowed it, and in Nehardea they said that Samuel allowed it.

(6) Into the bottle. The stopper is made of soft material, and, if it is squeezed, the liquid absorbed in the material would come out.

(7) This shows that Rab, like R. Judah, holds that a permitted action which results in a prohibited action, though the latter was not intended, is forbidden; v. p. 19, on. 4 and 5.

(8) Of the stopper in the brewing bottle.

(9) 'Let his head be cut off, and let him not die!' is a dialectic term for an absolutely unavoidable result of an act. V. Jast., s.v. exp. In such a case R. Simeon admits that the act leading to the forbidden act is prohibited. This applies to the stopper. Intercourse, however, is different; v. infra 6b.

(15) Lit., 'the house', i.e., the school, of Shammai. (15) In which she can have intercourse with her husband.

(16) The blood that comes out is attributed to the wound and not to menstruation. Ordinarily, after the first intercourse further intercourse is forbidden until the coming out of blood, i.e. menstruation, is over. But in this case, in which the young bride had never yet had any menstruation, it is assumed that the blood is not due to menstruation but to the wound caused by the intercourse. According to Beth Shammai this assumption holds good for four nights, and according to Beth Hillel it holds good 'until the wound is healed up.' As to the definition of this phrase, v. Nid. 64b. V. also Nid. 65b, where it is finally decided that after the first coition no further intercourse must take place until the flowing of blood has stopped, even in the case of a young bride who had not yet had any menstruation. V. also Eben ha-'Ezer, 63, and Yoreh De'ah, 193.

(17) But she had in fact not yet seen blood; that is, she had the maturity for it, but the maturity had not yet manifested itself. A girl has reached the period of maidenhood (puberty) when she is twelve years and one day old. When she is twelve and a half years old she has reached the state of bogereth, (v. Glos.), full maturity, womanhood. V. infra 39a.

(18) He may repeat the intercourse during the first night.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 6b

[Now] does it not¹ mean that if he had [yet] no intercourse [with his wife] he may have intercourse [with her] even on Sabbath?² — Said Raba: No, except Sabbath. Said Abaye to him: But it says, 'until the night following the Sabbath [one gives her] four nights'³ — Only, said Raba, when he already had intercourse [with her].⁴ If [it were, as you say,] after he already had intercourse, what does he let us hear?⁵ — He lets us hear that it is allowed to have intercourse on Sabbath, as that [statement] of Samuel [teaches], for Samuel said: One may enter into a narrow opening on Sabbath,⁶ although⁷ he causes pebbles to break loose.⁸

R. Joseph objected: A bridegroom is free from the reading of Shema⁹ in the first night¹⁰ until the night following the Sabbath, if he has not performed [yet] an act.¹¹ Is it not¹² because he is anxious to perform the marital act?¹³ — Said Abaye to him: No; he is anxious because he has not had intercourse.¹⁴ Said Raba to him: And on account of anxiety [only]¹⁵ he is free [from reading Shema']? If this were so, then [if] his ship sank in the sea, he would also be free [from the reading of Shema']! And should you say [that] it is really so, surely, R. Abba b. Zabda said [that] Rab said: A mourner is bound to observe all the precepts that are stated in the Torah except [that] of the Tefillin¹⁶ because it is said with regard to them an ornament'?'¹⁷ — But, said Raba, this¹⁸ is a dispute of Tannaim,¹⁹ for one [Baraita] teaches: If he²⁰ did not do an act [of coition] in the first [night],²¹ he is free [from reading Shema'] also in the second [night]; in the second [night],²² he is free [from reading Shema'] also in the third [night].²³ And another [Baraita] teaches: [In] the first and second [night] he is free, [but in] the third [night] he is obliged [to read Shema'].²⁴ And Abaye [holds that] there²⁵ also they²⁶ differ with regard to anxiety.²⁷ And these Tannaim [are] like those Tannaim,²⁸ for it has been taught [in a Baraita]: He who marries a maiden shall not perform the first intercourse²⁹ on Sabbath, and the Sages allow [it]. Who are the Sages? Said Rabbah: It is R. Simeon, who says: A thing which is not intended is allowed.³⁰ Said Abaye to him: But R. Simeon admits (that it is forbidden) in [a case of] 'Let his head be cut off and let him not die!'³¹ Said he to him: Not like those Babylonians who are not skilled in moving aside,³² but there are some who are skilled in moving aside.³³ If so,³⁴ why [give the reason of] 'anxious'?'³⁵ — For one who is not skilled. [Then] let them say: One who is skilled is allowed [to perform the first intercourse on Sabbath], one who is not skilled is forbidden? — Most [people] are skilled.³⁶ Said Raba the son of R. Hanan to Abaye: If this were so, then why [have] groomsmen,³⁷ why [have] a sheet?³⁸ — He [Abaye] said to him: There [the groomsmen and the sheet are necessary] perhaps he will see and destroy [the tokens of her virginity].³⁹

R. Ammi objected.⁴⁰ He who pierces⁴¹ an abscess on Sabbath, if [in order] to make an opening⁴² to it, he is guilty,⁴³ but if [in order] to cause pus to come out of it

(1) Lit., 'is it not?' Having quoted the Mishnah from Nid. 64b, R. Hisda proceeds to ask his question, which is based on the last statement of Beth Hillel.

(2) The question presumes that 'until the night following the Sabbath (one gives her) four nights' may also mean any one of the four nights, and thus the intercourse may be first consummated on the night of Sabbath, (v. Rashi). This shews that one may have the first intercourse on Sabbath.

(3) Sabbath must, therefore, be included!

(4) One night before Sabbath. The intercourse on Sabbath was thus not the first.

(5) What new law does the Tanna teach us? Why should he (the husband) not be allowed to have intercourse on Sabbath?

(6) Lit., 'a narrow opening (or breach). one may enter into it on Sabbath.'

(7) Lit., 'and although.'

(8) He may have, say the second intercourse on Sabbath, v. Rashi, ad loc.

- (16) Phylacteries, v. Glos.
- (17) Cf. Ezek. XXIV, 17. [The reference being there to the Tefillin which Ezekiel was charged not to lay aside despite his mourning for his wife. V. M.K. 15a.] A mourner, though very much troubled, is nevertheless not free from observing the precepts. We thus see that anxiety does not exempt one from fulfilling the various religious commandments. And so in the case of the Mishnah quoted by R. Joseph it cannot be that the bridegroom is free from the reading of Shema' only because of his anxiety.

- (24) The teacher of this Baraitha holds that he is not allowed to perform it first on Sabbath, and therefore he is obliged to read Shema'.
- (25) In the Baraithas just quoted.
- (26) The Tannaim.
- (27) According to the first Baraitha his anxiety caused by the fact that he is not allowed to perform the act on Sabbath frees him from reading Shema'. And according to the second Baraitha this anxiety does not free him from reading Shema'. According to the first Baraitha the case of the mourner would be different. Since anxiety is no part of the mourning observances (Rashi. a.l.).
- (28) I.e., the dispute of the Tannaim just quoted by Raba is the same as the dispute of the Tannaim of the Baraitha to be quoted now.

- (33) Thus no blood need come out, and 'Let his head be cut off and let him not die!' does not apply.
- (34) If the bridegroom is skilled in 'moving sideways'.
- (35) He need not be anxious about the intercourse and should not be free from reading Shema' on account of such anxiety.
- (36) Therefore the principle regarding 'Let his head be cut off and let him not die!' does not, as a rule, apply.
- (37) The groomsmen testify in case of need to the virginity of the bride. V. infra 12a. If the bridegroom will act in a manner that will cause no bleeding, the groomsmen will not be able to testify on the question of virginity.
- (38) To provide evidence of the virginity of the bride. Cf. Deut. XXII, 17.
- (39) It may happen that he will act in the normal manner and cause bleeding but he will destroy the tokens and maintain that the bride was not a virgin; for this reason the above mentioned provisions are necessary. Where however he moved aside and made a false charge as to her virginity, the bride can plead that she is still a virgin

he is free from punishment]?¹ — There² it is³ stored up⁴ and is [entirely] loose,⁵ here⁶ it⁷ is stored up⁸ but is not [entirely] loose.⁹ R. Ammi allowed to have first intercourse¹⁰ on Sabbath. Said the Rabbis to him: But her kethubah¹¹ is not written yet! — He said to them: Let her seize movable goods.¹² R. Zebid permitted to have the first intercourse on Sabbath. Some say: R. Zebid himself had the first intercourse on Sabbath. Rab Judah allowed to have the first intercourse on a festival. R. Papi said in the name of Raba: You shall not say [that] on a festival it¹³ is allowed, but [that] on Sabbath it is forbidden. It is just as well allowed on Sabbath; only it happened so.¹⁴ R. Papa said in the name of Raba: On a festival it is allowed, on Sabbath it is forbidden. Said R. Papi to R. Papa: What is your opinion? Since a wound¹⁵ has been permitted [on a festival] for a necessity, it has been permitted also when there is no necessity? If that were so, it should be permitted to put spices on coals¹⁶ on a festival, for since the kindling of fire has been allowed [on a festival] for a necessity, it should be allowed also when there is no necessity!¹⁷ Said he to him.¹⁸ Concerning this¹⁹ the Biblical verse said, save that which every man must eat,²⁰ [this means] a thing which is useful²¹ for every man.²² R. Aha, the son of Raba, said to R. Ashi: If this were So,²³ then if a deer happened to come to the hands of a person²⁴ on a festival, [shall we say that] since it is not of equal usefulness for every person,²⁵ is it really so that it would be forbidden to kill it? Said he²⁶ to him:²⁷ I say, 'a thing that is needful for every person,'²⁸ [and] a deer is needful for every person.²⁹ R. Jacob, the son of Idi, said: R. Johanan gave a decision³⁰ in Zaidan.³¹ It is forbidden to perform the first intercourse on Sabbath. — And is there an instructive decision for a prohibition?³² — Yes, we have learned in a Mishnah.³³ The school of Hillel gave a decision regarding her³⁴ that she³⁵ should be a Nazirite yet another seven years. Or indeed it is as that which has been taught: If the cord of the spinal column is severed in its larger portion [the animal is trefa],³⁶ [this is] the view of Rabbi.³⁷ R. Jacob Says: Even if it³⁸ is [only] perforated [the animal is trefa]. Rabbi gave a decision³⁹ according to R. Jacob.⁴⁰

R. Huna said: The halachah is not as stated by R. Jacob. R. Nahman b. Isaac taught thus: R. Abbahu said: R. Ishmael b. Jacob, from Tyre asked R. Johanan in Zaidan, and I heard [it]: Is it allowed⁴¹ to have the first intercourse on Sabbath? And he⁴² said to him:⁴³ It is forbidden. — And the law is: It is allowed to have the first intercourse on Sabbath.⁴⁴

R. Helbo said [that] R. Huna said [that] R. Abba, the son of Zabda, said [that] Rab said: A maiden as well as a widow requires a benediction.⁴⁵ — But did R. Huna say so? Did not R. Huna say: A widow does not require a benediction? — It is not difficult.⁴⁶ Here⁴⁷ [it speaks] of a young man⁴⁸ who marries a widow, there⁴⁹ of a widower who marries a widow. And when a widower marries a widow [a benediction] is not required? Did not R. Nahman Say: Huna b. Nathan said to me: A Tanna taught: Whence [is it derived that] the benediction of the bridegrooms⁵⁰ [has to be said] in the presence of ten [persons]? Because it is said, And he took ten men of the elders of the city, and said: 'Sit ye down here'. And they sat down.⁵¹ And Boaz was a widower, who married a widow!⁵² — What is [the meaning of the words] 'she does not require a benediction' which R. Huna said? She does not require a benediction during all the seven days. but on one day⁵³ she requires a benediction. But that which has been taught:⁵⁴ 'The Sages were anxious for the welfare of the daughters of Israel, that he⁵⁵ may rejoice with her⁵⁶ three days' — how is this to be understood?⁵⁷ If [it speaks] of a young man, did you not say — seven,⁵⁸ if of a widower, did you not say — one day?⁵⁹ — If you wish, you may say [that it speaks] of a widower [and in this case] one day is for the benediction and three days are for rejoicing. And if you wish, you may say [that it speaks] of a young man [and in this case] seven [days] are for the benediction and three [days] for rejoicing.

(15) I.e., the making of a wound.

(16) To perfume the room after dinner; v. Ber. 43a.

(17) The meaning of the question of R. Papi to R. Papa is as follows: If a distinction is to be made, regarding the first intercourse, between Sabbath and a festival and it is to be held, as R. Papa holds in the name of Rab, that it is forbidden in Sabbath and allowed on a festival, then R. Papa must hold that, since certain work was allowed on a festival for a necessity, work should be allowed on a festival even when there is no necessity for it. It is, e.g. allowed to make a wound on a festival by slaughtering an animal for the need of food. It would, therefore, according to R. Papa, be allowed to make a wound (v. supra 3b, 4b, 5b) by performing the first intercourse on a festival, although there is no necessity for it, since the first intercourse can wait until after the festival. If this view were correct, then it should have been allowed to burn spices on coals on a festival, although spices are not a necessity, since the kindling of fire on a festival is allowed for a necessity. And the accepted view is that it is forbidden to put spices on coals on a festival. Consequently, if the first intercourse is forbidden on sabbath it should be forbidden also on a festival, since it is not a necessity. R. Papa's view is therefore wrong. Generally speaking, work that is forbidden on Sabbath is forbidden on a festival. There is an exception in the case of work necessary for preparing food. This is already indicated in Ex. XII, 16; v. Meg. 7b.

- (22) The sense of the answer is this: You cannot compare the first intercourse to spices. Spices are not of equal necessity for every person. As Rashi puts it, only people who are used to luxuries desire spices. But sexual intercourse, even the first act, is a human need, which applies to all people.

(58) The benediction has to be said all the seven days following the marriage ceremony, and this implies rejoicing. That the benediction has to be said all the seven days in the case of the marriage of a young man, even if the bride is a widow, is inferred from the statement that in the case of the marriage of a widower and a widow it is not required to say the benediction all the seven days (Rashi).

(59) Only on one day has the benediction to be said, and this apparently means rejoicing only on one day.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 7b

An objection was raised: [It has been taught:] The benediction is said [at the celebration of the marriage] for a maiden seven [days] and for a widow one day. Is it not [to be understood that] even [in the case of] a widow who marries a young man [the benediction is said only on one day]? — No [only when the widow marries] a widower. But [if the widow marries] a young man, what [then]? Seven [days]?¹ If that is so, let it be taught:² The benediction is said for a maiden³ seven [days], and for a widow who marries a young man⁴ seven [days], and for a widow [who marries a widower]⁵ one day? — It taught a decided thing:⁶ That there is no maiden who has less than seven [days],⁷ and there is no widow who has less than one day.⁸ The [above] text [says]: R. Nahman said: Huna b. Nathan said to me: A Tanna taught: Whence [is it derived that] the benediction of the bridegrooms [has to be said] in the presence of ten [persons]? Because it is said, And he took ten men of the elders of the city, and said: ‘Sit ye down here’.⁹ But R. Abbahu said [that it is derived] from here: In assemblies bless ye God, the Lord, from the fountain of Israel.¹⁰ And how does R. Nahman expound this verse of R. Abbahu?¹¹ — He requires it for the same purpose as has been set out in a Baraitha:¹² R. Meir used to say: Whence [can it be derived] that even embryos in the bowels of their mothers sang¹³ a song¹⁴ by the sea?¹⁵ Because it is said, In assemblies bless ye God, the Lord, from the fountain of Israel.¹⁶ And the other one?¹⁷ — If [that were] so, let the verse say,¹⁸ ‘from the womb.’¹⁹ Why [does it say], ‘from the fountain’?²⁰ [To show that it is] concerning the affairs of the fountain.²¹ And how does R. Abbahu expound that verse of R. Nahman?²² — He requires it for expounding: an Ammonite, and not an Ammonitess, a Moabite, and not a Moabitess.²³ For if you would think [that the presence of the ten men was required] for [the saying of] the benediction, would it not have been sufficient if they had not been elders?²⁴ And the other one?²⁵ — If you would think [that the verse was to be used] for that exposition, would it not have been sufficient if there had not been ten [persons]?²⁶ — Yes, to make the matter public²⁷ — and as Samuel said to R. Hanna of Bagdath:²⁸ Go out and bring me ten²⁹ [persons] and I will say unto thee in their presence; If one assigns [property] to an embryo, it acquires it. But the law is: If one assigns [property] to an embryo, it does not acquire it.³⁰

The Rabbis taught: The benediction of the bridegrooms is said³¹ in the house of the bridegroom.³² R. Judah says: Also in the house of the betrothal³³ it is said.³⁴ Abaye said: And in [the province of] Judah they taught [the opinion of R. Judah] because [in the province of Judah] he³⁵ is alone with her.³⁶

Another [Baraitha] teaches: The benediction of the bridegrooms is said in the house of the bridegrooms and the benediction of betrothal in the house of betrothal. [As to] the benediction of betrothal — what does one say?³⁷ — Rabin b. R. Adda and Rabbah son of R. Adda both said in the name of Rab Judah: Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe, who has sanctified us by his commandments and has commanded us concerning the forbidden relations and has forbidden unto us the betrothed³⁸ and has allowed unto us the wedded³⁹ through [the marriage] canopy⁴⁰ and sanctification.⁴¹ R. Aha ‘the son of Raba, concludes it.⁴² in the name of Rab Judah, [with the words]: Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who sanctifies Israel through canopy and sanctification. He who does not seal⁴³ [holds that] it is analogous to the blessing over fruits and to the benediction [said on performing] religious commandments.⁴⁴ And he who seals⁴⁵ [holds that] it is analogous to the kiddush.⁴⁶

Our Rabbis taught: The blessing of the bridegrooms is said in the presence of ten [persons]⁴⁷ all the seven days.⁴⁸ Rab Judah said: And that is only if new guests⁴⁹ come.⁵⁰ What does One say?⁵¹ Rab Judah ‘and: ‘Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe,

 - (15) The Red Sea.
 - (16) The derivation is: Even those who were still in ‘the fountain’ of Israel sang a song unto the Lord. In vv. 23 and 26 R. Meir no doubt saw, Midrashically., allusions to the crossing of the Red Sea. Cf. especially v. 26 with Ex. XV. 20, 21.
 - (17) R. Abbahu. How does he derive the idea of R. Meir just expounded, since he uses the verse in Ps. LXVIIi for another purpose (benediction at the marriage in the presence of ten persons)?
 - (18) I.e., the verse should have read.
 - (19) ‘From the womb’ would indicate the presence of ‘fruit of the womb’, of an embryo. Cf. e.g., Gen. XXX, 2.
 - (20) ‘Fountain’ does not refer to present pregnancy, to an embryo, but to the source of life in the woman without implying that there is life in it now. Therefore we can also speak of the ‘fountain’ in the maiden.
 - (21) Marriage is concerned very largely with ‘the affairs of the fountain.’ R. Abbahu, therefore, prefers to use the verse in Ps. LXVIII for his Midrashic exposition (benediction at the marriage in the presence of ten persons).
 - (22) Ruth IV, 2.

(23) In Deut. XXIII, 4, it is said, An Ammonite or a Moabite shall not enter into the assembly of the Lord. The presence of ten elders was required for the interpretation that the prohibition to enter into the assembly of the Lord, that is, to be admitted into the community of Israel, applied only to Ammonite and Moabite men and not to Ammonite or Moabite women. This interpretation made the law clear, and thus Boaz could marry Ruth the Moabitess.

(24) That the presence of elders was necessary shews that the interpreting and establishing of a law was required.

(25) R. Nahman. How will he get that exposition if he uses the verse for a different purpose?

(26) If the presence of the elders was required for establishing a law, then there was no need to have ten elders. A smaller number of elders would also have been sufficient. It is different, according to R. Nahman, if the presence of the ten persons was required for saying the benediction at the marriage of Boaz and Ruth. Ten persons form a congregation; v. supra.

(27) This is the view of R. Abbahu.

(28) Bagdad. v. Rashi, Ber. 54b.

(29) So as to make his legal pronouncement public.

(30) V. B.B. 142b.

(31) Lit., 'they bless the benediction etc.' The reference is to the benediction at the celebration of the marriage held usually at the house of the bridegroom's parents as distinguished from that recited at the betrothal at the house of the parents of the bride V. infra.

(32) V. infra.

(33) On 'betrothal' v. Glos. s.v. erusin.

(34) V. p. 29, n. 13.

(35) The bridegroom.

(36) The bride. Bridegroom and bride are, in the province of Judah, closeted alone after the betrothal, (v. infra 12a). [This is forbidden without the benediction having been previously recited. V. Kallah, I.]

(37) I.e., what are the words constituting the benediction of betrothal?

(38) [Betrothal (erusin) without marriage (nissu'in) does not permit the bride to the bridegroom.]

(39) I.e., the women who are legally married unto their husbands. For the sake of clarity the post-Talmudic versions read: 'those who are wedded unto us.' V. Rashi and the Prayer-Books.

(40) Huppah v. Glos. and Kid (Sonc. ed.) p. 5, n. 7.

(41) ihauseu vpuj together constitute the complete marriage. [Var. lec. (Ittur and others) ihausec vpuj 'Huppah by means of Kiddushin', a preferable reading since the act Kiddushin (betrothal) took place in former days before Huppah.]

(42) The benediction; i.e., he adds a concluding portion.

(43) I.e., does not add the concluding portion.

(44) In those blessings there are no concluding portions. [Because their subject matter is praise and not interrupted by words of supplication or other matter (Rashi). Tosaf.: Because they are short prayers], Cf., e.g., P.B. pp. 289-291, 270.

(45) I.e., adds a concluding portion.

(46) Kiddush, 'sanctification', is the special term for the benediction said at the beginning of the Sabbath or a festival. And that benediction has a concluding portion, cf. P.B. pp. 124, 230-231, 243. [Because apart from words of praise to God it contains matter in description of the day of rest or the festival (Rashi). Tosaf.: because it is a lengthy prayer.]

(47) Lit., 'with ten'.

(48) Following the marriage.

(49) Lit 'new faces'.

(50) The benediction of the bridegrooms is said, at the meal on every day' of the seven day's if on every succeeding day new guests, that is guests who were not there on the previous day, come to the meal. For a pretty thought as to Sabbath being 'a new guest' v. Tosaf. a.l.

(51) I.e., What is the text of the benediction?

who has¹ created all things² to his glory'. and³ 'the Creator of man', and 'who has created man in his image. In the image of the likeness of his form, and has prepared unto him⁴ out of himself⁵ a building forever.⁶ Blessed art thou, O Lord, Creator of man'.⁷ 'May the barren⁸ greatly rejoice and exult⁹ when her children will be gathered¹⁰ in her midst in joy.¹¹ Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who maketh Zion joyful through¹² her children'¹³ 'Mayest Thou make the loved¹⁴ companions greatly to rejoice, even as of old¹⁵ Thou didst gladden Thy creature¹⁶ in the Garden of Eden. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who maketh bridegroom and bride to rejoice'.¹⁷ 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord our King, God of the universe, who has created joy and gladness, bridegroom and bride, rejoicing, song, mirth, and delight,¹⁸ love, and brotherhood, and peace, and friendship.¹⁹ Speedily, O Lord our God, may be heard in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of joy and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the voice of the singing²⁰ of bridegrooms from their canopies²¹ and of youths from their feasts²² of song. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who maketh the bridegroom to rejoice with²³ the bride'.²⁴

Levi came²⁵ to the house of Rabbi to²⁶ the wedding-feast of R. Simeon his son [and] said five benedictions.²⁷ R. Assi came²⁵ to the house of R. Ashi to²⁶ the wedding-feast of Mar his son [and] said six benedictions.²⁸ Does it mean to say that they differ in this: that one holds that there was one formation,²⁹ and the other holds that there were two formations?³⁰ — No. All³¹ agree [that] there was [only] one formation, [but they differ in this:] one holds [that] we go according³² to the intention,³³ and the other holds [that] we go according³² to the fact,³⁴ as that [statement] of Rab Judah [who] asked:³⁵ It is written, And God created man in his own image,³⁶ and it is written, Male and female created He them.³⁷ How is this [to be understood]? [In this way:] In the beginning it was the intention³⁸ [of God] to create two [human beings], and in the end [only] one [human being] was created.

R. Ashi came to the house of R. Kahana.³⁹ The first day⁴⁰ he said all the benedictions.⁴¹ From then and further on;⁴² if there were new guests⁴³ he said all the benedictions, but if not [he declared] it to be merely a continuance of the same joy⁴⁴ [in which case] one says [only] the benedictions 'in whose dwelling there is joy'⁴⁵ and 'who has created'.⁴⁶ From the seventh day to the thirtieth day.⁴⁷ whether he⁴⁸ said to them⁴⁹ 'because of the wedding'⁵⁰ or whether he did not say to them 'because of the wedding', one says the benediction 'in whose dwelling there is joy'.⁵¹ From then⁵² and further on;⁵³ if he said to them 'because of the wedding' he says the benediction 'in whose dwelling there is joy', but not otherwise.⁵⁴ And if he says to them 'because of the wedding', until when [is this benediction said]?⁵³ Said R. Papi in the name of Raba: Twelve months [forming] a year.⁵⁵ And at first⁵⁶ from when?⁵⁷ Said R. Papa: From the time that they put barley into the mortar.⁵⁸ But this is not so? Did not R. Papa busy himself for his son Abba Mar⁵⁹ and say the benediction⁶⁰ from the time of the betrothal? — It was different [in the case of] A. Papa, because he took the trouble [of preparing everything for the wedding].⁶¹ Rabina busied himself for his son⁶² in the house of R. Habiba and said the benediction⁶⁰ from the time of the betrothal. He said: I am sure with regard to them that they will not retract [the betrothal].⁶³ [But] the matter was not successful⁶⁴ and they did retract. R. Tahlifa, son of the West,⁶⁵ came to Babylon [and] said six long benedictions.⁶⁶ But the law is not according to him. R. Habiba came into the house of a circumcision⁶⁷ [and] said the benediction ‘in whose dwelling there is joy.’ But the law is not according to him, since they are distressed because the child has pain.

R. Nahman said [that] Rab said: Bridegrooms are of the number, and mourners are not of the number.⁶⁸ An objection was raised: Bridegrooms and mourners are of the number? — You ask [from] a Baraita against Rab?⁶⁹ Rab is a Tanna and differs!⁷⁰ It has been said: R. Isaac said [that] R. Johanan said: Bridegrooms are of the number, and mourners are not of the number. An objection was raised: Bridegrooms and mourners are of the number?⁷¹ —

- (1) It is common usage to translate in the Prayer books the perfect verb ‘has’ in the benediction by ‘hast’ (created, etc.).
 - (2) Lit ‘all’.
 - (3) I.e., also the benediction of (‘the Creator of man’). The words, ‘the Creator of man’ are preceded by the words, ‘Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe,’ as in the first benediction.
 - (4) Unto man.
 - (5) Out of man. P.B. ‘out of his very self.’
 - (6) Lit., ‘a building even to perpetuity.’ By ‘a building for ever’, Eve is meant. V. Rashi, a.l. and cf. Gen. II. 22. ‘A building for ever’ contains the idea of ‘the mother of all living’ (Gen. III, 20). It is woman that carries the human race. P.B. p. 299: — ‘a perpetual fabric’ — expresses well this idea.
 - (7) These three benedictions are based on Gen. I and II. In the first benediction God is praised for the creation of the world (‘the all’). In the second benediction God is praised for the creation of man. ‘Man’ is used here in the sense of ‘human being’, cf. Gen. I, 27. In the third benediction God is praised for fashioning man in his image, in the image of the likeness of his form, and for preparing a perpetual building out of man himself. In creating Eve, out of man, god provided for the perpetual renewal of man, of the human being. The divine form of man and the continual re-creation of man, by ever recurring new births, in the divine form, are the subjects of praise in the third benediction while the subject of the second benediction is the creation of man generally. ‘The Creator of man’, in the concluding portion of the third benediction, has already the further meaning of the creation of man as expressed in the third benediction. In this respect ‘The Creator of Man’, in the third benediction, differs from ‘The Creator of Man’ of the second benediction. This might also explain the difficulty which has been felt to exist in the relationship of these two benedictions (v. the Gemara later and Rashi a.l.; v. also Abrahams’ Notes, P.B. p. ccxvi).
 - (8) I.e., Zion; cf. Isa. LIV.
 - (9) Cf. Isa. LXI, 10 and LXII, 5.
 - (10) Lit., ‘at the gathering of her children.’
 - (11) Cf. Isa. LIV, 1-3.
 - (12) Lit., in ‘with’.
 - (13) I.e., by restoring to Zion her children. This benediction seems to have arisen out of Isa. LXII. Cf. especially vv. 4 and 5. And according to Ps. CXXXVII, Jerusalem is to be remembered and set ‘above my chiefest joy’; Rashi a.l. (fol. 8a).
 - (14) I.e., the bridegroom and the bride.
 - (15) The word osen in Gen. II, 8, means ‘eastward’. Here it is used in the sense of ‘in former times’, ‘of old’.
 - (16) I.e., Adam, by giving him a wife; cf. Gen. II, 23. Adam and Eve rejoiced at their union. And so may the bridegroom and bride rejoice.

(17) The last two benedictions do not begin with 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe,' because they are in fact prayers. In the first, second and third benedictions God is praised for what he had done. In the fourth as well as in the fifth benediction a prayer is uttered that God may cause something to happen, namely joy to Zion, or to the bridegroom and the bride. For another explanation, v. Rashi and Tosaf. a.l. V., however, Rashi s.v. jnan. The fifth benediction seems to have resulted from the fourth benediction. V. supra n. 4 and cf. Isa. LXII, 5. The two prayers, like the two ideas contained in vv. 4 and 5, were bound up with one another.

(18) All these words mean 'joy'. vmhs means dancing with joy'.

(19) Or, 'fellowship', companionship'.

(20) Lit., 'breakings forth into song, shouts of joy'.

(21) In the Hebrew text the singular is used. Canopy means here 'a bridal chamber'. Cf. Joel II, 16.

(22) In the Hebrew text the singular is used.

(23) In this benediction the joy referred to is the joy of the bridegroom with the bride (Rashi).

(24) In this benediction God is praised for the creation of joy in its various forms. Bridegroom and bride represent joy. True joy leads to love and friendship. These six benedictions are recited at Jewish weddings up to this day. The benediction over the wine is added to them, and together they are called 'the Seven Benedictions'. The loftiness of tone and the beauty of style of these benedictions are unsurpassed. The blend of Biblical strength and Midrashic sweetness seems to point to an early date.

(25) Lit., 'happened to come .

(26) Lit., 'in'. A more correct translation might be, 'during'.

(27) Lit., 'blessed five'. Apparently the second benediction was left out (Rashi).

(28) I.e., all the six benedictions.

(29) For man and woman. Therefore one benediction for the creation of man and woman is sufficient. This would be the third benediction.

(30) One of man and one of woman.

(31) Lit., 'the whole world.'

(32) Lit., 'after'.

(33) The intention was to create two human beings: man and woman.

(34) Only' man was formed, and woman was 'built' out of him; cf. Gen. II, 7 and 22.

(35) Lit., 'to throw up a question'.

(36) Gen. I, 27.

(37) Gen. V, 2: It seems that R. Judah does not ask his question merely from the first five words of Gen. I, 27, and from the first three words of Gen. V, 2, for in that case there would have been no need for him to refer to Gen. V, 2, since he could have asked the question from the last words of Gen. I, 27 'male and female he created them' but his question is from the whole verse 27 in Gen. I and from the whole verse 2 in Gen. V. The meaning of the question should be this: Gen. I, 27 begins by saying that God created man and ends by saying that man was created as male and female. The last words of Gen. I, 27 would thus shew that there were two creations. Gen. V, 2 begins by saying that God created them male and female, and then it says, as He blessed them and called their name Man in the day when they were created. This verse would shew that in the end there was only one creation. In short: Gen. I, 27. begins with one creation and ends with two creations, and Gen. V, 2, begins with two creations and ends with one creation. This, it seems, is the question of Rab Judah. Rab Judah quoted the verses by quoting the first portions of the verse. He really meant to say 'etc.' — In 'Er. 18a and Ber. 61a the name is R. Abbahu. In 'Er. 18a, in the image of God hath he created man, is quoted from Gen. I, 27. In Ber. 61a, 'for in the image of God made he man' (Gen. IX, 6) is quoted. This quotation apparently stands for that of Gen. I, 27. Both in 'Er. 18a and Ber. 61a 'male and female created He them' is quoted first.

(38) Lit., 'it went up in the thought', namely of God. A sense of reverence does not allow Rab Judah to mention 'God' after 'thought'. The meaning of the answer is: At first God intended to create two human beings, man and woman (Gen I. 27). But in the end only man was created by God, and woman was 'built' by God out of man (Gen V, 2)

(39) I.e., to the wedding-feast.

(40) The first of the seven days of the wedding festivities, which began after the marriage ceremony; v. supra 7b.

(41) Lit., 'he blessed all of them.'

(42) Lit., 'from now'. I.e., from the second day to the end of the seven days.

(43) Lit., 'new faces': cf. supra 7b.

(44) If there were new guests it would be a new occasion for joy.

(45) Lit., 'the joy'.

(46) The sixth benediction.

(47) Lit., 'from seven to thirty.'

(48) The host, as a rule the father of the bride.

(49) The invited guests.

(50) 'I have invited you here to dinner' (Rashi).

(51) ubugnc vj nava v. p. 35, n. 1.

(52) Lit., 'from now'.

(53) I.e., after the thirty days.

(54) Lit., 'if not, not'. (18) The benediction 'in whose dwelling there is joy'.

(55) I.e., the whole of the first year. The phrase 'in whose dwelling there is joy' occurs here for the first time. Commenting on this phrase Rashi says 'at the beginning of the summons (to say Grace).' The words 'in whose dwelling there is joy' are indeed used in the introduction to the Grace after meals at weddings; v. P.B. p. 300. Cf. also Abrahams' Notes, p. ccxviii, and Baer, Seder Abodoth Israel, p. 563. But the question arises: was ubugnc vj nava said before the Grace after meals in Talmudic times? In our text there is no indication that this was so. Another question is: did the whole benediction consist of the words ubugnc vj nava? Or were they the initial words of a longer benediction? The benediction trc rat'who has created' mentioned together with it is the sixth benediction, the longest of the six benedictions. One is thus very much tempted to think that ubugnc vj nava were words of a longer benediction probably introduced by the formula 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe' and said as a substitute for the first five benedictions. The key note of the first five benedictions is joy. Joy speaks out of every benediction; there was joy in the creation of the universe, in the creation of man, in the formation of man and woman. There is joy in the fourth and fifth benedictions. The joy in the first three benedictions is the joy of God. The joy in the fourth and fifth benedictions is also divine joy. The sixth benediction speaks of the joy created by God for man, 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe, who has created joy and gladness.' etc. The joy of the first five benedictions is summarized by the words, 'in whose dwelling there is joy.' There is joy on high, there is joy with God. This joy is spoken of in the first five benedictions. And this joy is also expressed briefly in the words 'in whose dwelling there is joy'. The human joy, created by God, is expressed in the sixth benediction trc rat, while ubugnc vj nava stands for the benediction which was a substitute for the first five benedictions. On the first day of the wedding the six benedictions were said. After the first day, if there were no new guests, two benedictions were said. After the seventh day only one benediction was said. And that benediction was 'in whose dwelling there is joy.' Man's joy began to diminish. So only God's joy was now mentioned. In the time after the Talmud ubugnc vj nava was given a place in the introduction to the Grace after meals at weddings, instead of being said as a full benediction after Grace, because the full text of this benediction was not mentioned in the Talmud. It may be that the tradition that the full benediction (with 'Blessed art Thou,' etc.) was said, was lost. It was felt that ubugnc vj nava was left hanging in the air and it was incorporated in the summons to say Grace; v. P.B., p. 300. That the word iugn was chosen to denote the dwelling of God may be due to the fact that it is mentioned in Hag. 12b as the heavenly region in which the angels sing; v. Abrahams and Baer, loc cit. iugn is there spoken of as the fifth of the seven firmaments. Might there not be in it an allusion to the five benedictions, for which the benediction of ubugnc vj nava is a substitute?

(56) Or, 'originally.' i.e., 'before the wedding.'

(57) Does one say 'In whose dwelling there is joy'.

(58) Or trough (for brewing beer), or pot (for planting barley for the wedding ceremony). The meaning of this phrase is: from the time that they begin making preparations for the wedding (v. Rashi).

(59) I.e., R. Papa had his son engaged to be married.

(60) In whose dwelling there is joy'.

(61) As all preparations for the wedding and the wedding-feast were made, R. Papa felt that he could say the benediction.

(62) I.e., Rabina had his son engaged (Rashi).

(63) And therefore he said the benedictions.

(64) Lit., 'the matter was not supported (by divine help).

(65) I.e., son of Palestine, Palestinian. It may be that tcrgn ('West') was the name of the father of R. Tahlifa; v. Levy, s.v. But the mention of Babylon seems to support the rendering 'son of the West', 'Palestinian'.

(66) He extended the first two benedictions by making additions to them (Rashi). It is possible that 'by long' is meant the full benedictions as they are given on fol. 8a, in contradistinction to the short blessing ubugnc vj nava

(67) I.e., a house in which a circumcision took place, followed by a festive meal.

(68) There must be ten male persons for the recital of the six (or seven) 'benedictions of the bridegrooms', v. supra 7a and 7b. The benediction of the mourners is also said in the presence of ten male persons, v. infra 8b. R. Nahman says in the name of Rab that bridegrooms may be of the ten, but mourners may not be of the ten. There must be ten without the mourners.

(69) Lit., 'You throw a Baraita against Rab.'

(70) I.e., Rab's authority is as great as that of a Tanna and he has therefore the right to differ with other Tannaim, Teachers of Mishnah or Baraita.

(71) The same question is asked against R. Johanan as was asked against Rab. But the answer which was effective in the case of Rab could not be given with regard to R. Johanan. Therefore different answers are attempted, v. infra 8b.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 8b

With regard to what was that taught?¹ With regard to Grace after meals;² [and] with regard to what did R. Johanan say [this ruling]?³ With regard to the line [of comforters].⁴ But [then] what of the dictum⁵ of which)R. Isaac said [that] R. Johanan said: 'One says the benediction⁶ of the bridegrooms in the presence of ten [male persons] and the bridegrooms are of the number, and [one says] the benediction of the mourners⁷ in the presence of ten [male persons] and the mourners are not of the number' — is there a benediction [said] in the line [of comforters]?⁸ — But [the answer is]: With regard to what did R. Johanan say [this ruling]?³ with regard to the [benediction recited in the] open space.⁹ But [then] what of the dictum which R. Isaac said [that] R. Johanan said: 'One says the benediction of the bridegrooms in the presence of ten [male persons] all the seven [days]¹⁰ and the bridegrooms are of the number, and [one says] the benediction of the mourners in the presence of ten [male persons] all the seven [days]¹¹ and the mourners are not of the number — is the benediction [recited in] the open space said all the seven days?¹² — It is possible in the presence of new friends¹³ — as in the case of¹⁴ R. Hiyya. the son of Abba, [who was] the Bible teacher of the son¹⁵ of Resh Lakish, or, as some say,¹⁶ the Mishnah teacher of the son of Resh Lakish. [It happened as follows:] A child [of R. Hiyya, the son of Abba] died,¹⁷ The first day¹⁸ he [Resh Lakish] did not go to him. The next day¹⁹ he [Resh Lakish] took with him²⁰ Judah the son of Nahmani,²¹ his meturgeman.²² [and] said to him: Rise [and] say something²³ with regard to²⁴ [the death of] the child. He spoke²⁵ and said: [It is written.] And the Lord saw and spurned, because of the provoking of His sons and His daughters.²⁴ [This means, in] a generation [in which the fathers spurn the Holy One, blessed be He, He is angry with their sons and their daughters and they die when they are young.²⁶ And some say [that] he [the child of R. Hiyya, the son of Abba, that died] was a young man²⁷ and that he [Judah the son of Nahmani] said thus to him:²⁸ Therefore the Lord shall have no joy in their young men, neither shall He have compassion on their fatherless and widows; for every one is profane and an evil-doer, and every mouth speaketh folly. For all this His anger is not turned away, but His hand is stretched out still.²⁹ (What is the meaning³⁰ of ‘but His hand is stretched out still’? Said R. Hanan, the son of Rab:³¹ All know for what purpose³² a bride is brought into the bridal chamber, but whoever disgraces his mouth and utters³³ a word of folly-even if a [divine] decree³⁴ of seventy years of happiness³⁵ were sealed [and granted] unto him,³⁶ it is turned for him into evil.) — He came to comfort, [and] he grieved him? This he said to him: Thou art important enough to be held responsible³⁷ for [the shortcomings of] the generation.³⁸ He³⁹ [then] said to him:⁴⁰ Rise [and] say something with regard to the praise of the Holy One, blessed be He He spoke and said: The God,⁴¹ who is great in the abundance of His greatness, mighty and strong in the multitude of awe-inspiring deeds, who reviveth the dead with his word,⁴² who does great things that are unsearchable⁴³ and wondrous works without number.⁴⁴ Blessed art thou, O Lord, who revivest the dead.⁴⁵ He⁴⁶ then ‘said to him:⁴⁷ Rise [and] say something with regard to the mourners. He spoke and said: Our brethren, who are worn out, who are crushed by this bereavement,⁴⁸ set your heart to consider⁴⁹ this: This it is [that] stands for ever,⁵⁰ it is a path from the six days of creation.⁵¹ Many have drunk, many will drink,⁵² as the drinking of the first ones, so will be that of the last ones. Our brethren, the Lord of consolation comfort you. Blessed be He who comforteth the mourners. (Said Abaye: ‘Many have drunk’ he should have said, ‘many will drink’ one should not have said, ‘the drinking of the first ones’, he should have said, ‘the drinking of the last ones’ one should not have said, for R. Simeon, the son of Lakish,⁵³ said, and so one has taught in the name of R. Jose: Man should never open his mouth to Satan.⁵⁴ Said R. Joseph: What text [shows this]? We should have been as Sodom, we should have been like unto Gomorrah.⁵⁵ What did He⁵⁶ reply unto him?⁵⁷ Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom, etc.⁵⁸) He⁵⁹ [then] said to him:⁶⁰ Rise [and] say something with regard to the comforters of the mourners.⁶¹ He spoke and said: Our brethren, bestowers of lovingkindnesses, sons of bestowers of lovingkindnesses, who hold fast to the covenant of Abraham our father⁶² [for it is said, For I have known him, to the end that he may command his children, etc.],⁶³ our brethren, may the Lord of recompense pay you your reward. Blessed art Thou who payest the recompense. He⁶⁴ [then] said unto him:⁶⁵ Rise [and] say something with regard to the whole of Israel. He spoke and said: Master of the worlds, redeem and save, deliver [and] help Thy people Israel from pestilence,⁶⁶ and from the sword, and from plundering,⁶⁷ and from the blast, and from the mildew, and from all kinds of calamities that [may] break forth and come into⁶⁸ the world. Before we call, mayest Thou answer,⁶⁹ Blessed art

Thou who stayest the plague.⁷⁰ ‘Ulla said, and some say [that] it was taught in a Baraitha: Ten cups [of wine] the scholars have instituted [to be drunk] in the house of the mourner: Three before the meal in order to open the small bowels, three during the meal in order to dissolve the food in the bowels, and four after the meal: one corresponding to ‘who feedeth’,⁷¹ one corresponding to the blessing of ‘the land’,⁷¹ one corresponding to ‘who rebuildeth Jerusalem’,⁷¹ and one corresponding to ‘who is good and doeth good’.⁷¹ They [then] added unto them [another] four [cups]: one in honour of the officers of the town, and one in honour of the leaders of the town, and one in honour of the Temple. and one in honour of Rabban Gamaliel. [When] they began to drink [too much] and to become intoxicated, they restored the matter to its original state.⁷² What [about] Rabban Gamaliel? — As it has been taught: At first the carrying out of the dead⁷³ was harder for his relatives⁷⁴ than his death,⁷⁵ so that they left him⁷⁶ and ran away, until Rabban Gamaliel⁷⁷ came and adopted a simple style and they carried him out⁷⁸ in garments of linen, and [then] all the people followed his example and carried out [the dead]⁷⁹ in garments of linen. Said R. Papa: And now it is the general practice [to carry out the dead] even in rough cloth worth [only] a zuz.⁸⁰

R. Eleazar said:

- (1) Lit., ‘When was that taught’. In the Baraitha (that mourners ate also of the number)
 - (2) Lit., ‘the benediction of food’.
 - (3) That mourners are not of the number.
 - (4) The line of comforters which was formed to offer consolation to the mourners after a burial, v. Sanh. 19a.
 - (5) Lit., ‘But as to this that’.
 - (6) ‘The blessing, or benediction, of the bridegrooms’ has a collective sense. The six (or seven) benedictions are meant.
 - (7) Has also a collective sense; v. infra.
 - (8) Does one say benedictions in the line that is formed, after the burial of the dead, so that the friends may comfort the mourners? There only words of comfort are said, but no benedictions. In Sanh.. 19a one word of comfort is mentioned: unjb, , ‘be comforted’.
 - (9) The benedictions of the mourners were said in the open space, v. infra.
 - (10) Of the wedding festivities.
 - (11) Of mourning.
 - (12) Lit., ‘Is there a benediction of the open space all the seven days?’
 - (13) Lit., ‘Thou wilt find it in (the case of) new faces’. When new friends come to visit the mourners for the first time during the seven days, the benediction of mourners is said :in the free space.
 - (14) Lit., ‘as that of.’
 - (15) So MS.M.; cur. edd. ‘sons’.
 - (16) Lit., ‘and some say.’
 - (17) It was R. Hiyya's child that died and not Resh Lakish's. Resh Lakish went to comfort R. Hiyya and took his (Resh Lakish's) meturgeman (v. infra) with him. Some scholars go wrong in the rendering of this passage. V., for instance, Levy p. 303. Bacher rightly speaks of the death of the young child of R. Hiyya.
 - (18) I.e., the first day of R. Hiyya's mourning.
 - (19) Lit., ‘on the morrow.’
 - (20) Lit., ‘led him.’
 - (21) Judah the son of Nahmani, is mentioned several times as the meturgeman of Resh Lakish; v. e.g. Sot. 37b, Cit. 60b, (also Tem. 14b), and Sanh. 7b.

(22) 'Interpreter'. As to his function v. J.E., vol. VIII, p. 521. and vol. I, p. 527, n. I. One sentence may be quoted from the last-named article. 'In a limited sense it ('the interpreter' Amora, or meturgeman) signifies the officer who stood at the side of the lecturer or presiding teacher in the academy and in meetings for public instruction, and announced loudly, and explained to the large assembly in an oratorical manner, what the teacher had just expressed briefly and in a low voice.' The meturgeman was, therefore, a sort of assistant lecturer. Judah the son of Nahmani, was assistant lecturer to Resh Lakish. He was also a good preacher who expounded well Biblical verses homiletically (cf. e.g., Sanh. 7b). He could also recite benedictions by heart. Cf. Cit. 60b and Tem. 14b. For these reasons apparently Resh Lakish took with him Judah the son of Nahmani, when he paid a visit of condolence to R. Hiyya. the son of Abba. Judah spoke on behalf of Resh Lakish.

(23) Lit., 'a word', 'a thing.'

(24) Lit., 'corresponding to', 'vis-a-vis'.

(25) Lit., 'he opened.' This probably means: he opened his mouth (and said), cf. Job III, 1. It may also mean: he opened his discourse; v. the Dictionaries of Levy and Jastrow, s.v. Here the first meaning seems to be more likely. (15) Deut. XXXII, 19.

(26) Lit., 'small'.

(27) I.e., a grown-up son, not a small child

(28) To R. Hiyya. the son of Abba

(29) Isa. IX. 16.

(30) Lit., 'What?' 'Why?'

(31) In Shab. 33a: b. Raba.

(32) Lit., 'for what.'

(33) Lit., 'brings forth from his mouth.'

(34) Lit., a decree of His judgment.'

(35) Lit, 'for good.'

(36) I.e., even if it was decreed in heaven that he should have seventy' years of happiness. cf R.H. 16b.

(37) Lit., 'to be seized'.

(38) Cf. Shab. 33b: 'the righteous men are seized for (the shortcomings of) the generation.' V. Rashi a.l.

(39) Resh Lakish

(40) Judah the son of Nahmani.

(41) According to Rashi the words 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe,' are to be supplemented before 'The God,' etc.

(42) This phrase occurs also in the abbreviated Amida prayer said on Friday' night. v. P.B. p. 120.

(43) Lit., 'until there is no searching.' Cf Ps CXLV. 3.

(44) Lit., 'until there is no number.' Cf. Ps. CXLVII, 5. The whole phrase occurs also in the evening service prayer v. P.B. p. 99.

(45) This benediction is, in its main ideas, reminiscent of the first three benedictions of the Amida.

(46) Resh Lakish

(47) Judah the son of Nahmani.

(48) Lit., 'by this mourning.'

(49) Cf. I Chron. XXII, 25.

(50) Rashi adds: that all die, and you should nor weep too much.

(51) Lit., 'in the beginning'.

(52) From the cup of sorrow.

(53) I.e., Resh Lakish.

- (54) That is, one should never utter ominous words and thus invite misfortune.
- (55) Isa. I, 9.
- (56) God.
- (57) Unto Isaiah.
- (58) Isa. I, 20. Because Isaiah compared the people to Sodom and Gomorrah, God addressed them as ‘rulers of Sodom,’ ‘people of Gomorrah.’ This is to illustrate how ominous words can have an evil effect.
- (59) Resh Lakish.
- (60) Judah the son of Nahmani.
- (61) The friends who came to comfort the mourners.
- (62) Rashi adds: who bestowed lovingkindnesses. The meaning is: who are carrying out the trust with which Abraham was charged, also for future generations; v. next note.
- (63) The passage is bracketed also in the original. The verse continues: and his household after him, that they may keep the way of the Lord, to do righteousness and Justice: to the end that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which He has spoken of him; Gen. XVIII, 19.
- (64) Resh Lakish.
- (65) Judah the son of Nahmani.
- (66) Lit ,’the pestilence.’
- (67) Lit., ‘the spoil’, ‘the plunder’.
- (68) Lit.,’to’.
- (69) Lit., ‘and thou wilt answer’.
- (70) Cf. Num. XVII, 13, 15; XXV, 8; II Sam. XXIV, 21, 25; Ps. CVI, 30. It is now time to deal with one or two points arising out of what we are told on this page (folio 8b) about the visit of Resh Lakish and his meturgeman, Judah the son of Nahmani, to R. Hiyya the son of Abba, on the occasion of the death of R. Hiyya's child. The story of this visit was introduced in order to show that there is vcj r , frc during all the seven days of mourning if new friends are present on each occasion. Now, what is vcj r , frc ? This question has not been answered yet. In the time of the Gaonim the tradition concerning it had faded already. In Shittah Mekubbezeth on Keth. 8b three different views are quoted. The view mentioned in Nahmanides’ Toroth ha-Adam ed. Venice, p. 50a, is again different. The explanation attempted by Krauss in the Jahrbuch der jud.-lit. Gesellschaft, vol. XVII (1926), pp. 238-239 (v. also Krauss, Jahresbericht XXXVII-XXXIX Isr.-Theol. Lehranstalt in Wien, p. 60f) is unsatisfactory. kctv , hc in Kethuboth 8b is not inaccurate (v. Jahrbuch, p. 235). The emendation suggested by Krauss (Jahresbericht, p. 60) for vcj r , frc ohkct , frc htn . (Meg. 23b) is unacceptable. In Tractate Soferim ch. XIX vcj r , frc is not mentioned. The quotation from Hai and Sherira in Shittah Mekubbezeth concludes with the words: ‘As much as we have heard, we never heard that the vcj r , frc was in vogue in Babylon’. The following explanation may however be briefly submitted: — vcj r in this connection has nothing to do with cu j r public place. It is, rather, the open space behind the house (of the mourner). V. Er. 24a-b and Krauss, T.A. vol. I, p. 48, and p. 361, n. 633. vcj r , frc would thus mean the blessing of the mourners said in the open space behind the house of the mourner. When ten or more friends came to comfort the mourner there was, at any rate in many cases, no room in the house for all the visitors, and the mourners sat in the open space behind the house and the guests assembled there, and the benedictions ohkct , frc were recited before the assembly in the open space. vcj r was therefore almost identical with the kctv , hc Therefore, when it is said in Meg. 23b vcj r , frc ohkct , frc htn this statement is entirely correct. (vhcdk kzt tk can only mean that he (Resh Lakish) did not go to him (to the mourner). The next day he did go to him, namely, to his house, or to the open space behind the house. What Krauss, Jahrbuch, p. 239, says on vhcdk cannot be accepted.) The story on this page (folio 8b) confirms this interpretation. Resh Lakish and his meturgeman went to R. Hiyya, that is, they went to his house, or to the open space near his house. Judah, the son of Nahmani, delivered there a homily and recited four benedictions. And these benedictions are called vcj r , frc and ohkct , frc. That is: The ohkct , frc., which was recited in the vcj r was also called vcj r , frc and required the presence of ten new guests. Whether this vcj r , frc required a cup of benediction is difficult to say. In Toroth ha-Adam p. 45b it says: Some say that vcj r , frc requires a cup: cf. however ibid. 49a, where the view of R. Paltai seems to be that it had no 'cup' attached to it. In the story on this page (folio 8b) no 'cup' is mentioned. It might have been implied. It may be that the vtrcv , sugx (the meal given by friends to the mourners after the funeral) also took place in this vcj r. Cf. M.K. 25a. The vcj r , frc fell, apparently, early into disuse, so that in post-Talmudic times its real character was not known any more. It is difficult to see why these benedictions disappeared from use. They are beautiful in thought and language, especially benedictions 1 and 2. These two benedictions deserve to be reinstated. Another point that should be noted is this: Judah the son of Nahmani, did not give his own sayings. The homily which he delivered was not his own. The benedictions which he recited had long been fixed. Cf. Rashi, ad loc. rsxv kg , urusx ifu. It is strange that Graetz thinks that Judah the son of Nahmani improvised these beautiful prayers and that these prayers shew that Judah was a fine Hebrew stylist. Judah the son of Nahmani was a meturgeman, and a meturgeman was not expected to say original things. He knew by heart the homilies of others and the fixed benedictions, and he delivered the homilies well and he recited the benedictions well. It is interesting to note that t , khn tnht oue was said to the Meturgeman, although the t , khn was not his. Cf. also Shittah Mekubbezeth:

ive, ht trehgn , ufrc hbv kct vhk rnt tnkge trusx t , khn tnht oue ibh rnts tvu

- (71) 'Who feedeth' is the first benediction of Grace after meals, the blessing of 'the land' is the second, 'who rebuildeth Jerusalem' is the third, and 'who is good and doeth good' is the fourth. V. P.B., pp. 280-283; cf. Ber. 48b.
- (72) Lit., 'to its old state.' Cf. Sem. ch. XIV, where the text is somewhat different and the order of the 'cups' varies.
- (73) I.e.. the funeral.
- (74) The relatives of the dead.
- (75) Because of the great expense. They buried the dead in costly' garments (Rashi).
- (76) The dead.
- (77) I.e., Rabban Gamaliel II, also called Rabban Gamaliel of Jabneh.
- (78) For variant, cf. M.K. 27b.
- (79) For burial
- (80) A silver coin, one fourth of a shekel.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 9a

He who says. I have found an 'open opening'¹ is trusted to make her forbidden for him.² Why?³ It is a double doubt:⁴ It is a doubt [whether she had the intercourse with the other man while] under him,⁵ or⁶, [while] not under him.⁷ And if you say⁸ that [she had that intercourse while] under him, [there is] the [other] doubt [whether she had that intercourse] by violence or⁹ by [her free] will! — It was necessary¹⁰ [to state this rule] in the case of the wife of a priest.¹¹ And if you wish, you may say [that it speaks of] the wife of an Israelite,¹² and for instance when her father received the betrothal for her [when] she was less than three years and one day old.¹³ What does he¹⁴ let 'is hear by [this since] we have already learnt [it]:¹⁵ 'If a man says¹⁶ to a woman, "I have betrothed thee [to myself]", and she says, "Thou hast not betrothed me [to thyself]," she is allowed [to marry] his relatives, but he is forbidden [to marry] her relatives.’¹⁷ — What you might have supposed is that there¹⁸ [he causes a prohibition to himself] because it is certain to him,¹⁹ but here it is not quite certain to him.²⁰ [Therefore] he²¹ lets us hear [this rule].²² But did R. Eleazar say so? Did not R. Eleazar say: The wife does not become forbidden for her husband save in the case of²³ warning²⁴ and seclusion,²⁵ and as [we find in] the occurrence that happened?²⁶ But how can you [in any case] understand it?²⁷ Was the occurrence that happened accompanied by warning and seclusion? And again, did they²⁸ declare her²⁹ forbidden?³⁰ — This is no difficulty, [for] thus he³¹ means to say:³² The wife does not become forbidden for her husband save in the case of warning and seclusion, [and this we learn] from the occurrence that happened, because [there] there was no warning and seclusion and [therefore] she³³ was not forbidden.³⁴ But [the former question] is nevertheless difficult. In the [case of] warning and seclusion but not [in the case of] ‘an open opening’!³⁵ — But according to your argument³⁶ [the question could be asked]: [in the case of] warning and seclusion, yes, [and in the case of] witnesses,³⁷ no! Hence he³⁸ means to say thus: The wife does not become forbidden for her husband through one witness³⁹ but through two witnesses;⁴⁰ but in the case of warning and seclusion:⁴¹ even through one witness,⁴² and ‘an open opening’ is like two witnesses.⁴³ And if you will say: [In the case of] the occurrence that happened. why did they not declare her forbidden?⁴⁴ [The answer is:] There it was compulsion.⁴⁵ And if you wish you can say as R. Samuel the son of Nahmani said⁴⁶ [that] R. Jonathan said:

- (1) ‘An open opening’ is a euphemistic expression for ‘absence of virginity’. The husband, after the first intercourse with his young wife, claims that he found no virginity.
 - (2) V. infra.
 - (3) Lit , ‘And why?’ — The question is: Why should his wife become forbidden for him by what he said regarding the absence of her virginity?
 - (4) Lit., the doubt of a doubt’.
 - (5) Under her husband, that is, since the betrothal (erusin); in which case she is regarded as an adulteress who is forbidden to live with her husband. V. Sanh. 51a.
 - (6) Lit ‘A doubt’.
 - (7) Before her betrothal.
 - (8) Lit., ‘If thou wilt be found (consequently) to say.’
 - (9) If a betrothed (or married) woman is violated by another man she does not become forbidden for her husband. V. infra 51b, v. also Deut. XXII, 25-27.
 - (10) Lit., not necessary’, i.e., it would not have been necessary but for the case of the wife of a priest. The meaning is: the rule applies in the case of the wife of a priest.
 - (11) If the wife of a priest was violated she was forbidden for her husband. V. infra 51b, and Yeb. 56b.
 - (12) I.e., an ordinary Jew, not a priest.
 - (13) In this case there is only one doubt: whether she was violated, or submitted by her free will. The other doubt (‘under him’ or ‘not under him’) does not arise since in the latter case her virginity would not be affected. V. Ned. 44b.
 - (14) R. Eleazar (an Amora).
 - (15) That a man may, by his own evidence, prohibit for himself a thing or a person otherwise permitted to him.
 - (16) Lit., ‘he who says’.
 - (17) The forbidden degrees of relatives by marriage; v. Kid. 65a.
 - (18) Kid. 65a.
 - (19) Lit , ‘it is certainly established to him.’

- (20) His grievance may' be imaginary.
- (21) R. Eleazar.
- (22) That he is believed.
- (23) Lit., 'over the affairs of'.
- (24) Given to the wife by the suspecting husband.
- (25) Of the wife with the suspected man. V. Num. V, 11ff; cf. Sol. 2a and 2b.
- (26) Lit., 'according to the deed that was'. I.e., of David and Bathsheba, cf. II Sam. XI. This contradicts the dictum of R. Eleazar that the woman becomes forbidden on a mere charge by her husband of an 'open opening'.
- (27) This latter dictum of R. Eleazar.
- (28) The authorities.
- (29) Bath-sheba.
- (30) [For Judah. The fact that she was allowed to marry David shews that she was not forbidden to Uriah, for it is a general rule that an adulteress is forbidden to continue with her husband as well as her paramour. Sot. 27b.]
- (31) R. Eleazar.
- (32) Lit., 'he says'.
- (33) Bath-sheba.
- (34) For Uriah. V. p. 44, n. 20.
- (35) Lit., 'warning . . . yes; an open . . . no.' I.e., the words of R. Eleazar imply that the wife would be forbidden for her husband only in case of warning and seclusion, but not in the case of 'an open opening', which contradicts his former ruling.
- (36) If you are to argue from the implications of R. Eleazar's words as they stand.
- (37) Why should the evidence of witnesses that the wife was unfaithful be weaker than warning and seclusion? Surely this cannot be!
- (38) R. Eleazar.
- (39) By the evidence of one witness that the wife was unfaithful; v. Rashi ad loc.
- (40) By the evidence of two witnesses.
- (41) Where there are two witnesses to the warning and seclusion.
- (42) If even only one witness testified to the adultery that followed she is forbidden to her husband. V. Sot. 2b.
- (43) I.e., the charge of an 'open opening' by her husband is on a par with the evidence of two witnesses.
- (44) For David, seeing that many people knew of the occurrence, and thus there were witnesses.
- (45) Bath-sheba could not resist the demand of the king. [And since she was thus not forbidden to Uriah, she was permitted also to David. (V. supra p. 44, n. 20)].
- (46) Lit., 'as that which R. Samuel the son of Nahmani said'.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 9b

Everyone who goes out into the war of the House of David writes for his wife a deed of divorce,¹ for it is written, And to thy brethren shalt thou bring greetings, and take their pledge.² What [is the meaning of], 'and take their pledge'? R. Joseph learnt: Things which are pledged between him and her.³

Abaye said: We have also learned⁴ [this]:⁵ A MAIDEN IS MARRIED ON THE FOURTH DAY OF THE WEEK. [This implies] only on the fourth day, but not the fifth day.⁶ What is the reason? [Presumably] on account of the cooling of the temper.⁷ Now in which respect [could the cooling of the mind have a bad result]? If with regard to giving her the kethubah,⁸ let him give it to her.⁹ Consequently¹⁰ [we must say only] with regard to making her forbidden for him;¹¹ and [it is a case where] he puts forward a claim.¹² Is it not that he puts forward the claim of ‘an open opening’?¹³ — No, [it is a case where] he puts forward the claim of blood.¹⁴

Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said: If any one says. ‘I have found an open opening’, he is trusted to cause her to lose her kethubah. Said R. Joseph: What does he¹⁵ let us hear? We have [already] learned [this]:¹⁶ He who eats¹⁷ at his father-in-law's [between the time of betrothal and the time of marriage] in Judaea,¹⁸ without witnesses, cannot [after the marriage] raise the claim of [the loss of] virginity, because he is alone with her.¹⁹ In Judaea he cannot raise this claim, but in Galilee²⁰ he can raise it. Now in which respect? If to make her forbidden for him, why [should he] not [be able to raise this claim] in Judaea?²¹ Consequently²² [we must say it is] to cause her to lose her kethubah,²³ and [it is in a case] when he raises a claim. Is it not that he raises the claim of ‘an open opening’? — No, when he raises the claim of blood.²⁴

(1) [So that in case he falls in battle his wife should be free to marry without the necessity of halizah. The Get would in that case take effect retrospectively from the date of its writing (Rashi). Tosaf.: He writes a Get without any conditions to take effect immediately]

(2) I Sam. XVII, 15.

(3) I.e., the betrothals, these thou shalt take from them by a deed of divorce (Rashi).

(4) We have been taught in a Mishnah; v. supra 2a.

(5) That the claim of ‘an open opening’ makes the wife forbidden for the husband.

(6) Lit., ‘on the fourth day, yes, on the fifth day, no.’

(7) The husband might be appeased by the following Monday, cf. supra 2a and 5a.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) No harm is done by this. There is no sin involved in the payment of the marriage settlement to the wife, even if, in law, she forfeited it through her conduct.

(10) Lit., ‘but’.

(11) If her conduct makes her forbidden for the husband for marital intercourse then the disregard of this prohibition would involve a sin. And therefore a maiden marries on the fourth day of the week so that there should be no ‘cooling of the mind’.

(12) I.e., the husband must have put forward a serious claim.

(13) As evidencing unfaithfulness, This proves that the charge of an ‘open opening’ by the husband renders his wife forbidden to him.

(14) I.e. he claims that there was no bleeding. And this is a more manifest sign of the absence of virginity, evidencing unfaithfulness, than ‘an open opening’.

(15) Rab Judah.

(16) In a Mishnah; cf. infra 22a.

(17) I.e., he who frequently visits the house of the father of his betrothed bride.

(18) This was customary in Judaea.

(19) And might have had intimate relations with the bride.

(20) In Galilee that custom (v. p. 46, n. 16) did not prevail.

(21) If he is sure that he has not been intimate with her during the time of betrothal and he charges her with unfaithfulness, he renders her, by the mere charge, forbidden to him?

(22) Lit., ‘but’.

(23) In Judaea he cannot make her lose the kethubah, because he might have been intimate with her during the period of betrothal.

(24) And therefore Samuel's statement is necessary.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 10a

It was stated: Rab Nahman said [that] Samuel said in the name of R. Simeon b. Eleazar: The scholars ordained for the daughters of Israel [as follows]: for a maiden two hundred [zuz¹] and for a widow a maneh² [one hundred zuz].³ And they trusted him, so that when he said, 'I have found an open opening', he is believed.⁴ If so, what have the Sages accomplished with their ordinance?⁵ — Said Raba: The presumption is [that] no one will take the trouble of preparing a [wedding-]feast and will then spoil it.⁶ One has taught: Since it⁷ is a fine [instituted] by the sages she⁸ shall collect only from the worst land⁹ [of the husband's estate]. [You say] a fine! Why a fine?¹⁰ — Say then: since it is an ordinance of the sages,¹¹ she shall collect only from the worst land [of the husband's estate]. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says: The kethubah of a wife is from the Torah.¹² But did Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel say so? Surely it has been taught: [It is written in the Torah] He shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins;¹³ [this teaches us that] this¹⁴ is [as much] as the dowry of the virgins¹⁵ and the dowry of the virgins is [as much] as this.¹⁶ But,¹⁷ the Sages found a support for [the rule that] the kethubah of a wife is from the Torah. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel Says: The kethubah of a wife is not from the words of the Bible, but from the words of the Soferim!¹⁸ — Reverse it.¹⁹ And why does it appear to you right to reverse²⁰ the latter [teaching]? Reverse the former [teaching]!²¹ — We have [already] heard that R. Simeon the son of Gamaliel said that the kethubah is from the Bible, for we learnt: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says: He²² gives her²³ [the kethubah] in Cappadocian coins.²⁴ And if you wish, you may say: The whole of it²⁵ is [according to] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel. only²⁶ it is defective²⁷ and it teaches thus:²⁸ Here the Sages found a support for [the rule that] the kethubah of a wife is from the Torah. The kethubah of a widow [however] is not from the words of the Torah but from the words of the Soferim, for Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel Says: The kethubah of a widow is not from the words of the Torah but from the words of the Soferim.²⁹

Someone came before R. Nahman [and] said to him: I have found an open opening.³⁰ R. Nahman answered:³¹ Lash him with palm-switches; harlots³² lie prostrate before him.³³ But it is R. Nahman who said that he [the husband] is believed!³⁴ — He is believed, but [at the same time] one lashes him with palm-switches. R. Ahai answered: Here³⁵ [it speaks] of a young man,³⁶ there [it speaks] of one who was married before.³⁷

Some one came before Rabban Gamaliel [and] said to him, I have found an 'open opening'. He [Rabban Gamaliel] answered him: Perhaps you moved aside.³⁸ I will give you an illustration: To what is this like? To a man who was walking in the deep darkness of the night³⁹ [and came to his house and found the door locked];⁴⁰ if he moves aside [the bolt⁴¹ of the door] he finds it open, if he does not move aside [the bolt of the door] he finds it locked. Some say [that] he [R. Gamaliel] answered him thus: Perhaps you moved aside wilfully⁴² and you tore away the door and the bar.⁴³ I will give you an illustration: To what is this like? To a man who was walking in the deep darkness of the night [and came to his house and found the door locked]; if he moves aside [the bolt of the door] wilfully⁴⁴ he finds it open, if he does not move aside [the bolt of the door] wilfully he finds it locked.

Some one came before Rabban Gamaliel the son of Rabbi [and] said to him, 'My master, I have had intercourse [with my newly-wedded wife] and I have not found any blood.' She [the wife] said to him, 'My master, I was a virgin.' He said to them: Bring me that cloth.⁴⁵ They brought him the cloth, and he soaked it in water and he washed it and he found on it a good many drops of blood.⁴⁶ [Thereupon] he [Rabban Gamaliel] said to him [the husband]: Go, be happy with thy bargain.⁴⁷ Huna Mar the son of Raba of Parazika,⁴⁸ said to R. Ashi: Shall we also do it?⁴⁹ He answered him:

- (1) V. Glos.
 - (2) V. Glos.
 - (3) As her kethubah. V. infra 10b.
 - (4) And she loses the kethubah.
 - (5) If he can make her lose the kethubah by the claim of an 'open opening'.
 - (6) No one will go to the trouble and expense of a wedding and then waste it all by an invented claim. If he makes such a charge, he is, no doubt, telling the truth.
 - (7) The kethubah.
 - (8) The wife.
 - (9) Cf. also B.K. 7b and 8a.
 - (10) Why do you call it a fine? And why should it be a fine?
 - (11) I.e., a Rabbinical, and not a Biblical, ordinance.
 - (12) I.e., an ordinance of the Bible.
 - (13) Ex. XXII, 16.
 - (14) The payment for the enticement of the virgin.
 - (15) I.e., fifty pieces of silver, the fine inflicted for violating a virgin, v. Deut. XXII, 27.
 - (16) The 'silver pieces' referred to are shekels, not ma'ahs, v. infra 38a.
 - (17) Lit., 'from here', i.e., from the phrase 'dowry of virgins'.
 - (18) The Soferim, or scribes, were the learned men who succeeded Ezra during a period of about two hundred years. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel therefore holds that the kethubah was a Rabbinical, and not a Biblical, ordinance.
 - (19) The answer is: Reverse the reading and say that Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel said that in the Scriptural verse mentioned is to be found a support for the rule that the kethubah of a wife is from the Bible, and that the first Tanna said that it was not Biblical but 'from the words of the Soferim'.
 - (20) Lit., 'And why do you see that you should reverse.'
 - (21) Where it says that Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel holds that the kethubah of a wife is from the Torah.
 - (22) The husband.
 - (23) The wife.
 - (24) They were more variable than the Palestinian coins. The husband has to pay in Cappadocian coins because the kethubah is from the Bible; v. infra 110b.
 - (25) Of the teaching of the Baraitha mentioned before.
 - (26) Lit., 'and'.
 - (27) A clause is missing.
 - (28) I.e., the Baraitha should be read thus.
 - (29) According to this version of the Baraitha, R. Simeon b. Gamaliel holds that the kethubah of the maiden-wife is Biblical and that the kethubah of the widow-wife is rabbinical.

- (30) He (the husband) raised this complaint about his newly wedded wife.
- (31) Lit., 'said to him', i.e., concerning him.
- (32) V. Levy, Vol. III, p. 2. Rashi: 'the harlots of Mabrakta'. [Mabrakta was a place in the neighbourhood of Mahoza. v. Obermeyer, p. 177.]
- (33) I.e., such a man ought to be punished. for if he is such an expert in these matters he must have led an immoral life.
- (34) If the husband says that he has not found virginity in his wife. Why should he then be lashed for having complained to R. Nahman about his wife?
- (35) Where R. Nahman ordered punishment.'
- (36) Who was not married before. He should not have known if he had not had intercourse with harlots before his marriage. There R. Nahman ordered lashing.
- (37) And therefore he could know without having led an immoral life. He is therefore believed and receives no lashing (Rashi). It is also possible that according to R. Ahai both are believed R. Ahai only explains that it is the young man who gets the birch.
- (38) And thus performed the coition without tearing the hymen. V. Jast. p. 595.
- (39) Lit., 'in the blackness of night and darkness'; cf. Prov. VII, 9.
- (40) Some such words as these must be inserted.
- (41) 'He moved aside', and 'he did not move aside' refer apparently to the bolt of the door and not to the door itself. The simile is obvious: the bolt is compared to the membrum virile. He moved the membrum virile aside and therefore found 'an open opening'.
- (42) Intentionally.
- (43) The 'door', 'door-way', 'entrance', apparently refers to the vagina, or the entrance into the vagina, and 'the bar' to the hymen. He intentionally moved so forcibly that he tore open the entrance and swept away the hymen without feeling it.
- (44) The action must be intentional. The chief point of this version seems to be the wilful intention. The bolt of a door cannot, as a rule, be moved aside accidentally. There must be intention in the action.
- (45) Upon which they spent the night.
- (46) The blood was covered by semen.
- (47) Lit., 'take possession of' a phrase in which there is also an element of joy. 'Be happy with' expresses well the spirit of the decision. Rabban Gamaliel himself was happy that he could keep together and strengthen the bond of marriage between husband and wife.
- (48) Faransag, near Bagdad.
- (49) I.e., apply in such cases the test applied by Rabban Gamaliel to the cloth.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 10b

Our¹ laundry work² is like their³ washing.⁴ And if you will say let us do laundry work,⁵ [my answer is] the smoothing stone will remove it.⁶ Someone came before Rabban Gamaliel the son of Rabbi [and] said to him, 'My master, I have had intercourse [with my newly-wedded wife] and I have not found any blood.' She [the wife] said to him, 'My master, I am still a virgin.' He [then] said to them: Bring me two handmaids, one [who is] a virgin and one who had intercourse with a man. They brought to him [two such handmaids], and he placed them upon a cask of wine. [In the case of] the one who was no more a virgin its smell⁷ went through,⁸ [in the case of] the virgin the smell did not go through.⁹ He [then] placed this one [the young wife] also [on a cask of wine]. and its smell¹⁰ did not go through. He¹¹ [then] said to him:¹² Go, be happy with thy bargain.¹³ —

But he should have examined her from the very beginning!¹⁴ — He had heard a tradition,¹⁵ but he had not seen it done in practice.¹⁶ and he thought. The matter might not be certain¹⁷ and it would not be proper¹⁸ to deal lightly with daughters of Israel.¹⁹

Someone came before Rabban Gamaliel the elder [and] said to him, ‘My master, I have had intercourse [with my newly-wedded wife] and I have not found any blood. She [the wife] said to him, ‘My master, I am of the family of Dorkati, [the women of] which have neither blood of menstruation nor blood of virginity.’ Rabban Gamaliel investigated among her women relatives and he found [the facts to be] in accordance with her words. He [then] said to him: Go, be happy with thy bargain. Happy art thou that thou hast been privileged [to marry a woman] of the family of Dorkati. What is [the meaning of] Dorkati? — A cut-off generation.²⁰ — R. Hanina said: Vain consolation Rabban Gamaliel offered²¹ to that man, for R. Hiyya taught: As the leaven is wholesome for the dough, so is blood wholesome for a woman. And one has [also] taught in the name of R. Meir: Every woman who has abundant blood has many children. It has been said: R. Jeremiah b. Abba said: He [Rabban Gamaliel] said to him [the husband]: Be happy with thy bargain. But R. Jose b. Abin said: He said to him: thou hast been punished with thy bargain.²² We quite understand the one who says ‘Thou hast been punished’ with thy bargain — this is [according to the view] of R. Hanina. But according to him who says ‘Be happy’ [with thy bargain], what is the advantage [of such a marriage]? — He [the husband] does not come to any doubt regarding menstruation.

Someone came to Rabbi [and] said, ‘My master, I have had intercourse [with my newly-wedded wife] and I have not found any blood.’ She said, ‘My master, I was [and am] still a virgin, and it was [a period of] years of dearth.’ Rabbi saw that their faces were black,²³ [and] he commanded concerning them, and they²⁴ brought them²⁵ to a bath and gave them to eat and to drink and brought them to the bridal chamber, and he had intercourse with her and found blood. He²⁶ [then] said to him: Go, be happy with thy bargain. Rabbi applied to them the verse:²⁷ Their skin is shrivelled upon their bodies, it is withered, it is become like a stick.²⁸

MISHNAH. A MAIDEN — HER KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ],²⁹ AND A WIDOW — A MANEH.³⁰ A MAIDEN, WHO IS A WIDOW, [OR] DIVORCED, OR A HALUZAH³¹ FROM BETROTHAL³² — HER KETHUBAH³³ IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ], AND THERE LIES AGAINST THEM THE CHARGE OF NON-VIRGINITY.³⁴

GEMARA. Why [is a widow called] ‘almanah’? R. Hana of Bagdad said: because of the maneh.³⁵ But what can be said with regard to a widow from the betrothal?³⁶ — Because that one is called ‘almanah’³⁷ this one is also called ‘almanah.’³⁸ What can be said with regard to [the word] ‘almanah’, that is written in the Bible?³⁹ — [The woman] for whom the Rabbis will in future institute [the kethubah of] a maneh. But does the Bible speak of a thing which will be in the future?⁴⁰ — Yes, for it is written: And the name of the third river is Hiddekel, that is it which goeth towards the east of Ashur,⁴¹ and R. Joseph learnt: Ashur, that is Seleucia. But was [Seleucia] already then in existence? But [it is mentioned] because it will exist in the future. Here also ‘almanah’ is mentioned in the Bible] because it [the kethubah of maneh] will exist in the future.

R. Hana of Bagdad also said: The rain waters, saturates and manures [the earth] and refreshes⁴² and enlarges⁴³ [the fruits]. Raba the son of R. Ishmael, and some say R. Yemar the son of Shelemiah, said: Which is the verse?⁴⁴ [It is this:] Thou waterest the ridges abundantly, thou settlest the furrows thereof, thou makest it soft with showers, thou blessest the springing thereof.⁴⁵

R. Eleazar said: The altar removes and feeds, makes beloved, atones.⁴⁶ Have not 'atones' and 'removes' the same meaning?⁴⁷ It removes [evil decrees]⁴⁸ and atones for sins R. Hana of Bagdad also said: Dates warm, satisfy, act as a laxative,⁴⁹ strengthen⁵⁰ and do not make [one] delicate.

Rab said: If one has eaten dates, he should not give a legal decision. An objection was raised. Dates are wholesome morning and evening, in the afternoon they are bad, at noon they are incomparable.⁵¹ and they remove three things: evil thought, stress of the bowels, and abdominal troubles! — Do we say that they are no good? They are indeed good. only for the moment [they cause] unsteadiness. It is analogous to wine, for the Master said:⁵² He who has drunk⁵³ one-fourth [of a log]⁵⁴ of wine shall not give a legal decision.⁵⁵ And if you wish you may say: There is no difficulty: This is before a meal and that is after a meal,⁵⁶ for Abaye said: Mother⁵⁷ told me: Dates before a meal are as an axe to the palmtree,⁵⁸ after a meal as a bar to the door.⁵⁹ Dasha [door], Raba explained:⁶⁰ derek sham⁶¹ ['the way there'],⁶² Darga [stairs, ladder]. Raba explained:⁶³ derek gag [the way of the roof].⁶⁴ Puria [bed], R. Papa explained: sheparin we-rabin 'aleha [because one is fruitful and multiplies on it]. R. Nahman b. Isaac said:

(1) Babylonian.

(2) . uj hd is fine laundry' work.

(3) Palestinian.

(4) xuchf is plain washing. In Palestine the plain washing was better than in Babylonia. because the water in Palestine was better or because they had in Palestine better ingredients (Rashi). In order to get the same results they would have to do fine laundry work in Babylonia, and that would include smoothing the cloth with a stone, according to Rashi, with a gloss-stone.

(5) Let us apply . uj hd to the cloth on which the bride and bridegroom slept.

(6) The blood. In the process of . uj hd the stone with which the cloth would be smoothed would cause the drops of blood, which would be seen after plain washing, to disappear. The test of Rabban Gamaliel could therefore not be employed in Babylonia.

(7) I.e., the smell of the wine.

(8) One could smell the wine from the mouth (Rashi).

(9) One could not smell the wine from the mouth.

(10) I.e., the smell of the wine.

(11) Rabban Gamaliel.

(12) To the husband.

(13) The test shewed that the wife was a virgin.

(14) Why did he first have to experiment with the two handmaids.

(15) That this was a reliable test.

(16) Lit., 'The practice he had not seen.'

(17) Lit., 'perhaps it is not certain that the matter is good,' that is, that the test would be effective.

(18) Lit., 'The way of the land,' that is, the custom.

- (19) Therefore he carried out the test first with handmaids.

- (29) V. Glos.
- (30) One hundred zuz.
- (31) A woman released from a leviratical marriage, by halizah; v. Deut. XXV, 5-10.
- (32) She was only betrothed (arusah, v. Glos.) but not married, and became a widow or was divorced, or released by halizah from marrying her deceased fiance's brother.
- (33) Lit., 'their kethubah'. The kethubah of either the widow, or the divorcee, or the halizah.
- (34) The husband who marries one of these women has a right to complain if he does not find signs of virginity. As they were only betrothed but not married they are expected to be virgins.
- (35) The value of the kethubah of a woman who married when she was a widow. This is no attempt at proper etymology.
- (36) The value of the kethubah of such a widow is two hundred zuz, and still she is called 'almanah'.
- (37) This is no attempt at proper etymology.
- (38) Lit., 'One calls her.'
- (39) The kethubah was not biblically ordained for the widow; v. supra 10a.
- (40) Lit., 'And was the verse written for the future?'
- (41) Gen. II, 14.
- (42) Or 'softens.'
- (43) Lit., 'causes to extend.'
- (44) That can be referred to in support of R. Hana's saying regarding the rain.
- (45) Ps. LXV, 11.
- (46) A play on the word j czn (altar).
- (47) 'Removes' apparently also refers to sins!
- (48) The answer is that 'removes' refers to evil decrees.
- (49) Lit., 'loosen', (the bowels).
- (50) The body.
- (51) I.e., very good. — Dates are good, or very good, after the meals in the morning, noon and evening. They are not good in the afternoon after a rest (Rashi).
- (52) The reference is to Samuel, in whose name this saying is quoted in 'Er. 64a.
- (53) Lit., he who drinks.
- (54) Log is a liquid measure equal to the contents of six eggs.
- (55) And one-fourth of a log of wine is certainly wholesome. But for the moment it may make one unsteady, and therefore unfit to give legal decisions.
- (56) Lit., 'bread'. If one eats dates before a meal, the effect is bad and one must not give legal decisions. The passage which declares them bad speaks of a case where one eats dates after a meal. The statement itself bears this out; v. supra p. 53, n. 6.

(57) V. Kid. (Sonc. ed.) p. 153.

(58) That is, injurious.

(59) This apparently means good. It is difficult to see the meaning of the comparison. Rashi explains: They sustain the body as the bar supports a door.

(60) Lit., 'said'.

(61) A play on the word.

(62) Or, the way is there; or, through there.

(63) Lit., 'said.'

(64) Or, the way to the roof; or, the way through the roof.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 11a

We will also say:¹ ailonith [the barren woman that is] a man-like² woman, who does not bear children.³

MISHNAH. A WOMAN PROSELYTE, A WOMAN CAPTIVE, AND A WOMAN SLAVE, WHO HAVE BEEN REDEEMED, CONVERTED, OR FREED [WHEN THEY WERE] LESS THAN THREE YEARS AND ONE DAY OLD — THEIR KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ]. AND THERE IS WITH REGARD TO THEM THE CLAIM OF [NON-]VIRGINITY.⁴ GEMARA. R. Huna said: A minor proselyte⁵ is immersed⁶ by the direction⁷ of the court.⁸ What does he let us know? That it is an advantage⁹ to him and one may act for a person in his absence¹⁰ to his advantage? [Surely] we have learned [this already]: One may act for a person in his absence to his advantage. but one cannot act for a person in his absence to his disadvantage!

What you might have supposed is that an idolator¹¹ prefers a life without restraint¹² because it is established for us that a slave certainly prefers a dissolute life,¹³ therefore, he¹⁴ lets us know that this is said¹⁵ [only in the case] of a grown-up person who has already tasted sin,¹⁶ but [in the case of] a minor, it is an advantage to him.¹⁷ May we say that [this Mishnah] supports him:¹⁸ A WOMAN PROSELYTE, A WOMAN CAPTIVE, AND A WOMAN SLAVE, WHO HAVE BEEN REDEEMED, CONVERTED. OR FREED [WHEN THEY WERE] LESS THAN THREE YEARS AND ONE DAY OLD [etc.]? Is it not that they immersed them¹⁹ by the direction of the Court?²⁰ No, here we treat of the case of a proselyte whose sons and daughters were converted with him, so that they are satisfied with what their father does.²¹

R. Joseph said: When they²² have become of age they can protest [against their conversion].²³

Abaye asked:²⁴ A WOMAN PROSELYTE, A WOMAN CAPTIVE, AND A WOMAN SLAVE, WHO HAVE BEEN REDEEMED, CONVERTED OR FREED [WHEN THEY WERE] LESS THAN THREE YEARS AND ONE DAY OLD-THEIR KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ]. Now if you indeed mean to say [that] when they have become of age they can protest [against their conversion],²⁵ would we give her the kethubah that she may go and eat [it] in her heathen state? — When she has become of age.²⁶ [But] when she has become of age, too, she can protest and go out!²⁷ — As soon as she was of age one hour, and did not protest, she cannot protest any more.²⁸

Raba raised an objection: These maidens receive the fine:²⁹ if a man has intercourse with³⁰ a bastard,³¹ a Nethinah,³² a Cuthean,³³ a proselyte, a captive, or a slave, who have been redeemed, converted, or freed [when they were] less than three years and one day old—they have to be paid the fine.³⁴ Now if you say [that] when they have become of age they can protest, would we give her³⁵ the fine that she may go and eat it in her heathen state? — When she has become of age.³⁶ When she has become of age too she can protest and go out!³⁷ — As soon as she was of age one hour and did not protest she cannot protest any more.³⁸ Abaye did not say as Raba [said]³⁹ [because] there⁴⁰ [where it speaks of fines we can say]: This is the reason:⁴¹ that the sinner should not have any benefit.⁴² Raba did not say as Abaye [said]⁴³ because in the case of the kethubah [we can say that] this is the reason:⁴⁴ that it⁴⁵ should not be a light matter in his eyes to send her away.⁴⁶

MISHNAH. WHEN A GROWN-UP MAN⁴⁷ HAS HAD SEXUAL INTERCOURSE WITH⁴⁸ A LITTLE GIRL,⁴⁹ OR WHEN A SMALL BOY⁵⁰ HAS INTERCOURSE WITH A GROWN-UP WOMAN, OR [WHEN A GIRL WAS ACCIDENTALLY] INJURED BY A PIECE OF WOOD⁵¹ — [IN ALL THESE CASES] THEIR KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ]; SO ACCORDING TO⁵² R. MEIR. BUT THE SAGES SAY: A GIRL WHO WAS INJURED ACCIDENTALLY BY A PIECE OF WOOD — HER KETHUBAH IS A MANEH. A VIRGIN, WHO WAS A WIDOW, A DIVORCEE, OR A HALUZAH FROM MARRIAGE⁵³ — HER⁵⁴ KETHUBAH IS A MANEH.⁵⁵

(1) We will make a similar etymological exposition.

(2) Or ram-like. , hbukhh̄t ‘a woman who cannot bear children,’ is connected with kht (ram).

(3) I.e., who is incapable of bearing children.

(4) If they had sexual intercourse before they were three years and one day old the hymen would grow again, and they would be virgins. V. 9a and 11b and cf. Nid. 44b and 45a.

(5) I.e., a minor who wants to become a proselyte, that is, be converted to Judaism. Prior to and for the purpose of that conversion the would-be proselyte has to undergo circumcision and immersion in water. V. Yeb. 46aff. The immersion is to signify his purification. If the would-be proselyte is a minor (under thirteen years of age) and has no father to act for him, the Court can authorise his ritual immersion.

(6) Lit., ‘they immerse him’.

(7) Lit., ‘by the knowledge’.

(8) Lit., ‘house of judgment’. Three members constitute the court.

(9) To be received into the Jewish Faith.

(10) Lit., ‘not in his presence’. — As the proselyte is a minor he is not, legally speaking, present.

(11) Lit., ‘one who worships the stars and planets.’

(12) Lit., ‘lawlessness, unbridled lust.’ — It would therefore be a disadvantage to the minor would-be proselyte to become a Jew.

(13) Cf. Git. 13a. — This confirms the former supposition.

(14) R. Huna.

(15) Lit., ‘these words.’

(16) Lit., ‘who has tasted the taste of what is forbidden’.

(17) To become a Jew.

(18) R. Huna.

(19) The women proselytes.

- (20) Because they were less than three years and one day old, consequently minors.
- (21) The immersion of the minor proselytes therefore took place by the direction of their father and not of the Court. — This Mishnah is therefore no support for R. Huna.
- (22) The minor proselytes.
- (23) And leave the Jewish faith and go back to their former state without being liable to a penalty by the Jewish Court.
- (24) Lit., 'he raised against this a point of contradiction from a higher authority.'
- (25) V. note 2.
- (26) Only then one gives her the kethubah.
- (27) Of Judaism; why then give her the kethubah?
- (28) The kethubah would be given to her after 'one hour'.
- (29) Lit., 'These maidens to whom there is a fine'. — The fine is that for seducing a girl; v. Deut. XXII, 29.
- (30) Lit., 'He who came on.'
- (31) V. Yeb. 49a.
- (32) A descendant of the Gibeonites. V. Joshua IX, 22, 23, 27 and cf. Yeb. 78b.
- (33) A Samaritan.
- (34) V. infra 29a.
- (35) The proselyte.
- (36) And adhered to Jewish practice, only then she is paid the fine, v. Tosaf.
- (37) Of Judaism.
- (38) The fine would be given to her after 'one hour'.
- (39) Did not ask the question of Raba.
- (40) In the Mishnah, infra 29a.
- (41) Why the fine should he paid to the seduced proselyte girl.
- (42) Therefore he should pay the fine in any case. But the case of the kethubah (in our Mishnah) is different. Therefore, Abaye asked from our Mishnah.
- (43) He did not ask the same question as Abaye.
- (44) Why the kethubah is paid to the woman proselyte.
- (45) Lit., 'she'.
- (46) Lit., 'to bring her out (of his house)', that is, to divorce her. Therefore he should pay the kethubah in any case. But the case of the fine is different. Therefore Raba asks from the Mishnah infra 29a.
- (47) A man who was of age.
- (48) Lit., 'who came on'.
- (49) Less than three years old.
- (50) Less than nine years of age.
- (51) Lit., 'One who was injured by wood', as a result of which she injured the hymen.
- (52) Lit., 'the words of'.
- (53) A maiden was married, and immediately after the marriage. became a widow or divorced, or a haluzah; v. supra 10b.
- (54) Lit., 'their', that is, the kethubah of each of them.
- (55) Since the marriage had taken place she is regarded as a married woman and it is assumed that she is no more a virgin.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 11b

AND THERE IS WITH REGARD TO THEM NO CHARGE OF NONVIRGINITY. A WOMAN PROSELYTE, A WOMAN CAPTIVE AND A WOMAN SLAVE, WHO HAVE BEEN REDEEMED, CONVERTED, OR FREED [WHEN THEY WERE] MORE THAN THREE YEARS AND ONE DAY OLD — THEIR KETHUBAH IS A MANEH, AND THERE IS WITH REGARD TO THEM NO CHARGE OF NON-VIRGINITY.

GEMARA. Rab Judah said that Rab said: A small boy who has intercourse with a grown-up woman makes her [as though she were] injured by a piece of wood.¹ When I said it before Samuel he said: 'Injured by a piece of wood' does not apply to² flesh. Some teach this teaching by itself:³ [As to] a small boy who has intercourse with a grown-up woman. Rab said, he makes her [as though she were] injured by a piece of wood; whereas Samuel said: 'Injured by a piece of wood' does not apply to flesh. R. Oshaia objected: WHEN A GROWN-UP MAN HAS HAD INTERCOURSE WITH A LITTLE GIRL, OR WHEN A SMALL BOY HAS INTERCOURSE WITH A GROWN-UP WOMAN, OR WHEN A GIRL WAS ACCIDENTALLY INJURED BY A PIECE OF WOOD-[IN ALL THESE CASES] THEIR KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ]; SO ACCORDING TO R. MEIR. BUT THE SAGES SAY: A GIRL WHO WAS INJURED ACCIDENTALLY BY A PIECE OF WOOD — HER KETHUBAH IS A MANEH!⁴ Raba said. It means⁵ this: When a grown-up man has intercourse with a little girl it is nothing, for when the girl is less than this,⁶ it is as if one puts the finger into the eye;⁷ but when a small boy has intercourse with a grown-up woman he makes her as 'a girl who is injured by a piece of wood.' and [with regard to the case of] 'a girl injured by a piece of wood.' itself, there is the difference of opinion between R. Meir and the Sages.

Rami b. Hama said: The difference of opinion⁸ is [only] when he⁹ knew her,¹⁰ for R. Meir compares her¹¹ to a mature girl,¹² and the Sages compare her to a woman who had intercourse with a man.¹³ But if he did not know her,¹⁴ all agree¹⁵ that she has nothing.¹⁶ And why does R. Meir compare her to a mature girl? Let him compare her to a woman who had intercourse with a man! — [In the case of] a woman who had intercourse with a man, a deed had been done to her by a man;¹⁷ but in her case¹⁸ — no deed has been done to her by a man. — And why do the Rabbis compare¹⁹ her to a woman who had intercourse with a man? Let them compare her to a mature girl! [In the case of] a mature girl no deed whatsoever has been done to her,²⁰ but in her case — a deed has been done to her.²¹

'But if he did not know her, all agree that she gets nothing'.²² R. Nahman objected: If she says, 'I was injured by a piece of wood,' and he says, 'No, but thou hadst intercourse with a man', Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say [that] she is believed!²³ But, said Raba, whether he knew' her²⁴ and whether he did not know her,²⁵ according to R. Meir [her kethubah is] two hundred [zuz];²⁶ [whereas] according to the Rabbis, if he knew her [her kethubah is] a maneh, [if] he did not know her, she gets nothing.²⁷

Raba however changed his opinion,²⁸ for it has been taught: How [does] the bringing out of an evil name²⁹ [take place]? He³⁰ comes to court and says, 'I, So-and-so,³¹ have not found in thy daughter the tokens of virginity.' If there are witnesses that she has been unchaste under him,³² she gets a³³ kethubah of a maneh.³⁴ [But surely] if there are witnesses that she has been unchaste under him, she is to be stoned!³⁵ — It means this: If there are witnesses that she has been unchaste under him, she has to be stoned; if she was unchaste before [the betrothal], she gets a kethubah of a maneh. Now R. Hiyya b. Abin said [that] R. Shesheth said: This teaches:³⁶ If he married her in the presumption that she is a virgin and she was found to have had intercourse with a man,³⁷ she gets a kethubah of a maneh. Whereupon R. Nahman objected: 'If one marries a woman and does not find in her virginity, [and] she says, "After thou hadst betrothed me [to thyself] I was forced³⁸ and [thus] thy³⁹ field has been inundated," and he says, "No, but before I betrothed thee [unto me] [thou hadst intercourse with a man], my bargain is [thus] a mistaken one.' [etc.]'⁴⁰ and [this assuredly means] she is to get nothing!⁴¹ And R. Hiyya b. Abin said to them: Is it possible! R. Amram and all the great ones of the age sat⁴² when R. Shesheth said that teaching and they found it difficult⁴³ and he⁴⁴ answered: In which respect is it indeed a mistaken bargain? In respect of two hundred [zuz:], but a maneh she gets [as a kethubah]. And you⁴⁵ say [that it means] she gets nothing! Whereupon Raba said: He who asked [this question]⁴⁶ has asked well, for a mistaken bargain' means entirely.⁴⁷ But [then] that [other teaching] presents a difficulty.⁴⁸ Put [it] right⁴⁹ and say thus: If there are witnesses that she was unchaste under him⁵⁰ she has to be stoned, if she was unchaste before [the betrothal], she gets nothing, if she was found to be injured by a piece of wood, she has a kethubah of a maneh. But Surely it was Raba who said [above that], according to the Rabbis, if he did not know her, she gets nothing!⁵¹ Hence you must conclude⁵² from this⁵³ that Raba retracted from that [opinion].⁵⁴ Our Rabbis taught: If the first [husband] took her [the bride] to his home for the purpose of marriage. and she has witnesses that she was not alone [with him,]⁵⁵ or even if she was alone [with him]. but she did not stay [with him] as much time as is needed for intercourse, the second [husband]⁵⁶ cannot raise any complaint with regard to her virginity. for the first [husband] had taken her to his home [for the purpose of marriage].⁵⁷

(1) Although the intercourse of a small boy is not regarded as a sexual act, nevertheless the woman is injured by it as by a piece of wood.

(2) Lit., 'is not in'.

(3) I.e., the difference of opinion between Rab and Samuel with regard to that question was recorded without any reference to R. Judah.

(4) The Sages differ only with regard to a girl injured by a piece of wood, but not with regard to a small boy who has intercourse with a grown-up woman. This shows that the latter case cannot be compared with the former case. The Mishnah would consequently be against Rab and for Samuel.

(5) Lit., 'says'.

(6) Lit 'here', that is, less than three years old.

(7) I.e., tears come to the eye again and again, so does virginity come back to the little girl under three years. Cf. Nid. 45a.

(8) Between R. Meir and the Sages.

(9) The husband.

(10) I.e., he knew, when he married her, that the bride was thus injured.

(11) The one who was thus injured.

(12) A bogereth (v. Glos.), a girl of full maturity, may sometimes not have signs of virginity, (v. Yeb. 59a), and her kethubah is nevertheless two hundred zuz.

(13) And had no virginity. Therefore her kethubah is only a maneh, as that of a widow.

(14) Did not know of the injury and thus thought that she was in her full virginity.

(15) Lit., 'the words of all.'

- (16) Lit., 'it is nothing'. — As he was kept in ignorance of what happened to her, she does not get even a maneh (Rashi).
- (17) Lit., 'by the hands of man'.
- (18) Lit., 'this'.
- (19) Lit., 'instead of comparing'.
- (20) Her signs of virginity vanished through her maturity.
- (21) Through the piece of wood.
- (22) This is the concluding part of the statement.
- (23) V. infra 23a. This shews that she gets the kethubah even if he did not know that she had been thus injured.
- (24) I.e., knew, when he married her, that she had been injured.
- (25) Did not know that she was thus injured.
- (26) [And the author of the Mishnah which states that she is believed, will be R. Meir, and she receives two hundred zuz].
- (27) V. n. 4. [And our Mishnah which states that she gets only a maneh will represent the view of the Sages in the case where he knew her].
- (28) Lit., 'and Raba went back on himself.'
- (29) Cf. Deut. XXII, 13,14.
- (30) The husband.
- (31) Lit., 'such and such a person', — the, husband is addressing the father of his young wife.
- (32) I.e., that she had intercourse with a man after their betrothal.
- (33) Lit., 'there is unto her'.
- (34) V. infra 46a.
- (35) Lit., 'a daughter of stoning' — (Cf. Deut. XXII, 20, 21). [How then can she have a claim to a kethubah?]
- (36) Lit., 'this says'.
- (37) Before the betrothal.
- (38) By a man to have intercourse with him.
- (39) Lit., 'his field'.
- (40) V. Mishnah, infra 12b.
- (41) [I.e., the words 'my bargain is a mistaken one' imply that the husband in making this charge denies her the right to receive anything at all. This refutes R. Shesheth's view that she is entitled in such a case to one maneh.]
- (42) I.e., were present.
- (43) Lit., 'and it was difficult unto them'. I.e., they felt the difficulty presented by the cited Mishnah.
- (44) R. Shesheth.
- (45) R. Nahman.
- (46) I.e., R. Nahman, by asking the question from the cited Mishnah.
- (47) I.e., entirely a mistaken bargain and she gets nothing. The question of R. Nahman was therefore a good question.
- (48) Lit., 'That is difficult'. The Baraitha of Kethuboth 46a, which says that if she was unchaste before the betrothal she gets a kethubah of a maneh.
- (49) I.e., answer.
- (50) I.e., that she had intercourse with a man after their betrothal.
- (51) And this is in contradiction with what Raba said just now, namely. that if the young wife was found to be injured by a piece of wood, she has a Kethubah of a maneh.
- (52) Lit., 'hear from this'.
- (53) From Raba's statement that one injured thus gets a kethubah of a maneh.

(54) Expressed by Raba previously that, according to the Rabbis, if the husband did not know before the betrothal that the bride was injured, she gets no kethubah at all.

(55) Lit., 'that she was not hidden.'

(56) The woman married again after the death of, or divorce by, the first husband.

(57) As she was married before, the second husband must reckon with the possibility of her having had intercourse with the first husband, in spite of the evidence which she can bring to shew that the marriage was not consummated.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 12a

Rabbah said: This teaches that if he married her in the presumption that she was a virgin and she was found to have had intercourse she gets a kethubah of a maneh.¹ R. Ashi said: [No.] generally. I can tell you. she receives indeed nothing; but it is different here, because the first one had married her.² But let us apprehend that perhaps she was unchaste under him!³ — Said R. Sherabia: [We] suppose he betrothed her to himself and had immediately intercourse with her.⁴

Some⁵ there are who refer this⁶ to our Mishnah: A VIRGIN, WHO IS A WIDOW, A DIVORCEE OR A HALUZAH FROM MARRIAGE, — HER KETHUBAH⁷ IS A MANEH AND THERE IS NO CLAIM OF VIRGINITY WITH REGARD TO THEM. A VIRGIN FROM MARRIAGE' — how is it possible? — When she was brought into the bridal chamber and no intercourse took place. Rabbah said: This teaches that if he married her in the presumption that she was a virgin and she was found to have had intercourse she gets a kethubah of a maneh.⁸ R. Ashi said: [No.] indeed, I can tell you. generally she gets nothing; but it is different here, because she was brought into the bridal chamber.⁹ But let us apprehend that perhaps she was unchaste under him!¹⁰ — Said R. Sherabia: When he betrothed her to himself and had immediately intercourse with her.¹¹ He who refers this¹² to the Baraitha,¹³ how much more [would this apply] to our Mishnah.¹⁴ But he who refers this to our Mishnah would not apply it to the Baraitha, because he could say unto her, 'I have relied upon the witnesses.'¹⁵

MISHNAH. HE WHO EATS WITH HIS FATHER-IN-LAW IN JUDAEA WITHOUT THE PRESENCE OF WITNESSES CANNOT RAISE A COMPLAINT REGARDING THE VIRGINITY. BECAUSE HE HAS BEEN ALONE WITH HER.¹⁶

GEMARA. Since it says¹⁷ in the Mishnah HE WHO EATS,¹⁸ It follows that there are places also in Judaea where one does not eat.¹⁹ Abaye said: Conclude from this that in Judaea, too, the places differ in their custom, as it was taught: R. Judah said: In Judaea they used formerly to leave the bridegroom and the bride alone one hour before their entry into the bridal chamber, so that he may become intimate with her,²⁰ but in Galilee they did not do so. In Judaea they used formerly to put up two best men,²¹ one for him and one for her, in order to examine the bridegroom and the bride when they enter the bridal chamber,²² and in Galilee they did not do so. In Judaea, formerly, the best men used to sleep in the house in which the bridegroom and the bride slept, and in Galilee they did not do so. And he who did not act according to this custom could not raise the charge of non-virginity.²³ To which [does this²⁴ refer]? Shall I say [that it refers] to the first clause?²⁵ [If so,] It ought to read, 'He who acted²⁶ [according to this custom]!' Again²⁷ [if you will say that it refers] to the last clause,²⁸ it ought to read, 'He who was not examined!'²⁹ — Abaye said: Indeed

[it refers] to the first clause, so read.³⁰ 'He who acted [according to this custom].' Said Raba to him: But it reads,³¹ He who did not act!' But, said Raba, it means thus: He who did not act according to the custom of Galilee in Galilee but [acted] according to the custom of Judaea in Galilee cannot raise the claim of virginity. R. Ashi said: Indeed [it refers] to the last clause,³² and we should read,³³ 'He who was not examined.'³⁴

MISHNAH. IT IS ALL ONE WHETHER [THE WOMAN IS] AN ISRAELITISH WIDOW OR A PRIESTLY WIDOW³⁵ — HER KETHUBAH IS A MANEH. THE COURT OF THE PRIESTS³⁶ COLLECTED FOR A MAIDEN³⁷ FOUR HUNDRED ZUZ, AND THE SAGES DID NOT PROHIBIT [IT] TO THEM.³⁸

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: And the priestly widow-her ketubah is two hundred [zuz]. But we have taught in our Mishnah: AN ISRAELITISH WIDOW AS WELL AS A PRIESTLY WIDOW — HER KETHUBAH IS A MANEH! — Said R. Ashi: There were two ordinances. At first they³⁹ ordained for a maiden four hundred zuz and for a widow a maneh.

(1) [For evidently he relied on the evidence that the first marriage was not consummated, and thus married her on the presumption that she was a virgin, and still it is said that he cannot bring a charge against her to make her forfeit the kethubah of a maneh to which she is entitled as a widow.]

(2) And there may have been intercourse and this militates against the presumption that she was a virgin on the second marriage.

(3) After the betrothal to the second husband. [Why then should he not be able to bring a charge against her so as to give witnesses an opportunity to testify as to the true facts?]

(4) So that unchastity was impossible.

(5) Lit., 'and some'.

(6) I.e., the observations of Rabbah, R. Ashi and R. Sherabia.

(7) I.e., the kethubah of each of them.

(8) V. supra p. 60, n. 11.

(9) [So that it is to be assumed that the marriage was consummated, v. supra p. 60, n. 12.]

(10) After the betrothal to the second husband.

(11) So that unchastity was impossible.

(12) I.e., the observations of Rabbah, R. Ashi and R. Sherabia.

(13) Fol. II 1b, bottom. In the case of the Baraitha there were witnesses that there was no intercourse.

(14) In the Mishnah there were no witnesses that no intercourse took place.

(15) And in view of the testimony of the witnesses the presumption that she was a virgin is a strong one, so that R. Ashi's reply to Rabbah would not hold good. True, 'the first one married her,' but there are witnesses who say that no intercourse took place. Rabbah's deduction from the Baraitha would therefore be justified.

(16) And he may have had intimate intercourse with his bride.

(17) Lit 'reaches'.

(18) In the house of the father-in-law.

(19) V. note 3.

(20) Lit 'that his heart may become bold,' towards her, that is that he may become used to her. V. Krauss, T.A II, p. 461. n. 341.

(21) Heb. Shoshebin, groomsman, v. B.B. (Sonc ed.) p. 615, n. 10.

(22) So that they should not deceive one another regarding the tokens of virginity (Rashi). [That would be in such localities in Judaea where the young affianced people were not allowed to be alone before the entry into the bridal chamber. This shews that customs differed in Judaea itself.]

(23) Cf. Tosef. Keth. I.

(24) The last sentence from 'and' till 'virginity'.

(25) In which it said that in Judaea they used to leave the bridegroom and the bride alone.

(26) If he did not act according to this custom he ought to be able to raise the charge of non-virginity'.

(27) Lit., 'but'.

(28) With regard to the examination by the best men.

(29) I.e. he over whom there was no supervision by the best man, v. Rashi

(30) Lit., 'and teach'

(31) Lit., 'teaches'.

(32) With regard to the examination by the best men.

(33) Lit., 'and teach'.

(34) I.e., over, whom there was no supervision by the best man.

(35) An Israelitish widow is the widow of an ordinary Israelite who was also the daughter of an ordinary Israelite. A priestly widow is a widow who was the daughter of a priest; v. Rashi.

(36) [(a) A court of twenty-three judges holding sessions in priestly communities (Shittah Mekubbezeth. a.l.); (b) A Sanhedrin dominated by Sadducean or High-priestly elements. (V. Geiger Urschrift, pp. 114ff: and Buchler, Swartz Festshrift).]

(37) For the virgin-maiden that was the daughter of a priest; v. Rashi.

(38) Lit., 'did not strike at their hand', 'protest [(a) Although the same was recorded as part of the Kethubah proper and not as the extra addition. v. infra 54b, the payment thereof would be enforced; (b) or, although not recorded at all, the woman could collect it by virtue of the prevalent custom, v. Tosaf.]

(39) The Court of the priests.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 12b

When they saw that they¹ treated them² lightly.³ they ordained for them⁴ two hundred [zuz]. When they saw [again] that they⁵ kept away from them,⁶ for they⁷ said, 'Instead of marrying a priestly widow, we shall rather marry⁸ the virgin-daughter of an Israelite,'⁹ they restored their [former] ordinance.¹⁰

THE COURT OF OUR PRIESTS, etc. R. Judah said [that] Samuel said: They¹¹ did not say it only [regarding] the court of the priests.¹² but even the noble families¹³ in Israel, if they want to do as¹⁴ the priests do,¹⁵ may do [so]. An objection was raised: If one wants to do as¹⁴ the priests do,¹⁵ for instance [if] the daughter of an Israelite [gets] married to a priest. or the daughter of a priest [gets married] to an Israelite, one may do [so]. [We would infer from this that only if] the daughter of an Israelite [gets married] to a priest, or the daughter of a priest [gets married] to an Israelite, [it is allowed to do as the priests do], because there is [then] one side of priesthood.¹⁶ but if the daughter of an Israelite [gets married] to an Israelite, it is not [allowed to do as the priests do]!¹⁷ — The Mishnah states here a case of 'not only'; not only [is it allowed¹⁸ in the case of] the daughter of an Israelite [getting married] to an Israelite, who cannot say to her 'I raise thee' [to a higher position];¹⁹ but [in the case of] the daughter of an Israelite [getting married] to a priest. who can say to her, 'I raise thee [to a higher position].'²⁰ I might think that it is not allowed;²¹ [hence] he lets us hear [that this is not so].²²

MISHNAH. IF A MAN²³ MARRIES A WOMAN AND DOES NOT FIND²⁴ IN HER VIRGINITY [AND] SHE SAYS, AFTER THOU HADST BETROTHED ME [UNTO THEE]²⁴ WAS FORCED AND [so] THY FIELD HAS BEEN INUNDATED²⁵ AND HE SAYS, 'NO, BUT [IT OCCURRED] BEFORE I BETROTHED THEE [TO ME] AND MY BARGAIN WAS A MISTAKEN BARGAIN' — RABBAN GAMALIEL AND R. ELIEZER SAY [THAT] SHE IS BELIEVED. [BUT] R. JOSHUA SAYS: WE DO NOT LIVE FROM HER MOUTH²⁶, BUT SHE IS IN THE PRESUMPTION OF HAVING HAD INTERCOURSE²⁷ BEFORE SHE WAS BETROTHED AND HAVING DECEIVED HIM, UNTIL SHE BRINGS PROOF FOR HER STATEMENT.²⁸

GEMARA. It was stated: [If one person says to another person]. 'I have a maneh in your hand,'²⁹ and the latter³⁰ says. 'I do not know'³¹ — Rab Judah and R. Huna Say: [He is] bound [to pay].³² and R. Nahman and R. Johanan Say: [he is] free [from the obligation to pay].³³ R. Huna and R. Judah say: [he is] bound [to pay]. [because they hold that] in the case of 'sure', and 'perhaps'. 'sure' has it.³⁴ R. Nahman and R. Johanan say: [he is] free [from the obligation to pay] [because they hold the view]: leave³⁵ the money in the possession of its present owner.³⁶ Abaye said to R. Joseph: The opinion³⁷ of R. Huna and Rab Judah corresponds with the view of Samuel,³⁸ for we have learned: [If] she³⁹ was pregnant, and they said to her, 'What is the nature of this embryo?'⁴⁰ [and she answered]. 'It is from the man So-and-So, and he is a priest.' Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say [that] she is believed. And Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said [that] the halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel. And R. Samuel b. Judah said to Rab Judah: Sharpwitted one!⁴¹ You said to us in the name of Samuel [that] the halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel also in the first⁴² [Mishnah]. [Now what means]: 'also in the first [Mishnah]'? [Assuredly it must mean]. although one could say⁴³ 'leave the money in the possession of its [present] owner.' [still] Rabban Gamaliel said: 'sure' has it.⁴⁴ Is it [then] to say that R. Judah and R. Huna follow the opinion of Rabban Gamaliel, and R. Nahman and R. Johanan follow the opinion of R. Joshua? — R. Nahman can answer you.⁴⁵ I even follow the opinion of⁴⁶ Rabban Gamaliel; only Rabban Gamaliel says it there⁴⁷ because there is miggo.⁴⁸ but what miggo is there here?⁴⁹ Or [again]: Rabban Gamaliel says it only there, because we Say: leave her in her presumptive state,⁵⁰ but here what presumptive state has he got?⁵¹ It is also evident that [it is right] as we have answered, that R. Nahman follows the opinion of⁵² Rabban Gamaliel,

- (43) Lit., 'there is to say'.
- (44) [Since he accepts the woman's plea which is 'sure' in preference to the husband's which is 'doubtful'. Which shews that R. Huna and Rab Judah in their ruling follow the view of Samuel that the halachah follows Rabban Gamaliel.]

- (46) Lit., 'I who say ever.

- (48) Miggo, means since,' 'because,' and 'in consequence of,' and is used here as a legal term, denoting 'a legal rule according to which a deponent's statement is accepted as true on the ground that, if he had intended to tell a lie, he might have invented one more advantageous to his case,' v. Jast. s. v'. The Miggo here is this: Instead of saying that she was forced to have intercourse, she could have said that she was injured by a piece of wood. [This would be a more advantageous plea since it does not disqualify her from marrying a priest as does the plea that she had been forced. And similarly in the case of the next Mishnah she might have maintained that her accident happened after she had become betrothed to him, and thus is entitled to a kethubah of two hundred zuz instead of pleading that it occurred before, reducing thereby her claim to a maneh. V. Rashi.]

(49) In the case of the money claim, what miggo is there which we could apply to the claimant? Therefore, we say, 'leave the money in the possession of its (present) owner.'

(50) The presumption is that the maiden is a virgin. This presumption holds good until she had been found not to be a virgin, and this has been found only after her betrothal. Therefore she was, at the time of her betrothal, in the presumptive state of a virgin.

(51) There is no presumption in favour of the claimant. The presumption is in favour of the person from whom the money is claimed, since he holds the money.

(52) Lit., 'says'.

for if it were [not] so, there would be a difficulty between one law and another law, for it is established for us [that] in civil matters the law is according to R. Nahman, whereas in this [case]¹ R. Judah [said] that Samuel said [that] the halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel,² Is it not then to be concluded from this [that it is] as we have answered?³ Conclude [so] from this.

MISHNAH. [IF] SHE⁴ SAYS, 'I WAS INJURED BY A PIECE OF WOOD', AND HE SAYS, 'NO, THOU HAST HAD INTERCOURSE WITH A MAN'⁵ — RABBAN GAMALIEL AND R. ELIEZER SAY: SHE IS BELIEVED, AND R. JOSHUA SAYS: WE DO NOT LIVE FROM HER MONTH,⁶ BUT SHE IS IN THE PRESUMPTION OF HAVING HAD INTERCOURSE WITH A MAN,⁷ UNTIL SHE BRINGS PROOF FOR HER STATEMENT.⁸

GEMARA. With regard to what are their claims?⁹ — R. Johanan Says: With regard to two hundred¹⁰ [zuz] and a maneh.¹¹ R. Eleazar says: with regard to a maneh and nothing.¹² R. Johanan says: With regard to two hundred [zuz] and a maneh, [because] he¹³ shares the opinion of R. Meir who says [that] whether he knew of her or did not know of her¹⁴ [she gets as her kethubah] two hundred [zuz]. And R. Eleazar says: With regard to a maneh or nothing, [because] he shares the view of the Rabbis who say [that] whether he knew of her or did not know of her,¹⁴ [she gets as her kethubah] a maneh. It is quite right that R. Eleazar does not say as R. Johanan [says]. because he establishes it¹⁵ according to the Rabbis.¹⁶ But why does not R. Johanan say as R. Eleazar [says]? — He holds [that when] he¹⁷ married her in the presumption of [her being] a virgin and she is found to have had intercourse, she has a kethubah of a maneh.¹⁸ [According to this view] here¹⁹ he would say. 'a maneh,'²⁰ and she would say. 'a maneh,'²¹ [and] what difference would there be between his claim and her claim?²² [Now] it is quite right according to R. Eleazar²³ that we have stated²⁴ two cases,²⁵ one²⁶ it to exclude the opinion of Rami b. Hama,²⁷ and one²⁸ to exclude the opinion of R. Hiyya b. Abin in the name of R. Shesheth.²⁹ But according to

R. Johanan why are two cases necessary:³⁰ — One to show you the strength³¹ of Rabban Gamaliel, and one to show you the strength of R. Joshua. The first case to show you the strength of R. Joshua, that, although one could say [there] miggo,³² she is not believed. The second case to show you the strength of Rabban Gamaliel, that, although one cannot say [there]³³ Miggo, she is believed.

MISHNAH. [IF] THEY³⁴ SAW HER³⁵ TALKING WITH SOMEONE,³⁶ AND THEY SAID TO HER, ‘WHAT SORT OF A MAN IS HE?’³⁷ [AND SHE ANSWERED, ‘HE IS] THE MAN SO-AND-SO AND HE IS A PRIEST — RABBAN GAMALIEL AND R. ELIEZER SAY: SHE IS BELIEVED,³⁸ AND R. JOSHUA SAYS: WE DO NOT LIVE FROM HER MOUTH,³⁹ BUT SHE IS IN THE PRESUMPTION OF HAVING HAD INTERCOURSE WITH A NATHIN⁴⁰ OR A MAMZER,⁴¹ -⁴² UNTIL SHE BRINGS PROOF FOR HER STATEMENT. [IF] SHE⁴³ WAS PREGNANT AND THEY⁴⁴ SAID UNTO HER, ‘WHAT IS THE NATURE OF THIS FOETUS.’⁴⁵ [AND SHE ANSWERED, ‘IT IS] FROM THE MAN SO-AND-SO AND HE IS A PRIEST — RABBAN GAMALIEL AND R. ELIEZER SAY: SHE IS BELIEVED,⁴⁶ AND R. JOSHUA SAYS: WE DO NOT LIVE FROM HER MOUTH,⁴⁷ BUT SHE IS IN THE PRESUMPTION OF BEING PREGNANT FROM A NATHIN OR A MAMZER,⁴⁸ UNTIL SHE BRINGS EVIDENCE FOR HER STATEMENT.

GEMARA. What is the meaning of ‘TALKING’? Ze’iri said: She was hidden.⁴⁹ R. Assi said: She had intercourse.⁵⁰ It is quite right according to Ze’iri that it Says⁵¹ ‘TALKING’,⁵² But according to R. Assi why [does it say] ‘TALKING?’ — [It is] a more appropriate⁵³ expression, as it is written:⁵⁴ ‘She eateth,⁵⁵ and wipeth her mouth,⁵⁶ and saith, ‘I have done no wickedness.’⁵⁷ It is quite right according to Ze’iri that he teaches [in the Mishnah] two [cases]: ‘TALKING’ and ‘PREGNANT’,⁵⁸ But according to R. Assi, why [does the Mishnah teach] two [cases]? — One case⁵⁹ to declare her fit⁶⁰ and one case⁶¹ to declare her daughter⁶² fit.⁶³ That is quite right according to him who says [that] he who declares her fit declares [also] her daughter fit.⁶⁴ But according to him who says [that] he who declares her fit declares her daughter unfit,⁶⁵ what is there to say? — R. Assi holds the view of him⁶⁶ who says [that] he who declares her fit declares [also] her daughter fit.

R. Pappa said to Abaye: According to Ze’iri who said: What Is TALKING?’ She was hidden, and R. Joshua said [that] she is not believed — did not Rab say: We punish with lashes for the privacy⁶⁷ but we do not prohibit⁶⁸ on account of the privacy? Is it to say that it is not according to R. Joshua?⁶⁹ — You may even say [that it is according to] R. Joshua. [for] they set a higher standard in matters of priestly descent.⁷⁰

An objection was raised: [If] they⁷¹ saw her go in⁷² with someone⁷³ Into a secret [place]

(1) I.e., the case of our Mishnah.

(2) That she is believed, and consequently she gets a kethubah of two hundred zuz.

(3) That even R. Nahman will follow the opinion of Rabban Gamaliel in the case of our Mishnah, that she is believed and gets a kethubah of two hundred in.

(4) The woman whose husband complains about the absence of virginity.

(5) Lit., ‘thou art one (that has been) trodden by a man’.

(6) I.e., We do not go by her statement.

(7) Since she has no virginity.

(8) Lit., ‘for her words’.

- (9) I.e., what is the claim of the husband and what is the claim of the wife?
- (10) She says that she was injured and claims a kethubah of two hundred zuz, on the view of R. Meir, supra 11a.
- (11) He says that she had intercourse with another man, in which case she gets only a maneh; v. the statement of R. Hiyya b. Abin, supra 11b and Rabbah's statement, supra 12a.
- (12) She claims a maneh as one who was thus injured and according to the Sages, (v. supra 11a) gets a maneh. He says that she had intercourse with a man and therefore gets no kethubah at all, on the view advanced by R. Ashi, supra 12a.
- (13) [I.e., The Tanna of this Mishnah shares, in the view of R. Johanan, the opinion of R. Meir, It cannot refer to R. Johanan as he would not be likely to accept the ruling of R. Meir in preference to that of the majority of the Sages (Rashi).]

- (21) If R. Johanan would say as R. Eleazar says that she could only claim a maneh owing to her accident.
- (22) Hence R. Johanan has had to explain the Mishnah as representing the view of R. Meir.
- (23) Who says that if she had intercourse with a man, she gets no Kethubah at all.

- (25) The case of our Mishnah and that of the previous Mishnah.
- (26) The case of our Mishnah.
- (27) Who says (supra 11b) that if the husband did not know' that she had an accident she gets no kethubah at all.
- (28) The case of the previous Mishnah, where the husband says 'my bargain is a mistaken one, taken to mean that the woman is entitled to no kethubah at all,
- (29) Who says that, even if she had intercourse with another man, she gets a Kethubah of a maneh, v. supra 11b.
- (30) [Only the case of the second Mishnah should have been stated as illustrating the difference of opinion between R. Gamaliel and R. Joshua in regard to the pleas of 'sure' and 'perhaps', and thus incidentally excluding the opinion of Rama b. Hama, whereas the case of the first Mishnah could' be inferred from the second one.]
- (31) I.e., how strong his view is.
- (32) V. supra, p. 67. n. 8.

- (68) The married woman to her husband. In spite of the fact that the woman was alone with another man we do not assume that misconduct took place.
- (69) According to R. Joshua we would not believe her and we would say that misconduct took place. Consequently, she ought to be forbidden to her husband.
- (70) In order to ensure the purity of the priestly families, he made the law stringent in our Mishnah. But ordinarily R. Joshua would not forbid a wife to her husband on account of her having been alone with another man.

or into a ruin,¹ and they said to her, 'What sort of a man is he?' [and she answered]. 'he is a priest and he is the son of the brother of my father' — Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed. R. Joshua says: We do not live from her mouth, but she is in the presumption of having had Intercourse with a Nathin or a Mamzer, until she brings proof for her statement . Now it is quite right according to Ze'iri,² that he teaches³ two [cases]: into a secret [place] or into a ruin.⁴ But according to R. Assi who said: She had intercourse,⁵ why does it teach⁶ two cases?⁷ — It teaches [only] one [case]: into the secret [place] of the ruin.⁸ But it teaches: into a secret [place] or into a ruin! — [But say] one [expression stands] for a ruin of a town and one [expression stands] for a ruin of a field. And they are [both]⁹ necessary. for if it¹⁰ had told us [only] concerning a ruin of a town [one might have said that] in this [case] Rabban Gamaliel declares her fit because most¹¹ [of the men] of the town are fit with regard to her,¹² but in [the case of] a ruin of a field, when most [of the men]¹³ are unfit with regard to her.¹⁴ I might say that he agrees with R. Joshua.¹⁵ And if it¹⁶ had told us [only] this [case]¹⁷ [I might have said that only] in this case¹⁸ did R. Joshua say [that she is not believed], but in that [case]¹⁹ I might say [that] he agrees with Rabban Gamaliel;²⁰ [therefore] it was necessary [to state both cases].

An objection was raised:²¹ This²² is a testimony with regard to which the woman is fit.²³ But R. Joshua Says: She is not believed. Said R. Joshua to them:²⁴ Do you not agree that in the case of a woman²⁵ who was captured, and there are witnesses that she was captured, and she says. 'I am pure.'²⁶ she is not believed? They said to him, 'Yes: but what a difference there is between this case and that case.'²⁷ In this case²⁸ there are witnesses,²⁹ and in that case³⁰ there are no witnesses.³¹ He said to them: In that case too³² there are also witnesses, for her stomach reaches up to her teeth.³³ They said to him, 'Most of the idolators are unrestrained in sexual matters.' He said to them: 'There is no guardian against unchastity.'³⁴ This applies³⁵ only in the case of the testimony of the woman with regard to herself.³⁶ but in the case of the testimony of the woman with regard to her daughter. all agree that the child is a shethuki.³⁷ — [Now] what did he³⁸ say unto them³⁹ and what did they answer him? This they said unto him: 'You have answered us with regard to the pregnant woman,⁴⁰ what will you answer us with regard to the woman [whom they saw] talking [to a man]?'⁴¹ — He said to them: The woman [whom they saw] talking [to a man] is the same as the captive woman.⁴² They said to him, 'The captive woman is different, for most of the idolators are unrestrained in sexual matters.'⁴³ He said to them: Here also,⁴⁴ since she hid herself,⁴⁵ there is no guardian against unchastity.⁴⁶ [Now] at all events he teaches two [cases]: The woman [whom they saw] talking [to a man] and the pregnant woman!⁴⁷ [This is] a refutation of R. Assi,⁴⁸ [This is indeed] a refutation,⁴⁹ — But let this difference weigh with him⁵⁰ There⁵¹ most of the men are unfit with regard to her, but here⁵² most of the men are fit with regard to her! — This⁵³ supports the opinion of R. Joshua b. Levi, for R. Joshua b. Levi said: He who declares her fit⁵⁴ declares her fit even when most of the men are unfit,⁵⁵ and he who declares her unfit declares her unfit even when most of the men are fit.⁵⁶

R. Johanan said: He who declares her fit declares also her daughter fit, [and] he who declares her unfit declares also her daughter unfit. And R. Eleazar said: [Even] he who declares her fit declares her daughter unfit. Rabba said: What is the reason of R. Eleazar? [This:] It is quite right [with regard to her], she has the presumption of fitness,⁵⁷ [but] her daughter has no presumption of fitness.⁵⁸ R. Eleazar objected to [the ruling of] R. Johanan: This only applies to the testimony of the woman with regard to herself, but in the case of the testimony of the woman with regard to her daughter, all agree that the child is a shethuki.⁵⁹ Does this not [mean] a shethuki and unfit? — No, a shethuki and fit. But is there a shethuki [who is] fit? — Yes, according to Samuel, for Samuel said: [If] ten priests are standing together and one of them goes away⁶⁰ and has intercourse [with a woman], the child is a shethuki. Now what [means here] a shethuki? Is it to say that he is 'silenced' from the property of his father?⁶¹ This is evident! Do we know who his father is? — It means one silences him from the rights of priesthood,⁶² for it is written: 'And it shall be unto him and to his seed after him the covenant of an everlasting priesthood.'⁶³ [that is, only] one whose seed is legitimately descending from him, excluding this one,⁶⁴ whose seed is not legitimately descending from him.⁶⁵

A bridal couple⁶⁶ once came before R. Joseph. She said, 'It⁶⁷ is from him'.⁶⁸ and he said,

- (1) A deserted building.
 - (2) According to whom 'talking secretly'. or being with a man in a secret place, gives grounds for suspicion, though it does not necessarily imply intercourse.
 - (3) In the Baraitha just quoted.
 - (4) 'Into a secret place' does not imply misconduct, but 'into a ruin' does imply misconduct.
 - (5) Talking secretly, or being with a man in a secret place. affords no grounds for suspicion unless there has been some evidence of misconduct.
 - (6) In the Baraitha just quoted.
 - (7) Since the reference here is to a case where misconduct was seen to have taken place, what matters it whether it occurred in a secret place or a ruin?
 - (8) The Baraitha is to be understood as if the reading was 'into the secret (place) of the ruin,' and thus only one case is mentioned.
 - (9) Both expressions.
 - (10) In the Baraitha just quoted.
 - (11) Lit., 'the majority'.
 - (12) Most of the inhabitants of the town are Jews, and the intercourse with a Jew does not make her unfit to marry a priest.
 - (13) All kinds of men resort from all parts to a ruin in the field (Rashi).
 - (14) She might have had intercourse with a man who makes her unfit to marry a priest.
 - (15) That she is not believed.
 - (16) The Baraitha just quoted.
 - (17) A ruin of a field.
 - (18) A ruin of a field.
 - (19) A ruin in the town.
 - (20) That she is believed.
 - (21) Cf. Tosef. Keth. I. This is a continuation of a passage in the Tosef, which is identical with the first part of the second case of our Mishnah: 'She was pregnant (and they said unto her, What is the nature of this embryo' (and she answered, It is) from the man So-and-so (and) he is a priest"' — Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed.
 - (22) For variants v. Tosef. loc. cit.
 - (23) I.e., the woman is legally fit to give that testimony and she is believed.
 - (24) R. Gamaliel and R. Eleazar, v. n, 20.
 - (25) Lit., 'a woman captive'.
 - (26) I.e., no man had intercourse with me during my captivity.
 - (27) Lit., 'between this (woman) and this (woman)'.
 - (28) Lit., 'to this woman'.
 - (29) In the case of the captive woman there are witnesses that she was captured.
 - (30) Lit., 'and to this (woman)'.
 - (31) In the case of the pregnant woman (the case of the Tosefta and our Mishnah) there are no witnesses that she had intercourse with one who makes her unfit for marrying a priest. It is clear, especially from the wording in the Tosefta, that this whole sentence, from 'yes,' until 'witness, is spoken by Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer. V. Rashi.

(32) Of the pregnant woman.

(33) A figurative expression for 'she is visibly pregnant'

(34) No one is immune from the possibility of having forbidden sexual intercourse. And the pregnant woman may have had intercourse with one forbidden to her and may thus have become unfit for a priestly marriage. The whole passage is explained soon.

(35) Lit., 'with regard to what are these words said'? When do Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer hold that she is believed?

(36) Her testimony with regard to herself is believed.

(37) A shethuki (lit., 'silenced') is defined in Kid. 69a as one who knows his mother but does not know who his father is. Therefore, the woman herself may marry a priest, but if she gave birth to a daughter, that daughter may not marry a priest. The corresponding sentence in the Tosefta is much shorter; viz 'This applies only to the testimony with regard to herself, but with regard to the child all agree that it is a shethuki'.

(38) R. Joshua.

(39) R. Samuel and R. Eliezer.

(40) Her pregnancy is evidence against her.

(41) Why should she not be believed?

(42) The one case is similar to the other case. In both cases there is a strong possibility of intercourse.

(43) It is not only a question of sexual intercourse, but it is also a question who it was with whom the woman had intercourse. In the case of the captive woman, she is made unfit for priestly marriage, because the men among whom she finds herself are mostly unfit for her. But not so in the case of the woman who was talking to a man, where most men are fit for her, v. supra.

(44) In the case of the woman who was talking to another man.

(45) She was talking to the man secretly.

(46) And she may have had intercourse with a man who makes her unfit for a priestly marriage.

(47) The 'talking woman' and the pregnant woman are, at all events, two different

(48) According to whom the case of the 'talking woman' is also a case of certain sexual intercourse.

(49) I.e., R. Assi stands refuted.

(50) Or, let it be a difference to him (R. Joshua). Lit., 'let it go out to him' — 'let it be different to him'.

(51) In the case of the captive woman.

(52) In the case of the 'talking woman,

(53) The fact that R. Joshua disregards this difference.

(54) Lit., 'according to the words of him who declares her fit'.

(55) With regard to her, as in the case of the captive woman.

(56) With regard to her, as in the case of the 'talking woman'.

(57) Legal fitness. She is of legitimate birth and she is fit to marry a priest. The doubt as to the nature of the man with whom she had intercourse does not destroy the presumption of her fitness.

(58) Because suspicion attaches to her very birth. If the man who is the father is unfit, then she is unfit and must not marry a priest. The doubt is sufficient to make her unfit, since there is no presumption of fitness to remove.

(59) V. p. 73, n. 10 and p. 74. n. 4.

(60) Lit., 'separated himself'.

(61) I.e., he does not inherit the property of his (alleged) father.

(62) He has no share in the rights and privileges of priesthood.

(63) Num, XXV, 13.

(64) The unknown father of the shethuki.

(65) [He cannot transmit the rights of priesthood to his seed, v. Yeb. 100b, but as regards marriage with one of priestly stock, this shethuki is permitted. This shews that one may be a shethuki and yet fit.]

(66) Lit., 'that betrothed (man) and his betrothed (woman)'.

(67) The child with which she was pregnant.

(68) From her fiance.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 14a

'Yes. [it is] from me.' R. Joseph said: Why should we be afraid? First,¹ he admits, and moreover, Rab Judah said [that] Samuel said: The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel.² Abaye said to him: And in this [case]. if he did not admit, would Rabban Gamaliel declare her as fit? Did not Samuel say to Rab Judah: 'Sharp-witted one! The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel, but you should not act upon it,³ unless most men are fit for her,' whereas here most men are unfit for her!⁴ — And according to your reasoning is not this [statement] in itself difficult? [First he says] 'The halachah [is. etc.]' [and then] 'do not act in practice [on it]!'⁵ Hence you must say: The one ruling applies before⁶ the other after it was done,⁷ and in this case also it is like 'after it was done.'⁸

Abaye asked⁹ Raba: Did R. Joshua Say: She is not believed? This would be in contradiction with the following: R. Joshua and R. Judah b. Bathyra testified concerning the widow¹⁰ [of one who was] of a mixed family¹¹ that she is fit to marry a priest!¹² — He said to him: Now is this so?¹³ There¹⁴ the woman marries, and [in that case] she examines¹⁵ and [then] marries; but here¹⁶ the woman misconducts herself; does she first examine and then misconduct herself?¹⁷

Raba said: Is the contradiction [only] between [one statement of] R. Joshua and [the other Statement of] R. Joshua. [but] not¹⁸ between [one Statement of] Rabban Gamaliel and [another Statement of] Rabban Gamaliel?¹⁹ Surely the concluding clause²⁰ teaches: Rabban Gamaliel said to them: We accept your testimony,²¹ but what can we do, since Rabban Johanan b. Zakkai decreed that no court be set up for this purpose.²² because the priests will obey you to remove²³ but not to bring near?²⁴ — But, said Raba; there is no contradiction between [the statement of] Rabban Gamaliel and [the other statement of] Rabban Gamaliel, [because] there²⁵ it is sure²⁶ [and] here²⁷ it is 'perhaps.'²⁸ Neither is there a contradiction between [the one statement of] R. Joshua and [the other statement of] R. Joshua, [because] there²⁹ there is one doubt³⁰ [and] here³¹ there is a double doubt.³² Therefore, according to Rabban Gamaliel the 'sure' is [so] strong³³ [a plea] that even where [there is only] one doubt³⁴ he declares [her] fit,³⁵ and the 'perhaps' is [so] weak [a plea]³⁶ that even where there is a double doubt³⁷ he declares [her] unfit.³⁸ [And] according to R. Joshua one doubt³⁹ is [so] strong that even in the case where [she pleads] 'sure' he declares [her] unfit,⁴⁰ and a double doubt⁴¹ is [so] light⁴² that even in the case where [she pleads] 'perhaps' he declares [her] fit.⁴³

Our Rabbis taught: Which is the widow⁴⁴ [of one] of a mixed family? When there is with regard to it⁴⁵ [no doubt] on account of mamzeruth,⁴⁶ nathinuth⁴⁷ and on account of slaves of the kings.⁴⁸ R. Meir said:

- (1) Lit., 'one'.
- (2) That she is believed, v. supra 12b.
- (3) Lit., 'thou shalt not do a deed'.
- (4) As she is betrothed, the only man fit for her is her fiance. To all other men she is prohibited.
- (5) This seems self-contradictory!
- (6) [If a priest comes to seek guidance in regard to such a marriage we declare it not permissible unless he was held fit for the woman.]
- (7) [If he did marry her without consulting the authorities he may retain her.]
- (8) [Since she is already betrothed we do not force the bridegroom to put her aside.]
- (9) Lit., 'raised (a contradiction) to'.
- (10) V. p. 78, n. 9.
- (11) vxhg means 'dough' and is also a designation for a mixed community or a mixed family, that is a community or a family with an admixture of illegitimate persons or persons of doubtful legitimacy, v. Kid. 69b.
- (12) [This shews that we place her on her erstwhile presumption of fitness and refuse to disqualify her for the sake of a doubt.]
- (13) I.e., what a comparison!
- (14) In the case of 'Ed.
- (15) The purity of the family.
- (16) In the case of our Mishnah.
- (17) Therefore she is not believed.
- (18) Lit., 'is there no contradiction'.
- (19) And one must endeavour to explain R. Gamaliel also.
- (20) Of the Mishnah in 'Ed.
- (21) I.e., we approve of what you say.
- (22) [Of declaring the legitimacy of such a doubtful case.]
- (23) I.e., not to allow persons of doubtful legitimacy to join their families.
- (24) They will not obey the court if permission is given for persons of doubtful legitimacy to enter their families. V. 'Ed. (Sonc. ed.) p. 48, nn. 2-7.
- (25) In the case of our Mishnah.
- (26) She says that she is sure that she had intercourse with a legitimate person.
- (27) In the Mishnah in 'Ed.
- (28) As it is a case of vxhg the woman herself cannot say that she is sure that the family is free from illegitimate admixtures.
- (29) In the case of our Mishnah.
- (30) Whether the man with whom she had intercourse was fit or unfit (regarding the priesthood).
- (31) In the Mishnah in 'Ed.
- (32) Indeed, in the case of a widow of a member of a mixed family there are many doubts of illegitimacy.
- (33) I.e., important.
- (34) Against her.
- (35) For the priesthood.
- (36) Unimportant.
- (37) V. p.77, n. 20.
- (38) For the priesthood.
- (39) In the case of our Mishnah
- (40) For the priesthood.

- (41) In the Mishnah in 'Ed.
- (42) Unimportant.
- (43) For the priesthood. In short, with Rabban Gamaliel the 'sure' outweighs one doubt, and with R. Joshua one doubt outweighs the 'sure'.
- (44) Who has been held to be fit for marrying a priest: Tosaf. omits 'widow'. And indeed in Tosef., kid. V the word is left out. The reference will be to a girl of a mixed family and not to a widow of a member of a mixed family. v. Tosaf. [On the whole subject of Vxhg v., Rosenthal F. MGWJ 1881, also pp. 38ff and Freund L. Schwartz-Festschrift p. 163ff and Graetz op. cit. 1879, pp. 99ff].
- (45) The family.
- (46) Mamzer-ship.
- (47) Nathin-ship. For nathin and mamzer v. Glos.
- (48) Cf. Neh. VII, 57, and Yeb. 17b. [According to Rashi the reference is to the Herodian dynasty.] When there is no suspicion, with regard to that family, of intermarriage with mamzerim, nathinim and royal slaves.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 14b

I have heard that when there is none of these [defects] in the family one permits [its members] to marry into the priesthood. R. Simeon b. Eleazar said in the name of R. Meir. and R. Simeon the son of Menasia also said it:¹ Which is the widow [of one] of a mixed family? When a doubtful halal² was mixed up³ in it, [for] the Israelites know the mamzerim who are among them, but they do not know the halalim who are among them.⁴

The Master said: 'Which is the widow [of one] of a mixed family? When there is with regard to it [no doubt] on account of mamzeruth, nathinuth and on account of slaves of the kings'. [This would show that if there is a doubt on account of] a halal [in the family] it is fit.⁵ Why should these⁶ be different? [Because] these are Biblical? A halal is also Biblical!⁷ And further:⁸ 'R. Meir said: I have heard that when there is none of these [defects] in the family one permits [its members] to marry into the priesthood'. This is the same [as that which] the first Tanna⁹ [taught]! And further:¹⁰ 'R. Simeon b. Eleazar said in the name of R. Meir, and R. Simeon b. Menasia also said it: Which is the widow [of one] of a mixed family? When a halal was mixed up in it, [for] the Israelites know the mamzerim who are among them, but they do not know the halalim who are among them.' Surely it says in the first clause [that if there is a doubt regarding] a halal [in the family, the family is] fit [to marry into the priesthood]! R. Johanan said: There is a difference between them [concerning a person who when he is called] mamzer protests and [when he is called] halal is silent. The first Tanna holds [that] every person who when called 'unfit' is silent is [considered] unfit, and thus the first Tanna said: Which is the widow [of one] of a mixed family? When there is in it no one who is silent if he is called mamzer or nathin, or slave of the king, or halal. Whereupon R. Meir said to him: This applies only to [each of] these cases¹¹ since [he who calls him thus is liable to] render him unfit [to enter] into [the congregation,] but he who is called a halal and is silent,¹² is fit, and the reason he is silent is that it does not trouble him.¹³ Whereupon R. Simeon b. Eleazar said to the first Tanna¹⁴ of R. Meir: If you have heard that R. Meir declares the person fit in the case of silence, this is not when he is called halal and is silent, but when he is called mamzer and is silent, for the reason he is silent is because he says to himself; 'a mamzer is well-known'.¹⁵ But [if he is called] mamzer and he protests. or [he is called] halal and is silent he is unfit,¹⁶ for the reason he is silent is because he thinks, 'it is enough if he is not excluded from the congregation'.¹⁷

One Baraitha taught: R. Jose says: [if he is called] mamzer and is silent, he is fit, and if he is called halal and is silent, he is unfit. And another Baraitha taught: [if he is called] halal and is silent he is fit, [but if he is called] mamzer and is silent, he is unfit. There is no difficulty;¹⁸ the one¹⁹ is according to the first Tanna in the sense of R. Meir, and the other one is according to R. Simeon b. Eleazar in the sense of R. Meir.

MISHNAH. R. JOSE SAID: IT HAPPENED THAT A GIRL. WENT DOWN TO DRAW²⁰ WATER FROM A SPRING AND SHE WAS RAVISHED. R. JOHANAN B. NURI SAID: IF MOST OF THE INHABITANTS²¹ OF THE TOWN MARRY [THEIR DAUGHTERS] INTO THE PRIESTHOOD,²² THIS [GIRL] MAY [ALSO] MARRY INTO THE PRIESTHOOD.²³

GEMARA. Raba said to R. Nahman: According to whom did R. Johanan b. Nuri say [this in the Mishnah?]. If according to Rabban Gamaliel, [surely] he declares as fit even when there is a majority of unfit!²⁴ [And] if it is according to R. Joshua, [surely] he declares as unfit even when there is a majority of fit!²⁵ — He said to him: Rah Judah said [that] Rab said:

(1) Lit., 'according to his words'.

(2) Halal is one who is profaned, unfit for priesthood on account of his father's illegitimate connection. Cf. Lev. XXI, 15 and v. Kid. 77a and 77b. A doubtful halal is a person about whom there is a doubt whether he is a halal or not.

(3) gnyb means 'to be mixed up beyond recognition'. V. Jast.

(4) Therefore one has to be careful with regard to doubtful halalim.

(5) [The widow would not be disqualified where there was a doubtful admixture of a halal in her dead husband's family.]

(6) [The marriage to any one of those enumerated in the Baraitha is Biblically forbidden and consequently renders the woman who marries the offspring of such an union unfit for a subsequent marriage to a priest, v. Yeb. 68a.]

(7) Cf. Lev. XXI, 15, and Yeb. 68a.

(8) Another difficulty.

(9) The first statement of the Baraitha and R. Meir's are practically identical.

(10) Another difficulty.

(11) Mamzer, nathin and royal slave.

(12) [And does not protest against the stigma attached to his descent.]

(13) Since he is not excluded from the congregation.

(14) That is, the teacher who transmitted the words of R. Meir and said in his name 'I have heard, etc.' and not the first Tanna of the cited Baraitha.

(15) Lit., a mamzer has a voice — And since he is not regarded generally as a mamzer he does not think it worth while to protest against the assertion of one man.

(16) For the priesthood.

(17) As he is not excluded from the congregation, he does not desire any investigations into his origin (Rashi).

(18) There is no contradiction between these two Baraithas.

(19) The second Baraitha.

(20) Lit., 'to fill'.

(21) Lit., 'men',

(22) Are entitled to marry their daughters to priests. This shows that they are 'fit'.

(23) Because the man with whom she had intercourse is taken to be one of the majority, and the majority consists of 'fit' men,

(24) Because he places the woman on the presumption of fitness, v. supra 13b.

(25) V. supra 13b.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 15a

The incident¹ happened at the springs² of Zepphoris, and the ruling followed R. Ammi, for R. Ammi said: and that is when a company of unfit men passed by there,³ and also R. Jannai. for R. Jannai said: if she had intercourse at the springs she is fit for the priesthood. — Do you really mean to say at the springs? — But rather [say]: If she had intercourse at the time of [the people visiting] the springs she is fit for the priesthood. But if someone went⁴ from Zepphoris and had intercourse [with her], the child is a shethuki.⁵ This is according to the following: When R. Dimi came⁶ he said that Ze'iri said [in the name of] R. Hanina, and some say: Ze'iri said [in the name of] R. Hanina:⁷ One goes after the majority of [the inhabitants of] the town and one does not go after the majority of the [passing] company. — Just the reverse! These⁸ move about and those⁹ are stationary!¹⁰ — But [say thus]: One goes after the majority of the [inhabitants of the] town, but only when there is [also] the majority of the [passing] company with it, but one does not go after the majority of the [inhabitants of the] town alone, nor after the majority of the [passing] company alone.¹¹ — What is the reason?¹² — It is prohibited¹³ [to go after] the majority of the [passing] company in order to prevent¹⁴ [going after] the majority of [the inhabitants of] the town. But even [in the case of] the majority of [the inhabitants of] the town, if he, went¹⁵ to her, [let us say that] he who separates himself separates himself from the majority?¹⁶ — It speaks of a case¹⁷ when she went to him.¹⁸ so that he was stationary,¹⁹ and R. Zera said: All that is stationary is considered as half to half.²⁰ But do we require two majorities? Has it not been taught: if nine [meat] shops,²¹ all of them, sell ritually killed meat. and one [shop sells] meat not ritually slaughtered and he bought in²² one of them and he does not know in which of them he bought. it is prohibited because of the doubt;²³ but if [meat] was found,²⁴ one goes after the majority?²⁵ And if you will say that [it speaks of a case] when the gates of the city are not closed,²⁶ so that a majority²⁷ came [also] from outside,²⁸ did not R. Zera say: even when²⁹ the gates of the city are closed? — Where purity of descent is concerned they³⁰ put up a higher standard.³¹

The text says: 'R. Zera said: All that is stationary is considered as half to half.' [This apparently means] whether it is for leniency or for strictness.³² Whence does R. Zera take it? Shall I say from [the Baraitha which teaches that] if nine [meat] shops, all of them, sell ritually killed meat and one [shop sells] meat not ritually slaughtered and he bought in one of them³³ and he does not know in which of them he bought, it is prohibited because of the doubt; but if [meat] was found, one goes after the majority? There it is for strictness!³⁴ But [he derives it] from [the following]: If there were [in a certain place] nine frogs and one reptile³⁵ and he touches one of them and he does not know which of them he touched he is unclean because of the doubt? — There also it is for strictness!³⁶ — But [rather] from [the following]: If there were [in a certain place] nine reptiles and one frog and he touches one of them and he does not know which of them he touched, [if this happened] on private ground he is unclean because of the doubt, [but] if this happened in a public place,³⁷ he is clean because of the doubt.³⁸

And how do we know this³⁹ from the Bible? — The verse says: And if he lie in wait for him and rise up against him,⁴⁰ [that is to say that he is not guilty of murder] until he intended [to kill] him. And the Rabbis? — They said in the school of R. Jannai: This excludes one who throws a stone into [a group of people]. What case do you mean? Do you mean a case when there are nine idolators and one Israelite? Let it be sufficient for him⁴¹ that the majority are idolators,[and] even if [you will say that it is considered as] half to half, [the rule is that] when there is a doubt in capital cases one takes a lenient view! — It speaks of a case when there are nine Israelites and one idolator, so that the idolator is stationary, and whatever is stationary is considered as half to half.⁴²

It was stated: R. Hiyya b. Ashi [said that] Rab said [that] the law is according to R. Jose.⁴³ And R. Hanan b. Raba [said that] Rab said [that] it was [only] a decision for the hour.⁴⁴ R. Jeremiah argued: And for pure descent we do not require two majorities? Have we not learned:

(1) Related in our Mishnah.

(2) , ubure var. lec. (vbure) 'spring', so Levy. V. also Krauss, TA. I 212. Jast.: 'Caravan', 'Station'.

(3) [So that there were two majorities of fit persons — the majority of local inhabitants and the majority of visitors from outside].

(4) Lit., 'separated himself'.

(5) V. supra 13b and Glos.

(6) To Palestine.]

(7) Leaving out R. Dimi.

(8) The people of the passing company.

(9) The inhabitants of the town.

(10) Lit , 'and these are fixed and stand'. — As to the point of the question, v. infra.

(11) I.e., there must be two majorities.

(12) That we do not go after the majority of the (passing) company.

(13) Lit., 'a prohibition'

(14) Lit., 'on account of'.

(15) Lit., 'if they went', that is to say one of the inhabitants of the town.

(16) I.e., he who comes away from a crowd, or a community is regarded as having come away from those who constitute the majority of the crowd or community. And if the majority of the town consists of fit people, we ought to assume that the man who had intercourse with the woman was one of the majority and did not disqualify her from marrying a priest, and that no blemish attaches to the child.

(17) Lit., 'no, necessarily'.

(18) Lit., 'to them'.

(19) I.e., fixed in one place.

(20) The rule of majority does not apply, v. infra.

(21) Out of the ten meat-shops that are in the market

(22) Lit., 'from'.

(23) Lit., 'its doubt is prohibited'. [Because the prohibited minority is in a fixed, settled place (kabu'a), v. infra.]

(24) In the market-place, in which the ten shops are situated.

(25) And the majority of the shops sell ritually killed meat. Thus we see that one single majority is sufficient.

(26) [And meat is admitted from the outside.]

- (27) Of butchers selling ritually killed meal.
- (28) Lit., ‘from the world’. [So that there are two majorities — the majority of local Jewish butchers and the majority of Jewish butchers from outside.]
- (29) Lit., ‘although’.

- (31) And therefore two majorities are required, cf. supra 13a.
- (32) I.e., whether the result of this rule is lenient or strict, that is, to allow or to prohibit (whichever it may be).
- (33) This illustrates the principle of kabu'a, a fixed, stationary prohibition.

- (35) Dead reptiles make ritually unclean, but not frogs, v. Lev, XI, 29.
- (36) And you cannot derive from this for leniency.
- (37) [On the principle that a doubtful ease of uncleanness is clean if it arises in a public place but unclean if in private ground v. Sot. p. 140.]
- (38) From this Baraita you can derive both for strictness and for leniency.
- (39) The rule: what is stationary is considered half to half.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 15b

[If] one found in it¹ an abandoned² child — if the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] non-Israelites [the child is] a non-Israelite, if the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] Israelites [the child is] an Israelite, [and if the inhabitants of the town are] half to half, [the child is] an Israelite.³ And Rab said: They have taught this only with regard to sustaining it,⁴ but not with regard to pure descent. And Samuel said: [They have taught this only] with regard to removing debris⁵ for its sake?⁶ — That which Rab Judah said in the name of Rab⁷ [namely, that] the incident happened at the springs of Zepphoris,⁸ escaped his⁹ attention.¹⁰ But according to R. Hanan b. Raba who said [that] it was a decision for the hour,¹¹ it is difficult!¹² He who taught this¹³ did not teach that.¹⁴

The [above] text [says]: ‘[If] one found in it an abandoned child — if the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] non-Israelites [the child is] a non-Israelite. if the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] Israelites [the child is] an Israelite, [and if the inhabitants of the town are] half to half [the child is] an Israelite. Rab said: They have taught this only with regard to sustaining it, but not with regard to pure descent. But Samuel said: [They have taught this only] with regard to removing debris for its sake.’ But did Samuel say so? Did not R. Joseph say that R. Judah said in the name of Samuel: We do not go with regard to saving life after the majority?¹⁵ — But the saying of Samuel referred¹⁶ to the first clause: ‘If the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] non-Israelites [the child is] a non-Israelite.’ [Upon this] Samuel said: And with regard to removing debris it is not so,¹⁷ ‘If the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consist of] non-Israelites [the child is] a non-Israelite’ — for what practical purpose [is this taught]? — R. Papa said: To allow him to eat [meat of] animals not ritually slaughtered. — ‘If the majority [of the inhabitants of the town consists of] Israelites [the child is] an Israelite,’ — for what practical purpose [is this taught]? — R. Papa said: That one returns to him a lost object.¹⁸ If [the inhabitants of the town are] half to half [the child is] an Israelite’ — for what practical purpose [is this taught]? Resh Lakish said: With regard to damages.¹⁹ How shall we imagine this case? Shall we say that an ox of ours²⁰ gored²¹ an ox of his?²² [In this case] let him²³ say to him.²⁴ ‘Bring evidence that you are an Israelite — and take!’²⁵ It speaks of a case when an ox of his²⁶ gored an ox of ours²⁷ — one half he²⁸ pays, and with regard to the other half he says to them,²⁹ ‘Bring evidence that I am not an Israelite and I will pay³⁰ you.’³¹

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN BECAME A WIDOW OR WAS DIVORCED³² [AND] SHE SAYS, ‘THOU DIDST MARRY ME [AS] A VIRGIN,’³³ AND HE SAYS, ‘NOT SO, BUT I MARRIED THEE [AS] A WIDOW,’³⁴ —³⁵ — IF THERE ARE WITNESSES THAT SHE WENT OUT³⁶ WITH A HINUMA³⁷ AND HER HEAD UNCOVERED,³⁸ HER KETHUBAH IS TWO HUNDRED [ZUZ.]³⁹ R. JOHANAN THE SON OF BEROKA SAYS: ALSO THE DISTRIBUTION OF ROASTED EARS OF CORN IS EVIDENCE.⁴⁰ AND R. JOSHUA ADMITS THAT, IF ONE SAYS⁴¹ TO HIS FELLOW,⁴² THIS FIELD BELONGED TO YOUR FATHER AND I BOUGHT IT FROM HIM. HE IS BELIEVED,

(2) Lit., ‘thrown away’.

(8) So that there were two majorities, v. supra p. 81, n. 3.

(9) R. Jeremiah.

(10) Had R. Jeremiah not overlooked this he would not have asked his question, for indeed two majorities were required for pure descent.

(11) It is now being assumed that R. Hanan also accepted the explanation that it occurred at the springs of Zepphoris, so that there were two majorities and he regards this ruling of R. Johanan b. Nuri only as a special decision, but elsewhere, two majorities are not required.

(12) Why does Rab say in the case of the abandoned child ‘but not with regard to pure descent’, which would shew that Rab requires two majorities also in other cases?

(13) That Rab said here ‘but not with regard to pure descent’.

(14) That R. Judah said in the name of Rab that the incident happened at the springs of Zepphoris. Indeed there was only one majority there, and therefore R. Hanan said, ‘it was a decision for the hour’, v. supra, p. 83, n. 10 In all other cases two majorities are required.

(15) Where it is a question of saving life the minority had to be equally taken into considerations.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 16a

FOR THE MOUTH THAT BOUND IS THE MOUTH THAT LOOSENS.¹ BUT IF THERE ARE WITNESSES THAT IT² BELONGED TO HIS FATHER AND HE SAYS, 'I BOUGHT IT FROM HIM.' HE IS NOT BELIEVED.

GEMARA. The reason³ is that there are witnesses,⁴ but if there are no witnesses the husband is believed. Is it to say that the anonymous and undisputed decision⁵ recorded in our Mishnah is not according to Rabban Gamaliel? For if it were according to Rabban Gamaliel, did not he say that she is believed?⁶ — You may even say [that it is according to] Rabban Gamaliel; [for] Rabban Gamaliel says [it]⁷ only there in [a case of] 'sure' and 'perhaps'.⁸ but here⁹ where they are both¹⁰ sure¹¹ [in their statements] he¹² did not say [it]¹³ — But he who raised the question, how could he raise it at all?¹⁴ Surely this is a case where they are both 'sure' [in their statements]! — Since most women get married as virgins [you might say that] it¹⁵ is like 'sure and perhaps'.¹⁶ This¹⁷ may also be proved by the following reasoning, since it is stated: AND R. JOSHUA ADMITS [etc.]¹⁸ It is well if you say [that] Rabban Gamaliel admits.¹⁹ But if you say [that] Rabban Gamaliel does not admit.²⁰ to whom does [then] R. Joshua admit?²¹ Do you think [that] R. Joshua refers to this chapter?²² He refers to miggo²³ in the first chapter.²⁴ To which?²⁵ Is it to say

[that he refers] to this: If she was pregnant, and they said to her. 'What is the nature of this embryo'. [and she answered, 'it is] from man So-and-so and he is a priest'. Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed, [and] R. Joshua says: We do not live from her mouth?²⁶ What miggo is there in that case?²⁷ Behold, her stomach reaches up to her teeth!²⁸ Again [should it refer] to this: They saw her talking with someone and they said to her: 'what is the character of this man?' [and she answered, 'it is] man So-and-so and he is a priest'. Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed [and] R. Joshua says: We do not live from her mouth?²⁹ [There too.] what miggo is there? True, there is according to Ze'iri, Who says [that] 'she was talking' means 'she was hiding herself' [with a man]. [in which case she has] a miggo, for if she wished she could say. 'I had no intercourse,' and [still] she said, 'I had intercourse,' [therefore] she is believed. But according to R. Assi, who says [that] 'she was talking' means 'she had intercourse, what miggo is there?³⁰ Or again [should he refer] to this: She says. 'I was injured by [a piece of] wood,' and he says. 'Not so, but thou wast trodden by a man.' Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed, and R. Joshua says: We do not live from her mouth?³¹ [There too] what miggo is there? True, there is according to R. Eliezer, who says that [the dispute between the husband and the wife is] with regard to a maneh and nothing.³² [In which case she has] a miggo, for if she wished she could say. 'I was injured by a piece of wood under thee,'³³ and she would get two hundred [zuz.],³⁴ and [still] she said [that she was injured] earlier,³⁵ [therefore] she is believed. But according to R. Johanan who says that [the dispute between the husband and the wife is] with regard to two hundred [zuz] and a maneh,³⁶ what miggo is there?³⁷ — But [he refers] to this: If one has married a woman and has not found in her virginity [and] she says. 'After thou hadst betrothed me [to thyself] I was violated and thy field has been inundated,' and he says, 'Not so, but [it happened] before I betrothed thee [to myself]'. Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer say: She is believed, and R. Joshua says: We do not live from her mouth,³⁸ For [here there is] a miggo, because if she wished she could say. 'I was injured by a piece of wood under thee,' and [by saying this] she would not make herself unfit for the priesthood. and [still] she said, 'I have been violated', and [by saying this] she made herself unfit for the priesthood; therefore Rabban Gamaliel said that she is believed. And R. Joshua said to Rabban Gamaliel: With regard to this miggo here,³⁹ I agree with you, but with regard to that miggo there,⁴⁰ I differ from you. Now, this is a miggo and that is a miggo, what difference is there between this miggo and that miggo.? Here⁴¹ there is no slaughtered ox before you, there⁴² there is a slaughtered ox before you.⁴³ But since most women get married as virgins.⁴⁴ [even] if no witnesses came,⁴⁵ what of it?⁴⁶ — Rabina said: Because one can say:⁴⁷ most women marry as maidens and a minority as widows. And whenever a maiden gets married, it is spoken about,⁴⁸

(1) I.e., if that person had been silent the other man would not have known that the field ever belonged to his father. We have, therefore, to believe both his statements.

(2) The field.

(3) Of the decision given in our Mishnah that the kethubah of the woman is two hundred zuz.

(4) That she went out on her wedding day with the hinuma and uncovered head.

(5) Lit., 'we have learnt without definition.'

(6) V. supra 12b.

(7) That she is believed.

(8) There (in the Mishnah 22b) the husband cannot be 'sure' with regard to his statement, while the wife can be sure. V. Rashi.

- (9) In our Mishnah.
- (10) The husband and the wife.
- (11) Lit., 'in sure and sure'.
- (12) Rabban Gamaliel.
- (13) That the wife is believed. The wife is not believed more than the husband.
- (14) The answer is so obvious.
- (15) The case in our Mishnah.
- (16) The statement of the wife is more 'sure' than that of her husband. And therefore you might say that she is believed even when there are no witnesses that she went out with a hinuma' and her head uncovered. And as this is, apparently, not the view of our Mishnah, the questioner raised his question.
- (17) That Rabban Gamaliel would admit that, if there were no witnesses that she went out with a hinuma' and her head uncovered, the husband would be believed (Rashi).
- (18) V. second clause of our Mishnah.
- (19) Lit., 'Rabban Gamaliel treats of "he admits".' I.e., It is well, if it is assumed that Rabban Gamaliel admits that, in the absence of witnesses, (v. n. 13) the husband is believed, since it is a case of 'sure' and 'sure'; in which case the author of the first clause of the Mishnah is Rabban Gamaliel, who while differing from R. Joshua in a case of 'sure' and 'perhaps' (as in the Mishnah on 12b), agrees here with R. Joshua, since it is a case of 'sure' and 'sure'. And, therefore, it is said in the second clause of the Mishnah 'AND R. JOSHUA ADMITS,' namely In the first clause of the Mishnah Rabban Gamaliel admits to R. Joshua. and in the second clause R. Joshua admits to Rabban Gamaliel (Rashi).
- (20) V. n. 15.
- (21) To what do the words 'AND R. JOSHUA ADMITS' refer, seeing that no mention is made previously in the Mishnah of any dispute.
- (22) I.e., to the first clause in the first Mishnah of this Chapter.
- (23) I.e., the controversy regarding miggo v. supra p. 67. n. 8.
- (24) Lit 'he refers to miggo and he refers to the first chapter'.
- (25) I. e., to which case does he refer?
- (26) V. supra 13a, second Mishnah, second clause.
- (27) Lit., 'there'.
- (28) She could not say that she had no intercourse! What other statement could she have made which would have been more to her advantage?
- (29) V. supra 13a. second Mishnah, first clause.
- (30) She could not say that she had no intercourse since there is evidence to the contrary! What other statement could she have made which would have been more to her advantage?
- (31) V. infra 13a, first Mishnah.
- (32) v. Supra 13a.
- (33) Since our betrothal. In which case she is entitled to two hundred zuz.
- (34) V. supra p. 69.
- (35) That is, before the betrothal and thus claims only a maneh.
- (36) V. supra p. 68. And she would get two hundred (zuz) if she was injured by a piece of wood, whether she was injured before or after the betrothal.
- (37) V. preceding note.
- (38) V. supra 12b.
- (39) The second clause of our Mishnah. The man could have been silent, therefore we believe also his second statement.

(40) In the Mishnah 22b.

(41) In the second clause of our Mishnah.

(42) In the Mishnah 12b.

(43) The phrase ‘there is a slaughtered ox before you’ means, there is a fact which cannot be wiped out or denied. This applies to the Mishnah 12b. The virginity is not there. This fact remains. According to R. Joshua in such a case a miggo is of no avail. But in our Mishnah the other person would not have known that the field once belonged to his father if the present holder had not told him so. This is meant by the phrase, ‘There is no slaughtered ox before you.’ There is no fact here if the holder of the field had not stated it. In such a case a miggo is applied, because we assume that the holder of the field would not have said it if he had not bought the field from the other man's father.

(44) Reverting to the argument at the beginning of this folio.

(45) That she went out with a hinuma and uncovered head.

(46) She should be regarded as having belonged to the majority and therefore having been a virgin at her marriage, so that her kethubah would be two hundred (zuz).

(47) Lit., ‘there is to say’.

(48) Lit., ‘she has a voice.’ A girl's marriage is much more spoken about than a widow's marriage. A girl's marriage is also much more festive and much more public.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 16b

and since this one was not spoken about,¹ [the presumption that she belonged to] the majority has become shaken. — But if [you maintain that] whenever a maiden gets married it is spoken about, [then even] when witnesses come,² what of it?³ They are false witnesses!⁴ — But, said Rabina: most marriages of maidens are spoken about,⁵ and [in the case of] this one, since it was not spoken about, [the presumption that she — the bride — belonged to] the majority has been shaken.⁶ IF THERE ARE WITNESSES THAT SHE WENT OUT WITH A HINUMA, etc. Should we not be afraid that perhaps she might produce witnesses before this court and get [her kethubah] paid and [later] she might produce the written document [of the kethubah] before another court and get [her kethubah] paid [a second time] by that [document]? — R. Abbahu said: This teaches [that] one writes a quittance.⁷ R. Papa said:⁸ It speaks of a place in which one does not write a kethubah document.⁹ Some refer¹⁰ this¹¹ to the [following] Baraitha: If she lost her kethubah document, or she hid it, or it was burnt, [then the matter is as follows:] if they danced before her, played before her, passed before her the cup of [glad] tidings,¹² or the cloth of virginity¹³ [and] if she has witnesses with regard to one of these [things],¹⁴ her kethubah is two hundred [zuz]. Now should we not be afraid that perhaps she might produce witnesses before this court and get [her kethubah] paid and [later] she might produce the written document before another court and get [her kethubah] paid [a second time] by that document? — R. Abbahu said: This teaches [that] one writes a quittance. R. Papa said: It speaks of a place in which one does not write a kethubah document. But does it not say ‘[if] she lost her kethubah document’?¹⁵ — [It so happened] that he wrote her [one]. But may she not after all produce it and get [her kethubah] paid [a second time] with it! The meaning of ‘she lost [it]’ is ‘she lost [it] in fire.’¹⁶ If so, it is the same as ‘it was burnt!’ And then, what can you say with regard to ‘she hid [it]’?¹⁷ And furthermore, why [mention] ‘she lost [it]’?¹⁸ — But [this is what the Baraitha means]: if she lost it, it is as if she had hidden it before us, and we do not give her [the kethubah money] until witnesses say [that] her kethubah document has been burnt.¹⁹ He who refers this²⁰ to the Baraita, all the more [does he refer it] to the Mishnah. But he who refers this to our Mishnah [does] not [refer it] to the Baraita, because of the difficulty.²¹ IF THERE ARE WITNESSES, etc. Should we not be afraid that perhaps she might produce witnesses of hinuma before this court and get [her kethubah] paid and [later] she might produce [other] witnesses of hinuma before another court and get [her kethubah] paid [a second time]? — Where it is not possible otherwise,²² we certainly write a quittance. [It is said above in the Baraita]: ‘[If] they passed before her the cup of [glad] tidings.’²³ What is the cup of [glad] tidings? R. Adda the son of Ahaba said: One passes before her a cup of wine of Terumah,²⁴ as if to say. ‘This one is worthy of eating Terumah.’²⁵ R. Papa demurred to this: Does not a widow eat Terumah?²⁶ But, said R. Papa [as if to say] ‘This one is "first"²⁷ as Terumah is "first".’²⁸ It has been taught: R. Judah says: One passes before her a cask of wine. R. Adda the son of Ahaba said: [If she was] a virgin one passes before her a closed one, [and if] she has had intercourse with a man one passes before her an open one. Why? Let us pass [a cask of wine] before a virgin and let us not pass [a cask of wine] at all before one who had intercourse? — [It may happen] some times that she has seized²⁹ two hundred [so] and [then] says. ‘I was a virgin and they did not pass [a cask of wine] before me because they were prevented by an accident.’³⁰ Our Rabbis taught: How does one dance³¹ before the bride? Beth Shammai say:

- (1) If this had been known as a maiden's marriage it would have been made public and there would have been people to come forward and give evidence that she went out with a hinuma and her head uncovered.
 - (2) And say that she went out with a hinuma and uncovered head.
 - (3) Since this marriage was not spoken about, one should say that she was not married as a maiden.
 - (4) Since other people knew nothing about it.
 - (5) Not ‘all marriages of maidens’.
 - (6) Therefore, the presence or absence of witnesses makes all the difference.
 - (7) [And the husband produces a quittance that he paid her the kethubah, cf. B.B. 171b.]
 - (8) [He holds that no quittance may be written for fear of putting the lender at a disadvantage in case he loses it. What they do on payment is to tear up the bond without which the creditor cannot claim his debt.]
 - (9) [And the woman collects her dues in the court since it is a condition enjoined by the court, v. infra 51a.]
 - (10) Lit., ‘teach’.
 - (11) The controversy of R. Abbahu and R. Papa.
 - (12) vriac ka xuf, v. infra.
 - (13) On the day of her marriage.
 - (14) Which are only done at the marriage of a virgin.
 - (15) And this shows that a kethubah document was written.
 - (16) And she cannot produce it any more.
 - (17) If she hid it, she can produce it.
 - (18) As ‘she lost (it)’ is mentioned separately, it cannot mean ‘in fire’.
 - (19) This means that if ‘she lost’ it or ‘she hid’ it. she does not get the kethubah money unless she finds the document and produces it. If she says ‘it was burnt,’ she must produce witnesses that it was burnt. This answer is indeed unsatisfactory.
 - (20) The controversy of R. Abbahu and R. Papa.
 - (21) V. supra note 10.

kethubah twice.]

(24) V. Glos.

(25) That is, she is unblemished and fit to marry a priest.

(26) A widow may also marry a priest.

(27) I. e., she is a virgin and for the first time dedicated to married life.

(28) Terumah is called 'first', cf. Num. XV, 20, 21; Deut. XVIII, 4.

(29) If she is in possession of the two hundred zuz the onus probandi is on the other party.

(30) Rashi says: They were intoxicated from the wine which they drank at the wedding, and the other party could not bring evidence to disprove her statements. But now that a cask of wine has to be passed also before one who was not a virgin, witnesses will be available to testify that in the latter case an open cask was passed before her.

(31) What does one sing or recite?

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 17a

The bride as she is.¹ And Beth Hillel say: 'Beautiful and graceful bride'!² Beth Shammai said to Beth Hillel: If she was lame or blind, does one say of her: 'Beautiful and graceful bride'? Whereas the Torah³ said, 'Keep thee far from a false matter.'⁴ Said Beth Hillel to Beth Shammai: According to your words,⁵ if one has made a bad purchase in the market, should one praise it⁶ in his eyes or depreciate it?⁷ Surely,⁸ one should praise it in his eyes. Therefore,⁹ the Sages said: Always should the disposition of man be pleasant with people. — When R. Dimi came,¹⁰ he said: Thus they sing before the bride in the West:¹¹ no powder¹² and no paint¹³ and no waving¹⁴ [of the hair], and still a graceful gazelle. When the Rabbis ordained R. Zera they sang before him thus: No powder and no paint and no waving [of the hair], and still a graceful gazelle. When the Rabbis ordained R. Ammi and R. Assi they sang before them thus: Such as these, such as these ordain unto us, [but] do not ordain unto us of the perverters¹⁵ or babblers,¹⁶ and some say: of the half-scholars¹⁷ or one-third-scholars.¹⁸ When R. Abbahu came from the Academy to the court of the Emperor,¹⁹ hand-maids²⁰ from the Imperial house went out towards him and sang before him thus, 'Prince of his people, leader of his nation, shining light,²¹ blessed be thy coming in peace!' They tell of R. Judah b. Ila'i that he used to take a myrtle twig and dance before the bride and say: 'Beautiful and graceful bride.' R. Samuel the son of R. Isaac danced with three [twigs].²² R. Zera said: The old man is putting us to shame.²³ When he²⁴ died,²⁵ a pillar of fire came between him and the whole [of the rest of the] world. And there is a tradition that a pillar of fire has made such a separation²⁶ only either for one in a generation or for two in a generation only.²⁷ R. Zera said: His twig²⁸ [benefited] the old man, and some say: His habit²⁹ [benefited] the old man, and some say: his folly³⁰ [benefited] the old man. — R. Aha took³¹ her³² on his shoulder and danced [with her]. The Rabbis said to him: May we [also] do it? He said to them: If they³³ are on you³⁴ like a beam,³⁵ [then it is] all right. and if not, [you may] not. R. Samuel b. Nahmani said [that] R. Jonathan said: it is allowed to look intently at the face of the bride all the seven [days]³⁶ in order to make her beloved to her husband.³⁷ But the law is not according to him. Our Rabbis taught: One causes a funeral procession³⁸ to make way³⁹ for a bridal procession,⁴⁰ and both of them⁴¹ for the King of Israel. One tells of King Agrippa that he made way for a bride, and the Sages praised him. — They praised him — from this it would seem that he did well. Did not R. Ashi say: Even according to him, who says [that] if a king forgoes his honour, his honour is forgone, if a king

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED [IN MARRIAGE] IN THREE WAYS AND ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM¹ IN TWO. SHE IS ACQUIRED BY MONEY, BY DEED, OR BY INTERCOURSE. 'BY MONEY': BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN, A DENAR² OR THE WORTH OF A DENAR; BETH HILLEL RULE, A PERUTAH OR THE WORTH OF A PERUTAH.³ AND HOW MUCH IS A PERUTAH? AN EIGHTH OF AN ITALIAN ISSAR.⁴ AND SHE ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM BY DIVORCE OR BY HER HUSBAND'S DEATH. A YEBAMAH⁵ IS ACQUIRED BY INTERCOURSE, AND ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM BY HALIZAH⁶ OR BY THE YABAM'S DEATH.⁷

GEMARA. A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED. Why does he [the Tanna] state here, 'A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED,' Whilst elsewhere⁸ he teaches 'A man may betroth' [etc.]?⁹ — Because he wishes to state 'MONEY'; and how do we know that money effects betrothal? By deriving the meaning of 'taking' from the field of Ephron:¹⁰ Here it is written: If any man take a wife;¹¹ whilst there it is written: I will give thee money for the field: take it of me.¹² Moreover, 'taking' is designated acquisition, for it is written, the field which Abraham acquired;¹³

(1) Lit., 'acquires herself.'

(2) V. Glos.

(3) I.e., goods to its value.

(4) V. Glos. The ordinary issar = 1124th of a denar (denarius); the Italian issar = 1116th.

(5) v. Glos.

(6) V. Glos.

(7) v. Glos.

(8) At the beginning of Chapter II, infra 41a.

(9) Thus here too he should have stated: 'A woman is betrothed.' 'Betroth' in this sense, and as it is generally used in the Talmud, is the first stage of marriage. A betrothed woman could not be freed without a divorce, though cohabitation was still forbidden. V. Glos. s.v. erusin. As far as practicable in this translation, 'betrothed' is employed to denote this first stage, and 'marriage' to denote the second (nissu'in), after which the couple may live together.

(10) Lit., 'taking,' 'taking' is deduced from the field of Ephron. This method of exegesis is designated 'gezerah shawah,' whereby the use of the same word in two passages indicates that their laws or connotations are similar.

(11) Deut. XXII, 13.

(12) Gen. XXIII, 13. Just as 'take' in the latter verse refers to money, so in the former too: the wife is 'taken,' i.e., betrothed by money.

(13) Gen. XLIX, 30. The quotation is not exact in the Talmud.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 2b

alternatively, men shall acquire fields for money;¹ therefore, he teaches: A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED. Then let him state there,² 'A man acquires'? — He [the Tanna] first employs Biblical phraseology, but subsequently, the Rabbinical idiom. Now what does the Rabbinical term connote?³ — That he [the husband] interdicts her to all [men] as hekdesch.⁴ But, why not teach here, ‘A man acquires’?⁵ — Because he desires to teach the second clause, AND ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM, which refers to her [the woman], he therefore teaches the first clause likewise with reference to her. Then let him state, ‘A man acquires . . . and makes [her] acquire’?⁶ — Because there is the husband's death where it is not he who frees her, but it is Heaven who confers [her freedom] on her.⁷ Alternatively, were it taught ‘he acquires.’ I might have thought, even against her will, hence It is stated ‘A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED,’ implying only with her consent, but not without.⁸ Now, why does he [the Tanna] choose to teach shalosh? Let him teach sheloshah?⁹ — Because he desires to state derek [way], which is feminine, as it is written, and thou shalt shew them the way wherein [bah] they must walk.¹⁰ ‘If so, when we learnt, a zab¹¹ is examined in seven [shiv'ah] ways [derakim].’¹² let him [the Tanna] employ sheva’?¹³ — Because he desires to state derek, which we find designated as masculine, as it is written, they shall come out against thee in one way [be-derek ehad], and flee before thee seven ways [shiv'ah derakim].¹⁴ If so, the verses are contradictory, and the Mishnahs likewise? — The verses are not contradictory: here [the first verse quoted], the reference being to the Torah,¹⁵ which is a feminine noun, as it is written: The law [torah] of the Lord is perfect [temimah], restoring [meshibath] the soul:¹⁶ the feminine form is employed. There, however, the reference is to war, and it is the practice of man to wage war, not of woman — therefore the masculine is employed. The Mishnahs are [likewise] not contradictory: here, since the reference is to a woman, It is couched in the feminine form. There, the reference being to a man, since it is the nature of a man to be examined, but not of a woman, for a woman becomes unclean even through an accident,¹⁷ the masculine form is employed.

Now, why does he employ shalosh? on account of derakim [ways]! Then let him teach debarim [things] and sheloshah?¹⁸ — Because he wishes to mention INTERCOURSE, which is designated ‘way’, as it is written, and the way of a man with a maid. . . Such is the way of an adulterous woman.¹⁹ Now, that answers for intercourse; but what can you say of MONEY AND DEED? — [They are] on account of INTERCOURSE.²⁰ And are two taught on account of one?²¹ — These too are adjuncts of intercourse.²²

Alternatively I can say: The author of this [Mishnah] is R. Simeon. For it was taught: R. Simeon said: Why did the Torah state, If any man take a wife,²³ and not ‘if a woman be taken to a man’? Because it is the way of a man to go in search of a woman, but it is not the way of a woman to go in search of a man. This may be compared to a man who lost an article: who goes in search of whom? The loser goes in search of the lost article.²⁴ Now, as to what we learnt: ‘a zab is examined in seven ways’: let it state [seven] ‘things’?²⁵ — There we are informed this: it is the nature [way] of excessive eating to cause gonorrhoea, and it is the nature [way] of excessive drinking to cause gonorrhoea. Further, as to what we learnt: ‘The citron is comparable to a tree in three ways’²⁶ — let him state [in three] things? — Because he wishes to teach the second clause: and to vegetables in one way.²⁷ Then in the second clause too’ let him state, [and to vegetables in one] ‘thing’?

(1) Jer. XXXII, 44.

(2) Infra 41a.

- (3) The Heb. mekaddesh literally means ‘consecrates.’ Why is this employed by the Rabbis for betrothal?
- (4) V. Glos.; hekadesh is forbidden for secular use.
- (5) Granted that Biblical usage demands a verb of acquisition, yet just as the Mishnah on 41a states: ‘a man betroths,’ so here too it should have been, ‘a man acquires.’
- (6) Both clauses referring to his action.
- (7) Hence this could not be referred to as his (voluntary) action.
- (8) By referring it to her, the Tanna shews that the validity of acquisition is dependent on her consent.
- (9) Shalosh (three) is used with fem. substantives; sheloshah with masc. ones, which is the more usual.
- (10) Ex. XVIII, 20: bah is feminine (in her), the masc. being bo.
- (11) V. Glos, cf. p. 3, n. 1.
- (12) Pl. of derek.
- (13) Shiv'ah with masc., sheva' with fem. substantives.
- (14) Deut. XXVIII, 27: in both clauses the numerals are masculine.
- (15) When Jethro said to Moses, and thou shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, by ‘way’ he meant the Torah.
- (16) Ps. XIX, 8; both the adjective and the participle are feminine.
- (17) A man is unclean as a zab only if the discharge comes of itself, without being caused by external factors (technically called accidents); e.g., the eating of certain foods, physical overstrain, etc.; seven such factors might have caused the discharge, and consequently he had to be examined in respect of these. But a woman is unclean even then; hence there is no purpose in examining her.
- (18) A woman is acquired by three things; debarim is masc.
- (19) Prov. XXX, 19 f.
- (20) Since derek is required for cohabitation, it is also used for the others.
- (21) Surely the idiom should be primarily adapted to the majority?
- (22) They are not separate and complete acts, but preliminaries to cohabitation.
- (23) Deut. XXII, 13.
- (24) But the lost article does not seek the loser. Thus, man having lost his rib, he seeks to recover it. — Since R. Simeon says ‘It is the way of a man, etc.’ he also teaches: ‘A WOMAN IS ACQUIRED IN THREE WAYS. ‘Derek’ (way) is applicable to something that happens in conformity with nature or normal practice.
- (25) Because generally speaking the masculine is preferable.
- (26) Viz., in respect of ‘orlah (q.v. Glos.), fourth year fruits, and the year of release. The fruit gathered in the fourth year of a tree's planting was to be eaten in Jerusalem, like the second tithe (v. note 4). Special laws governed the produce of every seventh year (v. Lev, XXV, 1-7), but the definitions of ‘seventh year’ varied. In respect to trees it meant the fruit that grew in the seventh year, even if not harvested until the eighth; while in speaking of vegetables it applies to the time of gathering: the citron is assimilated to trees in this matter.
- (27) Viz., in respect of tithing. In the first, second, fourth, and fifth years after the ‘year of release’, the first and second tithe were separated, the first being given to the Levite and the second eaten by its owners in Jerusalem; in the third and sixth years the first and third tithes were due, the latter being given to the poor. Here too, trees were determined by the time when their fruit grew; vegetables by their gathering; the citron was assimilated to vegetables in this matter.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 3a

— There we are informed this: that the nature [way] of a citron is like that of vegetables. Just as it is the nature of vegetables to grow by means of all waters,¹ and its tithing is determined by the time when it is gathered;² so is it the nature of the citron to grow by means of all waters, and [therefore] its tithing is determined by its gathering.³ Again, when we learnt: A koy⁴ is, in some ways, similar to beasts of chase;⁵ and in other ways to cattle; and [again], in some ways to both beasts of chase and cattle, and in other ways to neither beasts of chase nor cattle⁶ — let it be taught, [in some] ‘things’? Moreover, when we learnt: This is one of the ways wherein women's divorce deeds are similar to slaves' writs of liberation⁷ — let him state, [this is one of the] ‘things’ etc.? — But [answer thus]: wherever a distinction is drawn, ‘ways’ is employed: wherever there is no distinction, ‘things’ [respects] is taught.⁸ This may be proved too, for the second clause teaches: R. Eliezer maintained: The citron is equal to trees in all things.⁹ This proves it.

What does the number of the first clause exclude, and what does the number of the second exclude?¹⁰ — The number of the first clause excludes huppah.¹¹ But according to R. Huna, who maintained: Huppah [as an act of betrothal] acquires [a woman], by inferring it a minori,¹² what does it exclude? — It excludes barter.¹³ I might have thought, since we learn the meaning of ‘taking’ from Ephron's field:¹⁴ then just as a field may be acquired by barter, so may a woman too be acquired by barter: hence we are informed [otherwise]. And let us say: That indeed is so? — Barter is possible with less than a perutah's worth;¹⁵ whilst a woman will not cede herself [in marriage] for less than a perutah's worth.¹⁶

(1) I.e., artificial irrigation, which is normally impossible in the case of wheat and the vine.

(2) V. nn. 3 and 4.

(3) Thus by employing ‘way,’ the Tanna teaches the reason of its similarity in tithing, viz., because it is also similar in the nature (way) of its growth.

(4) [Generally taken as a cross between a goat and some species of gazelle; v. Lewysohn, Zoologie, p. 115.]

(5) Heb. hayyah, beast of chase, opposed to behemah, cattle. The Rabbis were uncertain whether the koy should be considered of the genus of cattle or a beast of chase.

(6) Its heleb (hindquarter fat) is forbidden like that of cattle, its blood must be covered after slaughter, like that of a beast of chase, it must be ritually killed before it is fit for food, like both, it must not be made to copulate with either. — Since its status is undetermined, we impose the stringencies of both beasts of chase and cattle.

(7) Viz., if one is brought from overseas, the messenger must declare, ‘It was written and attested in my presence.’

(8) E.g., in some respects the citron is similar to trees; in others to vegetables: hence a distinction is drawn. The same applies to the other passages quoted. But if one thing is entirely like another, we employ ‘things’ (dabar).

(9) Thus ‘way’ is not used here, since no distinction is drawn.

(10) It is unnecessary to state, A WOMAN . . . THREE WAYS . . . TWO, since these are actually enumerated. The explicit statement of the number must therefore emphasize that only three ways are valid, not more.

(11) If a father delivers his daughter to huppah as an act of betrothal (kiddushin), it is not valid as such. (Rashi). [The word vpuj from the root ;pj, denotes the baldachin or canopy wherein the bridegroom received the bride at the nuptials. A good deal of uncertainty exists as to the signification of this ceremony; (v. Shulhan ‘Aruk, Eben ha’Ezer, I, XV, 1). Rashi, it appears, regards huppah as a mere symbol of traditio puellae, a handing over of the maiden by the father to the husband into whose control she now passes, (cf. Keth. 48a), in contradistinction to Maim., (Yad, Ishuth, X, 1), who saw in it a symbol of the marital union, copula carnalis, cf. Neubauer J. pp. 57 and 226ff.]

(12) V. infra 50.

(13) A woman cannot be bartered, i.e., become betrothed in exchange for an article. — On ‘barter’ v. infra 28a, Mishnah.

(14) V. supra 2a.

(15) V. B.M. 47a.

(16) Because it is derogatory to her dignity.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 3b

The number of the second clause excludes halizah.¹ For I might have thought, this may be inferred a minori from a yebamah: if a yebamah, who is not freed by divorce, is freed by halizah; then this one [a married woman], who is freed by divorce, is surely freed by halizah. Therefore we are informed [otherwise]. And let us say: That indeed is so? — Scripture states, [then he shall write her] a writ of divorcement.² Thus, a ‘writ’ may divorce her, but nothing else may divorce her.

BY MONEY. Whence do we know this? Moreover, when we learned, A father has a privilege over his daughter [if a minor] in respect of her kiddushin³ by money, deed, or intercourse:⁴ How do we know that she can be acquired by money and that the money belongs to her father? — Said Rab Judah in Rab's name, Because Scripture saith, then she shall go out for nothing, without money:⁵ no money is due to this master [when she leaves his control], but money is due to another master, viz., her father.⁶ Yet perhaps it belongs to her?⁷ — How now! her father receives her kiddushin [on her behalf], for it is written, [and the damsel's father shall say. . .] I gave my daughter unto this man;⁸ shall she take the money? [Surely not!] But perhaps this applies only to a minor [ketannah], who has no power to accept kiddushin; but as for a na'arah,⁹ who is empowered to accept kiddushin — let her betroth herself and take the money!¹⁰ — The Writ saith, in her youth¹¹ in her father's house:¹² teaching, all the profit of youth belongs to her father.

If so, when R. Huna said in Rab's name: Whence do we know that a daughter's labour belongs to her father? — From the verse: And if a man shall sell his daughter to be a maidservant:¹³ just as a maidservant's labour belongs to her master, so does a daughter's labour belong to her father; learn it rather from, ‘in her youth, in her father's house’? But [you must answer], that refers to the annulment of vows.¹⁴ So here too, [you must admit] that it is written in reference to annulment of vows!¹⁵ And should you argue, We may learn therefrom¹⁶ — but civil law¹⁷ cannot be deduced from ritual law.¹⁸ And should you say, we may learn it from kenas¹⁹ — but civil law cannot be deduced from kenas?²⁰ And should you say: We may learn it from [the indemnity payable for her] shame and depreciation²¹ — yet shame and depreciation are different, since her father has an interest therein.²² — But [answer thus:] it is logical that when a limitation is made,

(1) V. Glos. The marriage bond cannot be dissolved by halizah.

(2) Deut. XXIV, 1.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) He can accept money or a deed as her kiddushin, the former belonging to him, or deliver her to intercourse, v. Keth. 46b.

(5) Ex. XXI, 11: this refers to a Hebrew maidservant.

(6) When she leaves him on marriage. Hence her father has a right to the money given as kiddushin.

(7) The verse merely implying that no money is payable when she leaves this master, but it is when she leaves another master, viz., her father. But nothing shews that the money belongs to her father, which would follow only if Scripture had written: ‘without money to him’.

(8) Deut. XXII, 16; thus shewing that the privilege rests entirely with him.

(9) V. Glos.

(10) A minor cannot enter into a legal contract; hence it is but equitable that her father has full power over her in respect to marriage. But a na'arah can make valid transactions and acquire property; the father therefore should have no rights in respect to her kiddushin. — Though the verse quoted, dealing with the slandering of a woman's honour, explicitly refers to a na'arah — Then shall the father of the na'arah (E.V. damsel) etc., — she may have been betrothed while a minor.

(11) I.e., when a na'arah, to which the Heb. term bi-ne'ureha corresponds.

(12) Num. XXX, 17.

(13) Ex. XXI, 7.

(14) Teaching that the father can annul his unmarried daughter's vows, if a na'arah; but it has no bearing on her labour.

(15) Not kiddushin.

(16) Just as a father can annul his daughter's vows, so has he a title to her betrothal money.

(17) Lit., 'money'.

(18) Lit., 'prohibition'. The title to betrothal money is purely a question of civil law, whereas the binding character of vows and their annulment belong to ritual law.

(19) Lit., 'fine'; v. Glos. If a man seduces, violates, or slanders a na'arah, he must pay a fixed fine to her father: Ex. XXII, 15f; Deut. XXII, 13-19; 28f. Hence in the case of kiddushin too the money belongs to her father.

(20) This is a general principle. Kenas is not regarded as equitable indemnification for loss sustained, for then the amounts would vary, but as a Biblical decree. As such, it stands in a category by itself, and ordinary civil law cannot be compared with it.

(21) Besides the fixed kenas, the seducer must pay her father for the shame she sustained and her loss in social standing, which has a monetary value. These are ordinary payments for injury inflicted and therefore provide a basis for analogy.

(22) For her father could inflict these on her by marrying her to a man suffering from repulsive disfigurement.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 4a

it applies to an analogous going forth.¹ But the one departure is dissimilar to the other: there [sc. a maidservant] she passes from her master's authority completely; whereas here she yet wants being given over for huppah?² — Nevertheless, she passes out of his control in respect of annulment of vows; for we learnt: A betrothed maiden — her father and husband [together] may annul her vows.³

Now, this verse: 'and she shall go out for nothing' — does it come to teach this? Surely it is needed for what was taught, viz., 'And she shall go out for nothing' — this refers to the days of bagruth;⁴ without money — to the days of na'aruth!⁵ — Said Rabina: If so, Scripture should have written, en kesef [without money]; why write, eyn kesef⁶ — [To teach:] no money is due to this master, but money is due to another, viz., her father.⁶ And how do you know that such exegesis is permissible?⁷ — Because it was taught: [If a priest's daughter also be married unto a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things. But if the priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced,] and have no [eyn] child [. . . she shall eat of her father's meat].⁸ I only know [that] her own child [disqualifies her]; whence do I know [the same of] her child's child?⁹ From the verse: 'and have no [eyn] child', [teaching] examine her [for issue].¹⁰ Again, I only know [that] legitimate seed [disqualifies her]: whence do I know it of illegitimate [pasul] seed?¹¹ From the verse, and have no [eyn] child: examine her [for any issue whatsoever]. But you have employed this for her child's child? — For her child's child no verse is required, because grand-children are as children,¹² [hence] the verse is required only for her illegitimate seed.

Now, how does the Tanna¹³ himself know that such exegesis is permissible? — I will tell you. It is written: Baalam doth not consent [me'en],¹⁴ and my husband's brother doth not consent [me'en]¹⁵ neither of which contain a yod, whereas here [in the verses under discussion] a yod is written:¹⁶ this proves that it [sc. the yod] comes for exegesis. Now, it is necessary to state that in the case of a na'arah, both her kiddushin and her labour belong to her father.¹⁷ For had Scripture written that her kiddushin belongs to her father, I might have thought, That is because she takes no pains with it; but her labour, for which she toils, I would say is her own. And if we were told about her labour, that is because she lives thereby;¹⁸ but her kiddushin, which comes from elsewhere, I would think is hers: thus both are necessary.

The [above] text [says:] 'And she shall go out for nothing — this refers to the days of bagruth; without money — to the days of na'aruth.' Then Scripture should have written na'aruth, which renders bagruth superfluous?¹⁹ — Said Rabbah: One comes and illumines the other.²⁰ For this may be compared to the case of toshab and sakir,²¹ as was taught: Toshab means one [a Hebrew slave] acquired in perpetuity;²² sakir, one purchased for a period of [six] years.²³ Now, let toshab be stated, but not sakir, and I would reason: if one acquired in perpetuity may not eat, how much more so one purchased only for a period of [six] years?²⁴ Were it so, I would say, toshab is one purchased for a limited period, but one acquired in perpetuity may eat. Therefore sakir comes and illumines [the meaning of] toshab, [teaching] that though he is purchased for ever, he may not eat. Said Abaye to him: How compare! There they are two persons, and even had Scripture [explicitly] written, a toshab whose ear was bored,²⁵ and then added the other, sakir would be something which might be inferred a minori; and a thing which is derived a minori Scripture [often] takes the trouble to write. But here [in the case of a maidservant] she is only one person: having departed in na'aruth, what business has she with him in bagruth? — But, said Abaye, it is necessary only for the majority of a [constitutionally] barren woman:²⁶ I might have thought, she [a Hebrew maidservant] is freed only by na'aruth, but not by bagruth: hence we are informed [otherwise]. Mar, son of R. Ashi, demurred: But does this not follow a minori? If symptoms [of na'aruth], which do not free her from parental authority,²⁷ free her from her master's authority: then bagruth, which liberates from parental authority, surely liberates her from her master's authority! — But, said Mar, son of R. Ashi: This is necessary only in respect of the sale itself of a barren woman:²⁸ I might have thought, with one who will [subsequently] produce evidence of na'aruth, the sale is valid: but with one who will not produce such evidence²⁹ the sale is altogether invalid:

(1) After all, the matter is deduced from 'and she shall go out for nothing' without money, the reasoning being as follows: The verse teaches that only for a maidservant is no payment due for gaining her freedom. Now, if it were due, it would obviously be her master's; hence when we learn that elsewhere, sc. marriage, payment is due, it is likewise due to the master whom she leaves, viz., her father.

(2) Before which her father is still entitled to her labour, and acts as her heir.

(3) But the father no longer enjoys undivided control.

- (4) V. Glos.
- (5) V. Glos. Thus the verse merely teaches that something else, not money, frees her, but implies no other exclusion.
- (6) Rabina assumes that ‘without money’ could be written, it (en); the inserted yod h (iht eyn) is superfluous, so expresses a further limitation.
- (7) I.e., that the yod (h) may be regarded as superfluous?
- (8) Lev. XXII, 12f.
- (9) Her own being dead.
- (10) [vk ihg , a play on the word iht or an interchange of the t with the g, as is frequent in Semitic languages]. See if she has any descendants. This is deduced from the superfluous yod.
- (11) ‘Illegitimate’ not in the modern sense, but e.g., a child born of adultery.
- (12) This is deduced in Yeb. 62b.
- (13) V. Glos.
- (14) Num. XXII, 14.
- (15) Deut. XXV, 7.
- (16) It is assumed that me'en is derived from en.
- (17) These were deduced from two separate verses on 3b.
- (18) She must work for her keep, hence her earnings belong to her father, who keeps her. — Tosaf. in Git. 47b s.v. l , hcku.
- (19) If she is freed at na'aruth, which is earlier, surely she is freed at bagruth!
- (20) The two phrases must refer to two ages, na'aruth and bagruth. But if only one were written — and she shall go out for nothing — I would apply it to bagruth only.
- (21) The reference is to Lev. XXII, 10: a toshab (E.V. sojourner) of the priest, or a sakir (E.V. hired servant), shall not eat of the holy thing.
- (22) I.e., until Jubilee; v. Ex. XXI, 5f.
- (23) V. ibid. 2.
- (24) For the former is more of the priest's chattel (v. Lev. XXII, 11) than the latter.
- (25) V. Ex. ibid.
- (26) She has no symptoms of na'aruth, and attains her majority (bagruth) at the age of twenty.
- (27) V. p. 7.
- (28) I.e., a minor who shews symptoms of constitutional barrenness.
- (29) V. n. 5.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 4b

therefore the verse: ‘and she shall go out for nothing etc.’, teaches us [otherwise]. Now, according to Mar, son of R. Ashi, who objected, does this not follow a minori, but we have said: Scripture takes pains to write something which could be inferred a minori? — That is only if no other answer is possible; but if it is, we answer.¹

But this Tanna adduces it² from the following. For it was taught: When a man taketh a wife, and hath intercourse with her, then it shall be, if she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some unseemly thing in her, etc.;³ ‘taking’ is only by means of money, and thus it is written: I will give the money for the field: take it of me.⁴ But does this not follow a minori: if a Hebrew maidservant, who cannot be acquired by intercourse, can be acquired by money; this one [a wife], who may be acquired [in marriage] by intercourse, can surely be acquired by money? Let a yebamah prove [the contrary:] she may be acquired by intercourse, yet she is not acquired by money. As for a yebamah, that may be because she cannot be acquired by deed: will you say the same of this one [a wife], who can be acquired by deed? Therefore Scripture teaches: ‘when a man taketh, etc.’⁵ But what need of a verse for this: it has been inferred!⁶ — Said R. Ashi: Because one can argue, The deduction is vitiated ab initio:⁷ whence do you adduce it? From a Hebrew maidservant! As for a Hebrew maidservant, that [her acquisition is by money] is because she is freed by money: will you say the same of this one [a wife], who is not freed by money? Therefore Scripture teaches: ‘when a man taketh a wife’.

Now, both ‘and she shall go out for nothing’⁸ and ‘when a man taketh’ must be written. For had Scripture written: ‘when a man taketh’, I would have thought, the kiddushin given to her by the husband is her own: therefore Scripture [also] writes, ‘and she shall go out for nothing.’ And had Scripture written: ‘and she shall go out for nothing,’ I would have thought, if she [the wife] gives him [the husband] money and betroths him,⁹ it is valid kiddushin:¹⁰ therefore Scripture wrote, ‘when a man taketh’, but not, ‘when a woman taketh’.¹¹ ‘And hath intercourse with her’: this teaches that she may be acquired by intercourse. But does this not follow a minori? If a yebamah, who cannot be acquired by money, is acquired by intercourse; then this one [a wife], who is acquired by money, can surely be acquired by intercourse! — Let a Hebrew maidservant prove [the contrary], for she may be acquired by money, yet she is not acquired by intercourse. As for a Hebrew maidservant, that is because her acquisition is not for conjugal purposes; will you say the same of this one, who is acquired for conjugal purposes? Therefore it is stated: ‘and has intercourse with her’. But what need of a verse: it has been inferred? — Said R. Ashi: Because one can argue, the deduction is vitiated ab initio: whence do you adduce it? From a yebamah! As for a yebamah, that is because she already stands tied;¹² can you say [the same] of this one, who does not stand tied? Therefore it is taught: ‘and hath intercourse with her’.

(1) By making the verse apply to something else.

(2) Sc. that kiddushin is effected by money.

(3) Deut. XXIV, 1.

(4) Gen. XXIII, 13.

(5) That ‘taking’ means by money.

(6) A minori, the refutation from yebamah being refuted itself.

(7) Without referring to a yebamah.

(8) V. supra 3b and 4a.

(9) Saying to him, ‘I am betrothed unto thee in virtue of the money I give thee.’

(10) Since that verse does not shew who must give the money.

(11) Hence he must give the money.

(12) To the yabam (q.v. Glos.), on account of her deceased husband, hence cohabitation merely completes the bond.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 5a

And whence do we know that [a woman may be acquired] by deed too? But may it not be inferred a minori: if money, which cannot free, effects betrothal;¹ then deed, which frees,² can surely tie? — [No.] As for money, that is because hekdesch and second tithe³ can be redeemed therewith;⁴ can you say likewise of a deed, by which hekdesch and second tithe cannot be redeemed, for it is written, [and if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it,] then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation, and it shall be assured to him.⁵ Therefore Scripture saith, And when she is departed [out of his house, she may go] and be [another man's wife]:⁶ thus 'be — coming' [betrothed] is assimilated to 'departure' [divorce]; just as the 'departure' is by deed, so is 'becoming' too. Then let 'departure be assimilated to 'becoming': just as the 'becoming' may be by money, so the 'departure' too may be effected by money? — Abaye replied: Then it will be said: Money unites and money sunders:⁷ shall the defender become the prosecutor!⁸ If so, of deed too it will be said: Deed sunders and deed unites: shall the prosecutor become the defender! — The contents⁹ of each deed are distinct.¹⁰ Then here too, [the purpose of] this money is distinct and that of the other is distinct? — Nevertheless, the impress [of the coin] is the same.

Raba said: Scripture saith, then he shall write her [a writ of divorcement]:¹¹ [hence], she can be divorced by writing, not by money. Say rather, she can be divorced by 'writing', but not betrothed by writing? — But it is written, and when she is departed, she may go and be, etc., assimilating etc.¹² And why do you choose thus?¹³ — It is logical: when treating of divorce, one excludes [a particular method of] divorce; but when dealing with divorce, shall one exclude [a form of] marriage? [Surely not!]

Now, according to R. Jose the Galilean, who utilises this verse ['then he shall write, etc.'], for a different purpose,¹⁴ how do we know that she cannot be divorced by money? — The Writ saith, 'a writ of divorcement' — a deed can divorce her, but nothing else can divorce her. Now, how do the Rabbis employ this word 'divorcement'?¹⁵ — They employ it [to shew] that it must be an instrument which [completely] sunders them from each other. Even as it was taught: [If the husband says,] 'Behold, here is your divorce, on condition that you drink no wine or do not visit your father's house for ever,' that is no 'divorcement':¹⁶ 'for thirty days,' that is a 'divorcement'.¹⁷ And R. Jose the Galilean?¹⁸ — He deduces it from the use of kerithuth instead of koreth.¹⁹ And the Rabbis?²⁰ — In their opinion, the use of kerithuth instead of koreth has no particular significance.

Now, one could not be inferred from another; yet let one be inferred from two others?²¹ — Which could be inferred: should Scripture omit deed, that it might be inferred from the others? But as for the others, that is because their pleasure is great!²² Should Scripture omit intercourse, that it might be inferred from the others? But as for the others, that is because their powers of acquisition are great!²³ Should Scripture omit money, that it might be inferred from the others? But as for the others, that is because they have compulsory powers!²⁴ And should you argue, money too has compulsory powers over a Hebrew maidservant²⁵ — nevertheless, we do not find this in respect to conjugal relationship.²⁶ R. Huna said: Huppah acquires [a woman], a minori. If money, which does not authorize one to eat terumah,²⁷ effects possession;²⁸ then huppah, which authorizes one to eat terumah, surely effects possession!²⁹ Yet does not money authorize the eating [of terumah]? But 'Ulla said: By Biblical law, an arusah³⁰ may eat of terumah, for it is said: And if a priest acquire any soul, the purchase of his money, [he shall eat out],³¹ and this one [a betrothed woman] too is the purchase of his money. Why then did they [the Sages] say that she may not eat [thereof]? For fear lest a cup [of wine of terumah] be mixed for her³² in her father's house,³³ and she give it to drink to her brothers and sisters. But argue thus: if money, which does not complete [marriage],³⁴ acquires [in marriage],³⁵ then huppah, which completes [marriage], surely acquires! As for money, [it may be asked,] that is because hekdeshoth³⁶ and second tithe are redeemed therewith!³⁷ Let then intercourse prove it.³⁸ As for intercourse, that is because it acquires in the case of a yebamah! Then let money prove it.³⁹ And thus the argument revolves: the distinguishing feature of one is not that of the other, nor is the distinguishing of this one that of the other; the feature common to both is that they acquire elsewhere, and acquire here [in marriage]; so do I adduce huppah, which acquires elsewhere⁴⁰ and acquires here too.⁴¹ [No.]

(1) Lit., 'brings in' — a woman, into the bond of matrimony.

(2) I.e., the deed of divorce, which frees a woman from marriage.

(3) v. p. 4, n. 4.

(4) When an article of hekdesh cannot itself be used in the Temple service, it is redeemed, reverts to a secular status, and the redemption money is dedicated to the Temple. Similarly, if the second tithe cannot be carried to Jerusalem, it is redeemed, becomes secular, and the redemption money is consumed in Jerusalem. — Since then money is potent in respect of these, it may also effect marriage.

(5) Lev. XXVII, 19. The text gives only a paraphrase of this, then he shall give the money and it shall be assured to him; v. Tosaf. Shab. 128a s.v. i, bu also p. 276, n. 4.

(17) Fur after that she is completely cut off from him.

(18) How does he know this?

(19) He regards the longer form as more emphatic; hence it teaches that the cutting apart must be absolute, as in the Baraitha.

(20) Why state the whole phrase, when the word keritkuth itself is sufficient?

(21) It was proved above that no one method of acquisition may be inferred from another a minori, hence a verse is necessary for each. Now the Talmud asks, Only two are required then the third follows by analogy: just as the two are methods of acquisition elsewhere, and also in marriage, so is the third. For each effects possession elsewhere, money and deed in ordinary purchases, and cohabitation in the case of a yebamah.

(22) Both money and cohabitation confer pleasure upon the recipient, but a deed does not.

(23) Both give a title to land and slaves, which cohabitation does not.

(24) Cohabitation acquires a yebamah even against her will, and a deed divorces a woman likewise even against her desire.

(25) A father can sell his daughter, the transaction being effected by money, against her will (Rashi). Tosaf.: Having bought a Hebrew maidservant, her master can declare that the money paid was for betrothal, even against her will and that of her father.

(26) According to Rashi's interpretation, the sense is obvious. Tosaf.: Money has no power of matrimonial compulsion at the outset, for in the first place the money is given for a maidservant, not a wife.

(27) V. Glos. If a priest betroths an Israelite's daughter with money, she may not eat terumah until the huppah.

(28) Of a woman in marriage, and she becomes an arusah (q.v. Glos.).

(29) To make a woman an arusah.

(30) V. Glos.

(31) Lev. XXII, 11.

(32) Wine was diluted before drinking.

(33) Cohabitation being forbidden until huppah, the arusah naturally lived in her father's house until then.

(34) The money makes her an arusah only, and her father is still her heir, and entitled to her labour; v. supra.

(35) Effecting betrothal, which is marriage in so far as divorce is required to free her.

(39) Which cannot acquire a yebamah, yet effects betrothal.

(40) After betrothal.

(41) I.e., it can effect the first stage of marriage, sc. betrothal.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 5b

The feature common to both is that they confer much pleasure!¹ Let deed then prove it.² As for deed, that is because it frees an Israelitish daughter!³ Then let money and cohabitation prove it. And thus the argument revolves: the distinguishing feature of one is not that of another, nor is the distinguishing feature of this one that of the other:⁴ the feature common to all is that they acquire in general and here too; so do I adduce huppah, that it acquires in general and here too. [No.] As for the common feature, it is that they have powers of compulsion.⁵ And R. Huna?⁶ — Money at least has no compulsory powers in matrimonial relationships.

Raba said: There are two refutations of the matter:⁷ firstly, we learnt THREE, not 'four'; and secondly, can then huppah complete [marriage] but through [prior] kiddushin; are we then to deduce huppah, when not as a result of kiddushin, from the same when preceded by kiddushin? — Abaye answered him: As for your objection, we learnt THREE, not 'four': [only] what is explicitly stated [in Scripture] is taught, but not what is not explicitly stated.⁸ And as to your objection; can then huppah complete [marriage] but through [prior] kiddushin — that indeed is R. Huna's argument: if money_ which cannot complete [marriage] after money,⁹ nevertheless acquires; then huppah, which completes [marriage] after money, can surely acquire.¹⁰

Our Rabbis taught: How [is a woman acquired] by money? If a man gives her [a woman] money or its equivalent and declares to her, 'Behold, thou art consecrated unto me,' [or] 'thou art betrothed unto me', [or] 'Behold, thou art a wife unto me' — then she is betrothed.¹¹ But if she gives him [money or its equivalent] and says 'Behold, I am consecrated unto thee,' 'I am betrothed unto thee,' 'I am a wife unto thee,' she is not betrothed. R. Papa demurred: Thus it is only when he both gives [the money] and makes the declaration [that the betrothal is valid]; but if he gives [it] and she speaks, she is not betrothed. Then consider the second clause: But if she gives [it] to him, and she makes the declaration, the kiddushin is not valid. [Hence,] it is only when she both gives [the money] and speaks, but if he gives the money and she speaks, the kiddushin is valid? — The first clause is exact, while the second is mentioned incidentally.¹² But may a statement be made in the second clause contradictory to the first?¹³ — But this is its meaning: If he gives [the money] and he speaks, the kiddushin is obviously valid; [but] if he gives, and she speaks, it is accounted as though she both gives and speaks, so that the kiddushin is not valid. Alternatively, if he gives and speaks, she is betrothed; if she gives and speaks, she is [certainly] not betrothed; but if he gives and she speaks, it is doubtful, and as a Rabbinical measure we fear [the validity of the kiddushin].¹⁴

Samuel said: In respect to kiddushin, if he gave her money or its equivalent and declares, 'Behold, thou art consecrated,' 'Behold, thou art betrothed,' [or] 'Behold, thou art a wife,' — then she is betrothed. [If he declares,] 'Behold, I am thy husband,' 'Behold, I am thy master,'¹⁵ 'Behold, I am thy arus,'¹⁶ — there are no grounds for fear.¹⁷ The same applies to divorce: If he gives her [the document of divorce] and declares, 'Behold, thou art sent forth,' 'Behold, thou art divorced,'¹⁸ [or] 'Thou art [henceforth] permitted to any man, — then she is divorced. [But if he declares,] 'I am not thy husband,' 'I am not thy master,' 'I am not thy arus,' there are no grounds for fear.¹⁹

R. Papa said to Abaye: Shall we say that in Samuel's opinion inexplicit abbreviations are [valid] abbreviations?²⁰ But we learnt: If one declares, 'I will be,' he becomes a nazir. Now we pondered thereon: but perhaps he meant, 'I will fast'?²¹ And Samuel answer — ed: That is only if a nazir was passing before him.²² Thus, it is only because a nazir was passing before him, but not otherwise.²³ — The circumstances here are that he said 'unto me.' If so, what does he inform us?²⁴ — His teaching is with respect to these

(1) Cf. p. 14, n. 5; no pleasure however, is derived from huppah.

(2) Which gives us pleasure, yet effects betrothal.

(3) I.e., it effects divorce.

(4) Regarding money and cohabitation as one proposition, and deed as another.

(5) V. supra p. 14, nn. 7, 8.

(6) How does he dispose of this?

(7) Sc. R. Huna's statement.

(8) Money and deed, though deduced by exegesis, are regarded as explicit, since they are intimated in Scripture. But huppah is only inferred a minori.

(9) I.e., when betrothal (erusin) is effected by money, the marriage cannot be completed by giving money a second time.

(10) A woman in the first stage of marriage — kiddushin.

(11) Lit., 'consecrated,' i.e., she becomes an arusah.

(12) In contrast to the first, but its implication is not to be stressed.

(13) Even if mentioned incidentally, it must be essentially, and in its implications, correct.

(14) She is neither married nor unmarried, and if another man betroths her she must be divorced by both, since we do not know her rightful husband.

(15) Heb. kgc = husband.

(16) V. Glos.

(17) It is definitely not valid betrothal, as below. Consequently, if another betroths her, the second kiddushin is valid.

(18) The Heb. verb ard, garesh, literally means ‘to expel’, ‘drive forth’.

(19) The divorce is definitely invalid.

(20) Lit., ‘handles’. In the above, the formulas are abbreviations, since he declares ‘Behold, thou art betrothed,’ omitting ‘unto me. Moreover, their purport is not explicit and beyond doubt, for he may have been speaking and acting on another man's behalf, yet Samuel rules that since he was the speaker, she is betrothed to him, thus shewing that he holds these to be valid.

(21) Lit., ‘I will be in a fast’.

(22) Then it is obvious that he meant, ‘I will be like him.’

(23) Which proves that Samuel holds that abbreviations must be beyond doubt.

(24) It is obvious.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 6a

latter expressions.¹ [For] here it is written, when any man taketh [a woman],² but not that he taketh himself [as a husband], and there it is written, and when he send her away,³ but not that he sends himself away.

Our Rabbis taught: [if one declares,] ‘Behold, thou art my wife,’ ‘Behold, thou art my arusah,’ ‘Behold, thou art acquired to me,’ she is betrothed; ‘Behold, thou art mine,’ ‘Behold, thou art under my authority,’ ‘Thou art tied unto me,’ she is betrothed. Then let them all be combined and taught in one clause?⁴ — The tanna⁵ heard each three separately, and memorized them [in that order]. The scholars propounded: [What if one declares,] ‘Thou art singled out for me,’⁶ ‘Thou art designated unto me,’⁷ ‘Thou art my help,’⁸ ‘Thou art meet for me,’⁹ ‘Thou art gathered in to me,’ ‘Thou art my rib,’¹⁰ ‘Thou art closed in to me,’¹¹ ‘Thou art my replacement,’¹² ‘Thou art kept [seized] unto me,’ [or,] ‘Thou art taken by me’? — One at least you may solve. For it was taught: If one declares, ‘Thou art taken by me,’ she is betrothed, for it is written, when a man taketh a wife.¹³

The Scholars propounded: What of ‘Thou art my harufah [betrothed]’?¹⁴ — Come and hear: For it was taught: If a man declares, ‘Be thou my harufah,’ she is betrothed, for in Judea an arusah is called harufah. Is Judea then the greater part of the world?¹⁵ — It is meant thus: If he declares, ‘Be thou my harufah,’ she is betrothed, for it is said: ‘that is a bondmaid, neherefeth [betrothed] to a man’; moreover, in Judea an arusah is called harufah. Is [the practice in] Judea to support Scripture!¹⁶ — But it means thus: If he says in Judea, ‘Be thou my harufah,’ she is betrothed, because in Judea an arusah is called harufah.

What are the circumstances:¹⁷ shall we say, that he was not speaking to her about her divorce or kiddushin,¹⁸ how does she know what he means?¹⁹ But if he was speaking to her about her divorce or kiddushin, then even if he said nothing at all [but gave her money], she is also [betrothed]. For we learnt: If a man was speaking to a woman on matters concerning her divorce or betrothal, and gave her her divorce or kiddushin, but made no explicit declaration — R. Jose said: It is sufficient; R. Judah maintained: He must make an explicit declaration. Whereon R. Huna said in Samuel's name: The halachah²⁰ agrees with R. Jose! — I will tell you: after all, it refers to a case where he was speaking to her about her divorce or betrothal; now, had he given her [the money or the deed of divorce] and remained silent, that indeed would be so.²¹ But the circumstances here are that he gave [them] to her and made one of these declarations. And this is the problem: did he employ these expressions in the sense of kiddushin, or perhaps he meant them in reference to work?²² The questions stand over.

The [above] text [stated]: ‘If a man was speaking to a woman on matters concerning her divorce or betrothal, and gave her her divorce or kiddushin, but made no explicit declaration — R. Jose said: It is sufficient; R. Judah maintained: He must make an explicit declaration’. Said Rab Judah in Samuel's name: Providing that they were engaged on that topic [when the divorce or kiddushin was given]. R. Eliezer said likewise in R. Oshaia's name: Providing that they were engaged on that topic.²³

This is disputed by Tannaim; Rabbi said: Providing that they were engaged on that topic; R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon said: Even if they were not engaged on that topic. But if they were not engaged on that topic, how does she know what he meant? — Abaye answered: [They travelled] from one matter to another in the same topic.²⁴ R. Huna said in Samuel's name: The halachah agrees with R. Jose. R. Yemar asked R. Ashi: Then when Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: He who does not know the peculiar nature of divorce and betrothal²⁵ should have no business with them²⁶ — [does it hold good] even if he is ignorant of this ruling of R. Huna in Samuel's name? — Even so, he replied.

‘The same applies to divorce: If he gives her [the document of divorce,] and declares, "Behold, thou art sent forth," "Behold, thou art divorced," [or] "Thou art permitted to any man," — then she is divorced.’²⁷ Now it is obvious, if he gives a divorce to his wife and says to her, ‘Behold, thou art a free woman,’ his words are null.¹ If he says to his female slave, 'Thou art permitted to all men,' his words are [likewise] null.² [But] what if he says to his wife, 'Behold, thou art for thyself,' do we say, he meant it in respect of labour; or perhaps he meant it absolutely?³ — Said Rabina to R. Ashi: Come and hear: For we learnt: The essential part of a deed of manumission is, 'Behold, thou art a free man,' 'Behold, thou art for thyself.' Now if a heathen⁴ slave, whose body belongs to him [his master], yet when he says to him, 'Behold, thou art for thyself,' he means it absolutely; how much more so in the case of a wife, who does not belong bodily to him.

Rabina asked R. Ashi: What if he says to his slave, 'I have no concern with you'? Do we say, he means, 'I have absolutely no concern with you';⁵ or perhaps he says it to him in reference to work? — R. Nahman observed to R. Ashi-others state, R. Huna of Hoza'ah⁶ to R. Ashi: Come and hear: If one sells his [heathen] slave to a heathen, he is emancipated,⁷ and requires a deed of manumission from his first master.⁸ Said R. Simeon b. R. Gamaliel: When does this hold good? If he [the vendor] did not make out for him an oni;⁹ but if he did, that is his [deed of] emancipation.¹⁰ What is meant by 'oni'? — Said R. Shesheth: If he wrote for him, 'When you escape from him [the heathen buyer], I have no concern with you.'¹¹

Abaye said: If a man betroths [a woman] with a debt,¹² she is not betrothed;¹³ with the benefit of a debt,¹⁴ she is betrothed; yet this may not be done, as it constitutes an evasion of usury.¹⁵ This 'benefit of a debt,' how is it meant? Shall we say, that he fixed [the interest] as a loan, he having said, [I am lending you] four [zuz] for five.¹⁶ — but that is real usury!¹⁷ Moreover, it is, in point of fact, a debt!¹⁸ — This holds good only if he extended the term [for repayment].¹⁹ Raba said: [If he says,] 'Take this maneh²⁰ on condition that you return it to me,' — in respect to purchase, he acquires no title;²¹ in the case of a woman,²² she is not betrothed; in the matter of a redemption of the firstborn,²³ the firstborn is not redeemed: in respect of terumah,²⁴ he fulfils the duty of 'giving', yet it is forbidden to act thus, as it looks like a priest who assists in the threshing floor.²⁵

What is Raba's opinion: if he holds that a gift on condition that it be returned is a valid gift, then even the others too [are valid]; whilst if he holds that it is not a valid gift, then even in the case of terumah it is not [valid]? Furthermore, It was Raba who ruled: A gift on condition that it is returned is valid. For Raba said: [If one says to another,] 'Here you have this citron, on condition that you return it to me,' if [the other] takes and [then] returns it, he fulfils his duty; if not, he does not fulfil [it]!²⁶ — But said R. Ashi: in the case of all it [the conditional gift] is valid, with the exception in that of a woman, because a woman cannot be acquired by barter.²⁷ R. Huna Mar, son of R. Nehemiah, said to R. Ashi: We teach in Raba's name even as you [have stated].

Raba said: [If a woman says,] 'Give a maneh to So-and-so,

The master who sold him to a Gentile, thus freeing him from that obligation, was punished by being forced to buy him back, even at a greatly enhanced price, and the slave then became free.

Similarly, if he remits the entire debt and says to her, 'I betroth you by the benefit that has now accrued to you by this remission,' his declaration is valid. But when he betroths her with money owing, he is offering a past benefit, hence the betrothal is invalid. R. Tam: If a woman owes money, and a third party gives the creditor a sum of money for an extension, and betroths her with that benefit which he has conferred upon her, for which he has actually given something.

(25) Of an Israelite, in order to receive the terumah. The Rabbis considered this undignified, and enacted that such a priest should not receive terumah. Now, if a priest accepts terumah on this condition, he offers an inducement to the Israelite to give it to him in the future too, and therefore Raba forbade the practice, though valid if done.

(26) The reference is to Lev. XXIII, 40: And ye shall take you on the first day (of the Feast of Tabernacles) the fruit of goodly trees (interpreted by the Rabbis as referring to the citron), branches of palm trees etc. The Rabbis ruled that this 'taking' requires one's own fruit, and to this Raba alludes. If the recipient carries out the stipulation, it was his for the period of 'taking', and so he fulfils his duty; otherwise, it was not his even then, and his duty is not fulfilled. Thus Raba holds a conditional gift valid.

(27) V. infra 28a; the article given as barter was generally returned, and so when money is thus given as kiddushin, it looks like barter.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 7a

and I will become betrothed to thee,¹ she is betrothed by the law of a surety:² a surety, though he personally derives no benefit [from the loan], yet obligates himself [to repayment]; so this woman too, though she personally derives no benefit [from the money], obligates and cedes herself [in betrothal]. [If a man says,] 'Take this maneh and be betrothed to So-and-so,'³ she is betrothed by the law of a Canaanite slave:⁴ a Canaanite slave, though he himself loses nothing,⁵ yet acquires himself [his freedom]; so this man too though he personally loses nothing, acquires this woman. [If the woman declares,] 'Give a maneh to So-and-so, and I will become betrothed to him,' she is betrothed by the laws of both: a surety, though he personally derives no benefit, obligates himself, so this woman too' though she personally derives no benefit, cedes herself. [And should you object:] How compare: as for a surety, he who acquires a title⁶ loses money,⁷ — but shall this man acquire the woman at no cost to himself? Then let a Canaanite slave prove it, who loses no money⁵ and yet acquires himself. [And if you demur:] How compare: there, he who gives possession⁸ acquires [the money given for the slave's freedom]; but here, shall this woman cede herself though she acquires nothing whatsoever? Then let a surety prove it: though he personally receives no benefit, he obligates himself.

Raba propounded: What [if a woman declares,] 'Here is a maneh and I will become betrothed unto thee?'⁹ Mar Zutra ruled in R. Papa's name: She is betrothed. R. Ashi objected to Mar Zutra: If so, property which ranks as security [real estate] is acquired as an adjunct to property which does not rank as security [movables];¹⁰ whereas we learnt the reverse: Property which does not rank as security may be acquired in conjunction with property which ranks as security by money, deed, or hazakah?¹¹ — Said he to him: Do you think that she said to him, 'Along with'?'¹² Here the reference is to an important personage: in return for the pleasure [she derives] from his accepting a gift from her, she completely cedes herself.¹³ It has been stated likewise in Raba's name: The same applies to monetary matters.¹⁴ Now, both are necessary: had we been informed this of kiddushin [only], that is because a woman is pleased [even] with very little, in accordance with Resh Lakish's dictum, for Resh Lakish said: It is better to dwell in grief with a load¹⁵ than to dwell in widowhood;¹⁶ but as for money, I would say it is not so. And if we were informed this of monetary matters, that is because it is subject to remission;¹⁷ but as for kiddushin, I would say it is not so.¹⁸ Hence both are necessary. Raba said: [If a man declares,] 'Be thou betrothed to half of me,' she is betrothed: 'half of thee be betrothed to me,' she is not betrothed. Abaye demurred before Raba: Why does 'half of thee be betrothed to me' differ, that she is not betrothed? Because Scripture said, [when a man take] a wife,¹⁹ but not half a wife? Then here too Scripture saith, ‘a man’, but not half a man? — How now! he rejoined. There, a woman is not eligible to two [men]; but is not a man eligible to two [women]? Hence this is what he said to her: ‘Should I desire to marry another, I may do so.’ Mar Zutra, son of R. Mari, said to Rabina: Yet let the kiddushin spread through the whole of her.²⁰ Has it not been taught: If one declares, ‘Let the foot of this [animal] be a burnt-offering,’ the whole of it is a burnt-offering? And even on the view that it is not all a burnt-offering, that is only if one dedicates a limb²¹ upon which life is not dependent; but if he dedicates a limb upon which life is dependent [e.g., the heart], it is all a burnt-offering!²² — How compare? There it is an animal, whereas here we have an independent²³ mind.²⁴ This can only be compared with R. Johanan's dictum: An animal belonging to two partners: — if one [of them] dedicates half, and then purchases it [the other half] and dedicates it, it is holy, yet cannot be offered up;²⁵ and it establishes [the sanctity of] a substitute,²⁶ and the substitute is as itself.²⁷ This proves three things:

- (1) And he does, and says to her, ‘Thou art betrothed unto me by the maneh I gave to So-and-so.’
 - (2) One who stands surety for the repayment of a debt by the debtor.
 - (3) Who had deputed him, but that the agent gave his own money instead of that of the principal.
 - (4) V. infra 22b.
 - (5) When another gives his master money for his freedom.
 - (6) Viz., the creditor, to the obligation of the surety.
 - (7) I.e., he first gives money to the debtor.
 - (8) Sc. the master, who cedes the slave to himself.
 - (9) And the man accepted it, saying: ‘Be thou betrothed unto me therewith’.
 - (10) A creditor could collect his debt out of the debtor's real estate, even if sold after the debt was contracted, but not out of movables, if sold; hence the former is termed property which ranks as security, the latter, property which does not rank as security. Human beings are on a par with the former, and R. Ashi assumed that the woman is acquired in conjunction with the maneh.
 - (11) V. infra 26a for explanatory notes.
 - (12) ‘Here is this maneh and acquire me along with it.’
 - (13) Though normally the man must give the money (supra 5b), yet if he is eminent his acceptance confers pleasure, which in turn is considered of financial value.
 - (14) If A says to B, ‘Give money to C, in return for which my field is sold to you,’ the sale is valid, by the law of surety: ‘Take a maneh, and let your field be sold to C,’ C acquires it by the law of a Canaanite slave; ‘Give money to C and let him thereby acquire my field,’ he acquires it by the laws of both — all as explained with reference to kiddushin.
 - (15) So Jast.; Rashi, ‘two bodies’.
 - (16) I.e., a woman prefers an unhappy married life to a happy single life.
 - (17) The purchase price can be altogether remitted, as in the case of a gift.
 - (18) A woman cannot forego the money of kiddushin. Since it is such a strong obligation, I would think that it must pass from the man who betroths to the woman who is betrothed.
 - (19) Deut. XXIV, 1.
 - (20) When he says: ‘half of thee betrothed to me.’
 - (21) Lit., ‘thing’.
 - (22) And surely life is dependent on half a woman's body.
 - (23) Lit., ‘another’.

(24) The woman refuses to let the kiddushin spread through the whole of her.

(25) Since it was not fit for offering originally, as the half belonging to the other partner was yet secular. Hence it must now be sold, and an animal purchased with the proceeds and sacrificed. Thus the sanctity of the half does not spread over the whole, since the partner does not wish it.

(26) The reference is to Lev. XXVII, 33: neither shall he change it (sc. a consecrated animal): and if he changed it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy. Thus here too, if one substituted another animal for this one, the substitute also is holy.

(27) It may not be sacrificed, but must be sold, as in n. 7.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 7b

[i] Live animals may be rendered [permanently] rejected;¹ [ii] that which is rejected ab initio is rejected;² [iii] rejection applies to monetary sanctity.³

Raba propounded: What [if one declares,] ‘Thy half [be betrothed to me] for half a perutah, and thy [other] half for half a perutah’? Since he says to her, ‘for half a perutah,’ he divided it;⁴ or perhaps, he was proceeding with his enumeration?⁵ Should you rule, he was proceeding with his enumeration: what [if he declares,] ‘Thy half [be betrothed unto me] for a perutah, and thy [other] half for a perutah’? Since he said to her, ‘for a perutah’ ‘and a perutah’, he divided his proposal;⁶ or perhaps, providing it was on the same day, he was proceeding with his enumeration? Should you answer: Providing it was on the same day, he was proceeding with his enumeration: What [if he declares,] ‘Thy half [be betrothed to me] for a perutah to-day, and thy [other] half for a perutah tomorrow’? Since he said to her, ‘To-morrow,’ he divided it; or perhaps he meant thus: the kiddushin commence immediately, but shall not be completed until to-morrow? [Further,] what [if he says], ‘Thy two halves for a perutah’: here he certainly proposed to her in once; or perhaps a woman cannot be betrothed at all by halves? The questions stand over.

Raba propounded: What [if he declares,] ‘Thy two daughters [be betrothed] to my two sons for a perutah’? Do we consider the giver and the receiver, so that there is money;⁷ or perhaps, we consider them [who betroth and are betrothed], and there is not? The question stands over.

R. Papa propounded: What [if he declares,] ‘Thy daughter and thy cow [be mine] for a perutah’? Do we say [it means,] thy daughter for half a perutah, and thy cow for half a perutah:⁸ or perhaps [he meant,] ‘Thy daughter by a perutah, and thy cow by meshika’?⁹ The question stands over.

R. Ashi propounded: What [if one declares,] ‘Thy daughter and thy land [be mine] for a perutah’? Does he mean, ‘Thy daughter for half a perutah and thy land for half a perutah’; or perhaps, ‘Thy daughter for a perutah, and thy land by hazakah’?¹⁰ The question stands over.

A certain man betrothed [a woman] with silk.¹¹ Rabbah ruled: No valuation is necessary;¹² R. Joseph maintained: It must be valued. Now, if he declared to her, ‘[Be thou betrothed to me] for whatever it is worth,’ all agree that valuation is unnecessary.¹³ If he declared to her, ‘[Be thou betrothed to me] for fifty [zuz],’ and this [the silk] is not worth fifty: then of course it is not worth it!¹⁴ They differ only if he stipulated fifty and it was worth fifty. Rabbah maintained: [Prior] valuation is unnecessary, since it is worth fifty: R. Joseph said: [Prior] valuation is required: Since the woman has no expert knowledge of its value, she does not rely thereon.¹⁵ Others state: They disagree in the case of 'for whatever it is worth' too. R. Joseph maintained: The equivalent of money must be as money itself: just as the latter is definite,

- (1) As here: the animal having been rendered ineligible when dedicated, since half remained secular, it remains so even when the other half too is dedicated. There is an opposing view that only a dead animal can be rendered permanently ineligible, v. Yoma 64a.
 - (2) This animal was not eligible to be dedicated by a single partner from the very outset. There is an opposing view that an animal can be rendered unfit only if it was originally rejected permanently.
 - (3) This animal was sanctified from the very outset only for its value, i.e., that the money which its sale would furnish should be expended for a sacrifice; nevertheless it becomes permanently ineligible for the altar. This excludes the view that might have been held that only an animal that was fit in the first place to be dedicated to the altar can be rendered permanently ineligible.
 - (4) I.e., he betrothed her as two separate halves, and neither is valid.
 - (5) He meant that as he was betrothing her entirely for a perutah, he was thereby betrothing each half for half a perutah.
 - (6) For it is less plausible here to assume that he was proceeding with his enumeration, since he could have betrothed her entirely for the first perutah.
 - (7) A perutah is given and received by one person; less than a perutah is not money.
 - (8) And therefore the kiddushin is invalid.
 - (9) V. Glos. and infra 25b.
 - (10) V. Glos. and infra 26a.
 - (11) In accordance with the Mishnah on 2a: 'OR THE WORTH OF A PERUTAH.'
 - (12) The silk need not be valued beforehand so that the woman might know how much it is worth.
 - (13) Since they are obviously worth at least a perutah.
 - (14) And the kiddushin is invalid.
 - (15) That it is worth so much, unless it is assessed by experts.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 8a

so must the equivalent be definite.¹

R. Joseph said: Whence do I know it? For it was taught: [If there be yet many years, according unto them he shall give back the price of his redemption] out of the money with which he was acquired:² thus he³ may be acquired by money, but not by produce or utensils. Now, what is meant by 'produce or utensils'? Shall we say, that he cannot be acquired through these at all? But Scripture saith, 'he shall return the price of his redemption,' to include the equivalent of money as money?⁴ Whilst if they are worth less than a perutah, why specify 'produce and utensil'? The same applies to money too? Hence it must surely mean that they are worth a perutah, but since they are not definite, they cannot [acquire the slave].⁵ And the other?⁶ — This is its meaning: he can be acquired in virtue of money, but not in virtue of produce or utensils. And what is that? Barter.⁷ But according to R. Nahman, who ruled: produce cannot effect a barter,⁸ what can be said? — But after all it means that they are not worth a perutah: and as to your objection, why specify 'produce and utensils'? The same applies to money? He [the Tanna] proceeds to a climax.⁹ [Thus:] It is unnecessary [to state] that money, only if worth a perutah is it valid,¹⁰ not otherwise. But as for produce and utensils, I might argue, Since the benefit derived is immediate,¹¹ he resolves and lets himself be acquired. Therefore we are informed [otherwise].

R. Joseph said: How do I know it? For it was taught: [If one declares,] ‘This calf be for my son's redemption,’¹² ‘this garment be for my son's redemption,’ his declaration is invalid.¹³ ‘This calf, worth five sela's,¹⁴ be for my son's redemption,’ or ‘this garment, worth five sela's, be for my son's redemption,’ — his son is redeemed. Now, how is this redemption meant? Shall we say that it [the calf or the garment] is not worth [five sela's]? does it rest with him!¹⁵ Hence it must surely mean even if it is worth [it]; yet since it was not defined, it is not valid!¹⁶ — No. After all, it means that it was not worth [it], but, we suppose the priest accepted it [for the full value], as in the case of R. Kahana, who accepted a scarf for a son's redemption,¹⁷ observing to him,¹⁸ ‘To me it is worth five sela's’ R. Ashi said: This holds good only of, e.g., [a man like] R. Kahana, who is a great man and needs a scarf¹⁹ for his head; but not of people in general.²⁰ Thus it happened that Mar, son of R. Ashi, bought a scarf from the mother of Rabbah of Kubi²¹ worth ten for thirteen.

R. Eleazar said: [If a man declares,] ‘Be betrothed to me with a maneh,’ and he gives her a denar, she is betrothed, and he must complete [the amount]. Why? Since he stipulated a maneh but gave her a denar, it is as though he had said to her ‘on condition’ [that I give you a maneh], and R. Huna said in Rab's name: He who says on condition,’ is as though he says ‘from now’.²² An objection is raised: [If a man declares,] ‘Be betrothed to me with a maneh,’ and is proceeding with the counting out [of the money], and either party wishes to retract, even at the last denar he [or she] can do so!²³ — The reference here is to one who declares, ‘With this maneh.’²⁴ But since the second clause refers to ‘this maneh,’ the first treats of an unspecified maneh? For the second clause teaches: If he declares to her, ‘Be thou betrothed unto me by this maneh,’ and it is found to be a maneh short of a denar or containing a copper denar,²⁵ she is not betrothed: [if it contained] a debased denar,²⁶ she is betrothed, but he must change it. — No: the first and the second clauses [both] refer to ‘with this maneh,’ ‘the second [being] explanatory of the first. [Thus:] if either party wishes to retract, even at the last denar, he [or she] can do so. How so? E.g., if he said to her, ‘for this maneh.’ Reason too supports this view, for should you think that the first clause refers to an unspecified maneh: seeing that it is not kiddushin in the case of an unspecified maneh: is it necessary [to teach it] in the case of ‘for this maneh?’ — As for that, it does not prove it: the second clause may be stated in order to illumine the first, that you should not say: The first clause deals with ‘this maneh,’ but in the case of an unspecified maneh it is valid kiddushin: therefore the second clause is taught with reference to ‘this maneh,’ whence it follows that the first refers to an unspecified maneh, yet even so, the kiddushin is null. R. Ashi said:²⁷ If he is proceeding with the counting it is different, because [then we assume] her mind is set on the whole sum.

This ‘copper denar,’ how is it meant? If she knew thereof, then she understood and accepted? — This is only if he gave it to her at night, or she found it among the other zuz. How is this ‘debased denar’ meant? If it has no currency, is it not the same as a copper denar?²⁸ — Said R. Papa, E.g., it circulates with difficulty.²⁹

Raba said in R. Nahman's name: If he says to her, ‘Be thou betrothed to me with a maneh,’ and gives her a pledge on it, she is not betrothed:

- (1) Its value must be exactly known.
 - (2) Lev. XXV, 51; this refers to the redemption of a Hebrew slave.
 - (3) The Hebrew slave.
 - (4) 'He shall return' implies that a return may be made in any way desired, i.e., by goods of monetary value; obviously then he can be purchased on the same terms.
 - (5) And the same holds good of a woman.
 - (6) Rabbah: How does he refute this proof?
 - (7) Whatever is given for a slave, be it money or property, must be given as money. Produce and utensils too can be given under that designation, but not in the nature of barter, in exchange for the slave: for barter can acquire only movables, whereas human beings rank as real estate.
 - (8) An article must be given, but not produce.
 - (9) Lit., 'he says, it is unnecessary.'
 - (10) Lit., 'yes'.
 - (11) They can be put to immediate use, unlike money, which must first be expended.
 - (12) V. infra p. 138.
 - (13) Lit., 'he has said nothing.'
 - (14) Sela' — Biblical Shekel.
 - (15) To assign to it an artificial valuation — surely not!
 - (16) For the only possible difference between the two clauses is that in the first it was not formally valued, whereas in the second it was.
 - (17) Although it was certainly not worth five sela's.
 - (18) The father who redeemed his son.
 - (19) [A sudarium, which served as a distinctive head-gear for scholars. V. Krauss, T.A., I, 167.] Hence he would be willing to pay an enhanced price for it when necessary.
 - (20) I.e., a priest cannot place a fictitious price upon an article unless it may conceivably be worth it for him.
 - (21) Neubauer, Geographie, p. 397, is unable to identify this. [MS.M.: Raba b. Kahana.]
 - (22) Thus here it is as though he said: 'Be betrothed to me immediately for a denar, on condition that I give you a maneh later.'
 - (23) The kiddushin being invalid until the whole sum is given. This contradicts the view that the first denar immediately effects betrothal.
 - (24) Therefore the woman desires the whole of that maneh before she consents.
 - (25) A maneh — a hundred silver denarii.
 - (26) E.g., underweight.
 - (27) Answering the objection against R. Eleazer.
 - (28) Why then is she betrothed?
 - (29) Only few people accept it.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 8b

here is neither a maneh nor a pledge.¹ Raba raised an objection against R. Nahman: 'If he betroths her with a pledge she is betrothed'? — There the reference is to a pledge belonging to others, and it is in accordance with R. Isaac. For R. Isaac said: How do we know that a creditor has a title to a pledge? Because it is written, [And if the man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge: thou shalt surely restore to him the pledge when the sun goeth down . . .] and it shall be accounted unto thee a charitable deed:² if he has no title thereto, whence is his charity? This proves that the creditor has a title to the pledge.³

The sons of R. Huna b. Abin bought a female slave for copper coins. Not having them [the coins] at hand, they gave a silver ingot in pledge. Subsequently the slave's value increased,⁴ so they came before R. Ammi. Said he to them: There are neither coins nor an ingot.⁵

Our Rabbis taught: [If a man says to a woman,] 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a maneh,' and she takes and throws it into the sea, the fire, or into anything where it is lost, she is not betrothed. Then if she throws it down before him — it is valid kiddushin? But she [thereby] declares to him, 'Take it: I do not want it!' — He [the Tanna] proceeds to a climax.⁶ [Thus:] It is unnecessary [to state that] if she throws it down before him it is not kiddushin; but if she throws it into the sea or the fire, I might argue, Since she is now liable for it, she has certainly permitted herself to be betrothed: and the reason that she acted thus was because she thought, 'I will test this man, whether he is hot-tempered or not.' Therefore we are informed [otherwise].

Our Rabbis taught: [If a man says to a woman,] 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a maneh,' [and she replies,] 'Give it to my father' or 'thy father,' she is not betrothed; 'on condition that they accept it for me,' she is betrothed. 'My father' is mentioned to shew you how far-reaching is the first clause;⁷ 'your father,' to shew how far-reaching is the second.⁸ [If he says] 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a maneh', [and she replies] 'Give it to So-and-so', she is not betrothed. 'On condition that So-and-so accepts it for me', she is betrothed. And both these cases are necessary. For if we were taught the law with respect to 'my father' and 'thy father', [I might have thought that] only there is she betrothed when she replies, on condition that they accept it for me,' because she relies upon them, thinking, 'They will [certainly] act as agents for me'; but in the case of 'So-and-so,' it is not thus. While if we were taught the case of 'So-and-so', [I might have thought that] only there is the kiddushin invalid when she says: 'Give it to So-and-so,' because she is not sufficiently intimate with him to present it [the maneh] to him as a gift.⁹ But as for 'my father' or 'thy father,' with whom she is intimate, I might think that she was making a gift of it to them. Thus both are necessary.

Our Rabbis taught: [If he says,] 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a maneh,' [and she replies,] 'Place it on a rock', she is not betrothed; but if the rock was hers, she is betrothed. R. Bibi asked: What if the rock belonged to both of them? The question stands over. [If he says,] 'Be thou betrothed unto me for a loaf of bread', [and she replies,] 'Give it to the dog', she is not betrothed; but if it was her dog, she is betrothed. R. Mari asked: What if the dog was pursuing her? [Do we say that] in return for the benefit of saving herself from it she resolves and cedes herself to him; or perhaps she can say to him, 'By Biblical law you were indeed bound to save me'? The question stands over. [If he says,] 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a loaf,' [and she replies,] 'Give it to the poor man': she is not betrothed, even if he was a poor man who relies on her. Why? — She can say to him, 'Just as I have a duty towards him, so hast thou a duty to him'.

A man was selling

(1) I.e., she neither received the maneh nor did he actually give her a pledge, since that must be returned. [V.]

Tosaf.; Asheri: Where there is no liability there can be no pledge, for no man can pledge himself for something which he does not owe. Similarly here, since he does not owe her the maneh, for he may retract if he wishes to do so, the pledge is no pledge.]

(2) Deut. XXIV, 12f.

(3) It is legally his whilst in his possession. Therefore he may validly offer it as kiddushin.

(4) And the vendor wished to withdraw from the bargain.

(5) As on p. 30, n. 6: the coins have not been received, whilst the ingot was not given to effect the purchase. Therefore it can be cancelled.

(6) V. p. 28, n. 7.

(7) Even then, she is not betrothed.

(8) Even then, she is betrothed.

(9) Therefore her reply was a contemptuous rejection of the proposal.

glass beads, when a woman came and said to him, 'Give me a string [of these].' 'If I give it you,' he replied: 'will you become betrothed to me?' 'Oh, indeed do give it to me,' she retorted. Said R. Hama: Every [such expression,] 'Oh, indeed do give it to me' means nothing.¹ A man was drinking wine in a tavern, when a woman came and said to him, 'Give me a cup.' 'If I give you,' he replied: 'will you become betrothed to me?' 'Oh, indeed do let me have a drink,' she retorted. Said R. Hama: Every [such expression,] 'Oh, indeed do let me have a drink' means nothing.

A man was throwing down dates from a palm tree, when a woman came and said to him, 'Throw me down two'. 'If I throw them down to you, he replied: 'will you become betrothed to me?' 'Oh, indeed do throw them down,' she retorted. Said R. Zebid: Every [such expression,] 'Oh, indeed, do throw them down' means nothing.

The scholars propounded: What [if she replies,] 'Give me,' 'let me drink,' or 'throw them down?'² — Rabina ruled: She is betrothed;³ R. Sammia b. Raktha said: By the royal crown, she is not betrothed. And the law is: She is not betrothed. The law is also: the silk needs no valuation;⁴ and the law agrees with R. Eleazar;⁵ and the law agrees with Raba's dictum in R. Nahman's name.⁶

Our Rabbis taught: By deed: how so? If A writes for B on a paper or a shard, even if not intrinsically worth a perutah, 'Thy daughter be consecrated unto me,' 'thy daughter be betrothed unto me,' [or] 'thy daughter be my wife,' she is betrothed. R. Zera b. Mammel demurred: But this deed is dissimilar from a deed of purchase: there the vendor writes, 'My field is sold to thee,' whereas here the husband writes, 'Thy daughter be consecrated unto me!'⁷ — Raba replied: There [the form is determined] by Scriptural context, and here [likewise] by Scriptural context. There it is written, and he sell some of his possessions:⁸ thus Scripture made it dependent on the vendor: whereas here it is written, when a man [taketh a woman],⁹ thus making it dependent upon the husband. But there too it is written, men shall buy fields for money?¹⁰ — Read: Men shall transmit [i.e., sell].¹¹ Now, why do you read 'transmit'? because it is written: 'and he sell'! Then here too read: If a man be taken, for it is written: I gave my daughter unto this man for wife?¹² — But said Raba: These are traditional laws, which the Rabbis supported by Scriptural verses.¹³

Alternatively, there too it is written, so I took the deed of the purchase.¹⁴

Raba said in R. Nahman's name: If one writes on a paper or shard, even if not intrinsically worth a perutah, 'Thy daughter be consecrated unto me,' 'thy daughter be betrothed unto me,' [or] 'thy daughter be my wife,' whether [she accepts it] through her father or herself, she is betrothed by his [sc. her father's] consent,¹⁵ providing that she has not attained her majority.¹⁶ If he writes on a paper or a shard, even if not intrinsically worth a perutah, 'Behold, thou art consecrated unto me,' 'Behold, thou art my wife,' 'Behold, thou art betrothed unto me,' she is betrothed, whether [it is accepted] by her father or herself, with her consent, providing that she is of age.

R. Simeon b. Lakish propounded: What if a deed of betrothal was not written expressly for her sake?¹⁷ Do we assimilate modes of betrothal¹⁸ to divorce:¹⁹ just as

- (1) She merely emphasized her request, but did not consent. In this and the following stories, the answer was expressed by the repetition of the verb, — an expression of impatience.
 - (2) Without repeating the verb; v. p. 32, n. 2.
 - (3) These answers denote assent.
 - (4) V. supra 8b.
 - (5) Who rules on 8a: If a man says: 'Be thou betrothed unto me with a maneh', and gives her a denar, she is betrothed, and he must complete the amount.
 - (6) Who ruled, here is neither a maneh nor a pledge; v. supra 8a bottom and 8b.
 - (7) And he is in the position of the vendor; how then do we know that such a deed is valid?
 - (8) Lev, XXV, 25.
 - (9) Deut. XXIV, 2.
 - (10) Jer. XXXII, 44.
 - (11) This requires a mere change of punctuation, the letters remaining the same.
 - (12) Deut. XXII, 16.
 - (13) But they are not actually deduced from them.
 - (14) Jer. ibid. 11; this shews that Jeremiah, the purchaser, received the deed, which must have been drawn up by the vendor.
 - (15) I.e., if she accepts it herself, she must have had her father's authority.
 - (16) I.e., she is not yet a bogereth (q.v. Glos.), and so still under her father's control,
 - (17) It was originally written for another woman. In the case of divorce, such a document is invalid. E.g., if a husband indites a divorce for his wife and does not use it, the same may not be used by another man to divorce his wife, even if all the relevant particulars, viz., names and places and date, coincide.
 - (18) Lit., 'becoming' (a wife).
 - (19) Lit., 'goings forth' (from the married state).

divorce must be expressly for her sake,¹ So must betrothal be too; or perhaps, different modes of betrothal are assimilated to each other: just as betrothal by money need not be for her sake,² so betrothal by deed need not be for her sake? — After putting the question he, himself, decided it: betrothal is assimilated to divorce, for Scripture writes, and when she is departed [i.e., divorced] .

. . she may be [another man's wife].³

It has been stated: If it [the deed of betrothal] is written for her sake, but without her knowledge: Raba and Rabina rule: She is betrothed; R. Papa and R. Sherabia say: She is not betrothed. Said R. Papa: I will explain their reason and I will explain mine. I will explain their reason: Because It is written, and when she is departed. . . she may be [another man's wife], assimilating betrothal to divorce: just as divorce must be [written] for her sake yet without her consent,⁴ so must betrothal be for her sake, yet without her consent. And I will explain my reason: And when she departeth . . . then she shall be [etc.]: this assimilates betrothal to divorce: as in divorce, the giver's knowledge is required,⁵ so in betrothal, the giver's knowledge is required.⁶

An objection is raised: Deeds of erusin and nissu'in⁷ may only be written with the knowledge of both. Surely actual deeds of erusin and nissu'in are meant? — No: [the reference is to] deeds of apportionment,⁸ and it is in accordance with R. Giddal's dictum in Rab's name, viz., How much do you give your son? — So much. How much do you give your daughter? — So much. If they [thereupon] arose and made a betrothal, they acquire a title [to the promised sums], and these are the things which are acquired by a verbal undertaking.⁹

OR BY INTERCOURSE. Whence do we know this? — R. Abbahu said in R. Johanan's name: Because Scripture saith, [If a man be found lying with a woman] who had intercourse with a husband,¹⁰ thus teaching that he became her husband through intercourse. R. Zera said to R. Abbahu-others state, Resh Lakish said to R. Johanan: Is this what Rabbi taught unsatisfactory, [viz.,] [When a man taketh a wife] and hath intercourse with her:¹¹ this teaches that she is acquired by intercourse? — If from there, I might have thought: He must first betroth her [e.g., by money] and then cohabit with her:¹² [therefore] we are informed [otherwise]. R. Abba b. Mammel objected: If so,¹³ when Scripture decrees stoning in the case of a betrothed maiden,¹⁴ how is it conceivable? If he [first] betrothed and then cohabited with her, she is a be'ulah;¹⁵ if he betrothed but did not cohabit with her, it is nothing.¹⁶ The Rabbis answered this before Abaye; It is possible if the arus cohabited with her unnaturally.¹⁷ Thereupon Abaye observed to them: Even Rabbi and the Rabbis dispute [this matter] only in reference to a stranger: but as for the husband, all agree that if he cohabits with her unnaturally he renders her a be'ulah! (What is this?¹⁸ For it was taught: If ten men cohabited [unnaturally] with her [sc. a betrothed maiden] and she is still a virgin, all are stoned. Rabbi said: I maintain, the first is stoned, but the rest are strangled.)¹⁹ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: It would be possible if he betrothed her by deed: since it completely sunders,²⁰ it completely unites.²¹

And R. Johanan: How does he utilize this, and hath intercourse with her? — He needs that [to shew]: she [a wife] is acquired by cohabitation, but not a Hebrew bondmaid. For I might have thought, it may be inferred a minori from a yebamah: if a yebamah, who cannot be acquired by money, is acquired by cohabitation; this one [Hebrew bondmaid] who can be acquired by money, may surely be acquired by cohabitation. [No.] As for a yebamah, that is because she is already tied!²² — I might have argued, since it is written: If he take him another [wife],²³ Scripture compared her [the bondmaid] to the 'other' [the wife]: just as the other is acquired by intercourse, so is a Hebrew bondmaid acquired thus; therefore we are informed [otherwise].²⁴

And Rabbi: how does he know this conclusion? — If so,²⁵ Scripture should have written; and hath intercourse: why [state] ‘and hath intercourse with her?’ Thus both are deduced.²⁶ But according to Raba, who said: Bar Ahina explained it to me: ‘When a man taketh a woman and hath intercourse with her’: [this teaches:] kiddushin²⁷ that can be followed by²⁸ intercourse is [valid] kiddushin, that which cannot be followed by intercourse is not [valid] kiddushin;²⁹ what can one say?³⁰ — If so,³¹ Scripture should have written, or ‘hath intercourse with her’: why [state], ‘and hath intercourse with her?’³² Thus all are inferred.

And Rabbi: how does he employ this phrase, ‘who had intercourse [be'ulath] with a husband?’ — He utilizes it [to teach:] her husband renders her a be'ulah unnaturally,³³ but not a stranger.³⁴ But does Rabbi hold this view? Has it not been taught: If ten men cohabited [unnaturally] with her [sc. a betrothed maiden] and she is still a virgin, all are stoned. Rabbi said: I maintain, the first is stoned, but the rest are strangled.³⁵

- (1) Deduced from, then he shall write her a bill of divorcement (Deut. XXIV, 2).
 - (2) I.e., the money is not minted expressly to betroth that woman.
 - (3) Thus, betrothal and divorce are stated in proximity to each other, shewing that they are compared.
 - (4) In ancient Jewish law a wife's consent to divorce was not required. In the Middle Ages this was amended, and her consent became necessary.
 - (5) I.e., the husband's, who gives the woman her freedom.
 - (6) I.e., the woman's, who gives herself in marriage.
 - (7) v. Glos. for both.
 - (8) I.e., the amounts which the parents promise to settle on their son or daughter on marriage,
 - (9) Normally, a promise is binding only if the recipient performs an act of acquisition. i.e., he takes an article, not necessarily the thing promised, from the promisor. Here, however, the promise itself is binding. And the Baraita quoted teaches that the witnesses may not draw up bonds to that effect unless both parties consent.
 - (10) Deut. XXII, 22.
 - (11) Ibid. XXIV, 1.
 - (12) But that cohabitation alone is not betrothal.
 - (13) That this verse might be interpreted as meaning that both betrothal and cohabitation are necessary, but that without the latter she is not even betrothed.
 - (14) Who commits adultery.
 - (15) I.e., no longer a virgin, whereas stoning is only for a virgin; v. Deut. XXII, 23f.
 - (16) She is not betrothed on this hypothesis.
 - (17) Leaving her a virgin.
 - (18) Concerning which Rabbi and the Rabbis are in dispute.
 - (19) Which is the punishment for committing adultery with a be'ulah. Thus the Rabbis regard her as a virgin all the time, whereas Rabbi maintains that she is a be'ulah after the first. This dispute, however, applies only to strangers.
 - (20) I.e., a deed is the only thing required for divorce.
 - (21) Lit., ‘brings in.’ Yet it might be that money betrothal must be followed by cohabitation.
 - (22) To the yabam, v. Deut. XXV, 5.
 - (23) Ex. XXI, 10: ‘another’ i.e., in addition to the Hebrew bondsmaid.
 - (24) By ‘and he hath intercourse with her’, as above.
 - (25) That the verse teaches only that intercourse is one of the methods of betrothal.

- (26) (i) that a woman may be acquired by intercourse and (ii) a Hebrew bondsmaid cannot be so acquired.
- (27) Implied by, when a man taketh.
- (28) Lit., 'that is given over to.'
- (29) V. infra 51a.
- (30) For the verse is needed for this purpose.
- (31) That the only purpose of the verse is to shew that a bondsmaid cannot be acquired by intercourse.
- (32) 'And' implies that the taking — i.e., kiddushin — and the cohabitation are interdependent.
- (33) I.e., by unnatural cohabitation.
- (34) Because 'be'ulah' is connected with 'a husband': if she had cohabited with her husband, no matter how, she is a be'ulah.
- (35) V. supra.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 10a

— Said R. Zera: Rabbi admits in respect to the fine, that they must all pay.¹ Wherein does it differ from the death penalty?² — There it is different, because Scripture writes, then the man alone that lay with her shall die.³ And the Rabbis: how do they employ this word 'alone'? — They need it even as it was taught: [If a man be found lying with a woman married to a husband], then they shall both of them die:⁴ [this implies,] they must both be equal as one:⁵ this is R. Josiah's view. R. Jonathan maintained: 'then the man alone that lay with her shall die'.⁶ And R. Johanan: how does he know this ruling?⁷ — If so,⁸ Scripture should have written, who had intercourse with a man; why [state], 'who had intercourse with a husband'? Hence both are inferred.⁹

The scholars propounded: Does the beginning of intercourse acquire [the woman] or the end of intercourse? The practical difference is, e.g., if he performed the first stage of intercourse, and then she stretched out her hand and accepted kiddushin from another man;¹⁰ or whether a High Priest may acquire a virgin by intercourse.¹¹ What then [is our ruling]? — Said Amemar in Raba's name: The mind of him who has intercourse is set on the completion of intercourse.¹² The scholars propounded: Does intercourse effect nissuin or erusin? The practical difference is in respect of his being her heir, defiling himself on her account and annulling her vows. If you say it effects nissu'in, he [the husband] succeeds her as heir, must¹³ defile himself for her,¹⁴ and can annul her vows.¹⁵ But if you say that it effects only erusin, he does not succeed her as heir, may not defile himself on her account, and cannot annul her vows. What is our ruling? — Said Abaye: Come and hear: A father has a privilege over his daughter [if a minor] in respect of her kiddushin by money, deed or intercourse. And he is entitled to her findings, her labour, and the annulment of her vows; he can accept her divorce;¹⁶ but he does not enjoy usufruct during her lifetime.¹⁷ If she was married,¹⁸ her husband's rights exceeds his,¹⁹ in that he enjoys the usufruct during her lifetime. Now, intercourse is taught, and yet he [the Tanna] also teaches: If she was married!²⁰ — 'If she married' may have been taught in reference to the other [privileges]. Raba said: Come and hear: A maiden aged three years and a day may be betrothed by intercourse, and if the yabam has intercourse with her, he acquires her. The penalty of adultery may be incurred through her: [if a menstruant,] she defiles him who has connections with her,

(1) If a man violates an unbetrothed virgin he must pay a fine of fifty shekels: (Deut. XXII, 28f.) if a number of men violate her unnaturally, leaving her a virgin, they must all pay the same, as for a virgin.

- (2) That there Rabbi regards her a be'ulah.
- (3) Ibid. 25; now, this is superfluous. since the next verse states: But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; hence it teaches that only the first man is stoned, but after he seduces her, even unnaturally, she is a be'ulah, and her ravishers are strangled.
- (4) Ibid. 22.
- (5) Rashi: both must have attained their majority and be liable to punishment, thus excluding an adult who violates a minor. Tosaf.: they must both be liable to the same death penalty; the reference is to R. Meir's view on this matter, q.v. Sanh. 66b.
- (6) I.e., the man stands in a separate category, and need not be equal to the woman.
- (7) That only the husband renders her a be'ulah by unnatural intercourse etc.
- (8) That the verse teaches only that cohabitation acquires a woman.
- (9) The emphasis on 'husband' shews that only he renders her a be'ulah etc.
- (10) If the beginning acquires, she belongs to the first; if not, to the second.
- (11) A High Priest must marry a virgin; Lev. XXI, 13. Now, if the first stage acquires, he may betroth her by intercourse; but if the last stage, he may not, because immediately after the first stage she ceases to be a virgin, yet does not belong to him.
- (12) Hence the last stage is necessary.
- (13) Or 'may', v. Sotah, 3a.
- (14) Even if he is a priest.
- (15) Alone, without her father.
- (16) Even without her authority, if she was divorced whilst an arusah, and a na'arah.
- (17) If she inherit property through her maternal relations, her father has no claim to its usufruct while she is alive.
- (18) Lit., 'became a nesu'ah'.
- (19) The husband's rights over his wife after nissu'in are greater than the father's over his daughter before nissu'in.
- (20) Subsequent to intercourse; this proves that intercourse only effects erusin.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 10b

so that he in turn defiles that upon which he lies, as a garment which has lain upon [a zab].¹ If she married² a priest, she may partake of terumah;³ if any of the forbidden degrees⁴ interdicted by Scripture cohabited with her, they are executed on her account,⁵ but she is exempt,⁶ if an unfit person⁷ cohabits with her, he disqualifies her from priesthood.⁸ Thus [here too] intercourse is taught,⁹ and also 'if she married'! — This may be its meaning: If this marriage¹⁰ was with a priest, she may partake of terumah.

Come and hear: Johanan b. Bag Bag had already sent [word] to R. Judah b. Bathyra at Nisibis:¹¹ I have heard of you that you maintain, An arusah, the daughter of an Israelite [betrothed to a priest], may eat terumah. He sent back: And do you not rule likewise? I am certain of you that you are well versed in the profundities¹² of the Torah [and able] to infer a minori. Do you not know: if a Gentile bondmaid, whose intercourse does not permit her to eat of terumah,¹³ yet her money¹⁴ permits her to eat of terumah; then this one [an arusah], whose intercourse [with a priest] permits her to eat of terumah, surely her money¹⁵ permits her to eat terumah. But what can I do, seeing that the Sages ruled: An arusah, the daughter of an Israelite, may not eat terumah until she enters huppah?¹⁶ How so? If [the reference is to] intercourse following huppah, and money followed by huppah, in both cases she may certainly eat. But if to intercourse with huppah, and money without huppah: here there are two, while there is only one,¹⁷ Hence it must surely refer to both intercourse and money without huppah. Now, if you say that it [intercourse] effects nissu'in, it is well: hence it is obvious to him that Intercourse is stronger than money.¹⁸ But if you say that it effects only kiddushin [i.e., erusin], why is he certain in the one case and doubtful in the other? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: After all, I can tell you that [the reference is to] intercourse with huppah and money without huppah. And as to your objection, here there are two, while there is only one: nevertheless the a minori proposition holds good, and it was thus he sent word to him: If a Gentile bondmaid, whose intercourse does not permit her to eat of terumah even after huppah, yet her money even without huppah authorizes her to eat terumah,' then this one, whose intercourse when accompanied by huppah permits her to eat terumah, Surely her money even without intercourse permits her to eat terumah. But what can I do, seeing that the Sages ruled: An arusah, the daughter of an Israelite, may not partake of terumah until she enters huppah, on account of 'Ulla's statement.¹⁹ And [Johanah] b. Bag Bag?²⁰ — In the case of a Gentile bondmaid he omits nothing of her acquisition;²¹ but here he has left undone part of her acquisition.²² Rabina said: By Biblical law he was quite certain that she may eat, and it was only by Rabbinical law that he [R. Johanah b. Bag Bag] sent word to him [that she is forbidden], and he sent thus to him: I have heard of you that you rule: An arusah, the daughter of an Israelite, may eat of terumah, and you disregard the possibility of nullification.²³ He sent back: And do you not rule likewise? I am certain that you are well versed in the profundities of the Torah, [and able] to infer a minori. Do you not know: if a Gentile bondmaid, whose intercourse does not permit her to eat terumah, yet her money does, and we do not fear the possibility of nullification;²⁴ then this one [sc. an arusah], whose intercourse permits her to eat terumah,²⁵ surely her money does, and we may disregard the possibility of nullification. But what can I do, seeing that the Sages ruled: An arusah, the daughter of an Israelite, may not partake of terumah

(1) A man who has sexual connections with a menstruant woman defiles that upon which he lies, even if he does not actually touch it. But the degree of uncleanness it thereby acquires is not the same as that of the bedding upon which she herself or a zab (v. Glos.) lies. For in the latter case, the bedding in turn defiles any person or utensil with which it comes into contact; whereas in the former, it can only defile foodstuffs and liquids. This is the same degree of uncleanness possessed by a garment which has lain upon or been borne by a zab, v. Nid. 44b.

(2) V. n. 8.

(3) As an Israelite's adult daughter who married a priest. But if she is less than three years old, she is sexually immature, so that the marriage cannot be consummated, and hence she may not eat terumah.

(4) E.g., her father or brother.

(5) If they are of those forbidden on pain of death.

(6) Being a minor.

(7) E.g., a heathen or bastard.

(8) I.e., she may not marry a priest.

(9) Proving that intercourse only effects erusin.

(10) Sc. the intercourse mentioned in the first clause.

(11) A city in N.E. Mesopotamia; its Jewish population was already of importance during the second Temple. J.E. s.v.; Obermeyer, p. 229.

(12) Lit., 'chambers'.

(13) If a priest cohabits with her without having previously acquired her with money.

(14) I.e., the money given for her by a priest.

- (15) Whereby she is acquired as an arusah.
- (16) I.e., becomes a nesu'ah.
- (17) How can money without huppah be deduced from intercourse and huppah?
- (18) And it certainly authorises her to eat terumah, and he proceeds to deduce that money has the same power.
- (19) V. supra 5a bottom.
- (20) Does he not accept this a minori deduction?
- (21) Once he gives the money, she is absolutely his.
- (22) After intercourse she still lacks huppah before he ranks as her heir and may defile himself on her account.
- (23) Through a bodily defect discovered in the woman, which may invalidate the betrothal. Hence this has no bearing on the question of the status conferred by intercourse, since all admit that even an arusah may, Biblically speaking, eat terumah.
- (24) A bodily defect which may entitle the priest to cancel the purchase.
- (25) [Since the arus would not have had intercourse with her without first making enquiries concerning her (Tosaf.).]

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 11a

until she enters huppah, on account of 'Ulla's statement. And the son of Bag Bag?¹ — He disregards the possibility of nullification in the case of slaves: if there are open bodily defects — then he has seen them.² If on account of concealed bodily defects, what does it matter to him? He needs him for work, and so does not care. If he [the slave] is found to be a thief or a rogue,³ he is his.⁴ What can you say: he was discovered to be an armed robber or proscribed by the State⁵ — these are well known.⁶ Let us see: both agree that she [an arusah] may not eat:⁷ wherein then do they differ? — They differ where he [the husband] accepted [bodily defects],⁸ or he [the father] delivered [her to the husband's messengers to be taken to her husband's home],⁹ or if they [the father's messengers] were on the way with [the husband's messengers to escort the bride to her new home].¹⁰

'BY MONEY: BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN, BY A DENAR etc. What is Beth Shammai's reason? — Said R. Zera: Because a woman is particular about herself and will not [permit herself to] become betrothed with less than a denar. Abaye objected to him: If so, then e.g., R. Jannai's daughters, who are particular about themselves and will not become betrothed with less than a tarkabful¹¹ of denarii, if she stretches out her hand and accepts a zuz from a stranger [as kiddushin], is the kiddushin indeed invalid?¹² — He replied: If she stretches out her hand and accepts. I do not say thus: I refer to a case where he betroths her at night,¹³ or if she appoints an agent.¹⁴ R. Joseph said: Beth Shammai's reason is in accordance with Rab Judah's dictum in R. Assi's name, viz., Wherever 'money'¹⁵ is mentioned in Scripture: Tyrian coinage is meant; whereas the Rabbinical usage¹⁶ refers to provincial coinage.¹⁷

It was stated above: Rab Judah said in R. Assi's name: Whenever 'money' is mentioned in Scripture: Tyrian coinage is meant; whereas the Rabbinical usage refers to provincial coinage. Now, is this a universal rule?

(1) Does he not admit the force of this argument?

(2) And the purchaser cannot invalidate the transaction.

- (3) Jast.: a swindler; Tosaf.: a gambler; Rashi: a kidnapper. The last might suit the context here, but not elsewhere.
- (4) The purchaser's: he cannot annul the purchase, because the average slave is one of these.
- (5) I.e., under sentence of death. fast.: levied for royal service.
- (6) And the purchaser would not buy him in ignorance.
- (7) For R. Judah b. Bathyra also admits that she may not eat, in accordance with 'Ulla.
- (8) According to Johanan b. Bag Bag, she may then eat terumah, since there is no fear of nullification; in the opinion of R. Judah b. Bathyra she is forbidden, since 'Ulla's reason holds good here.
- (9) 'Ulla's reason no longer holds good since her brothers and sisters are not then with her, but there is still the possibility of nullification.
- (10) V. preceding note, which applies here too.
- (11) Tarkab — two kabs (later = three kabs): 1 kab = 1/6th of a se'ah.
- (12) Surely not!
- (13) And she does not see what is given her.
- (14) To accept kiddushin on her behalf, without telling him what is the minimum which he shall accept.
- (15) Lit., 'silver'.
- (16) Lit., 'that — sc. money of their (sc. the Rabbis') words.'
- (17) Viz., current coinage. The latter is an eighth of the former; i.e., a provincial shekel = 1/8th of a Tyrian shekel, a provincial denar = 1/8th of a Tyrian, etc.; v. J.E. IX, 351, and Zuckermann, Tal. Mun. pp. 15-33. Tyrian is further to be identified with Jerusalem (coins). Krauss, T.A., 11-405 and n. 639 a.l., v. B.K. (Sonc. ed.) p. 204, n. 11. Now, since kiddushin by money is Biblical (supra 2a), it cannot be a copper perutah, for there were no copper coins in the Tyrian system: hence, the perutah being excluded, it is evident that a coin of considerable value is required, and this was fixed at a denar.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 11b

But what of a claim, concerning which it is written: If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or utensils to keep etc.¹ yet we learnt: 'The oath taken before judges [is imposed] for a [minimum] claim of two silver [ma'ahs] and an admission of a perutah'?² — There it is similar to 'utensils': just as 'utensils' implies [at least] two, so must 'money' refer to two [coins],³ and just as 'money' implies something of worth,⁴ so does 'utensils' mean something of worth.⁵ But [what of the second] tithe, in regard to which it is written, [Then thou shalt turn it into money] and bind up the money in thine hand,⁶ yet we learnt: 'If one changes a sela' of second tithe [copper] coins . . .?'⁷ — 'The money' is an extension,⁸ But what of hekdesch,⁹ concerning which it is written, then he shall give the money, and it shall be assured to him,¹⁰ yet Samuel said: If hekdesch worth a maneh is redeemed with the equivalent of a perutah, it is redeemed?¹¹ — There too, we deduce the meaning of 'money' from tithes.¹²

But what of a woman's kiddushin, concerning which it is written: When a man taketh a wife, and marry her,¹³ and we deduce the meaning of 'taking' from the field of Ephron,¹⁴ yet we learnt: BETH HILLEL RULE, BY A PERUTAH OR THE WORTH OF A PERUTAH; shall we say [then] that R. Assi ruled in accordance with Beth Shammai?¹⁵ — But if stated, it was stated thus: Rab Judah said in R. Assi's name: Whenever a fixed sum of money is mentioned in the Torah, Tyrian coinage is meant; whereas the Rabbinical usage refers to provincial currency.¹⁶ Then what does he teach us? We have already learnt it: The five sela's mentioned in connection with a firstborn,¹⁷ the thirty of a slave,¹⁸ the fifty of a ravisher and a seducer,¹⁹ and the hundred of a slanderer²⁰ — all these are [computed] by the holy shekel according to the Tyrian maneh!²¹ — He wishes to state, ‘whereas the Rabbinical term refers to provincial currency,’ which we did not learn. For we learnt: If one boxes his neighbour's ears,²² he must pay him a sela’. Now, you should not say, what is a sela’? Four zuz,²³ but what is a sela’? Half a zuz, for it happens that people call half a zuz ‘istira’.²⁴

R. Simeon b. Lakish said: Beth Shammai's reason is in accordance with Hezekiah. For Hezekiah said: Scripture saith, then shall he let her be redeemed²⁵ — this teaches that she deducts from her redemption [money] and goes out [free]. Now, if you say that he [the master] gave her a denar,²⁶ it is well: hence she can go on deducting until a perutah. But if you say that he gave her a perutah: what can be deducted from a perutah?²⁷ But perhaps Scripture ordered thus: if he gave her a denar, she can go on deducting until a perutah; [but] if he gave her a perutah, she cannot deduct at all?

(1) Ex. XXII, 6; in B.K. 107a it is deduced from this verse that an oath is imposed upon a defendant only if he admits part of the claim and denies part.

(2) Rashi: This proves that no particular sum is meant by the term ‘money,’ but that in all cases it was left for the Rabbis to determine. For if a particular sum is meant, granted that a ma'ah is the smallest Tyrian coin, why two? Tosaf. and others: the smallest Tyrian coin is a denar, whereas a ma'ah = 1/6th of a denar. (Though the actual coin is not mentioned in the quotation, ma'ah is assumed, because ‘two’ is in the fem. form, agreeing with ma'ah, whereas denar is masc.).

(3) So that the claim must be at least for two silver pieces, i.e., ma'ahs.

(4) I.e., two ma'ahs.

(5) So that if a man claimed two needles, one of which was admitted, no oath is imposed, since these are not worth two ma'ahs (Rashi). Tosaf. and others with different reading of the text: just as ‘utensils’ implies something of value, so does ‘money’ apply to that likewise, and a ma'ah is a coin of value; whilst ‘two’ is likewise deduced from the plural, ‘utensils’. [Whereas according to Rashi's reading the minimum value required in the case of ‘utensils’ is determined by the significance attached to the word ‘money’, according to that of Tosaf., the value of ‘utensils’ is judged by their own merits, so that even a couple of needles are to be treated as things of worth in view of the use to which they can be put].

(6) Deut. XIV, 25, q.v.

(7) A dispute follows as to how many of the coins should be changed. Now, this shews that in the first place the tithe was redeemed with copper coins, though Scripture mentions ‘money’ in this connection.

(8) Shewing that even copper coins may be used.

(9) V. Glos.

(10) V. B.M. (Sonc. ed.) p. 321, n. 1.

(11) V. n. 2; the same applies here.

(12) Since in the latter instance the money extends the law to copper coins, these are valid for the redemption of hekdesh too.

(13) Deut. XXIV, 1.

(14) V. p. 1, n. 12. Thus it is as though ‘money’ were written in this passage.

(15) It is a fixed principle that in all disputes between these two schools the halachah agrees with Beth Hillel.

(16) But no fixed sum is mentioned for kiddushin.

(17) V. Num. XVIII, 15f: Nevertheless the firstborn of man thou shalt surely redeem . . . for the money of five shekels. — ‘Shekels’ is the Biblical term for sela’.

(18) Ex. XXI, 32: If the ox gore a manservant or a maidservant he (the owner) shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver.

(19) Deut. XXII, 28f: If a man find a damsel that is a virgin which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found; then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver.

(20) Ibid. 13 et seqq.: If a man take a wife . . . and hate her . . . and bring an evil name upon (i.e., slander) her, and say: I took this woman, and . . . I found not in her tokens of virginity . . . then the elders of that city shall amerce him in a hundred shekels of silver.

(21) 1 Tyrian maneh = 25 holy shekels.

(22) Others: shouts into his neighbour's ear.

(23) I.e., the Tyrian currency.

(24) A silver coin, equal to the provincial sela' = 1/2 zuz.

(25) Ex. XXI, 8; v. infra 14b, 15a for the full reference.

(26) In buying her. The money given for a Hebrew maidservant may also be regarded as kiddushin, since in virtue thereof he can take her to wife; v. Ex. ibid.

(27) Seeing that it is the smallest coin.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 12a

— You cannot think so, [for] it is similar to designation:¹ just as designation, though he [the master] can designate her or not, as he will, yet where he may not designate her, the sale is invalid;² so here too, where he cannot deduct, the sale is invalid.³ And a woman's kiddushin, according to Beth Shammai, is deduced from a Hebrew maidservant: just as a Hebrew maidservant cannot be acquired for a perutah,⁴ so a woman cannot be betrothed by a perutah.⁵ Then say half a denar, or two perutahs? — Since a perutah was excluded, it was fixed at a denar.⁶ Raba said: This is Beth Shammai's reason, [viz.,] that the daughters of Israel should not be treated as hefker.⁷ AND BETH HILLEL RULE, BY A PERUTAH. R. Joseph thought to rule, A perutah, whatever it is.⁸ Said Abaye to him: But thereon we learnt: AND HOW MUCH IS A PERUTAH? AN EIGHTH OF AN ITALIAN ISSAR. And should you answer: That was only in the time of Moses, but nowadays it is as generally estimated — but when R. Dimi came,⁹ he said: R. Simai computed in his time: how much is the perutah? An eighth of an Italian issar.¹⁰ And when Rabin came, he said: R. Doseithai, R. Jannai and R. Oshiah estimated: how much is a perutah? A sixth of an Italian issar! — R. Joseph answered him: If so,¹¹ when we learnt,¹² Go out and estimate: how many perutahs are there in two sela's? More than two thousand. Seeing that there are not even two thousand, can he [the Tanna] call it more than two thousand?¹³ Thereupon a certain old man said to him, I learnt it, close on two thousand. But even so, it is only one-thousand-five-hundred-thirty-six! — Since it passes beyond half [a thousand], it is called close on two thousand.

It was just stated: When R. Dimi came, he said: R. Simai computed in his time, How much is a perutah? An eighth of an Italian issar. And when Rabin came, he said: R. Doseithai, R. Jannai, and R. Oshiah estimated: How much is the perutah? A sixth of an Italian issar. Said Abaye to R. Dimi: Shall we say that you and Rabin differ in the dispute of the following Tannaim? For it was taught: The perutah which the Sages mentioned is an eighth of an Italian issar. [Thus:] one denar = six silver ma'ahs; one ma'ah = two pundion, one pundion = two issars, one issar = two musmis, one musmis = two kuntrunk, one kuntrunk = two perutahs.¹⁴ Hence the perutah is an eighth of an Italian [Roman] issar. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: three hadrisin = one ma'ah, two hanzin = one hadris, two shammin = one hanez, two perutahs = one shamin.¹⁵ Hence a perutah equals one sixth of an Italian issar.¹⁶ Shall we say that you agree with the first Tanna, whilst Rabin holds with R. Simeon b. Gamaliel? — He replied: Both Rabin and I agree with the first Tanna, yet there is no difficulty: here the issar bears its full value; there, it had depreciated. Here the issar bears its full value, twenty-four going to the zuz; there it had depreciated, thirty-two going to the zuz.¹⁷

Samuel said: If a man betrothed a woman¹⁸ with a date, even if a kor¹⁹ stood at a denar,²⁰ she is nevertheless betrothed: we fear that it may be worth a perutah in Media.²¹ But we learnt: BETH HILLEL RULE, BY A PERUTAH OR THE WORTH OF A PERUTAH?²² — There is no difficulty: the one refers to certain kiddushin; the other to doubtful kiddushin.²³

A certain man betrothed [a woman] with a bundle of tow cotton. Now, R. Simi b. Hiyya sat before Rab and examined it: if worth a perutah, it is well;²⁴ if not, not. Now, if not worth a perutah, it is not well? But Samuel said: 'We fear [etc.]'! — There is no difficulty: in the former case it is certain kiddushin; in the latter doubtful kiddushin. A certain man betrothed [a woman] with a black marble stone. Now, R. Hisda was sitting and appraising it: if worth a perutah, it is well;²⁵ if not, not. Now, if not worth a perutah, it is not well? But Samuel said: 'We fear [etc.]'! — R. Hisda did not accept Samuel's [view]. Said his mother to him: But on the day he betrothed her it was worth a perutah!²⁶ It does not rest entirely with you, replied he, to render her forbidden to the other man.²⁷

(1) sugh or sughh, the betrothal of a Hebrew handmaid to her master or his son in virtue of having been bought, no other than the purchase money being necessary.

(2) I.e., she cannot be sold, e.g., to her brother, since she may not be designated to him.

(3) Since Scripture teaches that a deduction is made, the sale must be capable of one.

(4) As just proved.

(5) V. Glos.

(6) For the exclusion of a perutah shews that a sum of considerable value is required.

(7) V. Glos., which is acquired without much trouble; thus to acquire a woman by merely a perutah would be derogatory to her status.

(8) No matter how it is debased in the course of time, providing that it is called a perutah.

(9) To Babylon. R. Dimi was a fourth century Amora of Palestine, who settled in Babylon on account of Constantine's decree of banishment against the Jewish teachers of Palestine. But even before this scholars regularly travelled to and fro between the Palestine and the Babylonian academies, and R. Dimi and Rabin (i.e., R. Abin) were specially designated for this task, to provide a cultural link between the two. I. Halevy, Doroth, II, 467-473.

(10) A woman having been betrothed for a perutah, he stated that it must be equal to an eighth of an Italian issar, and was not satisfied with the mere designation of a perutah.

(11) That the perutah must not be less than this.

(12) In the Sifra, a Midrashic commentary on Leviticus, also called 'The Law of the priests.'

(13) The table is given below.

(14) These are Roman coins, the names being corrupted. Kuntrunk. < quadrans (), a Roman value equal to three Roman ounces, also called teruncius; musmis or messimis < semissis = 1/2 as; pundion < dupundium = two ases.

(15) Hadris is perhaps a corruption of darosah = 1 3/4 as; hanez < nez (blossom); shamnim < shamin (Heb. hbnh).

shemini — an eighth) 1/8 of an Italian issar. [For a full discussion of these terms, v. Krauss, TA, pp. 408ff.]

(16) For the issar = 1/2 4th denar; now one denar = six ma'ahs = a hundred and forty-four perutahs, according to his table; therefore one perutah — 1/6th issar.

(17) Thus one denar = a hundred and ninety-two perutahs, in accordance with the first Tanna. The perutah remained stable, but the issar fluctuated. In R. Simai's age the issar was at par, i.e., twenty-four = one denar: therefore one perutah = 1/8th issar. But in the age of R. Doseithai etc., it had slumped to 1/3 2nd of a denar, therefore one perutah = 1/6th of an issar.

(18) Lit., 'her'.

(19) A measure of capacity; v. J.E. XII, 489, Table 3.

(20) So that one date is worth far less than a perutah.

(21) Where dates were very dear. Or perhaps Media is mentioned as an example of elsewhere.

(22) And in Samuel's view anything may be worth a perutah somewhere.

(23) If the article is worth a perutah where it is given, the woman is certainly betrothed, and another man's betrothal is invalid. But if it is not worth a perutah there, she is in a position of doubt: she cannot be free without a divorce, yet should another betroth her before she is divorced, his act may be valid, and she then requires a divorce from both, being in the meantime forbidden to both and to everyone else.

(24) The betrothal is valid.

(25) The kiddushin is valid.

(26) Though by the time you came to value it, it had depreciated.

(27) To whom one had, in the meantime, become betrothed. I.e., your evidence cannot be accepted.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 12b

For is this not comparable to the case of Judith, R. Hiyya's wife, who had severe travail in childbirth.¹ Said she to him: My mother told me: 'Your father accepted kiddushin on your behalf [from another man] when you were a child.'² He replied to her: It does not rest entirely with your mother to forbid you to me. The Rabbis protested to R. Hisda: Why so? But there are³ witnesses In Idith⁴ who know that on that day it was worth a perutah! — Nevertheless, at present they are not before us. Is this not analogous to R. Hanina's dictum, For R. Hanina said: Her witnesses are in the north,⁵ yet she is to be forbidden!⁶ Abaye and Raba, [however], do not agree with this ruling of R. Hisda: if they [the Rabbis] were lenient in respect of a captive woman,⁷ who suffered disgrace under her captors,⁸ shall we be [equally] lenient in the case of a married woman?⁹ Some of that family remained in Sura,¹⁰ and the Rabbis held aloof from them;¹¹ not because they agreed with Samuel, but because they agreed with Abaye and Raba.¹²

A certain man betrothed [a woman] with a myrtle branch in a market place. Thereupon R. Aha b. Huna sent [a question] to R. Joseph: How is it in such a case? — He sent back: Have him flagellated, in accordance with Rab; and demand a divorce, in accordance with Samuel.¹³ For Rab punished any man who betrothed [a woman] in a market place, or by intercourse,¹⁴ or without [previous] shiddukin,¹⁵ or who annulled a divorce,¹⁶ or who lodged a protest against a divorce,¹⁷ or harassed a messenger of the Rabbis,¹⁸ or per — mitted a ban to remain upon him thirty days,¹⁹ and a son-in-law who dwelt in his mother-in-law's house thirty days.²⁰ Only him who dwelt, but not him who merely passed by [his mother-in-law's house]? But a certain son-in-law passed by his mother-in-law's door, for which R. Shesheth chastised him? — There his mother-in-law was [already] under suspicion through him. The Nehardeans maintained: For all these Rab inflicted no punishment, excepting for betrothing [a woman] by intercourse without shiddukin — others state, even with shiddukin, on account of licentiousness.²¹

A certain man betrothed [a woman] with a mat of myrtle twigs. Said they to him, 'But it is not worth a perutah!'²² 'Then let her be betrothed for the four zuz it contains,' replied he.²³ Having taken it, she remained silent. Said Raba: It is silence after receipt²⁴ of the money, and such silence has no significance.²⁵ Raba said: Whence do I know²⁶ this? For it was taught: If he says to her, 'Take this sela' as a bailment , and then he says to her, 'Be thou betrothed unto me therewith', [if he made the declaration] when giving the money [and she accepted it without protest], she is betrothed; after giving the money: if she consented, she is betrothed; if not, she is not betrothed. What is meant by 'she consented,' 'she did not consent'? Shall we say: 'she consented' means that she said 'yes', and 'she did not consent,' that she said: 'no'? Then it follows that the first clause means

(1) [She used to give birth to twins, v. Yeb. 65b.]

(2) And therefore I am forbidden to you.

(3) So cur. edd. Ri, Bah and Tosaf. read: but people say that there are; v. also Tosaf. a.I. s.v. tv.

(4) So cur. edd. Tosaf. reads: in Arith, i.e., in the west, sc. in Palestine, which lies to the west of Babylon. Levy, Worterbuch, s.v. , hrut , mentions a conjecture that the word may mean 'north', and denotes generally a distant, unknown country.

(5) Heb. Istan, v. B.B. (Sonc. cd.) p. 568, n. 9.

(6) Surely not! for the allusion v. Keth. 23a.

(7) To whom R. Hanina's dictum applied.

(8) [Or, 'who makes herself look repulsive in the presence of her captors' so as to keep them away from her.]

(9) Tosaf. explains thus (on a reading which omits the phrase 'who... captors'): Even if witnesses attest her captivity, a priestly marriage is forbidden her only by Rabbinical law, for fear that she was outraged by her captors; hence we are lenient where the existence of such witnesses is only alleged. But in the case under discussion, should witnesses attest that the stone was worth a perutah when given, she is certainly a married woman and forbidden to others; therefore regard must be paid to the allegation that such witnesses exist elsewhere.

(10) The woman married another, and her descendants were in Sura. — Sura was a town in Southern Babylon between the canals, and seat of the famous academy founded by Rab. V. Obermeyer 283 et seqq.

(11) From contracting a marriage with them.

(12) That the alleged existence of witnesses could not be disregarded; hence these were tainted with the suspicion of bastardy.

(13) For the myrtle branch may be worth a perutah elsewhere.

(14) Notwithstanding the Mishnah.

(15) V. Glos. He regarded these as licentiousness.

(16) After sending it to his wife, but before she received it, in which case it is annulled. But the messenger may not know of this and deliver the divorce, and the wife contract another marriage.

(17) A divorce had to be given of the husband's free will. Even when he was forced (e.g., for refusal of conjugal rights, Keth. V. 6; impotence, Ned. XI, 12), he had to declare that he was giving it voluntarily. Yet he might secretly lodge a protest before witnesses that he was giving it under compulsion, in which case it was invalid.

(18) Sent to summon him to court.

(19) Without seeking its remission by expressing his regret at the offence which had occasioned it and undertaking to amend his ways. Buchler in MGWJ 1934 (Festschrift) p. 129, observes that as far as known the ban, during the days of Jamnia and Usha (first century) was imposed only on scholars, but that in the early amoraic period all were subject to it, as here (v. note 3, a.l.).

(20) Contrary to modern belief, the love between these two was regarded as so strong as to endanger their morals; cf. Pes. 113a.

(21) Tosaf.: this view is relied upon nowadays, in that sons-in-law live with their mothers-in-law.

(22) Matting must have been extremely cheap. Tosaf. Ri, however, translates: a bundle of myrtle twigs.

(23) The money was wrapped up in the mat or bundle.

(24) Lit., 'the giving'.

(25) Though normally silence gives consent. For when she took the matting, she knew that it was not worth a perutah, and therefore it was unnecessary for her to reject the proposal. Her subsequent silence makes no difference.

(26) Lit., 'say'.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 13a

that even if she said 'no,' it is [valid] kiddushin. But why, seeing that she said 'no'? Hence surely, 'she consented' means that she said 'yes', whilst 'she did not consent, that she kept silence; thus proving that silence after receipt of money has no significance. A difficulty was raised thereon at Pum Nehara¹ in the name of R. Huna, son of R. Joshua. How compare? There it was given her as a deposit: [therefore] she thought, 'If I throw it away and it is broken, I am liable for it.' But here he gave it to her as kiddushin: if she did not want it [as such], she should have thrown it away! — R. Ahai retorted: Do then all women know the law? Here too she might have thought, 'If I throw it away and it is broken, I will be held responsible for it.' R. Aha b. Rab sent [an inquiry]² to Rabina: What is the ruling in such a case? He sent back: We have not heard this [objection] of R. Huna, son of R. Joshua,³ but you, who have heard it,⁴ must have regard to it.⁵ A certain woman was selling silk skeins,⁶ when a man came and snatched one away from her. 'Give it back to me,' she exclaimed. 'If I give it to you,' he queried, 'will you become betrothed to me?' She took it and was silent. Thereupon R. Nahman ruled: She can say: 'Indeed, I took it, and 'twas my own I took'.⁷ Raba objected before R. Nahman: If he betroths her with [an article] of robbery, violence, or theft,⁸ or if he snatches a sela' from her hand and betroths her, she is [validly] betrothed? — There it means that he had discussed the preliminaries [of marriage].⁹ And how do you know that we draw a distinction between one who discussed the preliminaries and one who did not? — Because it was taught: If one says to a woman,¹⁰ 'Take this sela' which I owe thee,' and then he says: 'Be thou betrothed unto me therewith': [if he said this] when giving the money and she consented, she is betrothed; if she did not consent, she is not betrothed; after giving the money, even if she consented, she is not betrothed. Now, what is the meaning of 'she consented,' 'she did not consent'? Shall we say: 'she consented' means that she said 'yes', 'she did not consent', that she said 'no': but if she remained silent, the kiddushin is valid? Then it should simply have been taught: 'she is betrothed', just as there.¹¹ But [we must say,] 'she consented' means that she said 'yes,' whilst 'she did not consent,' that she was silent, and it was taught that she is not betrothed. What is the reason? Because she can say: 'Indeed, I took it, and 'twas mine I took.' But in that case, this [Baraitha], 'If he betroths her with robbery, violence, or theft, or if he snatches a sela' from her hand and betroths her, she is betrothed,' presents a difficulty. Hence it must surely be inferred that in the one case he had discussed the preliminaries,¹² whereas in the other he had not.

When R. Assi died, the Rabbis went up to assemble his legal traditions. Said one of the Rabbis, R. Jacob by name, to them: Thus did R. Assi say in R. Mani's name: Just as a woman cannot be acquired by less than a perutah's worth, so can real estate not be acquired with less than a perutah's worth. But, they protested to him, it was taught: Although a woman cannot be acquired for less than a perutah's worth, land can be acquired for less than a perutah's worth? — That was taught only in respect to barter, he answered them. For it was taught: Acquisition can be effected through an article, even if it is not worth a perutah.¹³ Again they sat and related: In reference to Rab Judah's statement in Rab's name, [that] one who does not know the peculiar nature of divorce and betrothal should have no business with them,¹⁴ R. Assi said in R. Johanan's name: And they¹⁵ are more harmful to the world than the generation of the flood, for it is written: By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they spread forth, and blood toucheth blood.¹⁶ How does this imply [it]? — As R. Joseph translated:¹⁷ They beget children by their neighbour's wives,¹⁸ thus piling evil upon evil.¹⁹ And it is written: Therefore shall the land mourn and everyone that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field and the fowls of heaven: yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.²⁰ Whereas in the case of the generation of the flood nought was decreed against the fish of the sea, for it is written, of all that was in the dry land, died:²¹ [implying] but not the fish in the sea, whilst here even the fish of the sea [are to be destroyed]. But perhaps that is only when all these are perpetrated?²² — You cannot think so, for it is written, for because of swearing the land mourneth.²³ Yet perhaps swearing stands alone, and these others [combined] alone?

(2) MS.M. reads: Such an occurrence happened, (and) R. Ahab. Rab sent etc.

(3) Rashi: we have heard it neither from him nor from anyone else in his name — which is not very satisfactory, seeing that they were evidently aware of it, whoever their informant was. Kaplan, Redaction of the Talmud, p. 138 translates: We have not found the view of R. Huna the son of R. Joshua as logically correct.

(4) I.e., agree with the force of the objection; v. preceding note.

(5) Therefore the kiddushin has at least doubtful validity (v. p. 47, n.10); Tosaf. Ri the Elder. — Kaplan. loc. cit., assumes that R. Aha b. Rab, Rabina and R. Ahai, otherwise known as the Sabora R. Ahai of Hatim, appear here as contemporaries. On the strength of this he identifies Rabina with Rabina b. R. Huna, the last president of Sura, and not Rabina, the colleague of R. Ashi. Actually however, there is nothing here to indicate that they were contemporaries, the reply of R. Ahai possibly having been made at a later date.

— Is it then written 'and they spread forth':¹ 'they spread forth is written.'²

Again they sat and related: In reference to what we learnt: If a woman brought her sin-offering [after childbirth] and then died, her heirs must bring her burnt-offering,³ Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: Providing that she had separated it⁴ during her lifetime, but not otherwise; thus proving that in his opinion the hypothecary obligation⁵ is not Biblical.⁶ [But] R. Assi said in R. Johanan's name: Even if she did not separate it during her lifetime, thus proving that he holds that hypothecary obligation is Biblical.⁷ But they have already disputed this matter once. For Rab and Samuel both maintained: A debt [contracted] by word of mouth cannot be collected from heirs or purchasers;⁸ while R. Johanan and Resh Lakish both rule: A debt [contracted] by word of mouth can be collected both from heirs and purchasers? — Both are necessary. For if it were stated in the latter case [alone]: Only there [I would say] did Samuel rule [thus] because it is not a debt decreed in Scripture; but in the former instance I might say that he agrees with R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.⁹ And if we were taught this [dispute] in the former instance: only there, [I would say,] did R. Johanan rule [thus], because a debt decreed in Scripture is as one indited in a bond; but in the latter case, I might say that he agrees with Samuel. Hence both are necessary.

R. Papa said: The law is: A debt [contracted] by word of mouth can be collected from heirs, but not from purchasers. It can be collected from heirs: because the hypothecary obligation involved is Biblical. And it cannot be collected from the purchasers: because it [the debt] is not generally known.¹⁰

AND SHE ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM BY DIVORCE OR HER HUSBAND'S DEATH. As for divorce, It is well, since it is written, then he shall write her a bill of divorcement;¹¹ but whence do we know [that she is freed by] her husband's death? — It is logic: he [the husband] bound her; hence he frees her. But what of consanguineous relations, whom he binds, and nevertheless does not free?¹² — But since Scripture decreed that a yebamah without children is forbidden [to the outside world], it follows that if she has children she is permitted. Yet perhaps, if she has no children she is forbidden to the world but permitted to the yabam, whereas if she has children she is forbidden to all? — But since Scripture states that a widow is forbidden to a High Priest,¹³ it follows that she is permitted to an ordinary priest.¹⁴ Yet perhaps [she is forbidden] to a High Priest by a negative injunction, and to all others by an affirmative precept?¹⁵ — What business has this [alleged] affirmative precept? If her husband's death has effect, let her be entirely free; and if not, let her remain in her original status!¹⁶ Why not? It [sc. her husband's death] withdraws her from [the penalty of] death and places her under [the interdict of] an affirmative precept. For this may be analogous to consecrated animals rendered unfit [for sacrifice], which originally [before they became unfit] involved a trespass-offering¹⁷ and might not be sheared or worked with; yet when they are redeemed, they no longer involve a trespass-offering, but may still not be sheared or worked with?¹⁸ — But [it is known] since Scripture said, [And what man is there . . . his house,] lest he die in the battle and another man take her.¹⁹ To this R. Shisha son of R. Idi demurred: Perhaps who is meant by 'another man: the yabam?'²⁰ — Said R. Ashi, There are two answers to this: firstly, the yabam is not designated 'another man': and furthermore, it is written. And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement . . . or if the latter husband die:²¹ thus death is compared to divorce: just as divorce completely frees²² her, so does death completely free her.

A YEBAMAH IS ACQUIRED BY INTERCOURSE. Whence do we know [that she is acquired] by intercourse? — Scripture saith,

- (1) The conjunction would denote that they must be combined.
 - (2) Without a conjunction, shewing that that itself merits the punishment stated in the following verse.
 - (3) These two sacrifices were due after childbirth; v. Lev. XII, 8.
 - (4) Sc. an animal, for a burnt-offering.
 - (5) Involved by debt.
 - (6) E.g., if a man borrows money, we do not say that his property is automatically mortgaged for its repayment, so that in the event of his death his heirs are Biblically liable, since they inherit mortgaged property, unless the debtor explicitly mortgages his goods in a bond, v. B.B. 175b. For here too, the woman is under an obligation to God to bring a sacrifice, yet since she did not separate an animal for it, no obligation lies on the heirs.
 - (7) I.e., every debt carries with it a pledge of the debtor's property in favour of the creditor.
 - (8) If the debtor's land was sold, the property not having been mortgaged for repayment, the creditor cannot collect from the vendees.
 - (9) The sacrifice being a Scriptural precept, the liability is stronger than that of an ordinary debt.
 - (10) Lit., 'has no voice.' Therefore to safe-guard the vendee's interests, the Rabbis deprived the creditor of his rights.
 - (11) Deut. XXIV, 1.
 - (12) A woman may not marry her father-in-law even after her husband's death; thus the interdict which he imposed on her by marriage remains even when he dies.
 - (13) Lev. XXI, 14.
 - (14) And by the same reasoning, to all other men.
 - (15) Lev. XXI, 24 is in the form of a negative injunction, the violation of which is punished by flagellation (malkoth), whereas that of an affirmative precept goes unpunished by Biblical law. Tosaf.: the affirmative precept may be the verse: Therefore shall a man . . . cleave to his wife (Gen. II, 24). implying, but not to his neighbour's wife (cf. Sanh. 58a). — An interdict implied by an affirmative precept is itself regarded as such, and not as a negative command.
 - (16) As a married woman she is forbidden to others by a negative precept under pain of death (Lev. XVIII, 20: XX, 10; Deut. XXII, 22); there are no grounds for supposing that her husband's death leaves the interdict but changes its nature.

(17) For secular use, e.g., ploughing with them.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 14a

Her husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife.¹ Then perhaps she is like a wife in all respects?² — You may not think so. For it was taught: I might think that money or deed can complete her acquisition, just as intercourse does; therefore it is written, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her:³ teaching, intercourse alone completes the acquisition of her, but money or deed does not complete the acquisition of her. Yet perhaps what is the purpose of 'and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her'? It is that he can take her by force?⁴ — If so, Scripture should have stated: 'and perform the duty of a husband's brother',⁵ why [add] 'unto her'? Hence both are learnt from it.⁶

[AND ACQUIRES HER FREEDOM] BY HALIZAH. Whence do we know it?⁷ — From the verse: And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed:⁸ once there has been the loosening of the shoe in her case, she is permitted to all Israel. Does then this [word] 'Israel' come to teach this? But it is necessary for what R. Samuel b. Judah learnt: [Halizah must be performed] at a Beth din of [naturally born] Israelites, but not at a Beth din of proselytes. — 'In Israel' is written twice.⁹ Yet it is still required for what was taught: R. Judah said: We were once sitting before R. Tarfon, when a woman came to perform halizah. Thereupon he instructed us, Do all of you respond and say: 'He that hath his shoe loosed, he that hath his shoe loosed'?¹⁰ — That is derived from, and his name shall be called.¹¹

OR THE YABAM'S DEATH. How do we know it? — A fortiori: if a married woman, who is [forbidden to others] on pain of strangulation, is freed¹² by her husband's death; then a yebamah, who is [forbidden only] by a negative precept,¹³ is surely [freed by the yabam's death]. As for a married woman, [it may be asked] that is because she is freed¹⁴ by divorce! Will you say [the same] of this one a yebamah, who is not freed [from the Levirate tie] by divorce? — She too is freed by halizah.¹⁵ But [refute it thus]: as for a married woman, that is because he who binds her frees her!¹⁶ — Said R. Ashi: In her case too, he who binds her frees her: the yabam binds her, the yabam frees her.¹⁷

Now, let a married woman be freed by halizah, a minori: if a yebamah, who is not freed by divorce, is freed by halizah; then this one [a married woman], who is freed by divorce, is certainly freed by halizah! — Scripture saith, [then he shall write her] a deed of divorcement,¹⁸ thus, a deed may divorce her, but nothing else can divorce her. Now, let a yebamah be freed by divorce, a minori: if a married woman, who is not freed by halizah, is freed by divorce: then this one [a yebamah], who is freed by halizah, is surely freed by divorce! — Scripture states: Thus [shall it be done, etc.]¹⁹ and ‘thus’ intimates indispensableness.²⁰ Now, wherever there is an intimation of indispensableness, do we not infer a minori? But what of the Day of Atonement, where ‘lot’ and ‘statute’ are written,²¹ yet it was taught: [And Aaron shall present the goat upon which the lot fell for the Lord,] and offer him for a sin-offering.²² the lot renders it a sin-offering, but designation does not render it a sin-offering.²³ For I might have thought, Does not [the reverse] follow a minori: if designation sanctifies where lot does not,²⁴ how much the more would designation satisfy where lot does! Therefore it is said: ‘and offer him for a sin-offering,’ teaching, the lot renders it a sin-offering, but designation does not render it a sin-offering. Thus, it is only because Scripture excluded it [designation]; but otherwise we would infer a minori, notwithstanding that statute is written!²⁵ — Scripture saith, ‘[then he shall write] her [a deed of divorcement]’: for ‘her’, but not for a yebamah. Yet perhaps ‘her’ teaches that it must be for her sake?²⁶ — ‘Her’ is written twice.²⁷ Yet even so they are needed: one ‘her’ [intimating that it must be] for her sake; and the other ‘her’ teaching, but not for her and her companion?²⁸ — But Scripture saith, ‘[the house of him that hath a] shoe [loosed]:’ only a shoe [can set her free], but nothing else can.²⁹ Does ‘shoe’ come to teach this? But it is necessary for what was taught: ‘And she shall loose his shoe:³⁰ I know only [that she must loosen] his shoe; whence do I know [that it may be] any man's shoe?³¹ From the verse: ‘[the house of him that hath] the shoe [loosed]:’ ‘shoe’ is an extension.³² ‘If so, who state, ‘his shoe’? — ‘His shoe’ [intimates that it must fit him, [thus] excluding one [too] large, in which he cannot walk, and one [too] small, which does not cover the greater part of his foot, excluding

(1) Ibid. XXV, 5.

(2) To be acquired by money or deed too?

(3) I.e., have intercourse with her. Ibid. This is really a repetition of the first part of the verse, and therefore emphasizes intercourse.

(4) That being taught by the repetition.

(5) This would have sufficed to emphasize intercourse alone as a means of acquisition.

(6) ‘unto her’ implying even against her will.

(7) The passage a.I. does not state that halizah frees her, but merely that it must be performed if the yabam refuses her.

(8) Ibid. 10.

(11) Leaving ‘in Israel’ free for another purpose.

(12) Lit., ‘permitted’.

(13) Ibid. 5: the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger.

(14) Lit., ‘goes out’.

(15) Thus another means of freedom being found for each, the a fortiori argument holds good.

(16) But a yebamah is forbidden to others on account of her dead husband, whereas it is to be proved that the yabam's death frees her.

(17) But for the existence of the yabam, her husband's death would have freed her. Hence it is really he who is responsible.

(19) Ibid. XXV, 9.

a sandal consisting of a mere sole, which has no heel! — If so,¹ Scripture should have written ‘shoe’; why ‘the shoe’? That both may be inferred therefrom.²

MISHNAH. A HEBREW SLAVE IS ACQUIRED BY MONEY AND BY DEED; AND ACQUIRES HIMSELF BY YEARS,³ BY JUBILEE,⁴ AND BY DEDUCTION FROM THE PURCHASE PRICE.⁵ A HEBREW MAIDSERVANT IS MORE [PRIVILEGED] IN THAT SHE ACQUIRES HERSELF BY ‘SIGNS’.⁶ HE WHOSE EAR IS BORED⁷ IS ACQUIRED BY BORING, AND ACQUIRES HIMSELF BY JUBILEE OR HIS MASTER'S DEATH.

GEMARA. A HEBREW SLAVE IS ACQUIRED BY MONEY. How do we know this? — Scripture states, [he shall give back the price of his redemption] out of the money that he was bought for:⁸ this teaches that he was acquired by money. We have [thus] learnt⁹ it in the case of a Hebrew slave sold to a heathen, since his sole method of acquisition is by money:¹⁰ how do we know it of one sold to an Israelite?¹¹ — Scripture states: Then shall he let her be redeemed:¹² this teaches that she deducts [part] of her redemption money and goes out [free].¹³ We have thus learned it in the case of a Hebrew bondmaid: since she is betrothed with money,¹⁴ she is acquired with money; how do we know it of a Hebrew Slave? — The Writ saith, If thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years:¹⁵ thus a Hebrew manservant is assimilated to a Hebrew maidservant. We have now learnt it of one sold by Beth din,¹⁶ since he was sold against his will,¹⁷ how do we know it of one who sells himself? — We learn [identity of law from] the repeated use of ‘sakir’.¹⁸ Now, that is well according to him who accepts the deduction of the repeated use of ‘sakir’;¹⁹ but according to him who does not, what can be said? — Scripture states, and if a stranger or sojourner with thee be waxen rich,²⁰ thus continuing²¹ the preceding section,²² so that [the subject] above may be deduced from [that] below.²³

And which Tanna does not admit the deduction from the repeated use of sakir? — The following Tanna. For it was taught: He who sells himself may be sold for six years or more than six years; if sold by Beth din, he may be sold for six years only. He who sells himself may not be bored;²⁴ if sold by Beth din, he may be bored. He who sells himself, has no gift made to him;²⁵ if sold by Beth din, a gift is made to him.²⁶ To him who sells himself, his master cannot give a Canaanite bondmaid;²⁷ if sold by Beth din, his master can give him a Canaanite bondmaid. R. Eleazar²⁸ said: Neither may be sold for more than six years; both may be bored; to both a gift is made; and to both the master may give a Canaanite bondmaid. Surely they differ on this point: the first Tanna does not admit the deduction of the repeated use of sakir, while R. Eleazar does?²⁹ Said R. Tabyomi in Abaye's name: All admit the deduction of the repeated use of sakir, but here they differ on the following: What is the reason of the first Tanna, who maintained, He who sells himself may be sold for six years or more than six years? [Because] Scripture expressed a limitation In connection with one sold by Beth din: and he shall serve thee six years:³⁰ 'he,' but not one who sells himself. And the other?³¹ — 'And he shall serve thee' [intimates] 'thee', but not thine heir.³² And the other?³³ — Another 'served thee' is written.³⁴ And the other?³⁵ — That comes [to teach] that the master must be willing [to make a gift].³⁶

What is the reason of the first Tanna who maintained that one who sells himself is not bored? Because Scripture expressed a limitation in connection with one sold by Beth din: and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl,³⁷ [implying] his ear, but not the ear of him who sold himself.³⁸

- (1) That its only purpose is to shew that any persons shoe may be used.
 - (2) The def. art. shews that a shoe is the means of freeing her, and nothing else can.
 - (3) I.e., when he has served six years. Ex. XXI, 2.
 - (4) If this intervened before he had completed his six years of servitude.
 - (5) At any time by a pro rata repayment, taking into account the time he still has to serve.
 - (6) Of puberty.
 - (7) I.e., a slave who refuses his freedom at the expiration of six years; v. Ex. XXI, 5f.
 - (8) Lev. XXV, 51.
 - (9) Lit., 'found'.
 - (10) It is stated infra 26a, that movables are acquired by meshikah (v. Glos.); this, however, holds good only of a Jewish purchaser, not a Gentile, who can acquire them only by giving the money.
 - (11) The whole discussion turns on the question which act formally consummates the transaction. Though a purchase is naturally effected by money, in the case of some property the delivery of money does not consummate the transaction, and both sides may retract. On the other hand, meshikah (q.v. Glos.) in the case of movables completes the transaction even before the delivery of the purchase price, which ranks as an ordinary loan. Hence the question here: how do we know that the delivery of money consummates the purchase of a Hebrew slave?
 - (12) Ex. XXI, 8.
 - (13) [R. Tam: Just as she acquires herself by money so is she acquired by money.] Rashi: Since Scripture writes, 'then shall he let (or cause) her to be redeemed', not, then shall she be redeemed, it shews that the master must help her redemption by accepting less than he paid for her, on a pro rata basis, as explained on p. 59, n. 6; hence she must have been bought with money — otherwise, from what is a deduction to be made? Of course, as pointed out on p. 59, n. 12, it is understood that money was paid. But the point is this: This exegesis shews that immediately on repaying the money she becomes free and no other formality is necessary. But if the purchase itself required some form of acquisition apart from the payment of the purchase price, e.g., deed, she would require the same on buying herself back (Maharam).

(14) Which is also a form of acquisition.

(15) Deut. XV, 12.

(16) For 'if thy brother be sold' implies by someone else, viz., Beth din, for theft: v. Ex. XXII, 2.

(17) Therefore, a strong form of acquisition, e.g., the symbolical act of hazakah (v. infra 26a and Glos.) is unnecessary, and the delivery of money suffices.

(18) Hired servant; this word is used in connection with both. One who sells himself, Lev. XXV, 39f: And if thy brother . . . sell himself unto thee . . . as an hired servant (sakir) he shall be with thee. One sold by Beth din, Deut. XV, 12-18: If thy brother . . . be sold unto thee . . . it shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou lettest him go free from thee; for to the double of the hire of a hired servant (sakir, E.V. 'hireling') hath he served thee six years. The use of 'sakir' in both cases teaches that the same method of purchase holds good in both cases.

(19) Lit., 'who infers 'sakir' from 'sakir'.

(20) Lev. XXV, 47.

(21) Lit., 'adding to'.

(22) Lit., 'subject'.

(23) It is an exegetical principle that when a passage commences with 'and', this conjunction links it to the previous portion, and a law stated in one applies to the other too. Thus this 'and' links vv. 39-46, dealing with a Hebrew slave who sells himself to a Jew, with vv.47-55, treating of one who sells himself to a non-Jew. Just as the purchase of the latter is consummated by money, so is that of the former too.

(24) He must accept his freedom at the end of six years, and the provisions of Ex. XXI, 5f (q.v.) do not apply to him.

(25) By his master, on attaining his freedom.

(26) Deut. XV, 13f: And when thou lettest him go free from thee, . . . thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock etc.

(27) To beget slaves for him.

(28) This is the reading of most editions: Tosaf. (15a s.v.Ishtu) gives another reading, R. Eliezer, which will refer to R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus. There were several Tannaim of the first name, and the halachah may agree with them; but if Tosaf.'s reading is correct, the halachah is definitely not so, for it is a principle that the halachah never agrees with R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus when he is in dispute with others (v. B.M. 59b, (Sonc. ed.) pp. 352f, for reason).

(29) Hence they are alike in all respects.

(30) Deut. XV, 12: this refers to a person sold by Beth din; v. p. 60, n. 4.

(31) R. Eleazar: does he not admit the force of this limitation?

(32) Other than a son; v. infra 17b.

(33) The first Tanna: does he not admit that the word is required for the latter purpose.

(34) Ibid. 18, quoted p. 60, n. 6; in Heb. the same word is used here for both tenses, the difference being indicated by the so-called waw conversive; v. Davidson, Heb. Grammar,  23, 3.

(35) R. Eleazar: how does he utilize the second 'served thee?'

(36) 'Served thee' in v. 18 is written in connection with this.

(37) Ex. XXI, 6; the whole passage a.l. refers to one sold by Beth din; v. pp. 64ff.

(38) Rashi: Because 'his ear' is superfluous, as it is written in Deut. XV,17: then thou shalt take on owl, and thrust it through his ear unto the door.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 15a

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 15a

And the other?¹ — That comes for the purpose of a gezerah shawah.² For it was taught: R. Eliezer said: How do we know that the boring must be through the right ear? Here is said: ‘ear’: and elsewhere is said, [and the priest shall take some of the blood . . . and put it upon the tip of the right] ear etc.,³ just as there the right is meant, so here too, the right is meant. And the other?⁴ — If so,⁵ Scripture should have written ‘ear’; why ‘his ear’?⁶ And the other?⁷ — That is needed: ‘his ear’, but not her ear.⁸ And the other? — He deduces that from, but if the bondsman shall plainly say:⁹ the bondsman, but not the bondmaid. And the other? — He needs that [to teach]: he must say it while yet a slave.¹⁰ And the other? — That is derived from ‘the bondsman’ [instead of] bondsman.¹¹ — And the other? — [The difference between] the bondsman and bondsman affords no basis for exegesis.

What is the reason of the first Tanna who maintained, He who sells himself, no gift is made to him? — Scripture expressed a limitation in connection with one sold by Beth din: thou shalt furnish him liberally;¹² ‘him’, but not one who sells himself. And the other?¹³ — He needs that: ‘him’, but not his heirs.¹⁴ (‘His heirs’: why not? The All-Merciful designated him a hired servant [sakir]: just as the wages of a hired servant belong to his heirs,¹⁵ So here too, his wages¹⁶ belong to his heirs? — But [say thus:] ‘him’, but not his creditor.¹⁷ [This is necessary,] because elsewhere we agree with R. Nathan, as it was taught: R. Nathan said: How do we know that if a man claims from another and then one claims [the same amount] from a third, that we collect from the last named and give it to the first [creditor]? From the verse, and he shall give it unto him to whom he is indebted.¹⁸ Therefore ‘him’ comes to exclude that [from the case of a slave]. And the other? — Elsewhere we do in fact disagree with R. Nathan.¹⁹

What is the reason of the first Tanna who maintained, To him who sells himself, his master cannot give a Canaanite bondmaid? Scripture expressed a limitation in connection with one sold by Beth din: If his master give him a wife,²⁰ [implying], him, but not one who sells himself. And the other? — ‘Him’ [intimates] even against his will. And the other?²¹ — That is deduced from, for to the double of the hire of a hired servant [hath he served thee].²² For it was taught: ‘For to the double of the hire of a hired servant hath he served thee:’ a hired servant works by day only, whereas a Hebrew slave works by day and night. Yet can you really imagine that a Hebrew slave works by day and night: is it not written, because he is well with thee,²³ [teaching] that he must be [on a par] with thee in food and drink? and R. Isaac answered thus: From this follows that his master can give him a Canaanite bondmaid.²⁴ And the other?²⁵ — If from there, I might have said: That is only with his consent, but not against his will; therefore we are told [otherwise].

Then which Tanna does not accept the deduction from the repetition of ‘sakir’? — It is this Tanna. For it was taught: And if thy brother sell himself unto thee . . . he shall serve thee unto the years of jubilee. And then . . . he shall return unto his family, etc.:²⁶ R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: Of whom does Scripture speak? If of him who sells himself — then it was already stated.²⁷ If of him whose ear was bored — that too was already stated.²⁸ Hence Scripture refers [here] only to him whom Beth din sold two or three years before jubilee, [thus teaching] that jubilee liberates him. Now, should you think that he [R. Eliezer b. Jacob] accepts the deduction of the repeated use of ‘sakir’, why is it [the verse cited] necessary; let him make the aforementioned deduction?²⁹ —

Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: After all, he does make this deduction; nevertheless it [the verse quoted] is necessary. I might have thought, only he who sells himself,³⁰ because he committed no offence; but as for one sold by Beth din, who committed an offence, I might say: Let him be punished; therefore we are informed [that it is not so].

The Master said: 'If of him whose ear was bored — that too was already stated.' What is this?³¹ — For it was taught: [It shall be a jubilee unto you;] and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.³² To what does Scripture refer? If to one who sells himself — it was already stated;³³ if to one sold by Beth din — that [too] was already stated.³⁴ Hence the Writ can only refer to one whose ear was bored two or three years before jubilee, [teaching] that jubilee liberates him. How is this implied?³⁵ — Said Raba b. Shila: Scripture saith, [and ye shall return every] man: now, what thing is practised in the case of a man but not of a woman? Say: boring. Now, [both cases,] one sold by Beth din, and one who was bored,³⁶ must be written. For had we been informed [this] of him whom Beth din sold, [I might say] that is because his term had not expired;³⁷ but as for him whose ear was bored, seeing that his term had already expired, I might have said: let him be punished!³⁸ And if we were informed [this] of him whose ear was bored, [I might say] that is because he had already served six years; but as for him who has been sold by Beth din, who had not yet served six years, I might have argued: he is not [liberated]. Thus both are necessary.

Now, both 'and ye shall return' and '[and he shall serve him] for ever'³⁹ must be written.⁴⁰ For had the All-Merciful written 'for ever' [only], I would have thought, literally for ever; therefore the All-Merciful wrote 'and ye shall return'. And had the All-Merciful written 'and ye shall return' [only], I would have thought: when is that?⁴¹ If he had not served six years [after being bored]; but if he had already served six years, his last phase should not be more stringent than his first: just as his first phase⁴² was for six years, so should his last be for six years [only]; hence 'for ever' teaches us, for the eternity of jubilee.⁴³

Then [the question again arises,] which Tanna does not accept the deduction of 'sakir', 'sakir'? — It is Rabbi. For it was taught:

(1) R. Eleazar: What does 'his ear' teach, on his view?

(2) V. Glos.

(3) Lev. XIV, 25, also in v. 28. This refers to a poor leper, and the whole section on the sprinkling etc., is superfluous, since is stated in vv. 14ff., in connection with a leper of means: hence it is for the purpose of exegesis (Rashi).

(4) The first Tanna: whence does he know this?

(5) That its only purpose is the gezerah shawah.

(6) Surely to intimate the limitation stated above.

(7) R. Eleazar: why state, 'his'?

(8) Teaching that a Hebrew bondsmaid cannot be bored.

(9) Ex. XXI, 5f., q.v.

(10) I.e., before the expiration of his six years.

(11) The def. art. emphasizes that he must still be a slave when he refuses his freedom. Hence the substantive itself excludes a bondsmaid.

- (12) Deut. XV, 14.
- (13) R. Eleazar: how does he utilize 'him'?
- (14) If the slave dies before his master makes him the gift.
- (15) If he dies before receiving them.
- (16) Of which this gift is part.
- (17) If the slave owes money, the gift is not to be given to his creditor. — The Wilna Gaon substitutes the following for the bracketed passage: And the other? (The first Tanna: whence does he exclude the heirs?) — 'Him' is written twice, (of that wherewith the Lord thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him). And the other? — That is needed: 'him', but not his creditor.
- (18) Num. V, 7: translating, and he (the last debtor) shall give it unto him (the first creditor), to whom he (the second creditor) is indebted. By analogy, the master ought to deliver the gift direct to the slave's creditor.
- (19) Hence no particular verse is needed for a slave.
- (20) Ex. XXI, 4.
- (21) The first Tanna: how does he know this?
- (22) Deut. XV, 18.
- (23) Ibid. 16.
- (24) This must be the night service referred to.
- (25) Why deduce it from 'him'?
- (26) Lev. XXV, 39f: the word translated 'sell himself may also mean 'be sold.'
- (27) 'He shall serve thee unto the year of Jubilee', when he obviously returns to his family.
- (28) The Talmud asks below, where?
- (29) From which the same follows.
- (30) Is thus prematurely liberated by jubilee.
- (31) I.e., where was it stated?
- (32) Lev. XXV, 10.
- (33) As mentioned in the passage above. — It should be observed that the Talmud refers to a law as 'already stated,' even when it occurs further on in the chapter or book, as here; thus it is the equivalent of 'stated elsewhere.'
- (34) Then he shall return unto his family (Ibid. 41), interpreted above as referring to this case.
- (35) In the verse.
- (36) Each two or three years before jubilee.
- (37) Lit., 'his time (for freedom) had not come,' and it was his good fortune that the jubilee supervened.
- (38) For voluntarily choosing servitude when he might have been free. — This hypothetical reasoning may appear curious: but it arises out of the Jewish insistence on the fundamental freedom of man.
- (39) Ex. XXI, 6.
- (40) Both refer to one whose ear was bored: the first, by inference; the second, explicitly (vv. 5, 6). On the surface, they are contradictory.
- (41) That he must wait for jubilee.
- (42) I.e., when first sold.
- (43) I.e., , he is a slave until then, no matter how long.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 15b

And if he be not redeemed by these, etc.:¹ Rabbi said: He may be redeemed by these, but not by Six [years].² For I might have argued, Does it not follow a minori: if he³ who cannot be redeemed by these⁴ is redeemed by six [years], then this one, who may be redeemed by these, is surely redeemed by six years? Therefore it is written: ‘by these’: teaching, he may be redeemed by these, but not by six years. Now, should you think that he [Rabbi] accepts the deduction from ‘sakir’, used twice, why does he Say, ‘if he who cannot be redeemed by these’: let us deduce [similarity of law from] the repetition of sakir?⁵ — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: After all, he does accept the deduction of ‘sakir’, ‘sakir’; yet here it is different, because Scripture saith, [one of his brethren] shall redeem him.⁶ [implying] him, but not another.⁷

And what Tanna disagrees with Rabbi? — R. Jose the Galilean and R. Akiba. For it was taught: ‘And if he be not redeemed by these’ — R. Jose the Galilean said: If ‘by these’, it is for freedom, if by strangers,⁸ it is for servitude.⁹ R. Akiba said: If ‘by these’, it is for servitude: if by strangers, it is for freedom. What is the reason of R. Jose the Galilean? — Scripture saith, ‘And if he be not redeemed by these’ — but by a stranger — ‘then he shall go out in the year of jubilee’.¹⁰ While R. Akiba interprets: ‘And if he be not redeemed by any but these, then he shall go out in the year of jubilee’. And R. Jose the Galilean?¹¹ — Is it then written: ‘by any but these’?¹² But they differ in respect of the following verse: Or his uncle, or his uncle's son may redeem him:¹³ this is redemption by relations; or if he be waxen rich:¹³ this is self redemption: and he shall be redeemed:¹³ this is redemption by strangers. Now, R. Jose the Galilean holds: a verse is interpreted with what precedes it. [Hence] link¹⁴ redemption by relations with self-redemption: just as self-redemption is for freedom, so is that by relatives. While R. Akiba maintains: a verse is interpreted with what follows: [hence] link redemption by strangers with self redemption: just as the latter is for freedom, so is the former. If so, why state ‘by these’?¹⁵ — But for ‘by these’, I would have said: the verse is interpreted with what precedes and what follows it, so that [the redemption of] all is for freedom. If so, the difficulty remains in¹⁶ its place?¹⁷ — But they differ on a matter of logic. R. Jose the Galilean holds: It is logical that redemption by strangers is for servitude; for should you say it is for freedom, they will refrain from redeeming him. While R. Akiba holds: It is logical that redemption by kinsmen is for servitude: for should you say that it is for freedom, he will go every day and sell himself!¹⁸ R. Hiyya b. Abba said: These are the views of R. Jose the Galilean and R. Akiba: but the Sages maintain, [The redemption of] all is for freedom. Who are the Sages? — Rabbi, who employs this ‘by these’ for a different exegesis,¹⁹ while the verse is interpreted with both what precedes and what follows it.²⁰

And Rabbi, how does he utilize this [verse] ‘then he shall go out in the year of jubilee’? — He needs it for what was taught: ‘Then he shall go out in the year of jubilee’:

(1) Lev. XXV, 54: the section deals with the Hebrew slave of a Gentile, and ‘these’ refers to his relatives, mentioned in vv. 48f.

(2) I.e., he is not set free after six years of service.

(3) Sc. a Hebrew slave sold to a Jew.

(4) Redemption by relatives is not mentioned in his case.

(5) V. p. 60, n. 6.

(6) Ibid. 48.

(7) Sc. a slave sold to a Jew.

(8) Lit., ‘the rest of people.’

(9) If a relation redeems him, he goes free; if a stranger, he becomes his slave.

- (10) And until then he is the stranger's slave.
- (11) How does he refute R. Akiba?
- (12) Surely not! This is the reading in the curr. edd. Other versions, more plausibly: And R. Akiba: is it then written, etc.? This is both more logical and in keeping with what follows.
- (13) Lev. XXV, 49.
- (14) Lit., 'cast.'
- (15) Which implies: if he is not redeemed by these, but by relatives, then he shall go out etc.; this contradicts R. Akiba.
- (16) Lit., 'reverts to.'
- (17) Since this verse may mean that he is free no matter who redeems him, how can R. Akiba interpret v. 54 as meaning that if redeemed by relatives it is for servitude?
- (18) And it is unfair to saddle his relations with the duty of redeeming him.
- (19) As stated supra.
- (20) Hence contrari-wise, R. Jose the Galilean and R. Akiba reject Rabbi's deduction.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 16a

this refers to a heathen who is under your rule.¹ Yet perhaps it is not so, the reference being to a heathen who is not under your rule? — You can answer; [if so,] what can be done to him?² Hence Scripture speaks only of a heathen who is under your rule.

AND BY DEED. Whence do we know it? — Said 'Ulla, Scripture saith, If he take him another [wife]:³ thus the Writ assimilated her [the Hebrew bondmaid] to another [wife]: just as the other [sc. the wife] is acquired by deed, so is a Hebrew maidservant acquired by deed. Now, that is well on the view that the deed of a Hebrew bondmaid is written by her master;⁴ but on the view that her father writes it, what can be said? For it has been stated: As to the deed of a Hebrew bondmaid, who writes it? R. Huna maintained: The master writes it; R. Hisda said: Her father writes it. [Hence] it is well according to R. Huna; but on R. Hisda's view, what can be said? — R. Aha b. Jacob answered: Scripture saith, she shall not go out as the menservants do:⁵ [implying,] but she may be acquired as [heathen] menservants are;⁶ and what is that? By deed. Then say: but she may be acquired as [heathen] menservants are, and what is that? Hazakah!⁷ — Scripture saith, And ye shall make them [the heathen slaves] an inheritance for your children after you:⁸ only they [are acquired] by hazakah, but not another.⁹ Then say: Only they [are acquired] by deed, but not another? — But it is written, she shall not go out as menservants do.¹⁰ And why do you prefer it so?¹¹ — It is logical that 'deed' is included [as a means of acquisition], since it divorces an Israelite daughter.¹² On the contrary, one should rather include hazakah, since it acquires the property of a proselyte?¹³ — Still we do not find it in marriage relationship.¹⁴ Alternatively, if 'he take another' serves that very purpose.¹⁵ And R. Huna: how does he expound this [verse,] She shall not go out as the menservants do?¹⁶ — He employs that as intimating that she does not go out [free] through [the loss of her] outstanding limbs, as a [heathen] slave.¹⁷ And R. Hisda?¹⁸ — If so, Scripture should have written: 'she shall not go out as menservants'; why, as the going out of menservants?¹⁹ That both may be inferred.²⁰

AND ACQUIRES HIMSELF BY YEARS. For it is written, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.²¹ AND BY JUBILEE. For it is written, he shall serve with thee unto the year of jubilee.²²

AND BY DEDUCTION FROM THE PURCHASE PRICE. Hezekiah said: Because Scripture saith, Then shall he let her be redeemed:²³ this teaches that she makes a deduction from her redemption money and goes out [free].²⁴

A Tanna taught: And he may acquire himself by money, its equivalent, and by deed. Now, as for money, 'tis well, for it is written, [he shall give back the price of his redemption] out of the money he was bought for.²⁵ As for its equivalent too — Scripture wrote, 'he shall give back the price of his redemption,' to include the equivalent of money as being equal to money.²⁶ But this deed, how is it meant? Shall we say that he [the slave] indites a bond for the [redemption] money? Then it is money! But if it is [a deed of] manumission, why is a deed necessary? Let him say to him in the presence of two, or in the presence of a Beth din, 'Go'? — Said Raba: This proves that a Hebrew slave belongs bodily [to his master]:²⁷ hence if the master remits his deduction,²⁸ the deduction is not remitted.²⁹

A HEBREW MAIDSERVANT IS MORE [PRIVILEGED] THAN HE. Resh Lakish said: A Hebrew bondmaid is freed³⁰ from her master's authority by her father's death, a minori: if signs,³¹ which do not free her from her father's authority, free her from the authority of her master;³² then how much the more death, which frees her from her father's authority, should free³³ her from her master's authority! R. Hoshea raised an objection: A HEBREW MAIDSERVANT IS MORE [PRIVILEGED] THAN HE, IN THAT SHE ACQUIRES HERSELF BY 'SIGNS'; but if this [Resh Lakish's dictum] be so, let her father's death also be stated? — He [the Tanna] teaches [some ways,] and omits³⁴ [others]. But what else does he omit, that he omits this?³⁵ — He omits her master's death.³⁶ If it is on account of her master's death³⁷ — that is no omission; since that applies to a male [slave] too, it is not taught. Then let it be taught!³⁸ — That which may be fixed is taught;³⁹ that which can not be fixed is not taught. But 'SIGNS', which are not fixed,⁴⁰ are nevertheless taught? — Said R. Safra: They are not fixed above, yet are fixed

(1) Lit., 'hand.' Even then, the Jew must remain his slave until jubilee.

(2) How can he be forced to provide facilities for redemption?

(3) Ex. XXI, 10; i.e., in addition to the Hebrew bondmaid.

(4) I.e., he who acquires her, just as the husband writes the deed to acquire his wife.

(5) Ibid. 7; the comparison is with heathen slaves, who go free if their master blinds them or knocks out their teeth (vv. 26f). Hebrew slaves, however, are not freed, but merely compensated.

(6) Lit., 'as the acquisition of menservants.'

(7) Glos. and V. infra 22b.

(8) Lev. XXV, 46.

(9) Sc. Hebrew slaves. The Heb. o, kj b, vu we-hithnahaltem, is really applicable to land, and intimates that heathen slaves are transmitted and acquired like land, viz. , by hazakah.

(10) From which it was deduced that she can be acquired by deed.

(11) Lit., 'what (reason) do you see' (for interpreting it thus)? Perhaps Lev. XXV, 46 teaches, only they are acquired by deed, but not another, while Ex. XXI, 7 intimates, she shall not go out . . . but may he be acquired as menservants, viz., by hazakah?

(12) Hence, just as it is effective in one instance, so also in another, viz., the acquisition of a slave. — Tosaf.: he could also have said: Because it brings a Jewish daughter into the married state, which is more appropriate, both then referring to acquisition, but a 'deed' is explicitly stated in connection with divorce. A proselyte who dies without Jewish issue has no legal heirs and his property after death falls to the first occupier by means of hazakah.

(13) And since it can acquire in one case, it can do so in another.

(14) And the purchase of a Hebrew bondmaid is also this: v. p. 45, nn. 7, 9.

(15) To shew that 'she shall not go out etc.', teaches that she may be acquired by deed, as is implied by the analogy of 'another'.

(16) Since on his view, 'if he take another' is sufficient to shew that she is acquired by deed.

(17) V. p. 68, n. 4, which is extended to outstanding limbs.

(18) Surely that is the purpose of the verse!

(19) Lit., translation.

(20) The law itself, as stated by R. Huna; while the emphasis on going out' shews that she may, however, come in, i.e., be acquired as they are.

(21) Ex. XXI, 2.

(22) Lev. XXV, 40.

(23) Ex. XXI, 8.

(24) V. p. 60, n. 1, and the same applies to a bondman.

(25) Lev. XXV, 51.

(26) He shall return implies that a return may be made in any way desired.

(27) [In so far as the master could assign to him a Canaanite maidservant for procreation. Nahmanides, quoted by S. Adreth, Kiddushin, a.l.]

(28) I.e., the sum due for the remainder of the term of bondage.

(29) And the master can reclaim him whenever he wishes. Therefore it is insufficient merely to dismiss him, but he must give him a deed.

(30) Lit., 'acquires herself.'

(31) I.e., evidence of puberty.

(32) As stated in the Mishnah, 14b.

(33) In that he does not transmit his rights to her earnings to his heirs.

(34) Lit., 'leaves over.'

(35) It is reasonable that several items are omitted, but not just one.

(36) For his heirs do not inherit her; infra 17b.

(37) That you say the Tanna also omits her father's death.

(38) That the maid is freed by her father's death, since nothing else is omitted.

(39) The term of six years and the proportionate repayment of the purchase price and the Jubilee are all fixed and ascertainable.

(40) Not all women receive the evidences of puberty at the same age.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 16b

below.¹ For it was taught: If a male, aged nine years, grew two hairs,² it is a mole;³ from nine years and a day until twelve years and a day, remaining in him,⁴ they are a mole. R. Jose son of R. Judah said: They are a 'sign'.⁵ At thirteen years and one day, all admit that they are a 'sign'.⁶

R. Shesheth objected: R. Simeon said: Four are presented with gifts [on becoming free], three in the case of a man, and three in the case of a woman. And you cannot say four in the case of either, because 'signs' do not apply to a man, nor boring to a woman.⁷ Now if this⁸ be correct, the father's death should also be taught? And if you answer: Here too he teaches [some] and omits [others] — but he states 'four'?⁹ And if you answer: He teaches [only] that which is fixed, but not that which is not fixed — but what of 'signs', which are not fixed and which he nevertheless teaches? And if you reply: Here too it is as R. Safra — but there is the master's death, which is likewise not fixed, and yet taught? — The master's death too is not taught. Then what are the four? — [i] Years, [ii] jubilee,¹⁰ [iii] jubilee for him whose ear was bored, and [iv] a Hebrew bondmaid [freed] by 'signs'. Reason too supports this view. For the second part teaches: 'And you cannot say four in the case of either, because "signs" do not apply to a man, nor boring to a woman. Now if it be so,¹¹ then in the case of a woman at least four may be found.¹² This proves it.

R. 'Amram objected: Now, the following are furnished with gifts: He who is freed by [six] years, by jubilee, and by his master's death, and a Hebrew bondmaid [freed] by 'signs'. But if this be correct, the father's death too should be taught. And should you answer: He teaches and leaves over-but he states 'the following'?¹³ And should you reply: He teaches that which is fixed, but not that which is not fixed — but what of 'signs', which are not fixed, and which he nevertheless teaches? And should you answer: Here too, it is as R. Safra — but there is the master's death! This refutation of Resh Lakish is indeed a refutation. But Resh Lakish reasoned a minori! — It is an a minori which can be refuted. For one can refute it [thus]: as for 'signs', that is because there is a physical change [in her];¹⁴ will you say [the same] of her father's death, seeing that there is no physical change?¹⁵

One [Baraita] taught: The outfit of a Hebrew male slave¹⁶ belongs to himself, and that of a Hebrew female slave to herself. While another [Baraita] taught: the outfit of a Hebrew female slave, and her findings, belong to her father, and the master can claim only for loss of time.¹⁷ Now surely one [Baraita] refers to where she was liberated by 'signs',¹⁸ while the other means that she was liberated by her father's death?¹⁹ — No: both [Baraitas] refer to liberation by 'signs', yet there is no difficulty. In the one case she has a father, in the other she has not.

Now, as for [teaching,] 'The outfit of a female slave belongs to herself,' that is well, [for] it is to exclude her brothers,²⁰ For it was taught: And ye shall make them [the heathen slaves] an inheritance for your sons after you²¹ — 'them' for your sons, but not your daughters for your sons. Hence we learn that one cannot transmit his rights in his daughters to his sons. But as for 'the outfit of a male slave belongs to himself — that is obvious! to whom else should it belong? — Said R. Joseph: I see here a yod [turned into a] town.²² Abaye said: Thus did R. Shesheth say: Who is the authority for this? Totai. For it was taught: Totai said: [Thou shalt furnish] him [liberally]²³ — him, but not his creditor.²⁴

[To turn to] the main text [above:] 'Now, the following are furnished with gifts: — He who is freed by years, jubilee, and his master's death, and a Hebrew bondmaid [freed] by "signs". But no gift is made to a runaway, or him who is freed by a deduction from his purchase price. R. Meir said: No gift is made to a runaway; but he who is freed by a deduction from the purchase price is furnished with a gift. R. Simeon said: Four are presented with gifts, three in the case of a man, and three in the case of a woman. And you cannot say four in the case of either, because "signs" do not apply to a man, nor boring to a woman'. How do we know this? — For our Rabbis taught: I might think that only he who is freed by six [years] is furnished with a gift; how do I know to include one who is freed by jubilee or by his master's death, and a Hebrew bondmaid [freed] by signs? From the verses, thou shalt let him go free from thee. And when thou lettest him go free from thee.²⁵ [Again] I might think that I include a runaway and one who goes out through a deduction from the purchase price — therefore it is stated: 'and when thou lettest him go free from thee,' teaching, only he whose dismissal is from thee,²⁶ thus excluding a runaway and one who is freed by deduction from the purchase price, whose dismissal is not from thee.²⁷ R. Meir said: A runaway is not furnished with a gift, since his dismissal is not from thee: but one who is freed by deduction from the purchase price, whose dismissal is from thee,²⁸ [is presented with a gift]. A runaway? But he must complete [his term]?²⁹ For it was taught: How do we know that a runaway is bound to complete [his term]? From the verse, six years he shall serve.³⁰

- (1) [They serve as evidence whenever they appear after a certain age, but not if they appear before.]
 - (2) The normal evidence of puberty.
 - (3) But not signs of puberty; hair grows out of a mole.
 - (4) All the time, and not falling out.
 - (5) Of puberty. But had they fallen out, he too admits that it is only a mole.
 - (6) Even if they subsequently fall out.
 - (7) R. Shesheth assumes that the four are: (i) one who is freed on the expiration of six years; (ii) by jubilee; (iii) he whose ear was bored, freed by his master's death; and (iv) a Hebrew bondmaid freed by 'signs.'
 - (8) Resh Lakish's ruling.
 - (9) Which shews that the number is exact.
 - (10) If it comes before the end of six years.
 - (11) That the master's death is taught, as originally assumed.
 - (12) (i) Her master's death; (ii) six years; (iii) jubilee, and (iv) 'signs.'
 - (13) Which indicates only those.
 - (14) Having attained puberty, she is not really the same person who was sold.
 - (15) Surely not.
 - (16) I.e., the gifts with which he is sent away at the end of six years.
 - (17) Involved in her finding.
 - (18) Her father still being alive — then the gift belongs to her father.
 - (19) Which supports Resh Lakish.
 - (20) Though it would have belonged to her father, had he lived, he does not transmit it as a legacy to his sons, her brothers.
 - (21) Lev. XXV, 46.
 - (22) 'A mountain out of a molehill': the yod, being only a small letter, has grown into a whole town! The Tanna has swelled his Baraitha by the inclusion of superfluous matter.
 - (23) Deut. XV, 14.
 - (24) The gift must not be passed on to the slave's creditor, and that is the Baraitha's teaching.
 - (25) Ibid. 12, 13 ; the repetition teaches that whatever the cause of his freedom, he must be furnished with a gift.
 - (26) I.e., with the master's good will.
 - (27) Since the master is bound to accept a refund, even against his will.
 - (28) So he regards it.
 - (29) After which he should certainly receive a present.

(30) Ex. XXI, 2; he must complete the period.

Talmud - Mas. Kiddushin 17a

I might think, even if he fell sick,¹ therefore, it is stated, and in the 'seventh he shall go outfree'! — R. Shesheth answered: The reference here is to one who escaped, and then jubilee supervened.² I might have thought, since jubilee would have emancipated him, we apply to him, 'his dismissal is from thee,' and do not punish but furnish him with a gift. Therefore we are informed [that it is not so].

The Master said: 'I might think, even if he fell sick, therefore it is stated: "and in the seventh he shall go out free ". 'Even if he was sick the whole of the six [years]? But it was taught: If he was sick three years and served three years, he is not bound to complete [his term]; but if he was ill the whole of the six years, he is bound to make it up! — R. Shesheth replied: This means that he was able to perform needle-work.³

This is self-contradictory. You say: 'If he was sick three years and served three years, he is not bound to complete [his term]': which implies, if four years he must complete [it]. Then consider the second clause: 'but if he was ill the whole of the six years, he is bound to make it up' — implying, if [only] four, he is not? — This is its meaning:⁴ if he was four years ill, it is accounted as though he were indisposed the whole of the six years, and he must make it up.

Our Rabbis taught: With how much is he [the freed slave] presented? With five sela's [worth] of each kind,⁵ which is fifteen sela's in all: this is R. Meir's view. R. Judah maintained: Thirty, as the thirty [paid] for a [heathen] slave.⁶ R. Simeon said: Fifty, as the fifty of 'arakin.⁷

The master said: 'With five sela's [worth] of each kind, which is fifteen sela's: this is R. Meir's view.' Does then R. Meir come to teach us arithmetic? — He tells us this: He may not indeed diminish his total, but if he gives him less of one kind and more of another, we have no objection. What is R. Meir's reason? — He learns the meaning of 'empty' from a firstborn:⁸ just as there, five sela's is meant, so here too five sela's is meant. Then perhaps five sela's in all? — Were 'empty' written at the end [of the verse],⁹ [it would be] as you say. Now, however, that 'empty' is written at the beginning,¹⁰ apply [the word] 'empty' to 'flock', 'threshing-floor,' and 'wine-press' individually. But let us learn the meaning of 'empty' from the pilgrimage burnt-offering?¹¹ — Scripture saith, as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee [thou shalt give unto him].¹²

'R. Judah maintained: Thirty, as the thirty [paid] for a [heathen] slave.' What is R. Judah's reason? — He learns the meaning of 'giving' from a slave:¹³ just as there, thirty is meant, so here too, thirty is meant. But let us learn the meaning of 'giving', from 'arakin:¹⁴ just as there, fifty, so here too, fifty? — Firstly, because if you seize much, you cannot hold; if you seize little, you can hold;¹⁵ moreover, one should rather deduce slave from slave. 'R. Simeon said: Fifty, as the fifty of 'arakin.' What is R. Simeon's reason? — He learns the meaning of 'giving' from 'arakin: just as there, fifty, so here too, fifty. But perhaps [the comparison is] with the least [sum] of 'arakin?¹⁶ — It is written, as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee.¹⁷ But let us learn the meaning of 'giving' from a slave: just as there, thirty, so here too thirty: [for] firstly, if you seize much, you cannot

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR THE NAZIRITE VOW¹ ARE EQUIVALENT TO NAZIRITE VOWS. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I SHALL BE [ONE].' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I SHALL BE COMELY, A NAZIRITE, A NAZIK,² A NAZIAH² A PAZIAH. HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I INTEND TO BE LIKE THIS,' OR 'I INTEND TO CURL [MY HAIR].' OR 'I MEAN TO TEND [MY HAIR].' OR 'I UNDERTAKE TO DEVELOP TRESSES,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I TAKE UPON MYSELF [AN OBLIGATION INVOLVING] BIRDS,' R. MEIR SAYS HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, BUT THE SAGES SAY HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE.

GEMARA. Seeing that the Tanna³ is teaching the order Nashim,⁴ why does he speak of the nazirite? — The Tanna had in mind the scriptural verse, Then it cometh to pass if she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some unseemly thing in her,⁵ and he reasons thus. What was the cause of the woman's infidelity? Wine. Further, he proceeds, whosoever sees an unfaithful wife in her degradation⁶ will take a nazirite's vow and abjure wine.⁷

[How is it that in enunciating the general rule,⁸ the Mishnah] mentions first 'substitutes' and then gives examples of 'allusions'?⁹ — Raba, others say Kadi,¹⁰ said: There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah] and it should read as follows: 'All the substitutes for the nazirite vow are equivalent to nazirite vows, and all allusions to the nazirite vow are equivalent to nazirite vows. The following are allusions. If a man says, I shall be [one].' he becomes a nazirite [etc.].' Ought not then the substitutes to be enumerated first?¹¹ — It is customary for the Tanna to explain first what he mentions last. Thus we learn: With what materials may [the Sabbath lamp] be kindled, and with what may it not be kindled?¹² and the exposition begins: It is forbidden to kindle etc. [Again, we learn:] With what materials may [hot victuals] be covered [on the Sabbath],¹³ and with what may they not be covered?¹⁴ and the exposition begins: It is forbidden to cover etc. [Again:] What may a woman 'wear when she goes out [on the Sabbath], and what may she not wear when she goes out?¹⁵ and the exposition begins: She must not go out etc.

But have we not learnt: With what trappings may an animal go out [on the Sabbath]. and with what may it not go out?¹⁶ whilst the exposition begins: The camel may go out etc.; [and again:] Some both inherit and bequeath,¹⁷ and some inherit but do not bequeath. Some bequeath and do not inherit, and some neither inherit nor bequeath,¹⁸ whilst the exposition begins: The following both inherit and bequeath? The truth is that the Tanna adopts sometimes one method and sometimes the other, [according to circumstances]. In the first set of cases adduced, because the prohibition is a personal one,¹⁹ this personal prohibition is expounded first. On the other hand, in the case of the animal, since the prohibition arises primarily through the animal,²⁰ those things which are permitted are mentioned first.

(1) V. Num. VI, 2-22.

(2) These 'substitutes' are mutilations of the Hebrew word nazir. Cf. Ned. 10b.

- (3) v. Glos.
- (4) Nashim, the third of the six orders of the Mishnah contains the laws pertaining to women. The inclusion of the nazirite regulations appears at first sight incongruous.
- (5) Deut. XXIV, 1. The verse is quoted in the concluding paragraph of M. Gittin. This suggests that the order of the treatises assumed was Gittin, Nazir, Sotah, the order of the Jerusalem Talmud. In Sot. 2a, a different reason is given assuming the order of the Babylonian Talmud, viz.: — Nedarim, Nazir, Sotah. V. however Tosaf. s.v. htn
- (6) Cf. Num. v, 11-31.
- (7) For this reason Nazir is followed by Sotah.
- (8) I.e., all the substitutes for the nazirite vow, etc.
- (9) Viz., 'I shall be one' etc. Allusions, Heb. yadoth; lit., 'handles', phrases suggesting the nazirite's vow.
- (10) Aliter, others quote the statement anonymously.
- (11) Cf. Ned. 2bff
- (12) Shah. 20b.
- (13) To retain their warmth.
- (14) Ibid. 47b.
- (15) Ibid. 57a.
- (16) Ibid. 52b.
- (17) I.e., to those from 'whom they inherit.
- (18) B.B. 108a.
- (19) He himself is forbidden to do the action.
- (20) He may not allow the animal to wear the trappings.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 2b

With inheritance, again. the basic type of inheritance is dealt with first. Granted all this, [in the case of the nazirite vow] why should not the substitutes be enumerated first? — There is a special reason, viz., that [the rule regarding the efficacy of] the allusions is derived [from the scriptural text] by a process of inference¹ and therefore the Tanna set a special value on it. Then why does he not mention them first? — For opening the subject the Tanna prefers to mention the basic type of vow,² but in his exposition, he illustrates the allusions first.

IF A MAN SAYS I SHALL BE [ONE]. HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. But might he not mean, 'I shall keep a fast day'?³ — Samuel said: We must suppose that a nazirite is passing by [when he makes this declaration]. Are we to infer from this that Samuel is of the opinion that allusions, the significance of which is not manifest,⁴ have not the force of a direct statement?⁵ — Let me explain. [What Samuel means is that] if a nazirite is passing by, there is no reason to suspect a different intention,⁶ but without question, if no nazirite is passing by, we say that he might mean, 'I shall keep a fast day.'⁷ But perhaps his purpose was to free the other from his sacrifices?⁸ — [We presume it to be known] that he added mentally ['a nazirite']. If so, it is surely obvious [that he becomes a nazirite]? It might be thought that we require his utterance and his intention to coincide, and so we are told [that this is not so].

I SHALL BE COMELY . . . HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. Perhaps he means, 'I shall be comely before Him in [the performance of] precepts. as has been taught: [The verse]. This is my God and I will glorify⁹ Him¹⁰ means, I will glorify Him in [the performance of] precepts; I shall build an attractive booth,¹¹ procure a faultless palm-branch.¹¹ wear elegant fringes, write a magnificent Scroll of the Law and provide it with wrappings of choicest silk? — Samuel said: [We assume that] he takes hold of his hair¹² when he says, ‘I shall be comely.’

[Seeing that to become] a nazirite is in a way a sin,¹³ can it be termed comely? —

(1) They are not mentioned explicitly, but are inferred from the redundant sequence of references to the Nazirite vow in Num., VI, 2. V. Ned. 3a.

(2) Heb. ‘Korban’, ‘sacrifice’, the generic term for every kind of vow. The ‘substitutes’ are considered essential forms of the vow, the ‘allusions’ subsidiary forms.

(3) Lit., ‘I shall be in a fast’.

(4) As would be the case if a nazirite did not pass by at the time.

(5) Kid. 5a reports Samuel as holding the opposite.

(6) [Although the allusion is not particularly manifest, in accordance with Samuel's view, in Kid. loc. cit. Cf. Asheri.]

(7) And in the absence of an allusion of any likely significance, there is no obligation at all. Cf. Asheri.

(8) I.e., defray their cost. His meaning would then be, ‘I shall be in his place for the purpose of offering his sacrifices;’ cf. Num., VI, 14ff..

(9) ‘Glorify’ and ‘comely’ are from the same Hebrew root.

(10) Ex. XV, 2.

(11) For the Feast of Tabernacles. Cf. Lev. XXIII, 42 and 40.

(12) And so the reference is to the naziriteship, when his hair would grow long.

(13) Because he denies himself that which the Torah has permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 3a

Yes. For even R. Eliezer ha-Kappar who says that a nazirite is accounted a sinner, means only the nazirite who has contracted ritual impurity; for, since he must nullify [his previous abstinence]¹ in accordance with the rule laid down by the Merciful One, But the former days shall be void, because his consecration was defiled,² there is a danger that he may break his nazirite vow.³ But a nazirite who remains ritually clean is not termed a sinner.⁴

I INTEND TO BE LIKE THIS: Granted that he takes hold of his hair, he does not say ‘I intend to be through this,’⁵ [but only ‘like this’]? — Samuel said: We suppose that a nazirite is passing by at the time.

I INTEND TO CURL⁶ [MY HAIR]. How do we know that this [word MESALSEL] refers to the curling of the hair? — From a remark made by a maidservant⁷ of Rabbi's household, who said to a certain man: How much longer are you going to curl [mesalsel] your hair? But perhaps [it refers to] the Torah⁸ in accordance with the verse, Extol her [salseleha] and she will exalt thee?⁹ — Samuel said: Here, too, we suppose that he takes hold of his hair.

I MEAN TO TEND¹⁰ [MY HAIR]. How do we know that this [word MEKALKEL] refers to the tending of his hair? — From what we learnt: ‘With regard to orpiment.¹¹ R. Judah said that there must be sufficient to depilate the kilkul,’¹² and Rab commented: [This means the hair of] one of the temples.¹³ But might it not mean tending the poor. in accordance with the verse, And Joseph sustained [wa-yekalkel] his father and his brothers?¹⁴ — Samuel said: Here too. we assume that he takes hold of his hair.

I UNDERTAKE TO DEVELOP¹⁵ TRESSES,¹⁶ HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. How do we know that this [word] shilluah signifies increase? — From the verse, Thy shoots [shelohayik] are a park of pomegranates.¹⁷ But perhaps it has the significance of ‘removal’¹⁸ in accordance with the verse, And sendeth [we-sholeah] waters upon the fields?¹⁹ — The occurrence of the word pera’ [tresses] in connection with the nazirite gives the tanna the clue. It says here, He shall be holy. he shall let the locks [pera’] grow long.²⁰ and it says elsewhere regarding an ordinary priest,²¹ Nor’ suffer their locks [pera’] to grow long [yeshallehu].²² Alternatively, we can say that the sholeah used of water,²³ also signifies increase,²⁴ for when produce is watered it shoots up.

[IF HE SAYS] ‘I TAKE UPON MYSELF [AN OBLIGATION INVOLVING] BIRDS,’ R. MEIR SAYS HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. What is R. Meir’s reason? — Resh Lakish said: [In making this vow] he has in mind the birds that are coupled with hair in the scriptural verse, Till his hair was grown long like eagles’ feathers, and his nails like birds’ claws.²⁵ R. Meir is of the opinion that a man will refer to one thing when he means something else occurring in the same context,²⁶

- (1) The period which elapsed before he became unclean.
 - (2) Num. VI, 22.
 - (3) He may not be able to control his desire for wine for the longer period.
 - (4) Cf. infra 29a, where the opposite is asserted.
 - (5) The text is uncertain. The meaning would apparently be: I intend to discipline myself through my hair, reading VZC instead of VZF in cur. edd.
 - (6) Heb. mesalsel.
 - (7) This maidservant always spoke Hebrew, v. Meg. 28a.
 - (8) I.e., he vows to engage in the study of Torah.
 - (9) Prov. IV, 8.
 - (10) Heb. mekalkel.
 - (11) Heb. sid, usually lime, here orpiment, used as a depilatory.
 - (12) The transference of this amount from a private to a public domain on the Sabbath constitutes an indictable offence.
 - (13) Shah. 80b.
 - (14) Gen. XLVII, 12.
 - (15) Heb. leshaleah.
 - (16) Heb. pera’.
 - (17) Cant. IV, 13.
 - (18) I.e., he vows to remove his hair.
 - (19) Job V, 10. I.e. transports the waters from field to field (cf. the context).
 - (20) Num. VI, 5.
 - (21) I.e., not the High Priest, who is subject to stricter regulations. V. Sanh. 22b.
 - (22) Ezek. XLIV, 20. In Sanh. 22b this same comparison is made to show that pera’ means a growth of thirty days’ duration (the normal duration of a nazirite vow). Thus whether shilluah means ‘grow’ or ‘remove’, the nazirite vow is implicit in the word pera'.

(23) In the verse of Job.

(24) [Cur. edd. add in brackets, 'as R. Joseph translated,' referring to the Targum on the Prophets ascribed to R. Joseph. V. B.K. (Sonc. ed.) p. 9, n. 9. The reading that follows is, however, not found in our Targum.]

(25) Dan. IV, 30. It is assumed that he takes hold of his hair, or a nazirite is passing by (Rashi). Cf. below.

(26) Lit., 'he is seized by what is close to it.' E.g., here, he says 'birds' when he means 'hair'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 3b

whilst the Rabbis are of the opinion that a man will not refer to one thing when he means another. R. Johanan said: Both [R. Meir and the Rabbis] are agreed that a man will not refer to one thing etc.,¹ and R. Meir's reason is that we take account of the possibility that what he had undertaken was to bring the birds of a ritually unclean nazirite.²

But if we are to take [possible meanings] into account, why should we not say that he was undertaking [to bring] a free will offering of birds? — in that event, he would have said, 'I undertake to bring a nest.'³

But perhaps he meant: I undertake [to bring] the birds of a leper?⁴ — We must suppose that a nazirite passes by at the time. But perhaps it was a ritually unclean nazirite and he desired to free him from his [obligatory] sacrifices? — We must suppose that a ritually clean nazirite passes by at the time.⁵

What [practical] difference is there between them?⁶ — There would be a difference [for example] if he should say: I take upon myself [an obligation involving] the birds mentioned in the same context as hair. According to R. Johanan, notwithstanding that he says this, he becomes a nazirite if one is passing at the time, but not otherwise;⁷ whereas according to R. Simeon b. Lakish, even though no nazirite passes by at the time [he becomes a nazirite].⁸ But is there any authority who disputes that a man may refer to one thing and mean another occurring in the same context? Has it not been taught: If a man says, '[By] my right hand,' it is accounted an oath.⁹ Now, surely the reason for this is the verse, When he lifted up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and swore by Him who liveth for ever?¹⁰ — Not so. It is because the expression '[By my] right hand,' is itself an oath, as it has been taught: How do we know that if a man says, '[By] my right hand,' it is accounted an oath? From the verse, The Lord hath sworn by his right hand.¹¹ And how do we know that if a man says, 'By my left hand,' it is accounted an oath? Because the verse continues, And by the arm of his strength.¹¹

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE [TO ABSTAIN] FROM PRESSED GRAPES, OR FROM GRAPE STONES, OR FROM POLLING, OR FROM [CONTRACTING] RITUAL DEFILEMENT, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE AND ALL THE REGULATIONS OF NAZIRITESHIP APPLY TO HIM.

GEMARA. The Mishnah is not in agreement with R. Simeon, for it has been taught: R. Simeon says that he does not incur the liabilities [of a nazirite] unless he vows to abstain from everything [that is forbidden to a nazirite], whilst the Rabbis say that even though he vows to abstain from one thing only, he becomes a nazirite.

What is R. Simeon's reason?—Scripture says. [He shall eat] nothing that is made of the grape-vine, from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone.¹² And what is the Rabbis' reason? — The verse reads, He shall abstain¹³ from wine and strong drink.¹⁴ What does R. Simeon make of the statement, 'He shall abstain from wine and strong drink'? — He requires it to prohibit wine the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional. What is this [wine the drinking of which is obligatory]? The wine of Kiddush¹⁵ and Habdalah,¹⁵ [is it not]?

- (1) And therefore R. Meir's reason is not the one given by Resh Lakish.
 - (2) V. Num. VI, 10. [I.e., he undertook to bring such birds should he afterwards become unclean during his proposed naziriteship; hence he becomes a nazirite (Rashi).]
 - (3) As this was the usual manner in which free-will offerings of birds were made.
 - (4) Cf. Lev. XIV, 4. [That is he undertook to bring birds for a leper freeing him from his obligatory sacrifices. Asheri.] This question creates a difficulty both for R. Johanan and Resh Lakish (Rashi).
 - (5) And as such a one has not to bring the offering of birds, he must have referred to himself.
 - (6) Between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.
 - (7) As he may simply be undertaking to bring an offering of birds.
 - (8) [That is, according to R. Meir; v. Rashi and Tosaf. This difference will, however, apply also on the view of the Rabbis, for where he explicitly states... 'the birds mentioned in the same context as hair,' the Rabbis would also agree according to Resh Lakish that he becomes a nazirite; cf. Rashi 2b (top).]
 - (9) Tosaf. Ned. I, e.g., if he says, 'My right hand that I shall eat this loaf.'
 - (10) Dan. XII, 7; and when he refers to his right hand he means the oath in the same context.
 - (11) Isa. LXII. 8. ['Arm of his strength' refers to the left hand; ,'. Ber. 6a.]
 - (12) The emphasis is laid on the word 'nothing', so that the vow must expressly include everything. Num. VI, 4.
 - (13) Lit., 'vow to abstain'.
 - (14) Ibid. VI, 3. Thus it is sufficient if his vow refers specifically to wine only. This verse is made here to refer to the actual taking of the nazirite vow; though from the context it might be thought to be part of the enumeration of objects forbidden the nazirite.
 - (15) V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 4a

But surely here he is bound by the oath taken on Mount Sinai?¹ — We must therefore suppose the following dictum of Raba to be indicated, [Viz.:] — [If a man says,] 'I swear to drink [wine]' and later says, 'I wish to be a nazirite,' the nazirite vow operates despite the oath.²

And do not the Rabbis also require [this verse] to prohibit wine, the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional? — If this were its [sole] purpose, only wine need have been mentioned in the verse! [What is the purport of the addition] of 'strong drink'! It is to enable us to infer both things.³ And R. Simeon?⁴ — He [will hold] that the reason for the addition of strong drink is to guide us in the interpretation of the same expression when used in connection with the Temple service, in the verse, Drink no wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee.⁵ Just as for the nazirite, only wine is forbidden but not other beverages, so in connection with the Temple service, only wine is forbidden [to the priests], but not other intoxicating beverages. This conflicts with the opinion of R. Judah, for it has been taught: R. Judah said that [a priest] who eats preserved figs from Keilah,⁶ or drinks honey or milk, and then enters the Temple, is guilty.⁷ Alternatively,⁸ R. Simeon rejects the Principle that a prohibition can come into operation when a prohibition [on a different count] is already present,⁹ as has been taught: R. Simeon says that a man who eats carrion¹⁰ on the Day of Atonement is not liable [to a penalty for breach of observance of the day].¹¹

What do the Rabbis make of the verse, [‘He shall eat] nothing that is made of the grapevine’?¹² The Rabbis will tell you that this teaches that [the various kinds of food] forbidden to a nazirite can combine together.¹³ R. Simeon, on the other hand, does not require a rule about combination, for it has been taught: R. Simeon says that a mite [of forbidden food] is sufficient [to entail liability] to stripes; a quantity equivalent to an olive is required only where a sacrifice is [the appropriate penalty].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] ‘I VOW TO BE LIKE SAMSON,¹⁴ THE SON OF MANOAH, WHO WAS THE HUSBAND OF DELILAH, OR ‘WHO PLUCKED UP THE GATES OF GAZAH,’¹⁵ OR ‘WHOSE EYES THE PHILISTINES PUT OUT,’¹⁶ HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON. GEMARA. Why must [the Mishnah] specify all these expressions? — All are necessary. For if he were to say. ‘I wish to be like Samson,’ I might think that some other Samson [was intended], and so we are told [that he must add] ‘like the son of Manoah.’ Again, if he were to add [only] ‘the son of Manoah,’ I might think that there is someone else so named, and so we are told [that he must add], ‘like the husband of Delilah,’ or ‘like him whose eyes the Philistines put out.’¹⁷

MISHNAH. WHAT DIFFERENCE IS THERE BETWEEN A NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON AND A LIFE-NAZIRITE?¹⁸ A LIFE-NAZIRITE. WHENEVER HIS HAIR BECOMES BURDENSOME, MAY THIN IT WITH A RAZOR AND THEN OFFER THREE ANIMAL SACRIFICES,¹⁹ WHILST SHOULD HE BE RITUALLY DEFILED, HE MUST OFFER THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT.²⁰ THE NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON IS NOT PERMITTED TO THIN HIS HAIR SHOULD IT BECOME BURDENSOME, AND IF [RITUALLY] DEFILED, DOES NOT OFFER THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT.

GEMARA. How does the life-nazirite come in here?²¹ — There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah]. and it should read as follows: If a man says, ‘I intend to be a life-nazirite,’ he becomes a life-nazirite. What difference is there between a nazirite like Samson and a life-nazirite? A life-nazirite whenever his hair becomes burdensome may thin it with a razor and then offer three animal sacrifices, whilst should he be ritually defiled, he must offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement. The nazirite like Samson is not permitted to thin his hair with a razor should it become burdensome,

(1) I.e., surely his vow cannot annul obligations in existence since the giving of the law on Mount Sinai, so Rashi. Tosaf. (Rabbenu Tam) replaces the last two sentences by the following: ‘Can it be that the wine of Kiddush and Habdalah is indicated? But is he then bound by an oath taken on Mount Sinai?’ According to this view there is no scriptural obligation to drink wine at Kiddush and Habdalah. This is the view usually accepted.

- (2) I.e., although this is wine the drinking of which is incumbent on him.
- (3) Viz.: (i) wine the drinking of which is an obligation is forbidden the nazirite. (ii) though he vows to abstain from one thing only he becomes a nazirite.
- (4) How will he meet the argument of the Rabbis?
- (5) The verse was addressed to Aaron as High priest. Lev. x, 9.
- (6) A town in the lowlands of Judea, cf. Josh. XV, 44' v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 481, n. 6.
- (7) Of transgressing the prohibition against strong drink in Lev. X, 9.
- (8) An alternative reason for R. Simeon's opinion that he does not become a nazirite unless he vows to abstain from everything, is being given (Rashi).
- (9) In other words, an act already prohibited cannot be prohibited on another count. Hence, once his vow to abstain from wine begins to operate, he can no longer become a full nazirite (Rashi). This interpretation considers the statement, 'I declare myself a nazirite (to abstain) from pressed grapes' to consist of two parts in the following order: (i) I vow to abstain from pressed grapes; (ii) I declare myself a nazirite. For other interpretations, v. Tosaf. and Asheri.
- (10) Heb. nebelah, v. Glos.
- (11) Carrion being already in itself prohibited.
- (12) V. supra p. 7, n. 4.
- (13) I.e., supposing he eats less of each kind than the minimum size of an olive, yet the total quantity consumed is the size of an olive, he is liable to stripes.
- (14) Samson was a nazirite to a limited extent only. V. next Mishnah.
- (15) V. Judg. XVI, 3.
- (16) V. Judg. XVI, 21.
- (17) Thus the first three expressions are de rigueur, but for the third equivalents may be used.
- (18) One who declares himself a nazirite for life. Samson was also a nazirite for life.
- (19) A nazirite on terminating his abstinence was required to offer three animal sacrifices. V. Num. VI, 13ff
- (20) Defilement of a nazirite. Num. VI, 9.
- (21) Lit., 'who mentioned its name'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 4b

and if ritually defiled does not offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement. [You say that the nazirite like Samson] does not have to offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement,¹ enabling me to infer that he is subject to the nazirite obligation [which forbids him to defile himself]. Who then is [the author of] our Mishnah, [seeing that] it can be neither R. Judah nor R. Simeon? For it has been taught: R. Judah said that a nazirite like Samson is permitted to defile himself [deliberately, by contact] with the dead, for Samson himself did so; R. Simeon says that if a man declares. '[I intend to be] a nazirite like Samson,' his statement is of no effect, since we are not aware that Samson personally ever pronounced a nazirite vow.² [We ask then:] Who [is the author of our Mishnah]? It cannot be R. Judah, for he says that [a nazirite like Samson] may even [defile himself] intentionally. whereas our Mishnah [merely] states [that no sacrifice need be offered] if he has become defiled [accidentally]; nor can it be R. Simeon since he says that the vow does not become operative at all! — Actually it is R. Judah [and the nazirite like Samson is permitted to defile himself] but because in referring to the life-nazirite,³ the Mishnah uses the expression 'SHOULD HE BE [RITUALLY] DEFILED.' the same expression is used in referring to the nazirite like Samson.⁴

May we say that the difference [of R. Judah and R. Simeon] is essentially the same as that of the following Tannaim? For it has been taught: [If a man says.] ‘This [food] shall be [as forbidden] for me as a firstling,’⁵ R. Jacob says he may not eat it, but R. Jose says he may.⁶ May we not say then that R. Judah agrees with R. Jacob in holding that the object [with which the comparison is made,]⁷ need not itself be one forbidden as the result of a vow, whilst R. Simeon agrees with R. Jose in holding that the object [with which comparison is made] must be one forbidden as the result of a vow? — This is not so. Both [R. Judah and R. Simeon] are agreed that it is necessary for the object [with which comparison is made] to be one forbidden as the result of a vow, but the case of the firstling is different, since in the verse, [When a man voweth a vow]⁸ unto the Lord,⁹ [the superfluous words ‘unto the Lord’] include the firstling¹⁰ [as a legitimate object of comparison].

What does R. Jose reply [to this argument]? — He will say that the expression ‘unto the Lord’ serves to include the sin-offering and the guilt-offering¹¹ [but not the firstling]. [We may ask him:] On what ground, then, are the sin-offering and the guilt-offering included rather than the firstling? — [He would reply:] The sin-offering and the guilt-offering are included because they have to be expressly dedicated,¹² but the firstling is excluded since it need not be expressly dedicated. And R. Jacob? — He can rejoin: Firstlings too, are expressly dedicated, for it has been taught: [The members] of our Teacher's household¹³ used to say: How do we know that when a firstling is born in a man's flock, it is his duty to dedicate it expressly [for the altar]? Because it says, The males shalt thou dedicate.¹⁴ And R. Jose? — He can reply: Granted that it is a religious duty to dedicate it [expressly], yet if he fails to do so, is it not nevertheless sacred?¹⁵

[It may be said:] In the case of the nazirite, too, is there not a phrase ‘Into the Lord’?¹⁶ — This is required for the purpose taught [in the following passage]: Simon the Just¹⁷ said: In the whole of my life, I ate of the guilt-offering of a defiled nazirite [only once].¹⁸ This man who came to me from the South country, had beautiful eyes and handsome features with his locks heaped into curls. I asked him: ‘Why, my son, didst thou resolve to destroy such wonderful hair?’ He answered: ‘In my native town. I was my father's shepherd, and, on going down to draw water from the well, I used to gaze at my reflection [in its waters]. Then my evil inclination assailed me, seeking to compass my ruin,¹⁹ and so I said to it, "Base wretch! Why dost thou plume thyself on a world that is not thine own, for thy latter end is with worms and maggots. I swear²⁰ I shall shear these locks to the glory of Heaven!"’ Then I rose, and kissed him upon his head. and said to him: ‘Like unto thee, may there be many nazirites in Israel. Of such as thou art, does the verse say, When a man shall clearly utter a vow, the vow of a nazirite to consecrate himself unto the Lord.’²¹

But was not Samson a nazirite [in the ordinary sense]?²² Surely the verse states, For the child shall be a nazirite into God from the womb!²³ — It was the angel who said this.

How do we know that [Samson] did defile himself [by contact] with the dead? Shall I say, because it is written, With the jawbone of an ass have I smitten a thousand men,²⁴ but it is possible that he thrust it at them without touching them? But [we know it] again from the following. And smote thirty men of then and took their spoil.²⁵ But it is possible that he stripped them first and slew them afterwards? — It says clearly [first]. And he smote, [and then,] And took. But it is still possible that he [merely] wounded them mortally²⁶ [before stripping them]! — [We must say], therefore, that it was known by tradition [that he did come into contact with them]. Where does it state [in the Scriptures] that a life-nazirite [may thin his hair]? — It has been taught: Rabbi said that Absalom was a life-nazirite, for it says, And it came to pass at the end of forty years that Absalom said to the king: [pray thee, let me go and pay my vow which I have vowed unto the Lord in Hebron.²⁷ He used to cut his hair every twelve months, for it says. [And when he polled his head,] now it was at every year's [yamim] end [that he polled it],²⁸ and the meaning of the word 'yamim' here is decided by its meaning when used in connection with houses in walled cities;¹ just as there it means twelve months,² so here it means twelve months. R. Nehorai said: [Absalom] used to poll every thirty days. R. Jose said: He used to poll on the eve of each Sabbath, for princes usually poll on the eve of each Sabbath.

[We have said that] Rabbi's reason [for interpreting 'yamim' as a year] is because of its occurrence in connection with houses in walled cities. But has not Rabbi himself said that 'yamim' [in that connection] means not less than two days?³ — The only reason that he uses the comparison at all⁴ is because of the reference to the heaviness [of Absalom's hair],⁵ and two days' growth is not heavy.⁶

Why should it not be two years, in accordance with the verse, And it came to pass at the end of two full years?⁷ From a text containing 'yamim' without mention of years' conclusions may be drawn concerning another text containing 'yamim' without mention of years';⁸ but no conclusion can be drawn here from this verse where there is mention of 'years'.

Why should it not be thirty days, for there is a verse, but a whole month?⁹ — From a text mentioning 'yamim' without 'months', conclusions may be drawn concerning another text mentioning 'yamim' without 'months',¹⁰ but this verse affords no indication since 'months' are mentioned therewith.

Why should not the inference be made from mi-yamim yamimah ['from days to days']?¹¹ — Conclusions may be drawn concerning a text containing 'yamim'. from another [text] containing 'yamim', but not from one containing 'yamimah'.

But what is the difference [between 'yamim' and 'yamimah']? Have not the school of R. Ishmael taught that in the verses, And the priest shall come again,¹² Then the priest shall come in,¹² 'coming again' and 'coming in' mean one and the same thing?¹³ — Inference [from nonidentical expressions] is permissible where there is no identical expression [on which to base the inference], but where an identical expression exists, the inference must be drawn from the identical expression.¹⁴

Another reply [to the suggestion that inference be made from 'yamimah']: How do we know [with certainty] that [they went] once every three months? May not the four times per annum have occurred alternately at intervals of four months and of two months?¹⁵

'R. Nehorai said: [Absalom] used to poll every thirty days.' What is his reason? — [Ordinary] priests [poll every thirty days]¹⁶ because [their hair] becomes burdensome, and so here it would become burdensome [after thirty days].¹⁷

'R. Jose said: He polled on the eve of each Sabbath, [etc.]' What difference then was there between him and his brothers?¹⁸ — When a festival occurred in mid-week, his brothers polled, but he did not do so. Alternatively, his brothers [if they wished] could poll on Friday morning, but he could not do so until the late afternoon. What were the forty years referred to [by Absalom]?¹⁹ — R. Nehorai, citing R. Joshua, said that it means ‘forty years after [the Israelites] had demanded a king.’²⁰ It has been taught: The year in which they demanded a king, was the tenth year [of the principate of] Samuel the Ramathean.²¹

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITE VOW OF UNSPECIFIED DURATION [REMAINS IN FORCE] THIRTY DAYS.

GEMARA. Whence is this rule derived?—R. Mattena said: The text reads He shall be [yihyeh] holy,²² and the numerical value²³ of the word yihyeh is thirty.²⁴ Bar Pada said: [The duration of the vow] corresponds to the number of times that parts of the root nazar are found in the Torah,²⁵ viz., thirty less one.²⁶ Why does not R. Mattena derive [the number of days] from the [occurrences of the various] parts of nazar? — He will tell you that [some of] these are required for teaching special lessons. [Thus the verse.] He shall abstain [yazzir] from wine and strong drink,²⁷ is required to prohibit wine the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional;²⁸ [whilst the verse,] Shall clearly utter a vow, the vow of a nazirite to consecrate himself,²⁹ teaches that one nazirite vow can be superimposed on another.³⁰

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 5b

To which Bar Pada can reply: Is there not even one [recurrence of a part of nazar] that is not needed for a special lesson? Since this one may be used for computation. ail may be used for computation.¹ We have learnt: A NAZIRITE VOW OF UNSPECIFIED DURATION [REMAINS IN FORCE] THIRTY DAYS. Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but how can it be reconciled with Bar Pada's view?² — Bar Pada will tell you that because [the period of the vow closes with] the thirtieth day, on which the nazirite polls and brings his sacrifices, [the Mishnah] says thirty [days].

We have learnt: If a man says, 'I declare myself a nazirite,' he polls on the thirty-first day.³ Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but how is it to be reconciled with Bar Pada's view? — Bar Pada will say: Consider the clause which follows, [viz.:] Should he poll on the thirtieth day, his obligation is fulfilled. We see, then, that the second clause [of this Mishnah] lends support to his view, whilst the original clause [must be read] as though it contained the word [I declare myself a nazirite for thirty] 'whole' [days].⁴ Does not this second clause need to be reconciled with R. Mattena's view?⁵ — He considers part of a day equivalent to a whole day.⁶

But have we not learnt: '[Should someone say,] "I intend to be a nazirite for thirty days," and poll on the thirtieth day, his obligation is not fulfilled'?⁷ — [We presume that] he said, 'whole days'.

We have learnt: If a man undertakes two naziriteships, he polls for the first one on the thirty-first day, and for the second on the sixty-first day.⁷ This fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena

- (1) As well as for teaching special lessons.
- (2) According to which the period should be 29 days.
- (3) V. infra 162.
- (4) And therefore he polls on the 31st day.
- (5) According to which the polling should be on the thirty-first day.
- (6) Thus though he polls on the thirtieth day, he has kept thirty days of naziriteship.
- (7) Infra p. 53.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 6a

but how is it to be reconciled with Bar Pada's view? — Bar Pada will say: Consider the clause which follows, [viz.:] If, however, he should poll for the first on the thirtieth day, he can poll for the second on the sixtieth day. Thus the second clause lends support to his view, whilst the original clause [must be read] as though it contained the words 'whole days'.

Is not R. Mattena in conflict with this second clause?¹ — R. Mattena can reply: This must be interpreted in the light of the next clause, which says that the thirtieth day counts as belonging to both periods.² This is taken to signify then that part of a day is equivalent to a whole day. But has he [the Tanna] not stated this once already?³ — It might be thought that this is only true for one naziriteship but not for two, and so we are told [that it is also true for two].⁴

We have learnt: Should he poll on the day prior to the sixtieth, he has fulfilled his obligation, since the thirtieth day is included in the [required] number.⁵ Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but for Bar Pada what necessity is there [for this statement], since he says that [the normal duration] is thirty days less one? — He will say: This is the very passage on which I rely for my opinion.

We have learnt: If a person says, 'I intend to be a nazirite' and contracts ritual defilement on the thirtieth day, the whole period is rendered void.⁵ Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but does it not conflict with that of Bar Pada? —

(1) Cf. 11. 4.

(2) As end of the first and beginning of the second naziriteship.

(3) As an inference from another clause of the same Mishnah (v. supra, p. 17); what necessity is there then for this latter clause?

(4) That one part of the day belongs to one and the other to the second period.

(5) Infra p. 53.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 6b

Bar Pada will say: Consider the subsequent clause [which reads]: R. Eliezer says: Only the [next] seven days are void.¹ Now if you assume that thirty days are necessary [as the minimum period of nazirite separation], should not all be void?² [R. Mattena, however, will reply:] R. Eliezer is of the opinion that part of a day is equivalent to the whole.³

We have learnt: [If a man says] 'I intend to be a nazirite for one hundred days,' and contracts ritual defilement on the hundredth day, the whole period is rendered void. R. Eliezer said that only thirty days are rendered void.⁴ Now, if we assume⁵ that R. Eliezer considers part of a day to be equivalent to a whole day, surely only seven days should be annulled?¹ Again [on the other hand] if we assume⁶ that he does not regard part of the day as equivalent to a whole day, should not the whole period be annulled?⁷ — In point of fact, we do not regard part of a day as equivalent to a whole day. In that case, why is not the whole period annulled? — Said Resh Lakish: R. Eliezer's reason is as follows: Scripture says, And this is the law of the nazirite, [on the day] when the days of his consecration are fulfilled.⁸ Thus the Torah expressly declares that if he contracts ritual defilement on the day of fulfilment, the law for a nazirite vow [of unspecified duration] is to be applied to him.⁹ May we say [that the difference between R. Mattena and Bar Pada] is the same as that between the following Tannaim? [For it was taught:] From the verse, Until the days be fulfilled,¹⁰ I can only infer that the vow must continue in force at least two days,¹¹ and so the text adds, He shall be holy; he shall let the locks grow long,¹² and hair does not 'grow long' in less than thirty days. This is the view of R. Josiah. R. Jonathan, however, said that this [reasoning] is unnecessary, for we have the text, Until the days be fulfilled.¹² What days then are those which have to be 'fulfilled'? You must say the thirty days [of the lunar month].¹³ May we assume that R. Mattena agrees with R. Josiah, and Bar Pada with R. Jonathan? — R. Mattena can maintain that both [authorities] agree that thirty days is the necessary period and the point at issue between them is whether the word 'until' [preceding a number] signifies the inclusion or exclusion [of the last unit of that number].¹⁴ R. Josiah is of the opinion that in the term 'until' [the last unit] is not included,¹⁵ whereas R. Jonathan is of the opinion that by the use of 'until', [the last unit] is included.¹⁶ The Master stated: What days then are those which have to be 'fulfilled'? You must say, The thirty days [of a lunar month]. But could it not be a week¹⁷ — [In the case of] a week, what deficiency is there to make up?

(1) Since he is unable to offer his nazirite sacrifices until he has been sprinkled with the ashes of the red heifer on the third and seventh days. V. Num. XIX, 1ff.

(2) Because the defilement takes place while the vow is still in force.

(3) Hence when the defilement takes place, the vow is no longer in force.

(4) Infra P. 53.

(5) As does R. Mattena.

(6) As does Bar Pada.

(7) For then the naziriteship is not complete until the close of the hundredth day and defilement during the naziriteship nullifies the whole preceding period.

(8) Num. VI, 13.

(9) I.e., he is to be a nazirite again for 30 days. [i.e., not more and not less, irrespective of the question whether or not part of the day is equivalent to a whole day (Tosaf..)]

(10) Ibid. 5.

(11) 'Two' being the minimum to which the plural 'days' could be applied.

(12) Num. VI, 5.

(13) An ordinary lunar month contains 29 days, a 'full' month 30 days.

(14) I.e., whether e.g. 'until 30' means 30 or 29.

(15) And the number thirty is derived by means of the rest of the verse, 'He shall let the locks grow long'.

(16) And the number thirty is obtained from 'Until the days be fulfilled'.

(17) Lit., 'a Sabbath', i.e., six working days completed by the Sabbath to make a week.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 7a

Could it then not be a year?¹ — Are these reckoned in days? Surely the Rabbis of Caesarea² have said: How do we know that a year is not reckoned in days? Because Scripture says, months of the year:³ [this signifies that] months are counted towards years but not days.

MISHNAH. IF HE SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE LONG [PERIOD,] OR] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE SHORT [PERIOD,] THEN EVEN [IF HE ADDS, 'FOR AS LONG AS IT TAKES TO GO] FROM HERE TO THE END OF THE EARTH,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS.

GEMARA. Why is this so? Has he not said, 'from here to the end of the earth'?⁴ — His meaning is: For me this business is as lengthy as if it would last from here to the end of the earth. We have learnt: [If a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite as from here to such and such a place,' we estimate the number of days' journey from here to the place mentioned, and if this is less than thirty days, he becomes a nazirite for thirty days; otherwise he becomes a nazirite for that number of days.⁵ Now why should you not say in this case also that [his meaning is]: For me, this business seems as if it would last from here to the place mentioned?⁶ — Raba replied: We assume that [when he made the declaration] he was setting out on the journey.⁷ Then why should he not [observe a naziriteship of thirty days] for each parasang?⁸ R. Papa said: We speak of a place where they do not reckon [distances] in parasangs. Then let him [observe a naziriteship] for every stage [on the road]; for have we not learnt that [a man who says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite as the dust of the earth,' or 'as the hair of my head,' or 'as the sands of the sea,' becomes a life-nazirite, polling every thirty days?⁹ — This [principle]¹⁰ does not apply to [a nazirite vow in which] a definite term is mentioned,¹¹ and this has indeed been taught [explicitly]: [A man, who says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite all the days of my life,' or 'I intend to be a life-nazirite,' becomes a life-nazirite,¹² but even [if he says] 'a hundred years,' or 'a thousand years,' he does not become a life-nazirite,¹³ but a nazirite for life.¹⁴

Rabbah said: Hairs are different [from parasangs or stages], since each is separate from the others.¹⁵

In the case of days, do we not find the verse, And there was evening and there was morning, one day?¹⁶ — There it is not because [days] are discrete entities [that the verse says one day] but to inform us that a day with the night [preceding it] together count as a day,¹⁷ though they are really not discrete entities.

Raba said: Why raise all these difficulties? The case [in which he says 'FROM HERE TO THE END OF THE EARTH'] is different, because he has already said: I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE [SINGLE PERIOD].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS ONE DAY,' OR 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS AN HOUR,' OR 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, ONCE AND A HALF,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR TWO [PERIODS].

GEMARA. What need is there [for the Mishnah] to specify all these cases?¹⁸ — They are all necessary. For had it mentioned only, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS ONE DAY,' [it might have been thought] that here only do we apply the rule that 'there is no naziriteship for a single day,' and so he must reckon two [periods], whereas [when he says] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS AN HOUR,' he is to reckon thirty one days. So this case is mentioned explicitly

(1) And the ordinary year may be considered 'deficient' by the side of a leap year.

- (2) [On the Rabbis of Caesarea v. Lieberman, S. The Talmud of Caesarea, pp. 9ff.]
- (3) Ex, XII, 2.
- (4) And he should be a nazirite for life.
- (5) Infra p. 23.
- (6) And his naziriteship should in any case not extend beyond thirty days.
- (7) The presumption is, then, that the journey and the length of naziriteship are connected.
- (8) A Persian mile.
- (9) Infra p. 23.
- (10) That he has to observe a succession of periods of naziriteship. polling at the end of each period.
- (11) E.g., from here to such and such a place.
- (12) And polls every thirty days.
- (13) Having mentioned a definite term.
- (14) I.e., he keeps one long naziriteship during which he can never poll. Tosef. Naz. I, 3.
- (15) But distance is continuous. Hence if he mentions hairs, he is understood to mean a succession of short naziriteships, but if he mentions a distance, one long one.
- (16) And so distance in terms of days is also discrete, yet the Mishnah quoted above confines the naziriteship to a single period, and not to a succession equal in number to the number of days.
- (17) For the reckoning of Sabbaths and Festivals.
- (18) One would be enough, and we could infer the others.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 7b

Again, if it had simply added, '[I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE] PLUS AN HOUR,' [it might have been thought that he must count two periods] because he was [clearly] not speaking with precision,¹ whereas the expression 'ONCE AND A HALF' is precise, and it might therefore have been thought that he should not reckon two [periods].² And so we are told that in each case, he becomes a nazirite for two periods.

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS PLUS AN HOUR,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY-ONE DAYS, SINCE THERE IS NO NAZIRITESHIP FOR HOURS.

GEMARA. Rab said: This applies³ only when he says, 'thirtyone days,' but if he says, 'thirty days plus one day,' he becomes a nazirite for two periods.⁴ Rab follows R. Akiba whose method it was to lay stress on superfluities of expression, as we have learnt: [If a man sells a house, the sale includes] neither the cistern nor the cellar, even though he inserted the depth and the height [in the deed of sale]; he must, however, purchase for himself a right-of way.⁵ This is the opinion of R. Akiba, but the Sages say that he need not purchase a right-of-way for himself.⁶ R. Akiba does admit, however, that if he explicitly excludes [pit and cellar], he does not have to purchase a right-of-way.⁷

- (1) Since naziriteships are reckoned in days only.
- (2) But forty-five days.
- (3) The assumption of the Mishnah that a man can become a nazirite for thirty-one days.
- (4) See last Mishnah and Gemara.

(5) I.e., He does not retain a right-of-way to the cistern and cellar, unless he explicitly reserves it for himself.

(6) Since the sale does not include the cistern and cellar, he may be presumed to have reserved a right of way to them.

(7) The insertion of this superfluous clause is taken by R. Akiba to indicate that he wished to retain a right of way; v. B.B. 64a.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 8a

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE HAIRS OF MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA,' HE BECOMES A LIFE-NAZIRITE, POLLING EVERY THIRTY DAYS. RABBI SAID THAT SUCH A MAN DOES NOT POLL EVERY THIRTY DAYS;¹ THE MAN WHO POLLS EVERY THIRTY DAYS IS THE ONE WHO SAYS, 'I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIPS² AS THE HAIR ON MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA.' [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE CAPACITY OF THIS HOUSE, OR AS THE CAPACITY OF THIS BASKET,' WE INTERROGATE HIM. IF HE SAYS THAT HE HAS VOWED ONE LONG PERIOD OF NAZIRITESHIP, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, BUT IF HE SAYS THAT HE HAS VOWED WITHOUT ATTACHING ANY PRECISE MEANING [TO HIS STATEMENT], WE REGARD THE BASKET AS THOUGH IT WERE FULL OF MUSTARD SEED, AND HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THE WHOLE OF HIS LIFE.³ [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AS FROM HERE TO SUCH AND SUCH A PLACE,' WE ESTIMATE THE NUMBER OF DAYS' [JOURNEY] FROM HERE TO THE PLACE MENTIONED. IF THIS IS LESS THAN THIRTY DAYS, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS; OTHERWISE HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THAT NUMBER OF DAYS. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AS THE NUMBER OF DAYS IN A SOLAR YEAR'' HE MUST COUNT AS MANY NAZIRITESHIPS AS THERE ARE DAYS IN THE SOLAR YEAR. R. JUDAH SAID: SUCH A CASE ONCE OCCURRED, AND WHEN THE MAN HAD COMPLETED [HIS PERIODS], HE DIED.

GEMARA. WE REGARD THE BASKET AS THOUGH IT WERE FILLED WITH MUSTARD SEED, AND HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THE WHOLE OF HIS LIFE. But why [mustard seed]? Surely we could regard it as though it were full of cucumbers or gourds, and so provide him with a remedy?⁴ — Hezekiah said: This is a matter on which opinions differ, the author [of our Mishnah] being R. Simeon, who has affirmed that people do undertake obligations in which the use of an ambiguous formula results in greater stringency than the use of a precise one.⁵ For it has been taught: [If a man has said,] 'I intend to be a nazirite provided this heap [of grain] contains a hundred kor,⁶ and on going to it, he finds that it has been stolen or lost, R. Simeon declares him bound [to his vow] since whenever in doubt as to a nazirite's liabilities, we adopt the more stringent ruling.⁷ R. Judah, however, releases him since whenever in doubt as to a nazirite's liabilities, we adopt the more lenient ruling.⁸

R. Johanan said: It is even possible that [the author of the Mishnah] is R. Judah. For in the case just mentioned, the man has possibly not entered into a naziriteship at all [if there were not one hundred kor in the heap],⁹ whereas in this case [mentioned in the Mishnah,] he does at any rate enter into a naziriteship.¹⁰ On what grounds can he be released from it?¹¹ But why not regard the basket as though it were full of cucumbers and gourds, and so provide him with a remedy?¹² — Such an idea ought not to cross your mind, for he has undertaken one [unbroken] naziriteship,¹³

(1) But becomes a nazirite for life and may never poll.

(2) , urhzb

(3) (a) One naziriteship for every grain of mustard, [or, (b) one long naziriteship during which he can never poll].

(4) [By enabling him to poll at the end of every thirty days (according to (b) p. 23, n. 6).]

(5) As here, the reference to a basketful without specifying its contents, results in naziriteship for life.

(6) A dry measure; v. Glos.

(7) So that, as we are not certain that the heap contained less than 100 kor, he must observe the naziriteship.

(8) Tosef. Naz. II, 2.

(9) And therefore we do not declare him a nazirite lest he should eventually bring profane animals into the sanctuary, v. infra p. 102.

(10) For some period of time, whatever the basket is regarded as containing.

(11) And therefore he must be a nazirite for life.

(12) I.e., let him keep as many naziriteships as the basket will contain gourds or cucumbers. The questioner imagines that in R. Judah's view he becomes a life-nazirite, who can poll every thirty days. cf. supra, p. 21, n. 4.

(13) And if he brings his sacrifices at the termination of the number of days that the basket would contain gourds or cucumbers, he may be bringing profane animals into the sanctuary, as his naziriteship may be of longer duration. Thus he becomes a nazirite for life, during which he can never poll.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 8b

R. Judah agreeing with Rabbi, as we have learnt: RABBI SAID THAT SUCH A MAN DOES NOT POLL EVERY THIRTY DAYS. THE MAN WHO POLLS EVERY THIRTY DAYS IS THE ONE WHO SAYS, 'I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIPS AS THE HAIR OF MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA.'

Is it then a fact that R. Judah agrees with Rabbi? Have we not learnt: [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE NUMBER OF DAYS IN A SOLAR YEAR,' HE MUST COUNT AS MANY NAZIRITESHIPS AS THERE ARE DAYS IN THE SOLAR YEAR. R. JUDAH SAID: SUCH A CASE ONCE OCCURRED, AND WHEN THE MAN HAD COMPLETED [HIS PERIODS], HE DIED? Now if you say that this man, [by using this formula,]¹ undertook [consecutive] naziriteships,² we can understand why [R. Judah says that] when he finished,³ he died. But if you say that he undertook a single naziriteship,⁴ could it ever be said of such a man that he had 'COMPLETED'?⁵ Moreover, could [R. Judah] possibly agree with Rabbi, seeing that it has been taught: R. Judah said: [If a man says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite, as the number of heaps of the fig crop,⁶ or the number of ears [in the field] in the Sabbatical year,'⁷ he must count naziriteships as the number of heaps of the fig crop, or the number of ears [in the field] in the Sabbatical year?⁸ — [Where he explicitly mentions the word] 'number', it is different.

But does Rabbi make a distinction where the word 'number' [is used]? Has it not been taught: [If a man says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite as the number of days in a solar year,' he must count as many naziriteships as there are days in the solar year; if [he says] 'as the days of a lunar year,' he must count as many naziriteships as there are days in a lunar year. Rabbi said that this does not hold unless he says, 'I undertake naziriteships as the number of days in the solar year or as the number of days in the lunar year'?⁹ — R. Judah agrees with Rabbi on one point, and differs from him on the other. He agrees with him on one point, viz: that what is undertaken is a [single] naziriteship,¹⁰ but differs from him on the other, for whilst R. Judah distinguishes between [the cases] where the word 'number' is mentioned and where it is omitted, Rabbi does not so distinguish.

Our Rabbis taught: [A man who says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite all the days of my life,' or 'I wish to be a life-nazirite,' becomes a life-nazirite. Even if he says a hundred years, or a thousand years, he does not become a life-nazirite, but a nazirite for life.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: [If a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite plus one,' he must reckon two [naziriteships]. [If he adds,] 'and another,' he must reckon three, and if he then adds 'and again' he counts four. Surely this is obvious? — It might be thought that the words 'and again' refer to the whole [preceding number], making six in all, and so we are told that this is not so.

Our Rabbis taught: [When a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite,' Symmachos affirmed [that by adding] hen,¹² [he must reckon] one; digon,¹³ two; trigon,¹³ three; tetragon,¹³ four; pentagon,¹³ five [naziriteships].¹⁴

Our Rabbis taught: A house that is round, or digon,¹⁵ or trigon,¹⁵ or pentagon,¹⁵ does not contract defilement through the plague [of leprosy]. One that is tetragon¹⁵ does. What is the reason? — For Scripture, both in the latter part and in the earlier part of the passage [dealing with the leprosy of houses], puts walls [in the plural]¹⁶ instead of wall [in the singular], thus making four walls in all.¹⁷ [

(1) 'I intend to be a nazirite, etc.'

(2) 365 naziriteships, each of thirty days duration.

(3) At the end of thirty years.

(4) He would then mean, 'I undertake to be a nazirite for the number of the sun's days, i.e., for ever.' (Rashi). [Alternatively: If you say he undertook a single naziriteship (i.e. of 365 days duration) could it be said of him that he had completed the amount of naziriteships required by the Rabbis, in support of whose view R. Judah cites the incident; v. Tosaf.]

(5) He could never bring sacrifices.

(6) Aliter; paths of the fig-gatherers. v. Kohut, Aruch.

(7) Aliter; field.paths in the Sabbatical year.

(8) Tosef. Naz. I. Whereas Rabbi holds that in such a case he would have to count only as many days as there are heaps of figs.

(9) Tosef. Naz. I. And, according to Rabbi, the same would be the case if he omitted the word 'number', the important thing being the use of the term, 'nazirite' or 'naziriteships'.

(10) I.e., when he says, 'I intend to be a nazirite as the capacity of this house'.

(11) Tosef. Naz. I, 3, and supra p. 21.

(12) Gr. , once.

(13) The last syllable is probably a Hebraisation of . Thus digon —  — twice; and so on. V. Kohut, Aruch.

(14) Tosef. Naz. I.

(15) Here we have the normal meaning, two-sided, and so on.

(16) Lev. XIV, 39, and 37.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 9a

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS.] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS', BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE [IN THE ORDINARY SENSE].¹ BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA IS OF SOME EFFECT]. THEY MEANT ONLY WHERE HE SAID,² 'THEY ARE [FORBIDDEN] TO ME, AS IS A SACRIFICE.'³

GEMARA. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS, BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE: But why? Does not the Divine Law say, nothing that is made of the grape-vine?⁴ — Beth Shammai adopt the view of R. Meir, who said that a man does not make a declaration without meaning something,⁵ whilst Beth Hillel adopt the view of R. Jose that a man's intentions are to be gathered from⁶ the concluding portion of his statement [equally with the first portion], and [in consequence] the vow here carries with it its annulment.⁷

But surely Beth Shammai also agree that the vow here carries with it its annulment? — We must therefore say, that Beth Shammai adopt the view of R. Meir, who said that a man does not make a declaration without meaning something, and so immediately he utters the words 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE', he becomes a nazirite, and in adding '[AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS, his purpose is to obtain release⁸ [from his vow], and Beth Shammai [reject this] in accordance with their general principle that there can be no release from [vows made for] sacred purposes, and since there can be no release from [vows made for] sacred purposes, there can be no release from naziriteship. Beth Hillel, on the other hand, agree with R. Simeon, as we have learnt:⁹ R. Simeon declared him free¹⁰ [of obligation], since his offering was not undertaken in the customary manner:

(1) I.e., he must abstain from wine and grapes.

(2) I.e., he added (Rashi). [Tosaf: . . . as if he said'; Asheri: . . . here he intended'].

(3) They then become forbidden, but he does not become a nazirite even according to Beth Shammai.

(4) Num. VI, 4, which would show that naziriteship applies only to wine etc.

(5) Even though taken altogether his words are meaningless, and we therefore select that part which has a meaning and hold him to it.

(6) Lit., 'a man is held by'.

(7) Lit., 'its door' for escape; by his concluding remarks, he has withdrawn from his nazirite vow.

(8) Lit., 'to ask for remission.

(9) In connection with one who vowed to bring a meal-offering of barley flour; v. infra.

(10) From bringing the offering, since a meal-offering could be brought only of wheaten flour.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 9b

Our Mishnah is not in agreement with the following tanna. For it has been taught: R. Nathan said that Beth Shammai declare him both to have vowed [to abstain from figs] and to have become a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare him to have vowed [to abstain from figs], but not to have become a nazirite. [Here,] Beth Shammai agree with R. Meir¹ and R. Judah,² and Beth Hillel with R. Jose.³ According to another report, R. Nathan said that Beth Shammai declare him to have vowed [to abstain from figs], but not to have become a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare him neither to have vowed, nor to have become a nazirite. [Here,] Beth Shammai agree with R. Judah, and Beth Hillel with R. Simeon.⁴

We have learnt elsewhere: A man who says, 'I undertake to bring a meal-offering of barley-flour,' must [nevertheless] bring one of wheaten flour.⁵ If he says, 'of coarse meal,' he must [nevertheless] bring fine meal. If, 'without oil and frankincense,' he must [nevertheless] add oil and frankincense; 'of half a tenth,' he must offer a whole tenth; 'of a tenth and a half', he must offer two tenths. R. Simeon declared him, free [of obligation], since his offering was not undertaken in the customary manner.⁶

Who is the Tanna [who asserts that] if anyone undertakes to bring a meal-offering of barley-flour, he must bring one of wheaten flour? — Hezekiah replied: The matter is a subject of controversy, [the Tanna here] representing Beth Shammai. For have not Beth Shammai averred that when a man says ['I intend to be a nazirite and abstain] from dried figs and pressed figs,' he becomes a nazirite? So too, if he says 'of barley-flour', he must bring one of wheaten flour. R. Johanan, on the other hand, replied that it is possible to maintain that [the passage quoted] represents the views of both [Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel] and that it refers to a man who says, 'Had I known that such vows are not made, I should not have vowed in this wise, but in the [correct] manner

Hezekiah said: The rule just laid down applies only where he said 'of barley', but if he says 'of lentils',⁷ he need bring nothing at all. [Can this be so?] Consider: To whom does Hezekiah ascribe the Mishnah [containing this ruling]? To Beth Shammai! Now lentils in regard to a meal-offering, are as dried figs to a nazirite, and there Beth Shammai declare him to be a nazirite?⁸ Hezekiah relinquished that opinion.⁹ Why did he relinquish it? —¹⁰ Raba said: Because he found that Mishnah difficult to understand. Why does it say 'barley' and not 'lentils'?¹¹ And so Hezekiah concluded that Beth Shammai's assertion was what R. Judah [maintained it to be].¹² R. Johanan, on the other hand, affirmed that [the rule of the Mishnah is applicable] even if he says 'of lentils'. But was it not R. Johanan who averred that [he only brings the offering if] he affirms: Had I known that such vows are not made, I should not have vowed in this wise, but in the [correct] manner?¹³ — He¹⁴ was arguing on Hezekiah's premises. You relinquished your former opinion,¹⁵ because [the Mishnah] does not mention [the case] 'of lentils'. But might it not be a case of progressive argument, viz, not only is it true that when he says, 'of lentils' he must bring a proper meal-offering, since we may hold that he is there repenting [of his vow], and so we lay stress upon the opening portion of his statement, but even if he says 'of barley', where we could take it as certain that his intention is: If it can become consecrated after the manner of the 'Omer meal-offering,¹⁶

- (1) That a man does not make a declaration without meaning something.
 - (2) Of our Mishnah.
 - (3) That a man's intention may be gathered from the concluding portion of his statement, and not like R. Simeon; cf. n. 7.
 - (4) That a vow must be undertaken in the customary manner.
 - (5) Which alone was permissible for a meal-offering. v. Lev. II. 2: And when anyone bringeth a meal-offering unto the Lord, his offering shall be of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it and put frankincense thereon.
 - (6) M. Men. 103a.
 - (7) There was an obligatory offering of barley for the 'Omer but no offering of lentils at all (v. Lev. XXIII, 10ff.).
 - (8) And so here he ought to bring a meal-offering of wheaten flour if he says 'of lentils'.
 - (9) That the Tanna of the Mishnah of Men. 103a is Beth Shammai. [He will consequently accept the explanation of R. Johanan (Tosaf.).]
 - (10) He could still have maintained that the Mishnah of Men. represents the view of Beth Shammai, and retract from the second statement holding that the ruling applies even if the man said 'of lentils'!
 - (11) If the view of Beth Shammai is that we hold a man to the first portion of his vow, then even if he says, 'I intend to offer a meal-offering of lentils', he should be obliged to bring one of wheaten flour.
 - (12) [The text is in disorder, and the interpretations suggested are many and varied. It appears to be best understood on the basis of Rashi's interpretation of R. Judah's statement in our Mishnah, viz., that he actually added, THEY ARE FORBIDDEN TO ME AS IS A SACRIFICE (v. supra p. 28, n. 2). On this view, even according to Beth Shammai, where he vowed to bring a meal-offering from barley, he would not be obliged to bring one of wheat unless he, e.g., explicitly stated that had he known that such vows are not made, he would have vowed in the correct manner, as R. Johanan (supra p. 30), but while such a plea would be accepted if he vowed barley because it could have been a bona-fide error, it could not be admitted if he undertook to offer 'lentils'. Granted this, the Mishnah in Men. can represent the views of both Beth Hillel and Beth Shammai, as R. Johanan stated, hence the reason for Hezekiah relinquishing his former opinion (v. p. 30, 11. 4).]
 - (13) [A plea which is not admitted if he vowed to bring 'lentils', v. n. 4.]
 - (14) [R. Johanan, in affirming that the ruling is applicable even if he says 'of lentils'.]
 - (15) [V. supra p. 30, n.4.]
 - (16) Which was of barley. v. Lev. XXIII, 10ff.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 10a

or the meal-offering of the faithless wife,¹ then I desire it to become consecrated, but not otherwise — even there we are told that he must bring one of wheaten flour.²

MISHNAH. IF HE SAYS, 'THIS HEIFER IS SAYING I SHALL BECOME A NAZIRITE IF I RISE,'³ OR 'THIS DOOR IS SAYING I SHALL BECOME A NAZIRITE IF I OPEN', BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA WAS OF SOME EFFECT], IT WAS ONLY WHERE HE SAYS:⁴ 'THIS HEIFER SHALL BE [FORBIDDEN] TO ME AS IS A SACRIFICE, IF IT SHOULD STAND UP [OF ITSELF]'.

GEMARA. Is it possible for a heifer to talk? — Rami b. Hama replied: [The Mishnah] here, refers to where a heifer lay crouching before him, and he said, ‘This heifer thinks that it is not going to stand up. I intend to be a nazirite [and abstain] from its flesh, if it stands up of its own accord,’ and it then arose of its own accord. Beth Shammai now apply their customary view and Beth Hillel their customary view. Beth Shammai who affirm that [in spite of his saying], ‘from dried figs and pressed figs’, he becomes a nazirite, assert here that [even] when he says ‘from its flesh’, he becomes a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare that he does not become a nazirite.

But have not Beth Shammai asserted this once, already? Raba replied: A second and a third time⁵ [did they repeat it]. R. Hiyya, too, taught it a second and a third time, and so did R. Oshaia teach it a second and a third time, and they are all necessary statements; For if the rule had been stated merely in the case of dried figs and pressed figs, [it might have been argued] that Beth Shammai were of the opinion there that his words take effect and he becomes a nazirite because [figs and] grapes can be confused,⁶ whereas flesh and grapes cannot be confused. Similarly had it been affirmed regarding flesh [it might have been argued] that Beth Shammai were of the opinion in this instance that he becomes a nazirite, because flesh and wine [are naturally associated],⁷ but it would not apply to dried figs and pressed figs, and so this case also is given explicitly. Again, had it been affirmed in these two cases [only, it might have been argued] that only in these cases was Beth Shammai’s assertion to be applied, whilst as concerns the door, they would defer to Beth Hillel.⁸ Further, had only the door been referred to, [it might have been argued] that only in this case do Beth Hillel dissent, but in the other two they defer to Beth Shammai, and so we are told that this is not so.

[Nevertheless,] said Raba, does the Mishnah say if [the cow] rises of its own accord?⁹ But, said Raba, we must explain thus: The heifer, for example, is recumbent before him, and he says, ‘I undertake to bring it as a sacrifice’.

This is all very well as regards the heifer which can be offered as a sacrifice but can a door be sacrificed?¹⁰ — Raba therefore [corrected himself and] said: The heifer, for example, is recumbent before him,¹¹

(1) This was also barley, v. Num. V, 15.

(2) I.e. although his vow ban a certain meaning even if taken at face value, and there is no need for us to emphasise the first clause to the exclusion of the second, yet we do so.

(3) Apparently this is taken as a clumsy way of saying: ‘If I do not make this cow get up, I vow abstinence from its flesh.’

(4) Cf. supra p. 28, n. 2.

(5) The case of the DOOR.

(6) So that when he said figs he may have meant grapes.

(7) And when he spoke of the one, he thought of the other.

(8) Because there is no association between a door and grapes.

(9) Whilst admitting the necessity of restating the principle in our Mishnah, Raba objects to the explanation of Rami b. Hama on the ground that the word ‘rises’ might mean with the help of others, whereas according to Rami b. Hama the vow is effective only when the heifer rises of its own accord.

(10) Since the case of the door in the Mishnah is parallel to that of the heifer, any explanation applying to the heifer must hold good if the door is substituted.

(11) And appears as if it will never rise, even if force is used.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 10b

and he says, 'I undertake a nazirite-vow [to abstain] from wine if it does not stand up,' and it then stood up of its own accord. In Beth Shammai's opinion, the substance¹ of this man's vow lay in his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force,² and this he did not do,³ whereas Beth Hillel are of the opinion that [the vow was made] because [the heifer] was recumbent,⁴ and it has risen.⁵

If this is [the meaning of the Mishnah], how is the subsequent clause to be understood, viz.: R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA WAS OF SOME EFFECT], IT WAS ONLY WHERE HE SAYS, AND SHALL BE FORBIDDEN TO ME AS A SACRIFICE ETC.'? Does [his vow] then, attach to the heifer at all?⁶ — [It must be] therefore, that he said, for example, 'I undertake a nazirite vow [to abstain] from its flesh if it should not stand up,' and it then stands up of its own accord. In Beth Shammai's opinion, the substance of this man's VOW is his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force, and this he has not done, whereas according to Beth Hillel, the substance of his vow lies in the fact that [the heifer] was recumbent, and it has risen.⁷

But are Beth Hillel of the opinion that if [the heifer] does not stand up, [the man] becomes a nazirite? Have they not said that [by a vow to abstain] from flesh, he does not become a nazirite?⁸ — They were arguing on the premises of Beth Shammai. In our opinion, he does not become a nazirite even if [the heifer] should not stand up, but you who say that he does become a nazirite⁹ should at least admit that the substance of his vow lay in the fact that [the heifer] was recumbent, and it has since risen. Beth Shammai reply that this is not so, and the substance of the man's vow lay in his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force, and this he has not done.¹⁰

(1) Lit., 'the obligation'.

(2) Lit., 'with his hand'. The word 'stand up' being taken to mean 'stand up through me'.

(3) He therefore becomes a nazirite.

(4) And can only take effect if it remains recumbent.

(5) He does not therefore become a nazirite.

(6) The words 'it is forbidden to me as a sacrifice' imply that the heifer itself was the object of the vow, whereas in Raba's explanation it is the heifer's not standing up which is the condition for the operation of the man's naziriteship, and he has no intention of attaching any sanctity to the heifer.

(7) But if it did not rise he would be a nazirite.

(8) Even as in the case of a vow to abstain from pressed figs, v. supra p. 32.

(9) Where he says simply, 'I undertake to be a nazirite (and abstain) from flesh.'

(10) And so he becomes a nazirite.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 11a

MISHNAH. IF A CUP OF WINE DULY TEMPERED¹ IS OFFERED TO A MAN, AND HE SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE IN REGARD TO IT,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE.

ON ONE OCCASION A CUP OF WINE WAS OFFERED TO A WOMAN ALREADY INTOXICATED AND SHE SAID, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE IN REGARD TO IT. THE SAGES RULED THAT ALL THAT SHE MEANT WAS TO FORBID IT TO HERSELF, AS A SACRIFICE [IS FORBIDDEN]. GEMARA. You cite a case to disprove [the rule]! You begin by saying that HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, and then quote the case of the woman [who does not become a nazirite], from which I should conclude that [by means of this formula] he forbids to himself only this [cup that is offered to him] but is allowed to drink other wine? — There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah], which should read: 'If a cup of wine duly tempered is offered to a man, and he says "I undertake a nazirite vow [to abstain] from it", he becomes a nazirite.' If, however, he was [already] intoxicated when he said 'I intend to be a nazirite [and abstain] from it', he does not become a nazirite,² (since he is accounted as having merely forbidden it to himself as a sacrifice is forbidden. If you should object that he ought to have said so [unambiguously], [the reply is] that he thought they would bring a fresh one and importune him, and so he thought, 'I will say something to them which will leave them in no doubt [as to my intention]). ON ONE OCCASION, TOO, A WOMAN [ALREADY INTOXICATED etc.].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE, ON CONDITION THAT I CAN DRINK WINE, OR CAN HAVE CONTACT WITH THE DEAD', HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, AND ALL THESE THINGS ARE FORBIDDEN HIM. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I WAS AWARE THAT THERE IS SUCH A THING AS NAZIRITESHIP BUT I WAS NOT AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE', HE IS BOUND [TO HIS VOW].³ R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, RELEASES HIM.⁴ [IF HE SAYS,] 'I WAS AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE,⁵ BUT I IMAGINED THAT THE SAGES WOULD GIVE ME PERMISSION, SINCE I CANNOT DO WITHOUT WINE', OR 'SINCE I AM A SEXTON',⁶ HE IS RELEASED.⁷ R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, BINDS HIM [TO HIS VOW].⁸ GEMARA. Why does R. Simeon not dissent from the first ruling [also]? — R. Joshua b. Levi said: R. Simeon did in fact dissent from the first ruling also. Rabina said: In the opening clause, R. Simeon does not dissent, because the condition [there attached to the vow]⁹ is contrary to an injunction of the Torah, and whenever a condition is contrary to an injunction of the Torah, it is void.¹⁰ R. Joshua b. Levi, on the other hand, considered that the words ON CONDITION here are equivalent to 'except'.¹¹

It has been taught in support of Rabina's view: If he said, 'I declare myself a nazirite, on condition that I may drink wine, or have contact with the dead,' he becomes a nazirite and all these things are forbidden to him, since the condition he lays down is contrary to an injunction of the Torah; and whenever a condition is contrary to an injunction of the Torah, it is void.¹²

[IF HE SAYS] I WAS AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE [etc.]: In the preceding clause,¹³ we find it is [the Rabbis] who bind him [to his vow] and R. Simeon who releases him [and why is it not the same here]? — Here, too, it should read: [The Rabbis] bind him whilst R. Simeon releases.

Alternatively, you need not reverse the text,

(1) Wine in ancient times was never drunk neat.

- (2) His intention being to cease from drinking.
- (3) I.e. he becomes a full nazirite
- (4) He does not become a nazirite at all, P. Simeon being of opinion that a nazirite vow is not effective unless it comprises all the things forbidden to a nazirite, v. supra 3b.
- (5) [Add, 'or that a nazirite may have no contact with the dead.']
- (6) [And therefore thought the Rabbis would permit me to come in contact with the dead.]
- (7) He does not become a nazirite at all.
- (8) He becomes a full nazirite.
- (9) That he should be allowed to touch a dead body or drink wine.
- (10) And therefore the vow stands.
- (11) Hence the vow was not all-inclusive, and therefore R. Simeon regards it as null.
- (12) Tosef. Naz. II, 1.
- (13) Where he says he did not know that wine is forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 11b

[and we may explain thus]. In the first clause, where he makes a nazirite vow [to abstain] from one thing¹ only, according to the Rabbis, who hold that [the nazirite vow takes effect] even though he forswears one thing only, he becomes a nazirite and [the things forbidden to a nazirite] are forbidden to him; whereas according to R. Simeon who holds that [the nazirite vow does not take effect] until he forswears all of them, [all the things forbidden to a nazirite] are permitted to him. In the subsequent clause where he forswears all, and desires release as regards one thing, according to the Rabbis who declare him to be a nazirite even though he forswears one thing only, if he desires release as regards one only, he is released [from all]; according to R. Simeon who requires him to forswear them all, he cannot obtain release from one, until he obtains release from all. This is the reason we have the reading [in the second clause]: R. SIMEON BINDS HIM.

Yet another solution is possible. The controversy concerns vows [broken] under pressure,² and the difference [between R. Simeon and the Rabbis] is the same as that between Samuel and R. Assi [in the following passage]. For we have learnt: Four types of vows were remitted by the Sages,³ incentive Vows,⁴ vows of exaggeration,⁵ inadvertent vows⁶ and vows [broken] under pressure.⁷ And [commenting thereon] R. Judah said: 'R. Assi ruled that it was necessary with these four types of vow to seek remission from a Sage. When I told this to Samuel, he said to me, The Tanna says that the Sages have remitted them, and you say that they must still be asked to remit them!' The Rabbis agree with Samuel,⁸ R. Simeon with R. Assi.⁹

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE',¹⁰ AND SHOULD HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY: 'I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE', THEN, IF THEY ARE CLEVER THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER; OTHERWISE THEY MUST POLL OTHER NAZIRITES.

GEMARA. The question was propounded: If his companion, on hearing [his vow], says [simply]: 'I TOO', what are the consequences? Does [the remark] 'I TOO' embrace the whole of the original statement,¹¹ or does it embrace only half of it? If it should be decided that it embraces only half of the statement, is this to be the first half or the second half? — Come and hear: [AND HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAYS:] I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE, THEN IF THEY ARE CLEVER THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER. From the fact that he is made to say both I TOO' and 'I UNDERTAKE ,it may be inferred that 'I TOO' has reference to half of the statement only.

Quite so: it has reference to half of the statement only, but is this the first half or the second half? — This follows from the same [passage]. For since he is made to say AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL'¹² it follows that 'I Too' has reference to the first half.

R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua said to Raba: How can we be sure that this is so? May we not suppose that 'I TOO' really refers to the whole statement, and that the additional 'AND I UNDERTAKE', merely confirms his Undertaking? For if you do not admit this, [what do you make of] the subsequent [Mishnah] that reads: [Should a man say:] 'I undertake half the polling of a nazirite', and should his companion, hearing this, say: 'I too, I undertake half the polling of a nazirite'?¹³ Are there here two sections to which he can be referring? We can only suppose that there he is merely repeating 'I have undertaken this obligation', and in this case too [it is possible] that he is merely repeating 'I have undertaken this obligation.' Raba replied: How now! If you are prepared to say that in the first [Mishnah the words 'I UNDERTAKE ETC.'] are of importance, but not in the subsequent one, then they are repeated in the subsequent one — unnecessarily, it is true — because they are included in the first one where it is important,¹⁴ but if you maintain that it is of importance neither in the first [Mishnah] nor in the subsequent one, would it be included unnecessarily in both? R. Isaac b. Joseph citing R. Johanan said: If a man instructs his representative

(1) I.e., one of the things forbidden a

(2) Viz., his inability to live without wine.

(3) I.e., without the need of remission being asked for.

(4) E.g., 'I vow . . . if I pay more', made during bargaining to show himself in earnest.

(5) E.g., 'I vow . . . if there were not a million people there', the number being obviously exaggerated.

(6) E.g., 'I vow . . . if I was there,' and he later remembers that he was there.

(7) E.g., through illness. V. Ned. 20b.

(8) Since it is impossible for a nazirite to be a sexton, the vow is null of itself and he is not a nazirite.

(9) Though he cannot be a nazirite, the vow must be remitted by a Sage.

(10) I.e., enable a nazirite to poll by providing his sacrifices.

(11) I.e., both (i) 'I wish to be a nazirite,' and (ii) 'I undertake to poll a nazirite.'

(12) And not merely 'I Too'.

(13) Mishnah infra 12b.

(14) I.e., the second Mishnah repeats the phrasing of the first, for the sake of parallelism.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 12a

to go and betroth for him a wife, without specifying any woman, he becomes [in the meanwhile] forbidden [to marry] any woman in the world, since it is presumed that the messenger carries out his commission, and since he did not specify [the woman], he does not know which he betrothed for him.¹ Resh Lakish raised an objection against R. Johanan [from the following]: If a dove of an indeterminate pair² should fly away into the air, or amongst those sin-offerings that have to be killed,³ or if one of the pair should perish, a partner is to be taken for the other one.⁴ [This implies that] with a determinate pair there is no remedy;⁵ though all other pairs [in the world] would be valid.⁶ Now why should this be so? Should we not say of each one, perhaps this is one [that flew away]?⁷ He replied: I spoke of a woman who is stationary and you raise objections from prohibited things that are mobile!⁸ Should you argue further that here too the woman may be mobile, for it is possible that he may have met her in the street and betrothed her, [the cases are still different] for the woman returns to her customary place, but can the same be said of the bird-pair?

Raba said: R. Johanan would admit that a woman who has [among her unmarried relatives] neither daughter, daughter's daughter, nor son's daughter; neither mother nor maternal grandmother, nor sister, although she may have a sister who was divorced after [the representative was sent] — such a woman would be permitted to him,⁹ because at the time that he gave his instructions, [the sister] was still married, and when a person appoints a deputy, it is [to perform] something that is possible at the time,¹⁰ but for something that is not possible at the time he does not appoint a deputy.¹¹

We have learnt: [SHOULD A MAN SAY:] ¹¹ DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE, AND SHOULD HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY: 'I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE, THEN, IF THEY ARE CLEVER, THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER; OTHERWISE THEY MUST POLL OTHER NAZIRITES. Now this [suggestion]¹² is all very well as regards the latter, since the former had become [a nazirite] first,¹³ but as to the former, was the latter a nazirite [when he made his vow]?¹⁴

(1) Any woman may therefore be a relative, of a forbidden degree of kinship, of his betrothed wife.

(2) A pair of doves of which it has not yet been determined which is to be the sin-offering and which the burnt-offering.

(3) v. Kin. 1, 2.

(4) The pair is then to be determined in the usual way; Kin. II, I.

(5) Since it is not known which is the survivor.

(6) We assume that a random pair does not contain the missing dove, as we are guided by the majority.

(7) [And could not be offered except on behalf of the owner who originally determined it.]

(8) Where the objects are stationary (guce), a majority is not considered decisive, but any minority is as potent as the majority (cf. Sanh. [Sonc. ed.] p. 531. n. 4) and so there is an even chance that any woman is a near kinswoman of his betrothed wife.

(9) I.e., to betroth before the deputy returns.

(10) Here, to betroth an unmarried woman.

(11) Hence the deputy could not possibly have betrothed the other sister.

(12) Viz., that they should poll each other.

(13) Lit., 'since the former was in his presence'; and so his vow to poll a nazirite can be understood as applying to the former.

(14) How then can his vow apply to the latter, if we accept Raba's contention that a man can appoint an agent only for something which is possible at the time.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 12b

It follows therefore that he must have meant: 'If I should find one who is a nazirite, I shall poll him'; and so here too, perhaps he means: 'If you find one who is divorced, [you can] betroth her on my behalf'? — We may put [our maxim] thus. A person can appoint a deputy only for a commission that he himself can execute at the moment, but he cannot appoint him for a commission that he himself cannot execute at the moment [but can only do later].

But is that so? Come and hear: If a man says to his agent,¹ 'You are to declare void any vows that my wife makes from the present moment until the time I return from such-and-such a place,' and he does so, it might be imagined that they become void, but Scripture says: Her husband may let it stand, or her husband may make it void.² This is the opinion of R. Josiah. R. Jonathan said: In all circumstances do we find that a man's representative is equivalent to himself.³ Now, [R. Josiah's] reason derives from the statement of the Divine Law, Her husband may let it stand, or her husband may make it void, and but for this, the agent would be able to declare them void, whereas where [the husband] himself is concerned, it has been taught: Should a man say to his wife, 'All the vows that you may make from the present moment until I return from such-and-such a place are to stand,' this is of no effect. [Should he say,] 'They are to be void,' R. Eliezer declares them void, but the Sages say that they are not void.⁴ Now assuming that R. Josiah agrees with the Rabbis that he himself could not make them void, [we nevertheless find that] had not the Divine Law said, Her husband may let it stand or her husband may make it void, the agent could have declared them void?⁵ — It is possible that he agrees with R. Eliezer that [the husband] can make them void [in advance]. If that is so, why does he trouble to appoint a deputy? Why does he not declare them void himself? — He fears that [at the moment of departure]⁶ he might forget, or be angry, or be too busy.

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] 'I UNDERTAKE THE POLLING OF HALF A NAZIRITE,'⁷ AND HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY 'I, TOO; I UNDERTAKE THE POLLING OF HALF A NAZIRITE,' THEN, ACCORDING TO R. MEIR, EACH MUST POLL A NAZIRITE COMPLETELY, BUT THE SAGES SAY: EACH POLLS HALF A NAZIRITE.

GEMARA. Raba said: All agree that if he Says, 'I undertake half the sacrifices⁷ of a nazirite,' he is obliged to bring only half the sacrifices;⁸ if he says 'I undertake the sacrifices of half a nazirite,' he must bring a complete set of sacrifices, since partial naziriteship is impossible.⁹ Where they differ is when the phraseology of the Mishnah [is used].¹⁰ R. Meir considers that as soon as he says 'I undertake [to poll]' he becomes liable to the complete sacrifice of naziriteship, and when he [afterwards] specifies half a naziriteship, it is no longer within his power [to limit his obligation].¹¹ The Rabbis, on the other hand, look upon it as a vow accompanied by its own modification.¹²

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] ¹¹ UNDERTAKE TO BECOME A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON,' AND A SON BE BORN TO HIM, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. IF THE CHILD BORN BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. SHOULD HE SAY, WHEN I SHALL HAVE A CHILD,' THEN EVEN IF IT BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE.

- (1) A person left by a man in charge of his household while he is away.
 - (2) Num. XXX, 14.
 - (3) Ned. 72b.
 - (4) Ned. 72a.
 - (5) Which seems to show that a man can appoint an agent for something which cannot be done at once but can be done later.
 - (6) Until then, he wishes to retain his option of declaring his wife's vows void or not, at his pleasure.
 - (7) I.e., to bring half the sacrifices accompanying the polling of a nazirite.
 - (8) Because there is no ambiguity.
 - (9) The phrase 'half a nazirite' is meaningless and must therefore be replaced by 'a nazirite', since it is presumed that he intended to undertake a real obligation.
 - (10) Here the actual obligation, which is to provide sacrifices, is not mentioned explicitly but must be inferred. The position of the word 'half' is no longer decisive, since no other position yields more sense. Accordingly, its significance must be determined.
 - (11) Limitation is now only possible on application to a Sage, and so he must bring a complete sacrifice.
 - (12) And therefore only the modified vow comes into operation and it is sufficient for him to bring half the sacrifices. V. supra p. 28, n. 7.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 13a

SHOULD HIS WIFE MISCARRY, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. SIMEON SAID: [IN THIS CASE] HE MUST SAY, IF IT WAS A VIABLE CHILD, I AM A NAZIRITE OBLIGATORILY; OTHERWISE I UNDERTAKE A NAZIRITESHIP VOLUNTARILY.¹ SHOULD [HIS WIFE] LATER BEAR A CHILD,² HE THEN BECOMES A NAZIRITE. R. SIMEON SAID: HE SHOULD SAY, 'IF THE FIRST WAS A VIABLE CHILD, THE FIRST [NAZIRITESHIP] WAS OBLIGATORY, AND THE PRESENT ONE WILL BE VOLUNTARY, OTHERWISE, THE FIRST ONE WILL HAVE BEEN VOLUNTARY, AND THE PRESENT ONE IS OBLIGATORY.

GEMARA. For what purpose are we told this?³ — Because of the subsequent clause, viz.: — IF IT BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. But is not this obvious? — It might be thought that his meaning was 'If I beget a child'⁴ and so we are told that this is not so SHOULD HE SAY 'WHEN I SHALL HAVE A CHILD' etc.: But is not this obvious? — It might be thought that he only meant the child that is reckoned amongst men,⁵ and so we are told [that any child is meant].

SHOULD HIS WIFE MISCARRY HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. The author of this statement is the R. Judah of the heap of grain.⁶

R. SIMEON SAID: HE SHOULD SAY, 'IF THE CHILD WAS VIABLE, THEN I AM A

NAZIRITE OBLIGATORILY; OTHERWISE I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIP VOLUNTARILY.’ — R. Abba put the following question to R. Huna: Should a man say, ‘I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son’, and his wife miscarries, and he set aside a sacrifice,⁷ and then his wife gave birth [to a son],⁸ what is the law?⁹ From whose standpoint [was this problem propounded]? If from the standpoint of R. Simeon, what problem is there? Does not R. Simeon say that wherever there is a doubt in questions concerning naziriteship we adopt the more stringent ruling?¹⁰ — It must therefore be from the standpoint of R. Judah, who maintains that in questions concerning naziriteship, if there is a doubt the more lenient ruling is adopted. The query then is whether [the animal] became sacred or not,¹¹ But what [practical] difference can it make [which it is]?¹² — [There would be the question of] whether he might shear it, or work with it.¹³ The problem was unsolved. Ben Rehumai put the following question to Abaye: [Should a man say,] ‘I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son, and his companion, hearing this, add ‘And I undertake likewise,’ what would be the law? Is the reference to his words¹⁴ or to him himself?¹⁵ Should your finding be that the reference is to him himself,¹⁶ then if a man should say, ‘I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son,’ and his companion, hearing this, add ‘I too , what would be the law? Is the reference to himself, I or does he mean, ‘I am as much your good friend as you are yourself’?¹⁷ Should your finding be that whenever the other is present

- (1) And in either case he becomes a nazirite.
 - (2) After her miscarriage.
 - (3) That if a son is born, he becomes a nazirite.
 - (4) The Hebrew word ic son’, is a denominative of vbc ‘to beget children’, and might be used for any child (Rashi).
 - (5) I.e., a son through whom the family is propagated.
 - (6) v. supra 8a.
 - (7) To bring at the end of his proposed naziriteship.
 - (8) As a result of the same confinement.
 - (9) I.e., what about the sacrifice between the time it was set aside, and the time the second child was born. The question is made clearer anon.
 - (10) So that the husband was a nazirite in law, and the sacrifice properly set aside from the first.
 - (11) [Does the birth of the second child prove that the first was the result of the same pregnancy and consequently not premature and viable, or do we assume that it was the result of a later pregnancy and thus premature and non-viable?]
 - (12) Since it is now sacred.
 - (13) In the interval between the birth of the first and second child, as no benefit might be derived from sacred property.
 - (14) I.e., ‘I also undertake to become a nazirite when I have a son’.
 - (15) The former, i.e., I also undertake to become a nazirite when you have a son’.
 - (16) The latter, meaning, ‘I too shall be a nazirite when I have a son’.
 - (17) I.e., ‘I too shall be a nazirite when you have a son’.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 13b

he would be ashamed [to refer to himself],¹ then if a man should say, ‘I undertake to be a nazirite when so-and-so has a son,’ and his companion, hearing this, add ‘I too,’ what would be the law?

Would it be said then that because the other is not present he is referring to himself,² or does he mean, 'I am as good a friend to him as you are'?³

The problem was left unsolved.

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [NOW] AND A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON', AND BEGINS TO RECKON HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP]. AND THEN HAS A SON BORN TO HIM, HE IS TO COMPLETE HIS OWN NAZIRITESHIP] AND THEN RECKON THE ONE ON ACCOUNT OF HIS SON. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND A NAZIRITE [ON MY OWN ACCOUNT]', AND HE BEGINS TO RECKON HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP] AND THEN HAS A SON BORN TO HIM, HE MUST INTERRUPT HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP], RECKON THE ONE ON ACCOUNT OF HIS SON, AND THEN COMPLETE HIS OWN. GEMARA. Raba put the following question. If he should say, 'I wish to be a nazirite⁴ after twenty days time,' and then 'For one hundred days commencing now', what would be the law? Seeing that these hundred days will not be complete in twenty, are they to be inoperative [for the time being]⁵ or, seeing that there will remain sufficient time afterwards⁶ for the hair to grow long,⁷ do they come into operation [immediately]?⁸

Why does [Raba] not [first] raise the question of a [second] naziriteship of short duration?⁹ It is a problem within a problem that he has raised:

- (1) And he must have meant, 'I shall be a nazirite when you have a son.'
 - (2) I.e., 'I too shall be a nazirite when I have a son.'
 - (3) I.e., 'I too shall be a nazirite when so-and-so has a son.'
 - (4) An ordinary naziriteship of thirty days.
 - (5) I.e., till thirty days after the twenty.
 - (6) At the termination of the ordinary naziriteship.
 - (7) A nazirite could not poll until his hair had grown for thirty days.
 - (8) He will count twenty days, observe an ordinary naziriteship of thirty days, and then count eighty days to complete the naziriteship of one hundred days.
 - (9) 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days', and then, 'An (ordinary) nazirite commencing now.'

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 14a

Suppose it is decided that with a short naziriteship, since only ten days remain,¹ these ten days would certainly not be reckoned,² [what are we to say] of a naziriteship of a hundred days?³ Seeing that eighty remain, would these [eighty days] be reckoned² or not?

And again, suppose it is decided that [the naziriteship] [in this case] operates [immediately], what would be the law if he were to say 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days time' and then 'I wish to be a life nazirite now',⁴ would this become operative [at once] or not?⁵ And again, supposing it is decided that in all these cases, since it is possible to secure release,⁶ they become operative [at once],⁷ what would be the law if he were to say 'I wish to become a nazirite like Samson in twenty days time', and then 'I wish to be an ordinary nazirite now'? In this case, since release cannot be secured,⁸ would it become operative or not?

If he were to say, 'I desire to be as Moses on the seventh of Adar,'⁹ what [would his meaning be]?¹⁰

Of these [questions], decide the first, [For it was taught: Should a man say] 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days time,' and then 'For a hundred days from now,' he reckons twenty days, and then thirty days, and then eighty days to complete the first naziriteship.¹¹ [SHOULD HE SAY, 'I WISH TO BE A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND A NAZIRITE ON MY OWN ACCOUNT etc.']

If he contracts ritual defilement¹² during the period [of naziriteship] on account of his son, R. Johanan said: This renders void [the first¹³ period as well], but Resh Lakish said: It is not void. 'R. Johanan said that it becomes void,' — because [the whole] is one long period of naziriteship; 'but Resh Lakish said that it is not void,' — since his own naziriteship, and the one on account of his son are distinct.

- (1) If it is interrupted by a naziriteship after twenty days.
 - (2) As completing the first naziriteship by adding them to the twenty days, since ten days do not allow for the hair to grow long and therefore this naziriteship does not commence until the other one is finished.
 - (3) Is it on the same footing as the short one, or does it commence at once?
 - (4) Though a life-nazirite polls every thirty days, the naziriteship is continuous and cannot be interrupted. Thus once the life-naziriteship operates it is impossible for the ordinary naziriteship to take effect.
 - (5) I.e. , shall the life-naziriteship be suspended until the ordinary naziriteship has been observed, or does it become operative and he must obtain release from the other naziriteship.
 - (6) From the naziriteship which is to become operative in twenty days time.
 - (7) And he must secure release from the naziriteship which was to have operated after twenty days.
 - (8) A nazirite like Samson could never be freed from his vow, since Samson could not be freed.
 - (9) Supposed to be the date of the birth and death of Moses, v. Kid. 38a.
 - (10) Either 'As after the death of Moses on the seventh of Adar'; when presumably many nazirite vows were made by the Israelites, or, 'As after the birth of Moses on the seventh of Adar', a festive occasion.
 - (11) Tosef. Nazir II.
 - (12) With the dead.
 - (13) The period counted before his son's naziriteship came into operation.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 14b

If he contracts ritual defilement during the period that he is leprous.¹ R. Johanan said: This renders void [the earlier period of naziriteship]; but Resh Lakish said: It is not void. 'R. Johanan said that it becomes void,' — since he is in the midst of his period of naziriteship,² 'but Resh Lakish said that it is not void,' — because the period of leprosy and the naziriteship are distinct.

And it is necessary [to have both these controversies on record]. For if only the first³ were recorded, [we might say that] there R. Johanan was of the opinion that [the first period] becomes void because the same term, naziriteship, applies to both, whereas in the other he would agree with Resh Lakish that the nazirite period and the leprosy are distinct. Similarly had only the other [regarding leprosy] been recorded, [we might suppose that] only there did Resh Lakish hold [the two periods to be distinct], whereas in the first he would agree with R. Johanan. Thus the necessity [for recording both controversies] is demonstrated. If he becomes unclean on a day [during the period that] his hair is growing.⁴ — Rab said: This does not render void [the earlier period]; this even according to R. Johanan who said [above] that the [earlier period] does become void, for this is only so [when the uncleanness is incurred] during the naziriteship itself, but not during the period his hair is growing which is merely the complement of the naziriteship.⁵ Samuel, on the other hand, said: It does render void [the earlier period]; and this even according to Resh Lakish who said [above] that [the earlier period] does not become void, for whereas there, there are two distinct naziriteships, here⁶ there is but one naziriteship.⁷

R. Hisda said: All would agree that should his hair be still unshorn⁸ when the blood [of his sacrifice had been sprinkled],⁹ he would have no remedy.¹⁰ With whose opinion does this statement accord? It cannot be with that of R. Eliezer,¹¹ for seeing that in his opinion polling estops [him from drinking wine, the uncleanness]¹² is still prior to the ‘fulfilment of his [consecration]’¹³ and [the whole period] should become void!¹⁴ Nor can it accord with the Rabbis, Seeing that they say that the polling does not estop [him from drinking wine]!¹⁵ -In point of fact, it does accord with the opinion of the Rabbis, the phrase, ‘he would have no remedy’, meaning, ‘he would have no means of fulfilling the precept of polling [in purity]’.

R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: A nazirite whose period is completed, is scourged for contracting ritual defilement,¹⁶ but not for polling or for [drinking] wine. Why is he scourged for ritual defilement? [Assuredly] because Scripture says. All the days that he consecrateth himself unto the Lord [he shall not come near to a dead body],¹⁷ thus including the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment! But in that case, for polling too he should be liable to scourging seeing that the All-Merciful Law Says. All the days of his naziriteship there shall cone no razor upon his head,¹⁸ thereby including the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment. Again, All the days of his naziriteship shall he eat nothing that is made of the grape-vine,¹⁹ should also include the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment? —

(1) One who becomes leprous during his naziriteship completes it when the leprosy is cured.

(2) As is proved by the fact that when he recovers from his leprosy he completes his period.

(3) Relating the naziriteship on account of his son.

(4) If he had his hair polled by force, his naziriteship is not interrupted thereby and he completes his period. If this is less than thirty days, he must nevertheless allow his hair to grow for thirty days. The additional days constitute the ‘period that his hair is growing’.

(5) And not an integral part of it.

(6) When he allows his hair to grow after having been polled by force.

(7) The additional days are an integral part of naziriteship and not a mere complement.

(8) Lit., ‘hallowed’, cf. Num. VI, 11.

(9) And he became unclean.

(10) In regard to polling and wine drinking-so it is assumed at present.

(11) V. infra 472.

(12) He cannot drink wine after polling

(13) Cf. Num. VI, 13.

(14) Cf. ibid. 12, and he begins a new period at the end of which he finds the remedy.

(15) And defilement after the termination of his period does not affect the naziriteship.

(16) Before offering his sacrifices.

(17) Num. VI, 6.

(18) Ibid. VI, 5.

(19) Num. VI. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 15a

[Defilement] is different, for the All-Merciful Law says, And he defile his consecrated head,¹ showing that [the penalty for defilement lies] wherever the nazirite ship depends on the head.²

An objection was raised: A nazirite who has completed his period is forbidden to poll, or drink wine, or have contact with the dead. Should he poll or drink wine, or have contact with the dead he is to receive the forty stripes. [This is] a refutation of R. Jose son of R. Hanina.

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY.] 'I UNDERTAKE TO BECOME A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE HUNDRED DAYS [ON MY OWN ACCOUNT], AND A SON BE BORN TO HIM BEFORE THE EXPIRATION OF SEVENTY DAYS, HE LOSES NONE OF THIS PERIOD;³ BUT IF AFTER SEVENTY DAYS, THESE SEVENTY DAYS ARE VOID, SINCE THERE CAN BE NO POLLING FOR LESS THAN THIRTY DAYS.⁴

GEMARA. Rab said: The seventieth day itself is reckoned as part of both periods.⁵

We learnt: IF [A SON] BE BORN TO HIM BEFORE THE EXPIRATION OF SEVENTY DAYS, HE LOSES NONE OF THIS PERIOD. Now if you assume that [the day of birth] is reckoned as part of both periods,[not only does he not lose but] he actually profits!⁶ — Strictly speaking there should have been no mention of the period-before the seventieth day,⁷ but because it says in the subsequent clause [of the Mishnah], that [birth] after the seventieth day renders these seventy days void, the period before the seventieth day is mentioned in the first clause.

Come [then] and hear the subsequent clause: 'IF IT BE BORN AFTER THE SEVENTIETH DAY,⁸ THE SEVENTY DAYS ARE VOID⁹ — The meaning of 'AFTER' is, after [the day] after [the seventieth day] ,¹⁰ You say then that [a birth on] the day after [the seventieth day] itself,¹¹ would not render void [the previous period]. But if this is so, why should we be told that if the birth occurs before the seventieth day none of the period is lost, seeing that the same is true [of a birth occurring] on the day after the seventieth day? — It is consequently to be inferred that 'AFTER' means [the day] after literally, and thus the Mishnah unquestionably [contradicts] Rab.

Whose authority was Rab following in making this assertion? Shall we say it was Abba Saul, [in connection with whom] we have learnt: If a man bury his dead three days before a festival, the enactment of seven days' [full mourning] ceases to apply to him, if eight days before the festival, the enactment of thirty days [halfmourning] ceases to apply, and he may trim his hair on the eve of the festival. Should he, however, fail to trim his hair on the eve of the festival, he is not permitted to do so afterwards [until the thirty days' half-mourning elapse].

(1) Num. VI, 9.

(2) I.e., as long as his head is unpolled, though the 'days of his consecration are fulfilled'.

(3) I.e., He counts a naziriteship of thirty days on account of his son, and then completes the hundred days on his own account.

(4) And since there are not thirty days left over from the first naziriteship, the whole of it becomes void, and he has to start his one hundred days over again.

(5) So that on the one hand seventy days of his own naziriteship are completed, and on the other he need only reckon twenty-nine more days for the naziriteship following the birth of his son. The same will of course be true of the last day of this naziriteship, when he must again commence the remainder of his own (Rashi).

(6) For each of the days between the naziriteships counts as two.

(7) Because there is no manner of doubt as to what the law should be and he does in fact gain.

(8) I.e., as we should suppose on the seventy-first.

(9) Whereas if Rab be right, a birth on the seventy-first day should not render void the previous period, since reckoning both ways, thirty days remain.

(10) I.e., The seventy-second day, which on any reckoning would not leave more than twenty-nine.

(11) I.e., seventy-first day.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 15b

Abba Saul said: Even if he should fail to trim his hair before the festival, he is permitted to do so afterwards, for just as the observance of three days [before the festival] causes the enactment of seven days [full mourning] to lapse, so the observance of seven days [full-mourning before the festival] causes the enactment of thirty days [half-mourning] to lapse. Now, Abba Saul's reason is surely that the seventh day is reckoned as part both of [the full-mourning] and of [the half-mourning]¹ — Possibly Abba Saul only makes this avowal in connection with the periods of the seven days² mourning which are a rabbinic enactment, whereas he would not do so in connection with naziriteship, a scriptural enactment?³ It must therefore be that Rab follows R. Jose. for it has been taught: R. Jose said that a woman, 'on the wait' for gonorrhoeic issue,⁴ on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled, on the second day [of her waiting], and who later [in the same day] observes an issue, may not eat [of the passover],⁵ and does not have to prepare the second passover.⁶ Now R. Jose's reason is surely because in his opinion, part of the day counts as a whole day, so that she becomes unclean only from the moment [of observing the issue] and thereafter.⁷

Is this indeed R. Jose's opinion?⁸ Has it not been taught: R. Jose said that a sufferer from gonorrhoea who has observed unclean issue on two occasions, and on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled 'on the seventh day [of his impurity], and Similarly a woman, on the wait' for gonorrhoeic issue on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled — if they afterwards observe an unclean issue, then even though they render unclean couch and seat⁹ retrospectively, they are not obliged to offer the second passover?¹⁰ — [The uncleanness] is retrospective only by enactment of the Rabbis. This is indeed evident, for if it were scriptural, on what grounds would they be exempt from the second passover?¹¹ [No!]¹² In point of fact it would be possible for the uncleanness [to be retrospective] in biblical law also, the concealed impurity¹³ of gonorrhoea not being reckoned a ban [to the offering of the passover].

R. Oshaya. too, is of the opinion that the retrospective incidence is rabbinic in origin,¹⁴ for it has been taught:¹⁵ R. Oshaia said that one who observes a gonorrhoeic issue on his seventh day, renders void the preceding [seven days]. R. Johanan said to him: Only that day itself becomes void. But consider! [What is R. Johanan saying?] If it renders void at all, it should render all [seven days] void, otherwise it should not render void even the same day? — Read therefore: [R. Johanan said that] it does not even render void the same day,

- (1) In the same way as Rab reckons the 70th day twice over.
 - (2) The argument applying with greater force to the period of half-mourning.
 - (3) Hence Rab cannot appeal to his authority.
 - (4) V. Lev. XV, 25ff. Should a woman observe issue after her menstrual period, she becomes unclean until evening. From that time she is 'on the wait', and if there is an issue on the second day, she becomes unclean for seven days. A third day certifies her as gonorrhoeic, and she must then bring a sacrifice after purification; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 577. n. i. Whilst unclean she must not eat the flesh of sacrifices.
 - (5) For she is now unclean for seven days.
 - (6) On the 14th day of the following month, Iyar; v. Num. IX, 9ff.
 - (7) She was fit to offer the Passover, although she cannot now eat it. Adopting the reading of Tosaf., Asheri and others.
 - (8) That she becomes unclean only from that moment.
 - (9) Cf. Lev. XV, 4.
 - (10) Since they render unclean couch and seat retrospectively, the day must count as belonging wholly to the unclean period!
 - (11) Since they were already unclean when the paschal lamb was killed.
 - (12) This would afford no proof.
 - (13) Lit., 'impurity of the abyss', a technical term for an impurity of which there is no sign until its issue.
 - (14) In the opinion of R. Jose.
 - (15) [var. Iec.: For R. Oshaia said].

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 16a

. [R. Oshaia] replied: You have on your side R. Jose, who said that the uncleanness is incident [according to the Scripture] from the moment [of observation] and thereafter. Now was it not R. Jose who said that the uncleanness was retrospective? We see therefore that the retrospective incidence must [in his opinion] be rabbinic.¹

Now seeing that R. Jose is of the opinion that part of a day counts as a whole day, how is it ever possible for there to be a certified² female sufferer from gonorrhoea to offer the [prescribed] sacrifice, for if the issue is observed in the second half of the day, then the first half of the day counts as the period of 'waiting'?³ — It is possible either if she should have continual issue for three days, or alternatively, if she observes the issue on each of the three days shortly after sunset, so that there is no part of the day that can be reckoned [as a period of cleanness].

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE', HE POLLS ON THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY, BUT SHOULD HE POLL ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HIS OBLIGATION IS FULFILLED. [IF, HOWEVER, HE SAYS] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS,' AND POLLS ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HIS OBLIGATION IS NOT FULFILLED. IF A MAN UNDERTAKES TWO NAZIRITESHIPS, HE POLLS FOR THE FIRST ONE ON THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY, AND FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTY-FIRST DAY. IF, HOWEVER, HE SHOULD POLL FOR THE FIRST ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE CAN POLL FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTIETH DAY, WHILST SHOULD HE POLL ON THE DAY PRIOR TO THE SIXTIETH, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION; FOR THIS WAS THE TESTIMONY THAT R. PAPIAS BORE CONCERNING ONE WHO UNDERTAKES TWO NAZIRITESHIPS, VIZ., THAT IF HE SHOULD POLL FOR THE FIRST ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE IS TO POLL FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTIETH DAY, WHILST SHOULD HE POLL ON THE DAY PRIOR TO THE SIXTIETH DAY, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION, THE THIRTIETH DAY COUNTING TOWARDS THE REQUIRED NUMBER. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE,' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THE SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, THE WHOLE PERIOD IS VOID. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE HUNDRED DAYS,' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDREDTH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS⁴ : ONLY THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. IF HE CONTRACTS DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDRED AND FIRST DAY, THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID.

GEMARA. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THE SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID.

(1) Otherwise he would be contradicting himself.

(2) One who has observed an issue on three successive days.

(3) During which she has been clean. and being clean part of the day. she is considered to have been clean all day.

(4) no note.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 16b

R. Eliezer is of the opinion that any [defilement contracted] after the fulfilment'[of the period] renders only seven days void.¹

[IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, THE WHOLE PERIOD IS VOID. Here, R. Eliezer does not dissent because [we assume that] the man said, 'whole days'.²

[IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR A HUNDRED DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDREDTH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. All this may be taken [in two ways,] according as we follow Bar Pada or R. Mattena as explained above.³

MISHNAH. IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE REMAINS THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED,⁴ AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. IF HE LEAVES⁵ IT AND RE-ENTERS,⁶ [THE PERIOD]⁷ IS RECKONED, AND HE MUST BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT. R. ELIEZER SAID: NOT [IF HE RE-ENTERS] ON THE SAME DAY, FOR IT SAYS, BUT THE FORMER DAYS SHALL BE VOID,⁸ [IMPLYING] THAT THERE MUST BE 'FORMER DAYS'

GEMARA. It has been stated: If a man makes a nazirite vow whilst in a graveyard, then according to R. Johanan the naziriteship takes effect, but according to Resh Lakish it does not take effect. R. Johanan says: The naziriteship does take effect because he considers it merely to be suspended and in readiness, so that whenever he becomes ritually clean, it commences to operate; whereas Resh Lakish holds that, the naziriteship does not take effect; if he repeats [the vow] later [when he is clean], it will commence to operate, but not otherwise.

R. Johanan raised an objection to Resh Lakish [from the following]: IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE REMAINS THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED, AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. [This implies, does it not,] that it is only the sacrifice [prescribed] for ritual defilement that he does not have to bring, but [the vow] does take effect? — He replied: [Not so;] he does not come within the scope of the law, either of ritual defilement or of the sacrifice.

An objection was again raised by him [from the following]: If a man is ritually defiled, and vows to become a nazirite, he is forbidden to poll, or to drink wine, or to touch a dead body. Should he poll, or drink wine, or touch a dead body, he is to receive the forty stripes.⁹ If now you admit that [the vow] takes effect, then we see why he receives the forty stripes; but if you say that it does not take effect, why should he receive the forty stripes? —

(1) V. supra 6b.

(2) And the thirty are not yet completed.

(3) According to H. Mattena a naziriteship whose duration is not specified lasts thirty days, whilst Bar Pada says that it lasts twenty-nine days. The full discussion of the Mishnah occurs above, fols. 5b-7a.

(4) I.e., the naziriteship does not begin.

(5) [And submits to the process of purification.]

(6) After becoming clean, v. infra.

(7) He is considered an ordinary nazirite from the time he becomes clean until he re-enters the graveyard.

(8) Num. VI, 12.

(9) Tosef. Naz. II, 9.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 17a

We are dealing here with the case in which he left [the graveyard] and re-entered it.¹

A [further] objection was raised by him [as follows]: The only difference between a person ritually defiled who makes a nazirite vow, and a ritually clean nazirite who becomes unclean, is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship], whereas the latter does not reckon his seventh day [of purification] as part of his [new] period. If now you assume that [the vow of the unclean person] does not take effect, how is [the seventh day] to be counted [in his period]? — Mar b. R. Ashi said: Both [R. Johanan and Resh Lakish] agree that [the vow] does take effect; where they differ is whether there is [to be a penalty of] stripes.² R. Johanan is of the opinion that since [the vow] takes effect, he suffers the penalty of stripes, but Resh Lakish is of the opinion that there is no penalty of stripes, although [the vow] does take effect.

R. Johanan raised an objection to Resh Lakish [from the following]: IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE SHOULD REMAIN THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED, AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. [This implies, does it not,] that it is only the sacrifice prescribed for ritual defilement that he does not have to bring, but he does suffer stripes? — Strictly speaking, it should have stated that he does not receive stripes, but since it was requisite in the subsequent clause to mention that where HE LEAVES [THE GRAVEYARD] AND RE-ENTERS, THE [PERIOD] IS RECKONED, AND HE MUST BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT, the initial clause, too, mentions that he need not bring the sacrifice [prescribed] for ritual defilement.³

Come and hear: The only difference between a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite-vow, and a ritually clean nazirite who becomes unclean, is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship], whereas the latter does not reckon his seventh day as part of his period. [Does not this imply] that as regards stripes, they are on a par? — He⁴ replied: Not so. Where they are on a par is as regards polling.

[You aver, then,] that the latter receives stripes,⁵ but the former does not do so. Why is this not mentioned? — The [Baraitha] is referring to that which is serviceable⁶ to him, not to that which is to his detriment.⁷

Come and hear: Whosoever was ritually defiled and vowed to be a nazirite is forbidden to poll, or to drink wine. If he should poll, or drink wine, or come into contact with the [human] dead, he is to receive the forty stripes? This is undeed a refutation.⁸

Raba enquired: If a man vows to be a nazirite whilst in a graveyard, what is the law? Has he to be [in the graveyard] a certain time⁹ for him to be liable to stripes, or not?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS.¹ THOSE FOR HARAMIM ARE LIKE HARAMIM,² THOSE FOR OATHS ARE LIKE OATHS, AND THOSE FOR NEZIROTH ARE LIKE NEZIROTH.³ IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW, [OR] I AM SEPARATED FROM YOU,' [OR] 'I AM REMOVED FROM YOU, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT⁴ THAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE OF YOURS,' HE IS PROHIBITED. IF HE SAYS: 'I AM BANNED TO YOU,' THEN R. AKIBA WAS INCLINED TO GIVE A STRINGENT RULING.⁵

(1) The principal form of a vow to abstain from anything is: 'This shall be to me as a korban (Heb. sacrifice); korban was sometimes substituted by konam or konas.

(2) Herem (plural haramim): a vow dedicating something to the Temple or the priests.

(3) Neziroth: the vow of a nazirite. A nazirite had to abstain from grapes and intoxicating liquors and refrain from cutting his hair and defiling himself through the dead.

(4) [Reading hbta, Var. lec. hbhta 'for I will eat naught of yours'.]

(5) I.e., declared the vow binding. [According to Maimonides, provided he adds: 'for I will eat naught of yours'. Tosaf., however, (infra 7a) holds that the phrase by itself implies a vow to abstain from aught belonging to the other person.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 2b

GEMARA. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS: Why other clauses¹ not stated in [the Mishnah of] Nazir,² whilst [our Mishnah of] Nedarim includes them all? — Because oaths and Vows are written side by side [in the Bible]³ they are both stated, and since the two are mentioned, the others are stated also. Then let OATHS be taught immediately after VOWS? — Because he states vows In which the article is forbidden to the person, he follows it up with HARAMIM, where likewise the article is forbidden to the person. OATHS, however, are excluded [from the category of vows], since oaths bind the person to abstain from a thing;⁴ [hence they cannot immediately follow vows].

The Mishnah commences with substitutes: ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS etc., yet proceeds to explain the laws of abbreviations of VOWS: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR: I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW . . . WITH HIS VOW;⁵ moreover, [the Tanna] has altogether omitted to state that abbreviations [are binding]? — [The Tanna does] speak of them, but our text is defective,⁶ and this is what was really meant: ALL SUBSTITUTES and abbreviations OF VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS. Then let substitutes be first explained? — The clause to which [the Tanna] has last referred is generally first explained, as we have learned: Wherewith may [the Sabbath lights] be kindled, and wherewith may they not be kindled? They may not be kindled etc.⁷ Wherein may food be put away [to be kept hot for the Sabbath], and wherein may it not be put away? It may not be put away [etc.].⁸ Wherewith may a woman go out (from her house on the Sabbath), and wherewith may she not go out? She may not go out from etc.⁹ [Is it then a universal rule] that the first clause is never explained first? But we have learnt: Some relations inherit from and transmit [their estate] to others; some inherit but do not transmit. Now, these relations inherit from and transmit to each other etc.¹⁰ Some women are permitted to their husbands but forbidden to their husbands' brothers;¹¹ others are the reverse. Now, these are permitted to their husbands but forbidden to their husbands' brothers etc.¹² Some meal offerings require oil and frankincense, others require oil but no frankincense. Now, these require both oil and frankincense etc.¹³ Some mealofferings must be taken [by the priest to the south-west corner of the altar], but do not need waving;¹⁴ others are the reverse. Now, these must be taken to the altar etc.¹⁵ Some are treated as first-borns in respect of inheritance¹⁶ but not in respect of the priest;¹⁷ others are treated as first-borns in respect of the priest but not in respect of inheritance. Now who is regarded as a first-born in respect of inheritance but not in respect of the priest etc.?¹⁸ — In these examples [the first clause is explained first] because it contains numerous instances [to which its law applies]. But, 'Wherewith may a beast go out on the Sabbath, and wherewith may it not go out?' where [the first clause does] not contain numerous instances, yet it is explained [first], viz., a camel may go out etc.?

(1) Viz., HARAMIM, OATHS, AND VOWS.

(2) The tractate Nazir commences likewise: All substitutes for the nazirite vow are binding.

(3) Num. XXX, 3: If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath.

(4) A vow is thus taken: 'This shall be forbidden tonic,' the prohibition falling upon the thing. An oath, however, is thus taken: 'I swear to abstain from a certain thing,' the prohibition falling upon the person.

(5) Since the principal way of making a vow is to declare a thing to be as korban, the omission of such a declaration renders the vow merely an abbreviation or suggestion (lit., 'a handle') of a vow, V. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 2.

(6) This may mean either that there is actually a lacuna in the text, words having fallen out, or that though it is correct in itself something has to be supplied to complete the sense; v. Weiss, Dor. III, p. 6. n. 14. The former is the most probable here.

(7) Shab. 20b.

(8) Ibid. 47b.

(9) Ibid. 57a. — In all these examples the second clause is first discussed.

(10) B.B. 108a.

(11) In Levirate marriage, v. Deut. XXV, 5 seq.

(12) Yeb. 84a.

(13) Men. 59a.

(14) A ceremony in which the priest put his hands under those of the person bringing the offering and waved them to and fro in front of the altar.

(15) Ibid. 60a

(16) I.e., they receive a double share of their patrimony; v. Deut. XXI, 17.

(17) They do not need redemption: v. Ex. XIII, 23.

(18) Bek. 46a. In all these examples the first clause is discussed first.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 3a

Hence there is no fixed rule: sometimes the first clause is explained first, at others the last clause is first explained. Alternatively: abbreviations are explained first, because they [sc. their validity] are deduced by exegesis.¹ Then let these be stated first? He [the Tanna] commences indeed with substitutes, since these are Scriptural,² and proceeds to explain abbreviations, which are inferred by interpretation only.³ This harmonises with the view that substitutes are merely the foreign equivalents [of the word korban].⁴ But what can be said on the view that they are forms expressly invented by the Sages for the purpose of making vows?⁵ — Now, are abbreviations mentioned at all; were you not compelled to assume a defective text? Then indeed place abbreviations first. Thus: All abbreviations of VOWS have the validity of VOWS, and ALL SUBSTITUTES FOR VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS. These are the abbreviations: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR . . . And these are the substitutes: Konam, konas, konah.⁶

Now, where are abbreviations written? — When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow [lindor neder] of a nazirite [nazir le-hazzir];⁷ and it has been taught: Nazir le-hazzir is to render substitutes and abbreviations of neziroth as neziroth.⁸ From this I may infer only the law of neziroth; whence do we know that it applies to other vows too? This is taught by the verse: When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a nazirite to the Lord:⁹ here ordinary vows are compared to neziroth and vice versa.¹⁰ Just as in neziroth abbreviations are equally binding, so in the case of other vows; and just as in other vows, he who does not fulfil them violates the injunctions: He shall not break his word,¹¹ and Thou shalt not delay to pay it,¹² so in neziroth. And just as in other vows, the father can annul those of his daughter and the husband those of his wife, so with neziroth.

Wherein does neziroth differ? Because it is written nazir lehazzir! But [in the case of] vows too it is written, lindor neder;¹³ then what need is there of analogy? — If the text were neder lindor just as 'nazir le-hazzir', it would be as you say, and the analogy would be unnecessary, since however, 'lindor neder' is written, the Torah spoke in the language of men.¹⁴ This agrees with the view that the Torah spoke in the language of men; but he who maintains that the Torah did not speak in the language of men,¹⁵ to what purpose does he put this 'lindor neder'? — He interprets it to deduce that abbreviations of vows are as VOWS, and then neziroth is compared to vows; and as to 'nazir le-hazzir' he interprets it as teaching

(1) But not explicitly stated in the Bible.

(2) I.e., their validity is explicitly stated in the Bible.

(3) When stating the law in general terms there is a preference for that which is best known; hence, substitutes, being explicitly taught, are first mentioned. But when going into details, the Tanna prefers to deal first with the lesser known.

(4) Hence their validity may be regarded as explicitly stated in the Bible, since it obviously does not matter in which language a vow is taken.

(5) V. infra, 10a.

(6) V. infra 9a.

(7) Num. VI. 2.

(8) Sc. equally binding.

(9) Ibid.

(10) Since they are coupled together. This method of exegesis is known as hekkesh.

(11) Ibid. XXX, 3.

(12) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(13) Lit., 'to vow a vow — likewise a pleonastic form.

(14) The point is this: The usual grammatical form is for the verb to precede its cognate object. Hence, when this order is reversed, as in nazir le-hazir, one may directly infer something from the unusual order. When it is observed, however, nothing can be inferred.

(15) So that every pleonasm, even if in accordance with the general idiom, gives an additional teaching.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 3b

that one nazirite vow falls upon another.¹ Then he who maintains that the Torah spoke in the language of men, and interprets 'nazir le-hazzir' as teaching the validity of abbreviations of neziroth, whence does he learn that a nazirite vow can fall upon another? If he agrees with the view that a nazirite vow does not fall upon another, it is well; but if he agrees with the view that it does, whence does he know it? — Let Scripture say, li-zor [the kal form]; why 'le-hazzir' [the causative]? That you may infer both from it.² In the West³ it was said: One Tanna deduces [the validity of] abbreviations from 'lindor neder'; whilst another deduces it from [the 'phrase], he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.⁴

The Master said: 'And just as in other vows, he who does not fulfil them violates the injunctions, he shall not break his wad, and thou shalt not delay to pay it, so in neziroth.' Now, as for 'he shall not break his word' as applying to [ordinary] vows, it is well: it is possible e.g., if one says, 'I vow to eat this loaf', and does not eat it; he violates the injunction, 'he shall not break his word'. But how is, 'he shall not break [his word],' possible in the case of neziroth.? For, as soon as one says, 'Behold, I am a nazir' he is one; if he eats [grapes], he is liable for, nor eat moist drapes or dried;⁵ if he drinks [wine], he violates, he . . . shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes.⁶ — Raba answered: It is to transgress two [injunctions].⁷ How is 'thou shalt not delay to pay it,' referring to neziroth, conceivable? [For] as soon as one says 'Behold, I am a nazir', he is one; if he eats [grapes], he transgresses, 'neither' shall he . . . eat moist grapes or dried?' — When one says: 'when I wish, I will be a nazir'.⁸ But if he says, 'when I wish', the injunction 'thou shalt not delay' does not apply?⁹ — Said Raba: E.g., if he says, 'I must not depart this world before having been a nazir,' for he becomes a nazir from that moment.¹⁰ For this is similar to one who says to his wife: 'Here is your divorce, [to take effect] one hour before my death,' where she is immediately forbidden to eat terumah.¹¹ Thus we see that we fear¹² that he may die at any moment: so here¹³ too, he becomes a nazir immediately, for we say, Perchance he will die now.

(1) A nazirite vow for an unspecified period means for thirty days. If one who is already a nazir takes a nazirite vow, it is binding, and becomes operative when the first ends. Thus he translates: a nazir can take a vow le-hazir, to become a nazir after his present vow terminates, v. infra isa.

(2) The heavier form le-hazzir implies intensity, therefore it is interpreted as meaning something additional to what might be inferred from the kal li-zor, which itself being pleonastic allows us to infer something not explicit in the verse.

(3) I.e., the Palestinian academies.

(4) Num. XXX, 3: this embraces every form in which a vow can be made.

(5) Ibid. VI, 3.

(6) Ibid. [It is assumed that the injunction ‘he shall not break his word’ can apply only to a case where the vow is nullified by his action, e.g., where he vows to eat and he does not eat, but not where he, for instance, vows not to eat and he does eat, where the vow has not been nullified but transgressed: and similarly in the case of a nazir.]

(7) [Raba extends the scope of the injunction to include cases where the oath is transgressed: and thus by drinking wine he transgresses ‘he shall it drink’, in addition to ‘he shall not break his word’.]

(8) If he postpones becoming a nazir, he violates, ‘thou shalt not delay etc’.

(9) Since there is no vow until he so desires.

(10) Not actually, but in the sense that he must assume his naziriteship without delay lest he dies the next moment.

(11) V. Glos.

(12) Lit., ‘we say’.

(13) In the case of a nazirite.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 4a

R. Aha b. Jacob said: E.g., if one takes a nazirite vow whilst in a cemetery.¹ This agrees with the view that the naziriteship is not immediately binding. But on the view that it is immediately valid, is then, ‘he shall not delay,’ applicable?² Moreover, Mar, son of R. Ashi, said: The vow is immediately valid, and they differ³ only on the question of flagellation? — Nevertheless he violates, ‘thou shalt not delay,’ because the [ritually] clean naziriteship is delayed. R. Ashi said: Since this is so, [it follows that] if a nazir intentionally defiles himself, he transgresses thou shalt not delay in respect to [the recommencement of] the clean naziriteship.

R. Aha, the son of R. Ika, said: He⁴ might transgress ‘that shalt not delay’ in respect to shaving.⁵ Now, this goes without saying according to the view that shaving is indispensable,⁶ but even on the view that the shaving is not a bar [to the sacrifices], nevertheless he does not observe the precept of shaving. Mar Zutra the son of R. Mari said: He might violate ‘Thou shalt not delay’ in respect to his sacrifices. Is this deduced from here; surely, it is rather inferred from elsewhere: [When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord, thou shalt not slack to pay it, for the Lord thy God] will surely require it of thee:⁷ this refers to sin-offerings and trespass-offerings?⁸ — I might say that the Torah set up an anomaly⁹ in the case of nazir.¹⁰ What is the anomaly? Shall we say, the fact that a vow to bring the sin-offering of a nazir¹¹ is invalid: but a sin-offering for heleb¹² cannot be made obligatory by a vow,¹³ yet one transgresses, ‘thou shalt not delay’? But the anomaly is this: I might have thought, since even if one says, ‘I will be a nazir only with respect to the kernels of grapes,’¹⁴ he is a nazir in all respects. I would think that he does not violate, ‘Thou shalt not delay’; therefore we are told [otherwise].¹⁵ Now, this is well according to the opinion that a vow of naziriteship in respect of the kernels of grapes makes one a nazir in all respects; but on the view of R. Simeon, viz., that one is not a nazir unless he separates himself from all, what can be said? Moreover, this is an anomaly in the direction of greater stringency?¹⁶ — But the anomaly is this: I might have thought, since

(1) A nazir may not defile himself through the dead. Consequently the vow does not become immediately operative, but he must not delay to leave the cemetery so that it shall become binding.

(2) Surely not, for he is an actual nazir, subject to all the provisions of a nazir.

(3) Sc. R. Johanan and Resh Lakish, in Nazir 16b.

- (4) The nazirite.
- (5) After the completion of his naziriteship: v. Num. VI, 9, and thus violate the injunction ‘thou shalt not delay’.
- (6) Lit., ‘hinders’ — the offering of the sacrifices on the completion of naziriteship, hence delay in shaving involves a delay in sacrifices.
- (7) Deut. XXIII, 22.
- (8) And this would cover the case of a nazirite. For what purpose then the application of the verse ‘thou shalt not delay’ to the nazirite?
- (9) Lit., ‘a novelty’ — as such it cannot be included in other general laws, as it is a principle of exegesis that an anomaly stands in a class by itself.
- (10) Which includes a nazir's sacrifices.
- (11) By one who is not nazirite.
- (12) Forbidden fat.
- (13) A vow to bring a sin-offering which is normally due for eating heleb is not binding if the vower is not actually liable.
- (14) V. Num. VI, 4.
- (15) By the coupling of the nazirite vow with other vows in the same sentence.
- (16) How then would we think that the injunction does not apply, so that it is more lenient

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 4b

if he shaves himself for one [sacrifice] of the three, he fulfils his duty.¹ therefore he should not be subject to, ‘Thou shalt not delay’; hence we are told [that it is not so]. An alternative answer is this: the anomaly is that it cannot be vowed; but as to your difficulty of the sin-offering for heleb,² — the sin-offering for heleb comes for atonement,³ but for what does the sin-offering of anal come?⁴ But the sin-offering of a woman who gave birth,⁵ which does not come for an atonement, yet one violates, ‘thou shalt not delay’ on account thereof? — That permits her to eat of sacrifices.⁶

The Master said: ‘And just as in other vows, the father can annul those of his daughter and the husband those of his wife, so in the case of neziroth, the father can annul the neziroth of his daughter and the husband that of his wife’. But what need is there of analogy; let us infer it from VOWS by general similarity?⁷ — Perhaps he can annul only in the case of other vows, because their duration is unlimited; but with respect to neziroth, the duration of which is limited — for an unspecified vow of neziroth is for thirty days, — I might say that it is not so.⁸ Hence we are informed [otherwise].⁹

IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW’ etc. Samuel said: In all these instances he must say, ‘in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours’. An objection is raised: [If one says to his neighbour], ‘I am debarred from you by a vow,’ [or] ‘I am separated from you.’ [or] ‘I am removed from you’, he is forbidden [to derive any benefit from him]. [If he says,] ‘That which I might eat or taste of yours’ [shall be to me prohibited], he is forbidden!¹⁰ — This is what is taught: When is this? If he adds ‘in respect of aught that I might eat or taste of yours.’ But the reverse was taught: [If one says to his neighbour,] ‘That which I might eat or taste of yours’ [shall be prohibited to me], he is forbidden; ‘I am debarred from you by a vow’, [or] ‘I am separated from you’, [or] ‘I am removed from you,' he is [likewise] forbidden! — Read thus: Providing that he had first said, 'I am debarred from you, etc.'¹¹ If so, it is identical with the first [Baraita]?¹² Moreover, why teach further, 'he is forbidden' twice?¹³ — But this is what Samuel really said: Because he said, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours', the maker of the vow alone is forbidden while his neighbour is permitted;¹⁴

(1) A nazir at the termination of his vow is bound to bring three sacrifices, viz., a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and a peace-offering. Yet if he shaves and brings only one, the prohibitions of a nazir, such as the drinking of wine, etc., are lifted. This is a unique law, and in the direction of greater leniency.

(2) Supra p. 7, n. 10.

(3) Hence one violates the injunction by delaying to make atonement.

(4) Though technically a sin-offering, it is, in fact, merely part of a larger vow. Hence it is an anomaly that it cannot be vowed separately.

(5) V. Lev. XII, 6ff.

(6) Which may be an obligation. e.g., the eating of the Passover sacrifice. Hence 'thou shalt not delay' is applicable.

(7) Since naziriteship is a form of vow. [ubhmn vn Lit., 'as we find concerning', a method of hermeneutics whereby an analogy is drawn from one case for one single similar case, as distinct from hekkesh (supra p. 4, n. 6) where the analogy is based on the close connection of the two subjects in one and the same context.]

(8) Since the vow will automatically lapse.

(9) By the analogy.

(10) The first clause proves that the vow is valid without the addition.

(11) According to this rendering, the bracketed 'shall be prohibited to me' must be deleted.

(12) Why then is the order reversed? This difficulty arises in any case. But if each clause is independent, it can be answered that the second Baraita intentionally reverses the clauses, so as to make their independence obvious, since the interpretation 'providing that he had first said' is forced; whilst in the first Baraita the assumption that the second clause is an addition to the first is quite feasible.

(13) Seeing that the whole refers to one vow.

(14) To benefit from him.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 5a

but if he merely says, 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden. Just as R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: [If one says to his neighbour] 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden.

We learnt: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'Behold! I am herem¹ to you,' the muddar² is forbidden.³ But the maddir² is not [forbidden]?⁴ — E.g., if he explicitly states, 'but you are not [herem] to me'. [But does it not continue,] 'You are herem to me', the maddir is forbidden, [implying,] but not the muddar? — E.g., if he explicitly states, 'but you are not [herem] to me.' But what if it is not explicit: both are forbidden? But since the final clause teaches, 'I am [herem] to you and you are [herem] to me,' both are forbidden, it is only in that case that both are forbidden, but in general he is forbidden while his neighbour is permitted?⁵ But this is how R. Jose son of R. Hanina's [dictum] was stated: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'I am under a vow in respect of you,' both are forbidden; 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' he is forbidden but his neighbour is permitted. But our Mishnah teaches, 'FROM YOU, yet our Mishnah was explained according to Samuel that in all cases he must say, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours' — only then is he [alone] forbidden while his neighbour is permitted, but in the case of, 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden? But this is what was originally stated in Samuel's name: It is only because he said, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours,' that he is forbidden only in respect of eating. But [if he only said,] 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' he is forbidden even benefit. If so, let Samuel state thus: But if he did not say, 'In respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours,' even benefit is forbidden to him?⁶ But this is what was stated: Only if he says, in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours', is he forbidden; but if he [merely] says, 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' it does not imply a prohibition at all. What is the reason? 'I am debarred from you,' [implies] 'I am not to speak to you ; 'I am separated from you' [implies] 'I all, to do no business with you'; 'I am removed from you' implies, 'I am not to stand within four cubits of you'.

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Muddar is the object of the vow; maddir is the man who makes the vow.

(3) Infra 47b.

(4) This contradicts Samuel's dictum that without the addition the incidence of the vow is reciprocal.

(5) Which contradicts R. Jose b. R. Hanina.

(6) So the text as amended by Bah.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 5b

Shall we say Samuel holds the opinion that inexplicit abbreviations are not abbreviations?¹ — Yes. Samuel makes the Mishnah agree with R. Judah, who maintained: Inexplicit abbreviations are not abbreviations. For we learnt: The essential part of a Get² is, 'Behold, thou art free unto all men'. R Judah said: [To this must be added] 'and this [document] shall be unto thee from me a deed of dismissal and a document of release.'³ Now, what forced Samuel to thus interpret the Mishnah, so as to make it agree with R. Judah: let him, make it agree with the Rabbis, that even inexplicit abbreviations [are binding]?⁴ Said Raba: The Mishnah presents a difficulty to him: Why state, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT THAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE OF YOURS, let him teach, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT THAT I MIGHT EAT OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE [and no more]? This proves that we require explicit abbreviations.

It was stated: Inexplicit abbreviations — Abaye maintained: They are [valid] abbreviations; while Raba said: They are not [valid] abbreviations. Raba said: R. Idi explained the matter to me. Scripture says, [When either a man or a woman shall] explicitly law a vow of a nazirite, to separate themselves unto the Lord: abbreviations of neziroth are compared to neziroth: just as neziroth must be explicit in meaning, so must their abbreviations be too.

Are we to say that they differ in the dispute of R. Judah and the Rabbis? For we learnt: The essential part of a Get is the words, 'Behold, thou art free unto all men.' R. Judah said: [To this must be added,] 'and this [document] shall be unto thee from me a deed of dismissal and a document of discharge and a letter of release': [Thus] Abaye rules as the Rabbis, and Raba as R.

Judah? — [No.] Abaye may assert: My opinion agrees even with R. Judah's. Only in divorce does R. Judah insist that abbreviations shall be explicit, because 'cutting off'⁵ is necessary, and this is lacking;⁶ but do you know him to require it elsewhere too? Whilst Raba can maintain, My view agrees even with that of the Rabbis. Only in the case of divorce do they say that explicit abbreviations are not essential,

(1) I.e., invalid. For the above forms are such, and Samuel maintains that they impose no prohibition at all without the explanatory clauses.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) Otherwise it is not clear that the divorce is to be effected by the Get. Thus he holds that inexplicit abbreviations are invalid.

(4) [For unless Samuel had cogent reasons to make the Mishnah agree only with R. Judah, he himself would not have accepted the view of R. Judah in preference to that of the majority of Rabbis (Ran).]

(5) [Referring to Deut. XXIV, 3: 'And he shall write unto her a writ of cutting off' (so literally).]

(6) If the abbreviation is inexplicit the severance is not complete.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 6a

because no man divorces his neighbour's wife;¹ but do you know then, [to rule thus] elsewhere?²

An objection is raised: [If one says,] 'That is to me,' [or] 'this is to me,' he is forbidden,³ because it is an abbreviation of ['that is as a] korban [to me].'⁴ Thus, the reason is that he said, 'unto me,' but if he did not say, 'unto me,' it is not so:⁵ this refutes Abaye? — Abaye replies thus: It is only because he said, 'to me,' that he is forbidden; but if he [merely] said, 'behold, that is,' without adding 'to me' he might have meant, 'behold, that is hefker,'⁶ or 'that is for charity.'⁷ But is it not stated, 'because it is an abbreviation of, "a korban?"'⁸ — But answer thus: Because he said, 'to me,' he [alone] is forbidden, but his neighbour is permitted; but if he said, 'behold, that is,' both are forbidden, because he may have meant,⁹ 'behold that is hekdesh.'¹⁰

An objection is raised: [If one says,] 'Behold, this [animal] is a sin-offering,' 'this is a trespass-offering,' though he is liable to a sin-offering or a trespass-offering, his words are of no effect. [But if he says,] 'Behold, this animal is my sin-offering,' or 'my trespass-offering,' his declaration is effectual if he was liable. Now, this is a refutation of Abaye!¹¹ — Abaye answers: This agrees with R. Judah.¹² But Abaye said, My ruling agrees even with R. Judah?¹² — Abaye retracted. Are we to say [then] that Raba's ruling agrees [only] with R. Judah's?¹³ — No. Raba may maintain: My view agrees even with that of the Rabbis. Only in the case of divorce do they say that explicit abbreviations are not essential, because no man divorces his neighbour's wife; but elsewhere explicit abbreviations are required.

(1) I.e., even if the wording is inexplicit, the whole transaction makes its meaning perfectly clear. [This argument makes it evident that the point at issue between R. Judah and the Rabbis is mainly concerning the phrase [from me', the Rabbis being of the opinion that since no man divorces his neighbour's wife, it is clear that the Get comes 'from him' (Ran); v. Git. 85b.]

(2) Elsewhere they may agree that inexplicit allusions are invalid.

(3) To benefit from it.

- (4) So Rashi and Asheri. [Alternatively: Because it is an abbreviation valid for a korban (an offering), and therefore also valid in case of a vow.]
- (5) Because it is an inexplicit abbreviation.
- (6) Ownerless property. V. Glos.
- (7) Hence it is not an abbreviation of a vow at all.
- (8) [This is difficult. The meaning apparently is that the reason that it is an abbreviation valid for a korban, (v. n. 2) ought to apply also to the declaration 'that is' by itself, since such a declaration too is valid for a korban; v. Ran.]
- (9) [Where the object vowed was not fit for sacrifice; v. n. 6.]
- (10) Sanctified property. V. Glos.
- (11) Since in the first clause the abbreviation is invalid because it is inexplicit.
- (12) V. supra 5b.
- (13) Since Abaye's view agrees only with that of the Rabbis.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 6b

R. Papa enquired: Are abbreviations valid in the case of kiddushin,¹ or not? Now, how does this problem arise? Shall we say thus: If one said to a woman, 'Behold, thou art betrothed unto me, and said to her companion, 'and thou too,' it is obvious that this is actual kiddushin?² — But e.g., If one said to a woman, 'Behold, thou art betrothed unto me,' and then to her companion, 'and thou'. Do we assume that he meant 'and thou too,' and so the second is betrothed;³ or perhaps he said to her companion, 'and do thou witness it', and so she is not betrothed?

But is R. Papa really in doubt? But since he said to Abaye. Does Samuel hold that inexplicit abbreviations are valid?⁴ it follows that he [R. Papa] holds that abbreviations are valid in the case of kiddushin? — R. Papa's question to Abaye was based on Samuel's opinion.⁵

R. Papa enquired: Are abbreviations binding in respect of pe'ah⁶ or not? What are the circumstances? Shall we say that one said, 'Let this furrow be pe'ah. and this one too' — that is a complete [declaration of] pe'ah? — His problem arises, e.g., if he [merely] said, 'and this,' without adding 'too'.⁷ (Hence it follows that if one says, 'Let the entire field be pe'ah', it is so?⁸ — Yes. And it was taught likewise: Whence do we know that if one wishes to render his whole field pe'ah, he can do so? From the verse, [And when ye reap the harvest of thy land, thou shalt not wholly reap] the corner of the field.)⁹ — Do we say, Since it [sc. pe'ah] is compared to sacrifices, just as abbreviations are binding in the case of sacrifices, so in the case of pe'ah too; or perhaps, the analogy holds good only in respect of [the injunction,] than shalt not delay?¹⁰ Now, where is the analogy found? — For it was taught:

(1) Betrothals. V. Glos.

(2) Not an abbreviation.

(3) Lit., 'kiddushin takes hold on her companion'.

(4) In reference to kiddushin, v. Kid. 5b.

(5) Recognising that Samuel held abbreviations to be valid in the case of kiddushin.

(6) Pe'ah-the corner of the field, which was left for the poor. v. Lev. XIX, 9.

(7) [Asheri seems to have read: Did he then mean 'and this too is for pe'ah' or 'and this is for personal expenses'.]

(8) The presumption is that R. Papa's problem arises only if the first furrow alone contained the necessary minimum, for otherwise the second would certainly be pe'ah; therefore the second furrow is in addition to the requisite minimum, and becomes pe'ah, if abbreviations are binding. But if more than the minimum can be pe'ah, it follows that even the whole field can be pe'ah.

(9) And not 'the corner in thy field'. Lev. MIX, 9.

(10) I.e., if pe'ah is not given within the fixed period, this injunction is violated.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 7a

[When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not delay to pay it, for the Lord will surely require it] of thee:¹ this refers to gleanings, forgotten sheaves, and pe'ah.²

Are abbreviations binding in the case of charity or not? How does this arise? Shall we say, that one said, 'This zuz³ is for charity, and this one too,' that is a complete [declaration of] charity! — But, e.g., If one said, '[And] this,' omitting 'too'. What then: did he mean, 'and this too is for charity,' or, 'and this is for my personal expenditure,' his statement being incomplete?⁴ Do we say, Since this is likened to sacrifices, as it is written 'That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a free-will offering according as thou hast vowed unto the Lord thy God, which thou hast promised] with thy mouth, which refers to charity:⁵ hence, just as abbreviations are valid for sacrifices, so with charity; or possibly the comparison is in respect of 'Thou shalt not delay' only?

Are abbreviations valid in respect of hefker or not? But that is charity?⁶ — This problem is based on a presupposition:⁷ Should you rule, abbreviations are valid in the case of charity, because there is no analogy by halves,⁸ [what of] hefker?⁹ Do we say: Hefker is charity; or possibly charity differs, charity being for the poor only, whilst hefker is both for the rich and the poor?

Rabina propounded: Are abbreviations effective in respect of a privy or not?⁹ How does this arise? Shall we say, that he declared, 'Let this place be for a privy, and this one too,' then obviously it is one? — But e.g., if he declared, 'and this,' omitting 'too'. What then? Does '[and] this' mean 'and this too shall be a privy,' or perhaps, what is meant by 'and this'? In respect of general use? Now, this proves that it is certain to Rabina that designation is valid for a privy. But Rabina propounded: What if one designates a place for a privy' or for baths; is designation effective or not?¹⁰ — Rabina propounded this problem on an assumption. [Thus:] Is designation effective or not, should you answer, Designation is effective, are abbreviations valid or not?¹¹ This question remains.

I AM BANNED TO YOU,' etc. Abaye said: R. Akiba admits in respect to lashes, that he is not flagellated;¹² for otherwise, let [the Mishnah] state, R. Akiba gave a stringent ruling.¹³ R. Papa said: With respect to, 'I am isolated [nedinah] from you,' all agree that he is forbidden; 'I am accursed [meshamatna] from you,' all agree that he is permitted. Wherein do they differ?

(1) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(2) Whilst he will surely require it refers to sacrifices, supra 4a. Hence they are assimilated to each other, being coupled in the same verse. The Hebrew for of thee is l ngn which can be rendered 'of that which is with thee', the reference being to the gleanings etc., which are to be left for those that are 'with dice', i.e., the poor. Ex. XXII, 24.

(3) Zuz, a silver coin, one fourth of a shekel.

(4) This alternative may apply to the query on pe'ah too: i.e., did he mean, 'and this furrow too', or, 'and this furrow be for my personal use?' V. p. 13, n. 7.

(5) This is deduced from the verse: the promise of charity is gone out of my mouth (Isa. S>V, 23, so translated here), where a promise by mouth refers to charity.

(6) Renunciation of one's property is the equivalent of giving it to charity. Thus the problem has already been stated.

(7) Lit., 'he sass, "if you should say".'

(8) I.e., it cannot be confined to certain aspects only.

(9) A place so appointed may not be used for reciting prayers, even before it was used as a privy.

(10) In the sense that this place may not be used henceforth for reciting prayers.

(11) In all the foregoing problems on kiddushin, pe'ah, charity etc., the abbreviations, though apparently not clear in meaning, since alternatives are given, are regarded as explicit, since the alternatives are, in every case, of a remote character, and the question then arises whether abbreviations, though explicit enough, are effective in these cases, v. Ran. 6b, s.v. hgc.

(12) If he breaks the vow.

(13) 'WAS INCLINED' shows that he entertained some doubt, and would therefore not inflict the penalty of lashes.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 7b

In the case of, 'I am banned to you,' R. Akiba maintaining that it is the equivalent of 'isolated' [nedinah], whilst the Rabbis hold that it means 'accursed' [meshamatna]. Now, this conflicts with R. Hisda's view. For a certain man, who declared, 'I am accursed in respect of the property of the son of R. Jeremiah b. Abba' went before R. Hisda. Said he to him, 'None pay regard to this [ruling] of R. Akiba'. [Thus] he holds that they differ in respect to 'I am accursed' [meshamatna].

R. Elai said in the name of Rab. If [a Rabbi] places a person under a ban in his presence, the ban can be revoked only in his presence; if in his absence, it can be revoked both in his presence and in his absence. R. Hanin said in Rab's name. One who hears his neighbour utter God's name in vain¹ must place him under a ban; otherwise he himself must be under a ban,² because the unnecessary utterance of the Divine Name always leads to poverty, and poverty leads to death, as it is written, [And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return unto Egypt]. For all the men are dead [which sought thy life];³ and it was taught: Wherever the Sages cast their eyes [in disapproval] death or poverty has resulted.

R. Abba said: I was standing in the presence of R. Huna, when he heard a woman utter God's name in vain. Thereupon he banned her, but immediately lifted the ban in her presence. This proves three things: [i] He who hears his neighbour utter the Divine Name unnecessarily must excommunicate him; [ii] If [a Rabbi] bans a person in his presence, the ban must be lifted in his presence too. [iii] No time need elapse between the imposition and the lifting of a ban.⁴

R. Giddal said in Rab's name: A scholar may utter a ban against himself, and lift it himself. But is this not obvious? — I would think that a prisoner cannot free himself from prison; hence we are taught otherwise. Now, how can such a thing occur? — As in the case of Mar Zutra the Pious:⁵ when a disciple incurred a ban,⁶ [Mar Zutra] first excommunicated himself and then the disciple.⁷ On arriving home, he lifted the ban from himself and then from the disciple.

R. Giddal also said in Rab's name:

(1) Lit., the mentioning of the Name from his neighbour's mouth.

(2) [I.e., deserves to be placed under a ban, (Ran).]

(3) Ex. IV, 19. It is stated infra 64b that the reference is to Dathan and Abiram, who in fact were alive at Korah's rebellion, but had become poverty-stricken. Four are regarded as dead: a poor man, a leper, a blind person, and one who has no children. They were not blind, for it is written, wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? (Num. XVI, 14). Again, they were not lepers, for we find that they had not been excluded from the congregation: in the midst of all Israel (Deut. XI, 6). Even if they had been childless, they still could have been a source of danger to Moses before Pharaoh. Hence when God assured Moses that the danger was past, He meant that they were now poor and without influence (Ran).

(4) Hence, the ban may be merely a nominal punishment. V. J.E. art. Anathema. The term used here is niddui, and though it is stated there (p. 560, 2) that niddui is for seven days (M.K. 16a, 17b), it is evident from this passage that there was a formal ban too of no particular duration.

(5) Heb. hasida, (hasid). In Rabbinic literature the term is a title of respect denoting the type of an ideal Jew; (cf. Ta'an. 8a; Tem. 15b).

(6) [Here the term used is shamta, 'desolation', 'curse'. According to Rashi, 'shamta' is a less severe form of ban than 'niddui'; Maimonides, Yad, Talmud Torah, VII, 2, equates them. Nahmanides, Mishpat ha-Herem, considers shamta to be a general term for the more severe form of excommunication, the Herem, and the less severe, the Niddui.

(7) This was done to safeguard the honour of his disciple.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 8a

Whence do we know that an oath may be taken to fulfil a precept? From the verse, I have sworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.¹ But is he not under a perpetual oath from Mount Sinai?² — But what [R. Giddal] teaches us is that one may stimulate himself.³ R. Giddal also said in Rab's name: He who says, 'I will rise early to study this chapter or this tractate,' has vowed a great vow to the God of Israel. But he is under a perpetual oath from Mount Sinai, and an oath cannot fall upon another?⁴ Then [again] if he informs us that a person may thus stimulate himself, it is identical with R. Giddal's first [statement]? — This is what R. Giddal teaches: The oath is binding, since one can free [i.e., acquit] himself by the reading of the Shema' morning or evening.⁵ R. Giddal said in Rab's name: If one says to his neighbour, 'Let us rise early and study this chapter,' it is his [the former's] duty to rise early, as it is written, And he said unto me, arise, go forth into the plain, and there I will talk with thee. Then I arose and went forth into the plain, and behold, the glory of the Lord stood there.⁶

R. Joseph said: If one was placed under a ban in a dream, ten persons are necessary for lifting the ban.⁷ They must have studied halachah;⁸ I but if they had only learnt [Mishnah],⁹ they cannot lift the ban; but if such as have studied halachah are unavailable, then even those who have only learnt Mishnah], but had not studied [halachah] will do. But if even such are unavailable, let him go and sit at the cross-roads, and extend greetings¹⁰ to ten men, until he finds ten men who have studied halachah.¹¹ Rabina asked R. Ashi: If he knew [in his dream] the person who placed him under a ban, can this person lift the ban? — He answered: He might have been appointed [God's] messenger to ban him, but not to revoke it. R. Aha asked R. Ashi: What if one was both banned and readmitted¹² in his dream? — Said he to him: Just as grain is impossible without straw,¹³

(1) Ps. CXIX, 106.

(2) Every Jew is regarded as having sworn at Sinai to observe God's precepts.

(3) By an oath, to do what he is in any case bound to do.

(4) I.e., an oath is not valid when referring to that which is already subject to an oath.

(5) The passage commencing: Hear O Israel etc. (Deut. VI, 4 seq.). There is a definite obligation to study day and night, which is derived either from Deut. VI, 7 (and thou shalt teach them, etc.) or from Josh. I, 8 (This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth). But it is stated in Men. 95b that the obligation is fulfilled by the reading of the Shema' morning and evening.

(6) Ezek. III, 22, 23. The Lord, having instructed him to go forth, had preceded him.

(7) Dreams were widely held to have a positive significance; indeed, as almost partaking of the nature of prophecy. As we see here, a definite quality of reality was ascribed to them. V. J.E. s.v. 'Dreams'.

(8) Heb., hilketha, v. next note.

(9) So Rashi and Ran on the basis of our text. Mishnah is the law in broad outline, which characterises the whole of our present Mishnah, as compiled by R. Judah I. Hilketha (halachah) (law, rule) would appear to connote here the Talmudic discussion thereon, i.e., the amoraic development of the Mishnah. For tanu (ub,) referring to amoraic teaching instead of Tannaitic. cf. Kaplan, Redaction of the Talmud, pp. 209 seq. Ran, Asheri, and Tosaf, offer another interpretation, based on a slightly different reading: They must have taught law, but not merely learnt it (themselves).

(10) Lit., 'give peace' — the usual form of a Jewish greeting.

(11) Tosaf.: the greetings of ten men at the cross-roads will remove his grief; but ten scholars are necessary for the removal of the ban.

(12) Lit., 'it was loosened for him'.

(13) Cf. Jer. XXIII, 28.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 8b

so is there no dream without meaningless matter.¹

Rabina's wife was under a vow; he then came before R. Ashi, asking. Can the husband become an agent for his wife's regret?² — He replied: If they [the three scholars] are ready assembled, he can do so: but not otherwise.³ Three things may be inferred from this incident: [i] A husband can become an agent for his wife's regret. [ii] It is not seemly⁴ for a scholar to revoke a vow in his teacher's town.⁵ [iii] If they [the necessary scholars] are already assembled, it is well. But a scholar may lift a ban even in the vicinity of his master, and even a single ordained scholar⁶ may lift a ban.

R. Simeon b. Zebid said in the name of R. Isaac b. Tabla, in the name of R. Hiyya Areka of the school of R. Aha, in the name of R. Zera in the name of R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanania in the name of R. Mi'asha on the authority of R. Judah b. Il'ai: What is the meaning of, But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings?⁷ — This refers to those people who fear to utter the Divine name in vain.⁸ 'The sin of righteousness with healing in its wings': Said Abaye, This proves that the motes dancing in the sun's rays have healing power. Now, he differs from R. Simeon b. Lakish, who said: There is no Gehinnom⁹ in the world to come,¹⁰ but the Holy One, blessed be He, will draw forth the sun from its sheath: the righteous shall be healed, and the wicked shall be judged and punished thereby. As it is written, But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings.¹¹ Moreover, they shall be rejuvenated by it, as it is written, And ye shall go forth and grow up as calves of the stall.¹² But the wicked shall be punished thereby, as it is written, Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.¹³

(1) I.e., the ban is not lifted.

(2) So as to have the vow cancelled. On regret (haratah). v. infra 21b, a.l.

(3) Because having troubled to assemble three scholars, he may be anxious that his trouble should not be unrewarded and so exceed his wife's instructions as to the grounds on which she desired absolution.

(4) This is the reading of Ran. Cur. edd. (quoted by Rashi too): a scholar is not permitted.

(5) Since Rabina, himself a Rabbi, did not act in the town of R. Ashi, his teacher.

(6) Mumhe, v. Glos.

(7) Mal. III. 20.

(8) The name of God represents the Divine nature and the relation of God to His people. As such it was understood as the equivalent of the Divine Presence, hence the awe with which it was surrounded, cf. Kid. 71a, Sanh. 99a.

(9) Gehinnom (Gehenna) as an equivalent of hell, purgatory, takes its name from the place where children were once sacrificed to Moloch, viz., ge ben Hinnom, the valley of the son of Hinnom, to the south of Jerusalem (Josh. XV, 8; 11 Kings XXIII, 10; Jer. VII, 32-32; XIX, 6. 13-14).

(10) ['Olam ha-ba. Here, as it is clear from the context, the reference is to the Messianic days.]

(11) Thus, unlike Abaye, he applies the verse to the future world.

(12) Mal. III, 20.

(13) Mal. III, 19.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 9a

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS] 'AS THE VOWS OF THE WICKED, HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF NEZIROTH, A SACRIFICE, AND AN OATH.'¹ [IF HE SAYS:] 'AS THE VOWS OF THE RIGHTEOUS,' HIS WORDS ARE OF NO EFFECT. [BUT IF HE SAID,] 'AS THEIR FREEWILL-OFFERINGS,' HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF A NAZIRITE VOW AND A SACRIFICE.¹

GEMARA. But perhaps he meant thus: 'I do not vow as the vows of the wicked?' — Samuel answered: The Mishnah refers to one who said, 'As the vows of the wicked behold I am,' [or] '[I take] upon myself,' [or] '[I am debarred] from it': [which means,] 'Behold, I am a nazir,' [or] 'I take upon myself [the obligation] to offer a sacrifice,' [or] 'I [am debarred] by an oath [to derive any benefit] therefrom. Behold, I am a nazir': but perhaps he meant, 'Behold, I am to fast'? — Said Samuel: That is if a nazir was passing in front of him.² 'I am [debarred] by an oath [to derive any benefit] therefrom.' But perhaps [hemennu] [from or of it] means 'that I am to eat of it'? — Said Raba: It means that he said, '[I am debarred] from it not to eat it.' If so, why state it?³ — I would argue, But he has not explicitly taken an oath!⁴ Hence we are informed [otherwise].⁵

[IF HE SAYS], 'AS THE VOWS OF THE RIGHTEOUS,' etc. Which Tanna recognises a distinction between a vow and a freewill offering:⁶ shall we say, neither R. Meir nor R. Judah? For it was taught: Better it is that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay.⁷ Better than both is not to vow at all: thus said R. Meir. R. Judah said: Better than both is to vow and repay.⁸ — You may even say that it is R. Meir:

(1) I.e., his vow is valid in respect of these. This will be explained in the Gemara.

(2) So he meant, 'such as he'.

(3) Since it is obvious.

(4) Hence it is not an oath.

(5) [The meaning of the Mishnah would be accordingly: If a nazirite is passing by and a man noticing him says, 'Behold, I am as he who makes the vows of the wicked', (meaning the nazirite, who in a sense is regarded as a sinner; v. infra 10a); or if a man with a beast before him says, 'I take upon myself as the vows of the wicked', or, with a loaf of bread before him, says, 'From it as the vows of the wicked', he becomes respectively a nazirite; is obliged to bring a sacrifice; and is forbidden to eat of the loaf, each utterance being treated as an abbreviation of a vow (Ran).]

(6) In making a vow to offer a sacrifice, one says, 'Behold, I will bring a sacrifice'; since he may forget to do so, it is considered wrong to make a vow. But a freewill donation is declared thus: 'Behold, this animal is for a sacrifice'. Since the animal has already been put aside for the purpose, there is no fear of forgetfulness.

(7) Eccl. V, 4.

(8) Thus neither draw a distinction between a vow and a freewill-offering.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 9b

R. Meir spoke only of a vow, but not of a freewill-offering. But the Mishnah states: AS THEIR FREEWILL-OFFERINGS, HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF NAZIR AND A SACRIFICE?¹ — Learn: HE HAS made a freewill-offering IN RESPECT OF NAZIR AND A SACRIFICE. Now, wherein does a vower differ, that he is not [approved]: because he may thereby come to a stumbling-block?² But a freewill-offering too can become a stumbling-block?³ — [He does as] Hillel the Elder.⁴ For it was taught: It was said of Hillel the Elder that no man ever trespassed through his burnt-offering;⁵ he would bring it as hullin⁶ to the Temple court, then sanctify it, and put his hand upon it⁷ and slaughter it. That is well in respect of a freewill-offering of sacrifices; but what can be said of a freewill-offering of neziroth?⁸ — It is as Simeon the Just.⁹ For it was taught: Simeon the Just said: Only once in my life have I eaten of the trespass-offering brought by a defiled tear. On one occasion a nazir came from the South country, and I saw that he had beautiful eyes, was of handsome appearance, and with thick locks of hair symmetrically arranged. Said I to him: 'My son, what [reason] didst thou see to destroy this beautiful hair of thine?'¹⁰ He replied: 'I was a shepherd for my father in my town. [Once] I went to draw water from a well, gazed upon my reflection in the water, whereupon my evil desires rushed upon me and sought to drive me from the world [through sin]. But I said unto it [my lust]: "Wretch! why dost thou vaunt thyself in a world that is not thine, with one who is destined to become worms and dust?"¹¹ I swear¹² that I will shave thee off [his beautiful hair] for the sake of Heaven." I immediately arose and kissed his head, saying: 'My son, may there be many nazirites such as thou in Israel! Of thee saith the Holy Writ, When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a nazirite, to separate themselves unto the Lord.'¹³

R. Mani demurred: Wherein does the trespass-offering of an unclean nazirite differ, that he did not eat [thereof]: because it comes on account of sin? Then he should not have partaken [of] all trespass-offerings, since they come on account of sin? Said R. Jonah to him, This is the reason: When they regret [their evil deeds], they become nazirites, but when they become defiled, and the period of neziroth is lengthened,¹⁴ they regret their vow, and thus hullin is brought to the Temple court.¹⁵ If so, it is the same even with an undefiled nazir too?¹⁶ — A clean nazir is not so, for he [previously] estimates his will-power, [and decides] that he can vow.

Alternatively:

- (1) Rashi: this implies that it is stated as a vow. Asheri: the use of both terms together, FREEWILL-OFFERINGS and HE HAS VOWED proves that the Tanna of our Mishnah recognises no difference between them.
 - (2) By forgetting to fulfil his vow.
 - (3) Because when an animal has been dedicated, it may not be put to any use; in a momentary forgetfulness, however, one may use it.
 - (4) 'Elder' (Heb. zaken) does not necessarily refer to age, but was a title of scholarship; cf. Kid. 32b; Yoma 28b; J.M.K. III, beginning of 81c.
 - (5) By putting it to secular use after dedication.
 - (6) Non-holy, v. Glos.
 - (7) Lev. I, 4: And he shall put his hand upon the lead of the burnt-offering.
 - (8) Since the possibility of violating one of the laws of neziroth constitutes a stumbling-block.
 - (9) So the text as emended by Ran. — One who takes the vow of a nazirite in such circumstances as those related by Simeon the Just need not fear a stumbling-block. Scholars differ whether he is identical with Simeon I (310-291 or 300-270 B.C.E.) or Simeon II (219-199 B.C.E.). v. Ab. (Sonc. ed.) p. 2, n. 1.
 - (10) V. Num. VI, 18.
 - (11) Meaning himself. In thus apostrophising his lust he did not ascribe any personal, independent identity to it, as is evident from the context.
 - (12) Lit., 'by the service' (of the Temple).
 - (13) Num. VI, 2. A nazirite vow made for such reasons may be regarded as the vow of the righteous. Simeon the Just's refusal to partake of these sacrifices must be regarded as a protest against the growing ascetic practice of taking vows to be a nazirite, — usually a sign of unhappy times; Weiss, Dor, I, 85, v. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 13.
 - (14) Since they must recommence their neziroth; v' Num. VI, 12.
 - (15) Actually, of course, the animal would be consecrated; but it is as though it were hullin, since their neziroth, on account of which the sacrifice is brought, was not whole-hearted.
 - (16) He may regret the vow before the expiration of his term.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 10a

You may even say that it [the Mishnah] agrees with R. Judah, for R. Judah said this¹ only of a freewill-offering, but not of a vow. But he teaches: Better than both is to vow and repay? — Learn: To make a freewill-offering and repay. Now, why is a vow objectional: because one may come thereby to a stumbling-block.² [Does not] the same apply to a free-will offering whereby too he may come to a stumbling-block? — R. Judah conforms to his other view, viz., that a person may bring his lamb to the Temple-court, consecrate and lay [hands] upon it, and slaughter it.³ This answer suffices for a freewill-offering of a sacrifice; but what can be said of a free-will offering of neziroth? — R. Judah follows his view [there too]. For it was taught: R. Judah said: The early hasidim⁴ were eager to bring a sin-offering, because the Holy One, blessed be He, never caused them to stumble. What did they do? They arose and made a free-will vow of neziroth to the Omnipresent, so as to be liable to a sin-offering to the Omnipresent.⁵ R. Simeon said: They did not vow neziroth. But he who wished to bring a burnt-offering donated it freely, and brought it; if a peace-offering, he donated it freely and brought it; or if a thanks-offering and the four kinds of loaves,⁶ donated it freely and brought it. But they did not take neziroth upon themselves, so as not to be designated sinners, as it is written, And [the priest] shall make atonement for him, for that he sinned against a soul.⁷

Abaye said: Simeon the Just, R. Simeon, and R. Eleazar hakappar, are all of the same opinion, viz., that a nazir is a sinner. Simeon the Just and R. Simeon, as we have stated. R. Eleazar ha-Kappar Berabbi,⁸ as it was taught: And he shall make atonement for him, for that he sinned against a soul. Against which 'soul' then has he sinned? But it is because he afflicted himself through abstention from wine. Now, does not this afford an argument from the minor to the major? If one, who afflicted himself only in respect of wine, is called a sinner: how much more so one who ascetically refrains from everything. Hence, one who fasts is called a sinner. But this verse refers to an unclean nazir?⁹ — That is because he doubly sinned.¹⁰

MISHNAH. ONE WHO SAYS, 'KONAM,' 'KONAH,' OR 'KONAS,'¹¹ THESE ARE THE SUBSTITUTES FOR KORBAN.¹² 'HEREK,' 'HEREK,' [OR] 'HEREF,' THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR HEREM.¹³ 'NAZIK,' 'NAZIAH,' 'PAZIAH,' THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR NEZIROTH;¹⁴ 'SHEBUTHAH,' 'SHEKUKAH,' OR ONE WHO VOWS BY MOHI,¹⁵ THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR SHEBU'AH.¹⁶

GEMARA. It was stated: Substitutes: R. Johanan said: They are foreign equivalents [of the Hebrew]; R. Simeon b. Lakish said: They are forms devised by the Sages for the purpose of making vows; (and thus it is written, in the month which he had devised of his own heart).¹⁷ And why did the Rabbis institute substitutes? — That one should not say korban. Then let him Say, korban? — Lest he say korban la-adonai [a sacrifice to the Lord]. And why not say korban la-adonai? — Lest one say la-adonai without korban, and thus utter the Divine Name in vain.¹⁸ And it was taught: R. Simeon said:

(1) That it is better to vow and repay.

(2) V. p. 21, nn. 1 & 6.

(3) It cannot become a stumbling-block, because it is hullin practically until it is killed.

(4) Hasid, Pl. hasidim; lit., 'pious ones'. The hasidim referred to here are definitely not the Essenes (Weiss, Dor, I, P' 110). [Buchler, Types. p. 78, makes these early hasidim contemporaries of Shammai and Hillel.]

- (5) V. Num. VI, 14.
- (6) A thanks-offering was accompanied by forty loaves of bread, divided into four different kinds.
- (7) Num. VI, 11 .
- (8) [Or, Berebi, designation by which Bar Kappara is known to distinguish him from his father who bore the same name, v. Nazir, (Sonc. ed.) p. 64, n. 1.]
- (9) How then can one deduce that a nazir in general is a sinner?
- (10) The verse shews that a double sin is referred to, because 'for that he sinned' alone would have sufficed; 'against a soul' is superfluous, and teaches that he is a sinner in two respects: (i) by becoming a nazir at all; (ii) by defiling his neziroth (Ran). — The whole passage shows the Jewish opposition to asceticism, for Judaism rejects the doctrine of the wickedness of this life and the inherent corruption of the body, which is the basis of asceticism. Whilst the community as a whole fasted in times of trouble (cf. Esth. IV, 16; Ta'an. 10a, 15a), and certain Rabbis too were addicted to it (e.g. R. Ze'ira, B.M. 85a), yet individual fasting was discouraged, as here; v. Maim. Yad, De'oth, III, 1; VI, 1; Lazarus, Ethics of Judaism, ם 246-256.
- (11) [Its derivation is probably from kenum, 'self', 'person', and then the object in an elliptical sentence, 'I pledge (myself) my person with So-and-so (that I will not do this or that)', v. Cooke, North Semitic Inscriptions, p. 34. This is a substitute for korban vow, in which he declares 'this may be forbidden to me as is a sacrifice'. No satisfactory explanation has been given so far for the other terms, which seem to be corruptions of konam.]
- (12) Heb. for sacrifice.
- (13) Ban.
- (14) The vow of a nazir: 'Behold, I will be a nazir'. These words may be substituted for nazir.
- (15) This is explained in the Gemara. [The Mishnaïoth text reads 'BY MOTHA', an abbreviation of Momatha, the Aramaic equivalent of Shebu'ah.]
- (16) Heb. for oath.
- (17) I Kings XII, 33, referring to the unauthorised festival instituted by Jeroboam in the eighth instead of the seventh month. [The Heb. for 'devised', VSC is the same as used by R. Johanan in his definition. The bracketed words appear to be a copyist's gloss that has crept into the text. They do not occur in MS.M.]
- (18) This machinery for vows, regulating the manner in which they were to be made, points to the practice as being very prevalent. V. Weiss, Dor, I, 85.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 10b

Whence do we know that one must not say, 'Unto the Lord a burnt-offering,' 'unto the Lord a meal-offering,' 'unto the Lord a thanks-offering,' or 'unto the Lord a peace-offering'?¹ Because it is written, [If any man of you bring] an offering to the Lord.² And from the minor we may deduce the major: If concerning one who intended uttering the Divine Name only in connection with a sacrifice, the Torah taught, an offering to the Lord;³ how much more [care must one take against its deliberate utterance] in vain!

Shall we say that this [conflict] is dependent on Tannaim? For it was taught: Beth Shammai maintain: Substitutes of substitutes are binding; whilst Beth Hillel Say: They are not.⁴ Surely, the ruling that secondary substitutes are valid is based on the view that substitutes are foreign equivalents;⁵ whilst he who says that they are invalid holds that they are forms devised by the Sages?⁶ — No. All agree that substitutes are foreign words; but Beth Shammai hold that Gentiles speak in these [terms] too,⁷ whilst Beth Hillel hold that they do not speak in these [terms]. Alternatively Beth Shammai hold: Secondary substitutes [are declared valid] as a precautionary measure on account of substitutes themselves;⁸ but Beth Hillel maintain: We do not enact a precautionary measure for secondary substitutes on account of the substitutes themselves.

What forms do double modifications of vows take? — R. Joseph recited: Mekanamana, mekanehana, mekanesana. What are the secondary substitutes of herem? — Mafash'ah taught: harakim, harakim, harafim. Secondary substitutes of neziroth? — R. Joseph learnt: mehazakana, menazahana, mephana.⁹ The scholars inquired: What of mipahazna, mithhazana, mith'azana?¹⁰ Rabina asked R. Ashi: What of kinema: does it mean konam,¹¹ or perhaps, kinemon besem [sweet cinnamon]?¹² R. Aha, the son of R. Hiyya, asked R. Ashi: What of kinah: does it mean a fowl's sty,¹³ or konam? These remain questions.¹⁴

What are secondary substitutes of oaths? — Shebuel, shebuthiel, shekukeel. But shebuel may simply mean Shebhuel the son of Gershon? But say thus: Shebubiel, shebuthiel shekukeel.¹⁵ Samuel said: If one says ashbithah, he says nothing: ashkikah, he says nothing; karinsha, he says nothing.¹⁶

OR ONE WHO VOWS BY MOHI, THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES [FOR SHEBU'A]. It was taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: One who says 'by Mohi' [Moses]¹⁷ says nothing; 'by Momtha which Mohi said,'¹⁸ these are substitutes for an oath. MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS [TO HIS NEIGHBOUR], 'THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT¹⁹ HULLIN,'²⁰ 'BE NOT KASHER,'²¹ 'BE NOT PURE,' 'BE CLEAN OR UNCLEAR,'²² 'BE NOTHAR,'²³ OR PIGGUL,²⁴ HE IS FORBIDDEN.²⁵ AS THE LAMB,²⁶ AS THE TEMPLE SHEDS OF CATTLE OR WOOD,²⁷ 'AS THE WOOD' [ON THE ALTAR], AS THE FIRE [ON THE ALTAR],²⁸ 'AS THE ALTAR,' 'AS THE TEMPLE, AS JERUSALEM;' [OR] IF ONE VOWED BY REFERENCE TO THE ALTAR UTENSILS,²⁹ THOUGH HE DID NOT MENTION KORBAN, IT IS AS THOUGH HE HAD VOWED BY KORBAN.³⁰ R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM³¹ HAS SAID NOTHING.

(1) In this order, the Divine Name preceding.

(2) Lev. I, 1; thus the offering must precede.

(3) But not the reverse, lest one utter the Name in vain.

(4) Lit., 'they are permitted'.

(5) Hence, the first modifications are correct foreign words, the substitutes thereof are corrupt, but also used, and hence valid for oaths.

(6) Hence secondary substitutes, not having been assigned by the Sages to that purpose, are invalid.

(7) Sc. secondary substitutes; hence they are valid.

(8) Which would otherwise be treated as invalid by the masses.

(9) [Read Menazahana . . . mepazahna, each of which consists of the three consonantal letters of the substitutes with prefix and suffix; v. Strashun].

(10) [Strashun reads: Mepahazna, menahazna, menakazna, the last consonantal letters of the substitutes being transposed. This receives support from MS.M.]. Are they binding or not?

(11) Hence it is valid.

(12) Ex. XXX, 23; i.e., it is not a vow-form at all.

(13) I.e., the fem. of ie (kin), a bird's nest.

(14) In all these doubtful forms the question arises when they were actually used to express vows, the question being whether they imply vows or something else — notwithstanding the intention of their user.

(15) לִבְנֵי ‘What is the law’ in cur. edd. is to be deleted; Bah.

(16) These forms are ineffective for expressing oaths.

(17) [‘By Moses’, was one of the common forms of asseveration, cf. Bez. 38b; Shab. 101b. V. Chajes, Notes.]

(18) By the oath which Moses uttered. [The allusion is to Ex. II, 21, where van ktuhu is rendered, ‘Moses swore’. (Ran).]

(19) The Hebrew is la-hullin, here regarded as meaning: not hullin. V. also p. 28, n. 8.

(20) V. Glos.

(21) Lit., ‘fit’, ritually permitted for consumption.

(22) So cur. edd. Asheri explains: be as sacrifices, to which the laws of cleanliness and uncleanness apply — i.e., forbidden. Rashi’s text reads simply: be not clean, be unclean, etc.

(23) Lit., ‘left over’. The flesh of an offering which remains over after the period in which it must be eaten, v. Ex. XXIX, 34, and Lev., VII, 17.

(24) Lit., ‘abomination’. The flesh of an animal sacrificed with the deliberate intention of eating it after the permitted period; it is then forbidden even within the period, v. Lev. VII, 18.

(25) To eat aught of his neighbour.

(26) I.e., the lamb of the daily sacrifice.

(27) The alternative is implied by the use of the plural in the Mishnah (Tosaf.).

(28) [So T.J. Others: Fire-offerings, cf. Lev. XXI. 6. (V. Asheri and Tosaf.)]

(29) I.e., your food be as the altar utensils unto me, hence, forbidden.

(30) V. Mishnah 20a.

(31) Without as i.e., ‘Your food be Jerusalem to me’.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 11a

GEMARA. The scholars presumed. What does la-hullin mean: Let it not be as hullin, [implying] but as a sacrifice. Who is the authority of our Mishnah? If R. Meir: but he does not hold that the positive may be inferred from the negative?¹ For we learnt, R. Meir said: Every stipulation which is not like the stipulation of the children of Gad and Reuben is invalid.² Hence it must be R. Judah.³ Then consider the conclusion: R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM HAS SAID NOTHING. Now, since the conclusion is R. Judah, the former clause is not R. Judah?⁴ — The whole Mishnah gives R. Judah's ruling, but this is what is stated: for R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM HAS SAID NOTHING.⁵

But if one says, ‘as Jerusalem,’ is he forbidden according to R. Judah? But it was taught: R. Judah said: He who says, ‘as Jerusalem,’ has said nothing, unless he vows by what is sacrificed in Jerusalem! — It is all R. Judah, and two Tannaim, conflict as to his views.⁶

(1) To render it legally binding. Thus, if one says, ‘let it not be as hullin’, we may not infer that he meant, ‘but let it be as a korban’, and so declare it forbidden.

(2) Num. XXXII, 20-23; 29-30, q.v. We see there that Moses stipulated what was to happen in each case, and did not rely on one clause only, from which the reverse might be deduced, v. Kid. 61a.

(3) That the positive is inferred from the negative, and is then legally binding.

(4) Since it is specifically pointed out that the second clause is R. Judah.

(5) For that reason ‘as’ is specified in all the previous expressions.

(6) The Tanna of the Mishnah holding R. Judah's view to be that 'as Jerusalem' is a binding form, and the Tanna of the Baraitha that it is not.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 11b

It was taught: [If one says,] 'That which I might eat of yours,' or 'that which I might not eat of yours, be hullin,' or, 'be the hullin,' or, 'be as hullin,' he is permitted.¹ [If he says,] 'That which I might eat of yours be not hullin,' he is forbidden;² 'that which I might not eat of yours be not hullin,' he is permitted. Now with whom does the first clause agree? With R. Meir, viz., who does not hold that the positive may be inferred from the negative.³ Then consider the latter clause: 'That which I might not eat of yours be not hullin,' he is permitted. But we learnt: [If one says,] 'That which I might not eat of yours be not for korban': R. Meir forbids [him]. Now we raised the difficulty: but he does not rule that the positive may be inferred from the negative?⁴ And R. Abba replied: It is as though he said, 'Let it [i.e., your food] be for the korban, therefore I will not eat of yours.'⁵ Then here too' perhaps, he meant, 'Let it not be hullin; therefore I may not eat of yours'? — This Tanna agrees with R. Meir on one point, but disagrees with him on another. He agrees with him on one point. that the positive may not be inferred from the negative; but disagrees with him on another, [viz.,] on [the interpretation of] la-korban. R. Ashi said: In the one case he said le-hullin;⁶ in the other⁷ he said, 'la-hullin', which might mean, 'let it not be hullin,'⁸ but as a korban'.

BE CLEAN OR UNCLEAR,' 'AS NOTHAR,' 'AS PIGGUL, HE IS FORBIDDEN. Rami b. Hama asked: What if one said: 'This be unto me as the flesh of a peace-offering after the sprinkling of the blood'? But if he vowed thus, he related [his vow] to what is permissible!⁹ — But (the question arises thus): E.g., if there lay flesh of a peace-offering before him and permitted food lay beside it' and he said, 'This be like this'. What then: did he relate it to its original state,¹⁰ or to its present [permitted] condition? — Raba answered: Come and hear: [We learnt:] IF ONE SAYS . . . AS NOTHAR, [OR] AS PIGGUL, [HE IS FORBIDDEN].

(1) To eat or benefit from his neighbour.

(2) Rashi. Ran is inclined to delete the clause, since, as the Talmud shews, this Baraitha is taught according to R. Meir, who holds that the positive may not be inferred from the negative.

(3) Hence, when he Says, 'That which I might not eat of yours be hullin', we may not infer that that which he might eat should not be hullin, and so prohibited.

(4) The hypothesis being that he is forbidden on account of this inference.

(5) The Hebrew form is la-korban: in popular speech la 'to the' may be a hurried utterance of la' 'not'; therefore on the first assumption what he said was: 'shall not be a korban'; in the answer the preposition is given its normal meaning, viz., shall be for the korban.

(6) Meaning as (or, for) hullin. [This can by no means be taken to denote 'not', and since R. Meir does not infer the positive from the negative, he does not consider it a vow.]

(7) The case interpreted by R. Abba.

(8) [So Ran. curr. edd. la-hullin, 'not hullin'].

(9) His words imply no prohibition.

(10) Before the sprinkling of the blood, when it was forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 12a

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 12a

Now, nothar and piggul¹ are [possible only] after the sprinkling of the blood! —² R. Huna the son of R. Nathan said to him, This refers to nothar of a burnt-offering.³ Said he to him, If so, let him [the Tanna] teach: As the flesh of the burnt-offering?⁴ — He proceeds to a climax.⁵ [Thus:] It is unnecessary [to teach that if one relates his vow to] the flesh of a burnt-offering, that he is forbidden, since he referred it to a sacrifice. But it is necessary for him [to teach the case of] nothar and piggul of a burnt-offering. For I would think that he referred it to the prohibitions of nothar and piggul, so that it counts as a reference to what is inherently forbidden, and he is not prohibited;⁶ hence he informs us [otherwise].

An objection is raised: Which is the bond mentioned in the Torah?⁷ If one says, 'Behold! I am not to eat meat or drink wine, as on the day that my father or teacher died,' [or] 'as on the day when Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was slain,'⁸ [or] 'as on the day that I saw Jerusalem in ruins.' Now Samuel commented thereon: Providing that he was under a vow in respect to that very day.⁹ What does this mean? Surely that e.g., he stood thus on a Sunday, on which day his father had died, and though there were many permitted Sundays, it is taught that he is forbidden; this proves that the original [Sunday] is referred to.¹⁰ — Samuel's dictum was thus stated: Samuel said, Providing that he was under a vow uninterruptedly since that day.¹¹

Rabina said, Come and hear: [If one says, 'This be unto me] as Aaron's dough¹² or as his terumah', he is permitted.¹³ Hence, [if he vowed,] 'as the terumah of the loaves of the thanksgiving-offering,'¹⁴ he would be forbidden.¹⁵

(1) Some delete piggul, since at no time was it permitted. If retained in the text, it is so because nothar and piggul are generally coupled; but Raba's deductions are from nothar only.

(2) The proof is this. A sacrifice is forbidden because at some time it was consecrated by a vow. With the sprinkling of its blood it loses its forbidden character until it becomes nothar, when it resumes it. But a direct reference to nothar itself is inadmissible in a vow, because nothar is Divinely forbidden, and not the result of a vow (v. text, and p. 30, n. 2). Hence the reference must have been to the condition of the flesh before the sprinkling of the blood.

(3) The flesh of which is not permitted even after the sprinkling of the blood: hence it proves nothing.

(4) Without reference to nothar at all.

(5) Lit., he states, 'it is unnecessary'.

(6) When a man imposes a prohibition by referring one thing to another, the latter must be also artificially forbidden, e.g., a sacrifice, which was originally permitted, and then forbidden through consecration. But if it is Divinely forbidden, without the agency of man, the vow is invalid. Thus, if one says, 'This be to me as the flesh of the swine', it is not forbidden. Now, the prohibition of piggul and nothar are Divine: therefore, If the reference was in point of that particular prohibition, the vow would be invalid.

(7) Num. XXX, 3: If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond, he shall not break his word.

(8) After the destruction of the first Temple by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C.E. and the deportation of the nobles and the upper classes to Babylon, Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was appointed governor of the small community that was left. As a result of a conspiracy he was slain on the second day of Tishri. Jer. XL-XLI.

(9) The assumed meaning is: he had vowed on the day of his father's death, or had once vowed not to eat meat on the day that Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was slain, and now he vowed a second time, 'I am not to eat meat, etc. as on the day when I am forbidden by my previous vow, thus the second vow was related to an interdict which was itself the result of a vow (Ran.).

(10) I.e., the first Sunday distinguished by his former vow.

(11) I.e., he had been under a vow every Sunday until this present vow. Hence nothing can be proved. v. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) p. 105.

(12) Num. XV, 20-21. Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering. This, and terumah (v. Gos.) belonged to Aaron, i.e., the priest, and was prohibited to a star (I.e., a non-priest).

(13) To benefit therefrom. The vow is invalid, because the dough and the terumah, not being prohibited to all, are regarded as Divinely forbidden: v. p. 30, n. 2.

(14) V. Lev. VII, 22ff. Of the forty loaves brought (p. 32, n. 1) one out of each set of ten was terumah, and belonged to the priest.

(15) Because the prohibition of those is evidently due to a vow.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 12b

But the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves is [forbidden] only after the sprinkling of the blood!¹ — [No.] Infer thus: [If he vows,] 'as the terumah of the shekel-chamber,'² he is forbidden. But what if [he said,] 'as the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves,' he is permitted? Then let him [the Tanna] state the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves, then how much more so 'his terumah'!³ — He teaches us this: The terumah of the thanksgiving loaves is 'his terumah'.⁴ Alternatively, the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves may also mean before the sprinkling of the blood,⁵ e.g., if it was separated during the kneading [of the dough].⁶ Even as R. Tobi b. Kisna said in Samuel's name: If the thanksgiving loaves are baked as four loaves [instead of forty], it suffices. But does not the Writ state forty?⁷ — As a meritorious deed. But terumah has to be taken therefrom?⁸ And should you answer that one loaf is taken for all, — but we learnt: [And of it he shall offer] one out of each oblation:⁹ 'one' teaches that terumah is not to be taken from one oblation for another?¹⁰ And should you say that a piece is taken from each, — but we learnt: 'One' teaches that a piece is not to be taken? But it must be that he separates it during kneading, taking one [part] of the leaven, one of the unleavened cakes, one of the unleavened wafer, and one of the fried cake;¹¹ [so here too].

Shall we say that this is dependent on Tannaim? [For it was taught: If one says,] 'This be unto me as a firstling,'¹² R. Jacob forbids it, while R. Jose permits it. Now, how is this meant? If we say, before the sprinkling of the blood:¹³ what is the reason of him who permits it? If after, on what grounds does the other forbid it? But it surely [means]

(1) This itself is disputed. The view of R. Eliezer b. Simon is adopted here. Since, by deduction, this vow is binding, we evidently regard the reference as being to the present state.

(2) This refers to a special fund kept in the Temple for various purposes. mainly congregational sacrifices; Shek. III, 2: IV, 1. — This is the deduction to be made, not the previous one.

(3) If a vow referring to the terumah of the loaves of a thanks-offering is invalid, though in their origin their own prohibition is due to a vow, how much more will a vow referring to other terumah, which is Divinely forbidden, be valid. Also, it is a general rule that there is a preference for teaching the less likely, so that the more likely may be deduced therefrom a minori.

- (4) I.e., the word 'terumah' embraces all forms of terumah.
- (5) It is even then forbidden to a star, v. Glos.
- (6) Although the loaves become sanctified only by the sprinkling of the blood, according to our premise, yet if the terumah was separated in the dough, it is consecrated.
- (7) Not actually. But since the Writ speaks of four species, and terumah (I.e., one in ten) was to be given from each, it follows that forty had to be made.
- (8) One from each ten.
- (9) Lev. VII, 14.
- (10) Each kind of loaf is here referred to as an oblation.
- (11) V. Lev. VII, 12.
- (12) v. Num. XVIII, 15.
- (13) Of the firstling, when it is definitely forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 13a

that flesh of a firstling lay before him, and this other flesh lay at its side, and he declared, 'this be as this,' and [thus] it is a controversy of Tannaim?¹ — No. All treat of before the sprinkling of the blood; and what is the reason of him who permits it? The Writ States, If a man vow,² [teaching] that one must vow by that which is [itself] forbidden through a vow; thus excluding a firstling, which is an interdicted thing. And he who forbids it?³ — The Writ states, 'unto the Lord,'² to include an interdicted thing.⁴ Then he who permits it, how does he interpret 'unto the Lord'? — He employs it in respect of relating [a vow] to a sin-offering or a guilt-offering.⁵ Now, what [reason] do you see to include a sin-offering and a guilt-offering and exclude the firstling? — I include the sin-offering and the guilt-offering which one sanctifies⁶ by a vow,⁷ but exclude the firstling, which is holy from its mother's womb. But he who forbids?⁸ A firstling too one sanctifies by a vow. For it was taught: It was said on the authority of Rabbi, Whence do we know that one is bidden to consecrate the firstling born in one's house? — From the verse, [All] the firstling males [that come of thy herd and thy flock] thou shalt sanctify [unto the Lord].⁹ But he who permits it [argues thus]: If he does not consecrate it, is it not holy?¹⁰

. . . AS THE LAMB, AS THE TEMPLE SHEDS etc. It was taught: A lamb, for a lamb, as a lamb; [or] sheds, for sheds, as sheds; [or] wood, for wood, as wood; [or] fire, for fire, as fire; [or] the altar, for the altar, as the altar; [or] the temple, for the temple, as the temple; or Jerusalem, for Jerusalem, as Jerusalem, — in all these cases, [if he says,] 'what I might eat of yours,' he is forbidden; 'what I might not eat of yours,' he is permitted.

Now which Tanna do we know draws no distinction between a lamb, for a lamb and as a lamb? — R. Meir.¹¹ Then consider the second clause: and in all these cases, [if he says], 'that which I might not eat of yours [be so],' he is permitted. But we learnt: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'That which I might not eat of yours be not for korban, R. Meir forbids [him]. Now R. Abba commented thereon: It is as though he said, 'Let it [i.e., your food] be for korban, therefore I may not eat of yours'? — This is no difficulty: in the one case he said, 'lo le-imra';¹² in the other he said, 'le-imra'.¹³ MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS [TO HIS NEIGHBOUR], 'THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE KORBAN', [OR] 'A BURNT-OFFERING',¹⁴ [OR] 'A MEAL-OFFERING', [OR] 'A SIN-OFFERING [OR] 'A THANKSGIVING-OFFERING',

[OR]’ A PEACE-OFFERING, — HE IS FORBIDDEN.¹⁵ R. JUDAH PERMITTED [HIM].¹⁶ [IF HE SAYS,] ‘THE KORBAN,’ [OR] ‘AS A KORBAN,’ [OR]’ KORBAN,¹⁷ BE THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,’ HE IS FORBIDDEN.¹⁸ IF HE SAYS: THAT WHICH I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE FOR A KORBAN,’¹⁹ R. MEIR FORBIDS [HIM].

GEMARA. Now, the Mishnah teaches, [IF HE SAYS.] ‘THE KORBAN,’ [OR] ‘AS KORBAN,’ [OR] ‘A KORBAN BE THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,’ HE IS FORBIDDEN. Thus, it is anonymously taught as R. Meir, who recognises no distinction between ‘it sheep’ and ‘for a sheep’.²⁰ But if so, then as to what he [the Tanna] teaches: ‘THE KORBAN . . . [BE] THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,’ HE IS FORBIDDEN. But it was taught: The Sages concede to R. Judah that if one says, ‘Oh, korban,’ or ‘Oh, burnt-offering,’ ‘Oh, meal-offering,’ ‘Oh, sin-offering, what I will eat this of thine,’ he is permitted, because he merely vowed by the life of the korban!²¹ —

- (1) Whether the reference is to its present (permitted) state or to its original (forbidden) condition.
 - (2) Num. XXX, 3.
 - (3) What is his reason?
 - (4) This will not apply to all Divinely forbidden things, but only to such as the firstling, as the Talmud proceeds to explain.
 - (5) That the vow is valid.
 - (6) Lit., ‘seizes’.
 - (7) Though one cannot offer these as vows, without having incurred the obligation, the actual animal is forbidden as a result of the vow of consecration, since another could equally well have been sacrificed.
 - (8) How will he meet this argument?
 - (9) Deut. XV, 19. Thus, though Divinely consecrated, yet its owner must formally declare it holy, and hence it may be regarded as subject to a vow.
 - (10) Of course it is! Hence its interdict is not the result of a vow.
 - (11) Since R. Judah rules that if one says Jerusalem, without ‘for’ or ‘as’, the vow is invalid.
 - (12) ‘Let it not be for the lamb’ — hence it is permitted. [So cur. edd. MS.M. and Ran read: In one case he said la’-imra; ‘let it not be the lamb’. V. supra. p. 28, n. 8.]
 - (13) ‘Let it be for the lamb’ — there he is forbidden.
 - (14) [The two may also be taken together and thus rendered ‘a sacrifice of a burnt-offering’.]
 - (15) To eat aright of his neighbour's.
 - (16) Because he did not say, ‘as a sacrifice’, etc.
 - (17) In this last case korban is used as an oath: I swear by the sacrifice to eat naught of thine.
 - (18) Vowing by means of korban formula was a specifically Jewish practice: v. Josephus, Contra Apionem, 1, 𐤀𐤓𐤁 22, Halevy, Doroth I, 3, pp. 314 f.
 - (19) In the Gemara these words are subsequently otherwise interpreted, but in the promise they are thus translated.
 - (20) V. supra p. 33, n. 6.
 - (21) That he would eat. Then why not assume the same in our Mishnah?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 13b

This is no difficulty: Here he said ha korban,¹ there he said ha-korban.² What is the reason?³ He meant, ‘[I swear] by the life of the sacrifice.’⁴ He [the Tanna] teaches: THAT WHICH I MIGHT

NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT FOR KORBAN, R. MEIR FORBIDS HIM. But R. Meir does not rule that the positive may be inferred from the negative?⁵ R. Abba answered: it is as though he said: 'Let it be for korban, therefore I will not eat of yours'.⁶

MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'KONAM BE MY MOUTH SPEAKING WITH YOU,' [OR] 'MY HANDS WORKING FOR YOU,' [OR] 'MY FEET WALKING WITH YOU,' HE IS FORBIDDEN.⁷

GEMARA. But a contradiction is shown: There is greater stringency in oaths than in vows, and greater stringency in vows than in oaths. There is greater stringency in vows, for vows apply to obligatory as to optional matters,⁸ which is not so in the case of oaths.⁹ And there is greater stringency in oaths, for oaths are valid with respect to things both abstract and concrete, but vows are not so?¹⁰ — Said Rab Judah: It means that he says,¹¹ 'let my mouth be forbidden in respect of my speech,' or 'my hands in respect of their work', or 'my feet in respect of their walking'.¹² This may be inferred too, for he [the Tanna] teaches: 'MY MOUTH SPEAKING WITH YOU,' not, ['konam] if I speak with you'.¹³

MISHNAH. NOW THESE ARE PERMITTED:¹⁴ [HE WHO SAYS,] WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE HULLIN,' 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE, AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP,'¹⁵ 'AS PERFORATED HIDES,'¹⁶ 'AS NEBELOTH AND TEREFOTH',¹⁷ 'AS ABOMINATIONS AND REPTILES, AS AARON'S DOUGH OR HIS TERUMAH',¹⁸ — [IN ALL THESE CASES] HE IS PERMITTED. IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER,'¹⁹ HE MUST BE GIVEN AN OPENING ON OTHER GROUNDS,²⁰ IN ORDER THAT HE SHOULD NOT ACT FRIVOLOUSLY IN SUCH MATTERS.²¹

GEMARA. Now, the reason is because he said, 'WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE HULLIN'; but if he said, 'What I might eat of yours be lehullin,' it would imply: let it not be hullin but a korban.²² Whose view is taught in our Mishnah? If R. Meir's, but he does not hold

(1) The ha being a separate word, and thus an interjection expressing an affirmative oath — I will eat. [The vowel of the ha as interjection is, in addition, of a longer quality than that of ha as definite article.]

(2) Here the ha is an inseparable def. art.; hence he must have meant, 'What I might eat of yours he a sacrifice', and therefore he is forbidden.

(3) Of the Baraitha, that he is permitted.

(4) That I will eat of yours.

(5) And according to our premise the reason for R. Meir's ruling is that we deduce the opposite from his words, thus: 'but that which I might eat of thine be for korban'.

(6) V. p. 28, n. 8.

(7) According to the terms of his vow.

(8) I.e., if one said, 'I am forbidden by a vow to erect a sukkah (v. Glos.), or put on tefillin', (v. Glos.) the vow is binding, although he is bound to do these things. and if he does them, he violates the injunction he shall not break his word.

- (9) I.e., if he said, 'I swear not to erect a sukkah, his oath is invalid.
- (10) Vows being applicable to concrete things only. Walking, talking and working are regarded here as abstractions (by contrast with the vow that a loaf of bread etc shall be as a sacrifice and forbidden), yet the Mishnah states that the vows are valid.
- (11) I.e., it is regarded as though he says.
- (12) The reason for this assumption is this: the konam of the Mishnah may refer either to my mouth (concrete) or to my talking (abstract). In the former case the vow would be valid, but not in the latter. Since it is not clear which, we adopt the more rigorous interpretation.
- (13) In which case the speaking would be the object of the vow: the speaking being abstract, the vow would be invalid.
- (14) I.e., invalid.
- (15) Lit., 'as the worship of stars'.
- (16) The hide was perforated opposite the heart, which was cut out from the living animal and offered to the idol. Cf. 'A.Z. 29b and 32a.
- (17) V. Glos. s.v. nebelah (pl. nebeloth) and terefoth (pl. terefoth).
- (18) V. supra 12a, a.l.
- (19) I.e., forbidden.
- (20) Lit., 'from another place'. I.e., when he wishes his vow to be annulled, the Rabbi, who must find for him some grounds of regret to invalidate his vow, must not do so by pointing out that such a vow is derogatory to his mother's dignity.
- (21) His mother's honour is too easy a ground for regret, and if the vow is invalidated on that score it is an encouragement to make such vows lightly, since they can easily be annulled. The making of vows was discouraged: cf. 9a.
- (22) And the vow would be binding.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 14a

that the positive may be inferred from the negative? But if R. Judah's, it is identical with the earlier Mishnah?¹ — Because he [the Tanna] teaches, 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE, AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP,' he teaches hullin too.² Rabina said: This is what he teaches: NOW THESE ARE PERMITTED as [if he said WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE] HULLIN, VIZ., [IF ONE SAYS,] 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP'; and if HULLIN were not stated, I would have thought that absolution³ is required But could I possibly think so? Since the last clause teaches: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER,' HE MUST BE GIVEN AN OPENING ON OTHER GROUNDS, it follows that in the first cause absolution is unnecessary? But it is clear that HULLIN is mentioned incidentally.

Whence do we know it?⁴ — Scripture states, If a man vow a vow unto the Lord:⁵ This teaches that one must vow by what is [itself] forbidden through a vow.⁶ If so, even [if one vows] by a [Divinely] interdicted object too, since it is written, to bind his soul with a bond?⁷ — That is necessary for what was taught: Which is the bond referred to in the Torah etc.⁸

HE WHO SAYS TO HIS WIFE, BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER', etc. But a contradiction is shewn: If one says to his wife, 'Behold! thou art unto me as the flesh of my mother, as the flesh of my sister, as 'orlah,⁹ as kil'ayim¹⁰ of the vineyard, his words are of no effect.¹¹ — Said Abaye: His words are of no effect by Biblical law, yet absolution is required by Rabbinical law. Raba answered: One refers to a scholar; the other refers to an 'am haarez.¹² And it was taught even so: If one vows by the Torah,¹³ his words are of no effect. Yet R. Johanan commented: He must retract [his vow] before a Sage; while R. Nahman observed: A scholar does not need absolution.

(1) Supra 10b.

(2) I.e., hullin is unnecessary in itself, but mentioned merely for the sake of completeness.

(3) Lit., 'a request' (for revocation).

(4) That these vows are not binding.

(5) Num. XXX, 3.

(6) Translating: if a man vow by referring to a vow.

(7) Ibid. This may also be interpreted: to bind his soul by that which is already a bond, vis. something Divinely interdicted.

(8) V. supra 12a.

(9) V. Glos.

(10) V. Glos. Deut. XXII, 9.

(11) Because all these objects are forbidden by the Law.

(12) Lit., 'people of the earth' — an ignoramus. v. J.E. s.v. In the first case the vow is entirely invalid; but an ignoramus will treat vows too lightly if shewn leniency, and therefore needs absolution.

(13) (E.g., 'I vow by the Torah not to eat of this loaf' — in reality a kind of oath. V. infra (Ran).]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 14b

It was taught: If one vows by the Torah, his words are of no effect; by what is written therein, his vow is binding; by it and by what is written therein, his vow is binding. Since he states, 'by what is written therein, his vow is binding,' is it necessary to mention, 'by it and by what is written therein?' — R. Nahman answered: There is no difficulty: one means that a Torah is lying on the ground; the other, that [the vower] holds a Torah in his hand. If it is lying on the ground, his thoughts are of the parchment; if he holds it in his hand, his thoughts are of the Divine Names therein.¹ Alternatively, [both clauses mean] that it is lying on the ground, and we are informed this: even when it is lying on the ground, since he vows, 'by what is written therein,' his vow is valid;² and an anti-climax is taught.³ A further alternative: the whole [Baraita] indeed means that he holds it in his hand, and we are informed this:⁴ Since he holds it in his hand, even if he merely says 'by it,' it is as though he said, 'by what is written therein'.⁵

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM IF I SLEEP', 'IF I SPEAK', OR 'IF I WALK';⁶ OR IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'KONAM IF I COHABIT WITH YOU,' HE IS LIABLE TO [THE INJUNCTION] HE SHALL NOT BREAK HIS WORD.⁷

GEMARA. It was stated: [If one says,] 'Konam be my eyes sleeping to-day, if I sleep to-morrow' — Rab Judah said in Rab's name: He must not sleep that day, lest he sleep on the morrow. But R. Nahman said: He may sleep on that day, and we do not fear that he may sleep on the morrow. Yet Rab Judah agrees that if one says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping tomorrow, If I sleep to-day,' he may sleep that day;

- (1) The Heb. bamah shekathuw bah may mean either, by what is written therein, or, by that whereon it (the Law) is written. Now if the Scroll is lying on the ground, and one says, 'bamah shekathuw bah', we assume that he thought that it was a mere scroll not written upon, since it had been irreverently placed on the ground, and his words refer to the actual parchment, unless he says 'bah ubamah shekathuw bah', which can only mean by the scroll and by what is written therein. A reference to the parchment is invalid; to the Divine Names, is binding.
- (2) I.e. we assume the Heb. bamah shekathuw bah to bear that meaning, not, 'by that whereon it is written'.
- (3) In the clause: 'By it and by what is written therein.' Lit., 'this, and the other goes without saying'.
- (4) Bah. [Cur. ed.: 'the whole also, the middle clause etc.'. Ran: 'the final clause informs us this'. All of which shows the text is in disorder. An attempt may be made to restore the text on the basis of MS.M. and Ran: 'The first clause (refers to the case) where it lies on the ground (MS.M.), the final clause (Ran) where he holds it in his hand (MS.M.). Such a text is also implied in the Ran on the passage.]
- (5) I.e., bah u-bamah shekathuw bah are now translated 'by it or by what is written therein', the copulative sometimes meaning or. The text is not quite clear, that of the Ran has been adopted as giving the most plausible rendering.
- (6) I.e., I am forbidden by a vow to sleep, etc. [Lit., 'konam be that which I sleep'. V. Laible, MGWJ. 1916, pp. 29ff'.]
- (7) Num. XXX, 3.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 15a

a person may be lax with respect to a condition, but he is observant of an actual prohibition.¹ We learnt: [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM IF I SLEEP, IF I WALK, IF I SPEAK, etc. How is it meant? If literally, 'if I sleep,' is such a vow valid? But it was taught: There is greater stringency in oaths than in vows, for oaths are valid with respect to things both abstract and concrete, but vows are not so; and sleep is an abstract thing! But if he said, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping,'² then, if he states no time-limit, is he permitted to go on until he violates the injunction, he shall not break his word?' But R. Johanan said: [If one says,] 'I swear not to sleep for three days', he is flagellated and may sleep immediately.³ But if it means that he says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping tomorrow, if I sleep to-day'⁴ — surely you say that a person is observant in respect of an actual prohibition?⁵ Hence it is obvious that he says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping to-day, if I sleep tomorrow. Now, if he did not sleep that first day, how can the injunction, he shall not break his word⁶ apply, even if he slept on the second? Hence it surely means that he did sleep, thus proving that he is permitted to do so. This refutes Rab Judah! When is this stated? If he happened to sleep on the first day.⁷ Rabina said: After all, it is as taught,⁸ yet how can he shall not break his word apply? — By Rabbinical law.⁹ But can the Biblical injunction apply by Rabbinical law?¹⁰ — Yes. Even as it was taught: Things which are permitted, yet some treat them as forbidden, you must not permit them in their presence, because it is written, he shall not break his word.¹¹

We learnt: [If one says to his wife, 'Konam be] that which you benefit from me until Passover, if you go to your father's house until the Festival',¹² if she went before Passover, she may not benefit from him until Passover. Now, only if she went before Passover is she forbidden, but not otherwise?¹³ — R. Abba answered: If she went before Passover, she is forbidden and is flagellated;¹⁴ If she did not go, she is merely forbidden. Then consider the second clause: After Passover, she is subject to he shall not break his word. Now if she did not benefit before Passover, how can the injunction apply? Hence it is obvious that she did benefit, which proves that this is permitted,

- (1) Thus, where the second day is merely a condition for the first, we fear that even after having slept on the first, he may do so on the second too, but where the second day is the subject of the actual vow, we do not fear that having slept on the first he will disregard the prohibition of the second.
 - (2) Since the konam falls upon the eyes, the vow is valid, eyes being concrete.
 - (3) Because it is impossible to keep awake three consecutive days. Therefore his oath is inherently vain (v. Shebu. 25a); hence he is punished, and the oath is invalid.
 - (4) It cannot mean that he simply said, ‘konam be my eyes sleeping to-day’, as in that case it is obvious; hence the stipulation must be assumed, and the meaning of the Mishnah will be that he must take heed not to sleep on the first day, lest he sleep on the second too, and thereby violate the injunction, for on any other meaning the Mishnah is superfluous.
 - (5) So there is no reason for refraining from sleeping that day, since he will observe his oath on the next.
 - (6) Num. XXX, 3.
 - (7) Despite the prohibition for which very reason he may not sleep on the first.
 - (8) Literally, viz., ‘konam if I sleep’.
 - (9) Though by Biblical law the vow is invalid, since sleep is abstract, the Rabbis declared it binding, and therefore the injunction holds good.
 - (10) Lit., ‘is there (the transgression) he shall not break in a Rabbinic (law)’.
 - (11) When one is accustomed to treat a thing as forbidden, it is as though it were subject to a vow. Thus, though the prohibitive force of custom is Rabbinical only, the Biblical injunction applies to it.
 - (12) ‘The Festival’, without any further determinant, always refers to Tabernacles, six months after Passover.
 - (13) Though the condition extends to Tabernacles, we do not fear that she may yet violate it after Passover: this refutes Rab Judah.
 - (14) If she benefits from him.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 15b

thus refuting Rab Judah! — [No.] That Mishnah teaches that if she benefited, she is involved in, ‘he shall not break his word’.

We learnt: [If one says to his wife, ‘Konam be] that which you benefit from me until the Festival, if you go to your father's house before Passover’: if she goes before Passover, she may not benefit from him until the Festival, but is permitted to go after Passover. [Thus,] if she goes, she is forbidden, but not otherwise?¹ — Raba answered: The same law applies that even without going she is forbidden. But if she goes, she is forbidden [to benefit], and receives lashes [if she does]; if she does not go, she is merely forbidden.

An objection is raised: [If he says,] ‘This loaf [of bread be forbidden] to me to-day, if I go to such and such a place to-morrow: if he eats it, he is liable to an injunction, ‘he shall not go’!² — Does he [the Tanna] teach: he may eat it — [surely] he teaches, ‘if he eats it’ so that if he eats it he is under the injunction not to go.³ [The Baraita continues:] If he goes, he violates the injunction, he shall not break his word.⁴ But there is no [clause] teaching that he goes [on the second day]: this contradicts Rab Judah!⁵ — R. Judah answers you: In truth, he could teach, he goes: but since the first clause teaches, ‘if he eats’, not being able to teach.’he eats’.⁶ the second clause too teaches, ‘if he goes

IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, KONAM IF I COHABIT WITH YOU.’ HE IS LIABLE TO [THE INJUNCTION,] HE SHALL NOT BREAK HIS WORD. But he is obligated to her by Biblical law, as it is written, her food, her raiment, and her marriage rights he shall not diminish?⁷ — It means that he vows, ‘The pleasure of cohabitation with you be forbidden me’: thus he surely denies himself the enjoyment of cohabitation.⁸ For R. Kahana said: [If a woman says to her husband,] ‘Cohabitation with me be forbidden to you,’ she is compelled to grant it, since she is under an obligation to him. [But if she says,] ‘The pleasure of cohabitation with you be forbidden me,’ he is forbidden [to cohabit]. Since one may not be fed with what is prohibited to him.⁹

MISHNAH. [IF HE SAYS,] ‘[I SWEAR] AN OATH NOT TO SLEEP, OR, ‘TALK,’ OR, ‘WALK,’ HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO DO SO]. [IF HE SAYS,] ‘A KORBAN BE WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS,’¹⁰ [OR] ‘OH KORBAN! IF I EAT OF YOURS,’ [OR] ‘WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT A KORBAN UNTO ME,’ HE IS PERMITTED [TO EAT OF HIS NEIGHBOURS’].

- (1) Though by going any time before Passover, subsequent to having benefited from her husband, the vow is violated. This contradicts Rab Judah.
 - (2) This too refutes Rab Judah, since he may eat the loaf on the first day.
 - (3) But actually this is forbidden.
 - (4) Num. XXX, 3.
 - (5) For if he may not eat the loaf on the first day. the Baraita should teach such a clause on the assumption that he did not eat it.
 - (6) For it cannot be taught that he may eat — this being Rab Judah's opinion.
 - (7) Ex. XXI, 10. How then can he free himself by a vow?
 - (8) Hence his vow is valid, since it falls primarily upon himself.
 - (9) So here too. Where the husband or wife make a vow, depriving the other of his or her rights, it is invalid. But if the vow deprives its maker from the enjoyment of his or her privileges, it is valid, though the other is affected thereby too.
 - (10) An alternative is: ‘By the sacrifice (i.e., I swear by the sacrifice) I will not eat of yours.’ [On this interpretation, the declaration is a form of oath taken by the life of the korban which is not binding. V. supra 13a, (Ran).]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 16a

GEMARA. Whose view is taught in our Mishnah? — R. Meir's; for if R. Judah's, he recognises no distinction between a korban and Oh, korban.¹ Then consider the latter clause [IF HE SAYS,]. ‘WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT A KORBAN UNTO ME,’ HE IS PERMITTED. But we learnt: [If one says,] ‘That which I might not eat of yours be not for a korban unto me’: R. Meir forbids [him]. And R. Abba observed thereon: It is as though he said, ‘let it [i.e., your food] be for a korban, therefore I may not eat of yours.’² — There is no difficulty: in the latter case he said, ‘le-korban’ [for a korban]; but here [in our Mishnah] he said,

'la'-korban,³ which means: let it not be a korban. MISHNAH. [IF HE SAYS, 'I TAKE] AN OATH [THAT] I WILL NOT EAT OF YOURS,' [OR] 'OH OATH THAT⁴ I EAT OF YOURS,' [OR 'I TAKE] NO OATH [THAT] I WILL NOT EAT OF YOURS,'⁵ HE IS FORBIDDEN.

GEMARA. This proves that 'Oh oath that I eat of yours implies that I will not eat. Now this contradicts the following: Oaths are of two categories, which are extended to four, viz., '[I swear] that I will eat,' 'that I will not eat,' 'that I have eaten,' 'that I have not eaten'.⁶ Now, since he enumerates, 'that I will eat,' 'that I will not eat,' 'that I have eaten.' 'that I have not eaten, it follows that [the phrase,] 'that I eat of yours' implies, 'I will eat'? — Abaye answered: 'That I eat' has two meanings. If one was being urged to eat, and he replied: 'I will eat, I will eat, moreover. [I take] an oath that I eat,' it implies, 'I will eat.' But if he said, 'I will not eat, I will not eat,' and then added: '[I take] an oath that I eat,' it implies, 'I will not eat'.⁷ R. Ashi answered: 'That I eat,' in connection with an oath,⁸ really means that he [actually] said, 'I will not eat'.⁹ If so, it is obvious: why state it? — I might think it is a mispronunciation¹⁰ which caused him to stumble;¹¹ we are therefore taught [otherwise]. Abaye does not give R. Ashi's reason, because it is not stated, 'That I will not eat.' R. Ashi rejects Abaye's interpretation: he holds, 'that I will not eat' may also bear two meanings. [Thus:-] if one was being urged to eat, and he said, 'I will not eat, I will not eat, and then added, 'I [swear by] an oath', whether [he concluded] 'that I eat,' or, 'that I do not eat,' it implies, 'I will eat'. While the language, 'An oath that I will not eat,' may also be explained as meaning, 'I swear [indeed] that I will not eat.'¹² But the Tanna¹³ states a general rule: she-'okel [always] means that I will eat, and she-lo 'okel, that I will not eat.¹⁴ MISHNAH. IN THESE INSTANCES OATHS ARE MORE RIGOROUS THAN VOWS.¹⁵ YET THERE IS [ALSO] GREATER STRINGENCY IN VOWS THAN IN OATHS. E.G., IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM BE THE SUKKAH THAT I MAKE,' OR, 'THE LULAB THAT I TAKE, OR, THE TEFILLIN¹⁶ THAT I PUT ON:' [WHEN EXPRESSED] AS VOWS THEY ARE BINDING, BUT AS OATHS THEY ARE NOT, BECAUSE ONE CANNOT SWEAR TO TRANSGRESS THE PRECEPTS.

(1) This is argued from the fact the Mishnah does not include the form 'korban be what I might eat of yours', as permissible, as it does in the case of 'Oh, korban', which could be included according to R. Judah's opinion that the particle 'as' is necessary to render the oath binding, v. supra.

(2) Then why not assume the same here?

(3) So Ran. cur. edd. lo le-korban.

(4) V. Gemara.

(5) This even according to R. Meir, for the Talmud states (Shebu'oth 36a) that R. Meir holds that the positive may be inferred from the negative in oaths.

(6) The two categories are affirmative and negative oaths referring to the future, which are extended to include similar oaths in the past.

(7) The Heb. then means: 'I swear in this matter of eating' — viz., that I will not eat. [The whole turns on the meaning attached to kfuta. The particle a may denote 'that' or 'if' (or 'that which'). In the first instance, the circumstance favours the former interpretation: 'An oath that I eat', i.e., 'I swear that I eat'. In the latter, he probably meant: 'An oath if (or that which) I eat, i.e., 'I swear not to eat', (or, 'By oath be forbidden that which I eat); cf. Shebu. 19b.]

(8) I.e., the Mishnah, when employing this phrase in connection with oaths.

(9) I.e., the Mishnah merely indicates that his oath bore reference to eating, but actually it was a negative one.

(10) Lit 'a twisting of the tongue'.

(11) Saying she-i-'okel instead of she-'okel, the difference in Hebrew being very slight. — This answer, as well as the discussion supra et passim on le-korban and lo korban, implies that the vows and oaths, as hypothetically posited in the Mishnah, were actually taken in Hebrew, not in another language. Thus Hebrew was generally spoken when the Mishnah was composed, and the Hebrew employed in the Mishnah would appear a natural, not an artificial language. V. M.H. Segal, Mishnaic Hebrew Grammar, Introduction.

(12) The text is not quite clear, but the general meaning appears to be this: When he says, 'lo akilna, lo akilna (I will not eat),' he may mean it positively, 'I will certainly not eat'; when he further adds, 'I swear that I will eat (she-'okel)' or 'that I will not eat' he is strengthening his first statement, for 'I swear that I will eat (she-'ohel)' may mean, 'I swear in respect of this matter of eating'. On the other hand, his first words may mean, 'I will not eat'? — of course I will! Hence the subsequent oath confirms this, for 'I swear that I will not eat (she-lo 'okel)' may mean, 'An oath may be imposed upon what I will not eat, but not upon what I will eat.' Hence, if Abaye's explanation is correct, that the Tanna teaches that she-'okel may imply a negative, he should also teach that she-lo 'okel may imply an affirmative. [MS.M. preserves a better reading: . . . , if one was being urged to eat . . . whether (he concluded) 'that I eat' or 'that I do not eat' he means 'I shall not eat', while the language 'An oath that I will not eat' may be explained 'An oath that I do eat'. The meaning is thus clearer: When he first says 'I will not eat', his subsequent statement, whatever it is, will, on Abaye's explanation, be taken as confirming the first: If it is 'An oath that I eat' the particle א (v. supra p. 43. n. 4) denotes 'if' or ('that which') and he means 'I swear I eat'; if it is 'An oath that I do not eat' the particle is simply taken in the sense of 'that'. And thus similarly on Abaye's view, the phrase 'that I do not eat' could also be explained in a positive sense: 'I swear. . . if I do not eat', viz., where it was preceded by the statement 'I will eat'. This however, is impossible, in view of the Mishnah in Shebu'oth, which draws a distinction between 'that I will eat' and 'that I will not eat' and not between the circumstances that produced the oath.]

(13) Of the Mishnah in Shebu'oth.

(14) Disregarding the special cases where the general tenor of a person's speech or the inflection of his voice reverses the literal meaning of his oath.

(15) Since the Mishnah (15b) states that a vow in these terms is not binding.

(16) V. Glos. for these words.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 16b

GEMARA. MORE RIGOROUS? That implies that they are [valid] vows;¹ but it is taught, He is permitted?² — This is taught in reference to the second clause of the other section: [viz.,] [If one says,] ['I swear] on oath not to sleep,' or, 'talk,' or 'walk,' he is forbidden [to do so]: IN THESE INSTANCES OATHS ARE MORE RIGOROUS THAN vows.³

YET THERE IS GREATER STRINGENCY IN VOWS THAN IN OATHS etc. R. Kahana recited, R. Giddal said in Rab's name, and R. Tabyomi recited, R. Giddal said in Samuel's name: Whence do we know that one cannot swear [a valid oath] to violate the precepts? Front the verse, When a man . . . swear an oath . . . he shall not break his word,⁴ [this implies,] he may not break his word,⁵ but he must break a word [i.e., an oath] in respect of Heavenly matters.⁶ Now, why are vows different: because it is written, When a man vow a vow unto the Lord . . . he shall not break his word?⁷ But [of] oaths too it is written, or swear an oath unto the Lord he shall not break his word?⁸ — Abaye answered: In that case [vows] one says: 'The pleasure of the sukkah be forbidden me';⁹ but in this case [oaths] one says; 'I swear that I shall not benefit from the sukkah'.¹⁰ Raba objected: Were the precepts then given for enjoyment?¹¹ But Raba answered: There [in the case of vows] one says, 'The sitting in the sukkah be forbidden me';¹² but here [oaths] one says, 'I swear not to sit in the sukkah'.

Now, do we learn that one cannot swear to transgress the precepts from this verse: do we not rather deduce it from elsewhere? For it was taught: If one swears to annul a precept, and does not, I might think that he is liable,¹³

(1) Save that their binding character is not so rigid as that of oaths; but if not binding at all, the term is inapplicable.

(2) V. Mishnah 25b; that indicates that these vows are quite invalid.

(3) For as stated in the Mishnah on 14b, such vows are indeed binding, but as explained by Rabina (v. 15a), only by Rabbinical Law; whereas oaths of a similar nature are Biblically valid.

(4) Num. XXX, 3.

(5) I.e., when it refers to human, optional matters.

(6) I.e., when the subject of the vow is obligatory.

(7) Ibid. Implying that it is binding even when referring to Divine, non-optional matters. This is inferred by regarding unto (K) as meaning against: i.e., when a man vows contrary to the Lord's precepts.

(8) Ibid. Not actually; but as to the Lord immediately precedes or swear an oath, it may be regarded as referring to it.

(9) Hence it is binding, as one may not say that which he has vowed not to enjoy.

(10) I.e., the oath falls primarily upon the person. v. supra 2b; but one cannot free himself from a Biblical obligation.

(11) Technically speaking, one cannot be said to derive physical enjoyment from the fulfilment of a precept, and therefore a vow in these terms would not be binding. One's highest enjoyment should be in obedience to God's word. [Apart from its halachic implications, the object of this saying was to keep the ethical principle free from any admixture of the idea of utility V. Lazarus, M. Ethics of Judaism, I, p. 284.]

(12) Thus the vow falls upon the sukkah, which is rendered forbidden, and upon the person; therefore it is valid.

(13) For swearing falsely.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 17a

hence the Bible teaches, [or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips] to do evil, or to do good etc.:¹ just as doing good refers to something optional,² so doing evil refers [only] to something optional. This excludes one who swears to annul a precept, and did not annul it,³ because it is not optional! — One verse is to exempt him from the sacrifice due for [violating] an oath, and the other is to exempt him [from punishment⁴ for having violated] the injunction concerning an oath.

MISHNAH. A VOW WITHIN A VOW IS VALID,⁵ BUT NOT AN OATH WITHIN AN OATH. E.G., IF ONE DECLARES, 'BEHOLD, I WILL BE A NAZIR IF I EAT [THIS LOAF].' 'I WILL BE A NAZIR IF I EAT [THIS LOAF], AND THEN EATS [IT], HE IS LIABLE IN RESPECT OF EACH [VOW].⁶ BUT IF HE SAYS, 'I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF], 'I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF], AND THEN EATS [IT], HE IS LIABLE [TO PUNISHMENT] FOR ONE [OATH] ONLY.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. IF ONE WARNS¹ HIS WIFE [NOT TO ASSOCIATE WITH A CERTAIN MAN]. R. ELIEZER SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO WITNESSES,² AND MAKES HER DRINK [THE WATER OF BITTERNESS] ON THE TESTIMONY OF ONE WITNESS³ OR HIS PERSONAL TESTIMONY. R. JOSHUA SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO AND MAKES HER DRINK ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO.

HOW DOES HE WARN HER? IF HE SAYS TO HER IN THE PRESENCE OF TWO, DO NOT CONVERSE WITH THAT MAN, AND SHE CONVERSED WITH HIM, SHE IS STILL PERMITTED TO HER HUSBAND⁴ AND PERMITTED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING.⁵ SHOULD SHE HAVE ENTERED A PRIVATE PLACE WITH HIM AND STAYED WITH HIM A TIME SUFFICIENT FOR MISCONDUCT TO HAVE OCCURRED, SHE IS FORBIDDEN TO HER HUSBAND⁶ AND FORBIDDEN TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING. IF [HER HUSBAND] DIED,⁷ SHE PERFORMS THE CEREMONY OF HALIZAH⁸ BUT CANNOT CONTRACT A LEVIRATE MARRIAGE.

GEMARA. Now that the Tanna has finished [Tractate] Nazir, what is his reason for continuing with [Tractate] Sotah?⁹ — It is according to the view of Rabbi; for it has been taught: Rabbi says, Why does the section of the Nazirite adjoin that of the suspected woman?¹⁰ To tell you that whoever witnesses a suspected woman in her disgrace should withhold himself from wine.¹¹ But [the Tanna in the Mishnah] should treat of [Tractate] Sotah first and afterwards that of Nazir!¹² — Since he treated of [Tractate] Kethuboth [marriage-settlements] and dealt with the theme, 'He who imposes in vow upon his wife',¹³ he next treated of [Tractate] Nedarim [Vows]; and since he treated of [Tractate] Nedarim, he proceeded to treat of [Tractate] Nazir which is analogous to Nedarim,¹⁴ and then continues with Sotah for the reason given by Rabbi.

IF ONE WARNS HIS WIFE. As an accomplished fact¹⁵ it is allowable, but as something still to be done it is not. Consequently our Tanna holds that it is forbidden to give a warning.¹⁶

R. Samuel b. R. Isaac said: When Resh Lakish began to expound [the subject of] Sotah, he spoke thus: They only pair a woman with a man according to his deeds;¹⁷ as it is said: For the sceptre of wickedness shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous.¹⁸ Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in the name of R. Johanan: It is as difficult to pair them as was the division of the Red Sea; as it is said: God setteth the solitary in families: He bringeth out the prisoners into prosperity!¹⁹ But it is not so; for Rab Judah has said in the name of Rab: Forty days before the creation of a child, a Bath Kol²⁰ issues forth and proclaims, The daughter of A is for B;²¹ the house of C is for D; the field of E is for F! — There is no contradiction, the latter dictum referring to a first marriage and the former to a second marriage.

R. ELIEZER SAYS, HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO WITNESSES etc.

So far only do [R. Eliezer and R. Joshua] differ, viz. in the matter of warning and seclusion, but in the matter of misconduct [they agree] that one witness is believed.²² We similarly learn in the Mishnah: If one witness says: I saw that she committed misconduct, she does not drink the water.²³ Whence is it derived according to Torah-law that one witness is believed? As our Rabbis taught: And there be no witness against her²⁴ — the text refers to two witnesses.²⁵ But perhaps it is not so and even one [suffices]! There is a teaching to declare, One witness shall not rise up against a man.²⁶

- (1) Lit., 'is jealous of, i.e., he gives her a warning because he feels jealous.
 - (2) There must be two witnesses that he had warned her in their presence; otherwise he cannot require her to drink the water of bitterness.
 - (3) That she had secluded herself with the man, after due warning had been given.
 - (4) Lit., 'to her house'. Marital relations may continue.
 - (5) If her husband is a priest. The heave-offering could be eaten by any member of the priest's household who was ritually clean; Num. XVIII, 8ff.
 - (6) Forthwith, before the water is drunk.
 - (7) Before she had undergone the ordeal.
 - (8) V. Glos.
 - (9) What is the association of ideas between the subject of the Nazirite and the woman suspected of infidelity?
 - (10) In Num. V and VI.
 - (11) Immoderate use of wine is a source of immorality. v. Ber. 63a.
 - (12) That being the order in which they are dealt with in Scripture.
 - (13) The opening words of Keth. VII.
 - (14) A man becomes a nazirite by imposing a vow upon himself.
 - (15) This is derived from the addition of the definite article, the literal sense being: he who warns, i.e., he who has given a warning.
 - (16) Different views are taken on this question; v. p. 8.
 - (17) Only if his actions are righteous does he have a faithful wife.
 - (18) Ps. CXXV, 3.
 - (19) Ibid. LXVIII, 7. The first clause refers to marriage-making, the second to the release of prisoners. Therefore the two are declared identical as regards difficulty.
 - (20) V. Glos.
 - (21) Since the marriage is ordained even before birth, it cannot be dependent upon a man's conduct.
 - (22) [After due warning had been given and seclusion taken place]. And without drinking the water she leaves her husband's house and does not receive what would normally have been due to her under the marriage-contract.
 - (23) Infra 31a.
 - (24) Num. V, 13.
 - (25) I.e., wherever Scripture uses the word witness, even in the singular, it denotes two.
 - (26) Deut. XIX, 15.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 2b

From the fact that it is stated: '[A] witness¹ shall not rise up against a man', do I not know that one is intended? Why is there a teaching to declare 'one witness'?² This establishes the rule that wherever it is stated 'witness', it signifies two unless the text specifies 'one'; and [in the case under discussion] the All-Merciful declares that when there are not two witnesses against her but only one, and she has not been violated,³ she is forbidden [to her husband].⁴ Now the reason for that⁵ is because it is written: One witness shall not rise up against a man. Were it however not so [stated], I might have supposed that ‘witness’ in the verse relating to a suspected woman means one.⁶ But if there be not even one witness against her, why should she then be prohibited [to her husband]? — [The verse: One witness etc.] is necessary, because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that ‘there be no witness against her’ means, he is not believed against her. He is not believed against her! What, then, [does the text] want unless there are two witnesses?⁷ Let the Scriptural text be silent on the point [and not mention it at all], since the rule could have been deduced by analogy from the occurrence of the word *dabar*⁸ in the verse relating to civil actions, and I would know that it applies to every case of testimony mentioned in the Torah! — It was necessary [for Scripture to have mentioned it], because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that the matter is different in the case of a suspected woman inasmuch as there was some basis for the charge, seeing that he had warned her and she had been secluded [with the man]; consequently one witness should be believed against her. But how is it possible to say [that if the Torah had not specified that ‘witness’ always means two, I might have supposed that the intention of ‘there be no witness against her’ was] that he is not believed against her and she is permitted to her husband? Surely from what is written: ‘and she had not been violated’,⁹ it is implied that she is forbidden to him! It was necessary [for Scripture to have mentioned this], because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that [the evidence against her] is not believed unless there are two witnesses,¹⁰ and [that the verse means] that she had not been violated on the evidence of two witnesses. We are consequently taught [that one witness is believed].

R. JOSHUA SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO etc. What is R. Joshua's reason? Scripture states ‘against her’ — I.e., ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct]¹¹ but not in the matter of warning, ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion. R. Eliezer, [on the other hand] says: ‘Against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning only. Perhaps, however, ‘against her’ does mean, and not in the matter of seclusion! — Seclusion is compared to ‘defilement’ [misconduct], for it is written, and he kept close and she be defiled.¹² But warning also is compared to ‘defilement’, for it is written, and he be jealous of his wife and she be defiled!¹³ — The All-Merciful excluded this by the phrase ‘against her’.¹⁴ But what leads you to this conclusion?¹⁵ — It is obvious that seclusion is more serious [than warning] because she is forthwith prohibited to her husband as with ‘defilement’. On the contrary, warning is more serious since it is the root cause [of her seclusion rendering her forbidden to her husband]!¹⁶ — If there was no seclusion, would there have been any warning?¹⁷ But if there was no warning, what effect would seclusion have? — Nevertheless seclusion is the more serious since it is the beginning of ‘defilement’.

Our Mishnah does not agree with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: R. Jose son of R. Judah says in the name of R. Eliezer: He who warns his wife does so on the testimony of one witness or his personal testimony, and makes her drink [the water of bitterness] on the testimony of two witnesses. The Sages replied: According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter.¹⁸ What is the reason of R. Jose son of R. Judah? — Scripture states ‘against her’, i.e., ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion.

Perhaps, however, ‘against her’ means: and not in the matter of warning? — Warning is compared to ‘defilement’, for it is written, and he be jealous of his wife and she be defiled. But seclusion is also compared to ‘defilement’, for it is written, and he kept close and she be defiled? — That refers to a length of time sufficient for ‘defilement’ to have occurred.¹⁹

[It was stated above:] ‘The Sages replied: According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter’. What does this mean? — There may be times when he did not warn her and he claims that he did warn her.²⁰ Is there, then, according to our Mishnah any purpose in the matter, since there may be times when she had not been secluded with the man and the husband claims that she had been secluded?²¹ — R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan, [Read] also according to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter. ‘Also according to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah’ [you say]; is there, then, no question with respect to our Mishnah? On the contrary, according to our Mishnah there is foundation [for the charge], but in the other case [the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah] there may be no foundation!²² — But if the teaching is reported, it must be in this form: R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: ‘According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, and also according to our Mishnah, there is no purpose in the matter.’

R. Hanina of Sura said: Nowadays a man should not say to his wife, ‘Do not be secluded with So-and-so’, lest we decide according to R. Jose son of R. Judah who said: A warning [is effective] if given on [the husband's] personal testimony. If she then secluded herself with the man, since we have not now the water for a suspected woman to test her, the husband forbids her to himself for all time.

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the term kinnui?²³ A matter which causes hatred [Kin'ah] between her and others. Consequently he holds that the warning can be on [the husband's] personal testimony; and since not everybody knows that he gave her a warning and they say: ‘What has happened that she holds herself aloof?’ they will proceed to cause hatred against her. R. Jemar b. Shelemia said in the name of Abaye: [Kinnui means] a matter which causes hatred between husband and wife. Consequently he holds that the warning must be on the testimony of two witnesses and everybody is aware that he gave her a warning,²⁴ and it is he who proceeds to cause hatred against her.

(1) And not witnesses.

(2) The word one is superfluous if a single witness is intended, since it would have been sufficient to state a witness.

(3) But consented to the act. Num. V, 13. The English Version translates the verb she be not taken in the act; but the Rabbis understood it in the sense that she was not forced to misconduct and was a consenting party. Cf. the use of the same verb in Deut. XXII, 28. If she had been violated, she was exempt from the ordeal.

(4) Infra 31b. [This proves that in the matter of misconduct one witness is believed, as otherwise whence is it known that she was not violated?]

(5) For maintaining that the term witness’ in the case of the Sotah denotes two.

(6) ‘And there be no witness against her’ means not even one.

(7) What is the purpose of the words if the meaning of there be no witness indicates only one and that his evidence is not accepted?

(8) In connection with infidelity the text has he hath found some unseemly matter (dabar) in her (Deut. XXIV, 1), and in connection with civil actions At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall a matter (dabar) be established (ibid. XIX, 15). By the rule of Gezerah Shawah, analogy of expression, the principle of the latter with regard to the number of witnesses required is also applied to the former.

(9) Therefore it is maintained that misconduct has occurred with her consent.

(10) In a charge of misconduct.

(11) One witness is sufficient; but for warning and seclusion two are necessary.

(12) Num. V, 13.

(13) Ibid. 14.

(14) The phrase 'against her' was explained above as relating only to misconduct.

(15) That 'against her' excludes the idea that warning is to be compared to misconduct, and that only seclusion is to be likened to it.

(16) Without previous warning she would not be prohibited to her husband because of seclusion.

(17) There must have been seclusion to cause jealousy and consequently a warning.

(18) In requiring the husband's personal testimony, since, as the Gemara will explain, it may be false.

(19) So that if the time of seclusion was insufficient, she is not required to drink the water.

(20) So what purpose is there in requiring the husband's unsupported evidence?

(21) The Mishnah compels the woman to drink the water on the unsupported evidence of the husband.

(22) According to the Mishnah there must have been warning on the testimony of two witnesses, so there is some foundation for the charge; but according to R. Jose the husband can give her warning on his uncorroborated testimony which might be groundless.

(23) That is the term used in Num. V, 14, 'he be jealous'.

(24) Since the witnesses are likely to talk of it to others.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 3a

Conclude that they hold that it is forbidden to give a warning;¹ but according to him who says that it is permissible to give a warning, what is the meaning of Kinnui? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Kinnui means nothing but 'warning;' and thus Scripture states: Then the Lord warned [wa-yekna] his land.²

It has been taught: R. Meir used to say: If a person commits a transgression in secret, the Holy One, Blessed be He, proclaims it against him in public; as it is said: And the spirit of jealousy came upon him;³ and the verb 'abar [came upon] means nothing but 'proclaiming', as it is said: And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp.⁴ Resh Lakish said: A person does not commit a transgression unless a spirit of folly [shetuth] enters into him; as it is said: If any man's wife go aside.⁵ [The word is] written [so that it can be read] sishteh.⁶

The School of R. Ishmael taught: Why does the Torah believe one witness in the case of a suspected woman? Because there was some basis for the charge, seeing that he had warned her and she had secluded herself with the man, and one witness testifies that she had 'defiled' [misconducted] herself. R. Papa said to Abaye, But the warning is mentioned in the text after the seclusion and misconduct?⁷ — He replied to him, We'abar [means] there had already come upon him.⁸ But can that interpretation be also applied to, And every armed man of you will pass over?⁹

— In that passage, since it is written: And the land will be subdued before the Lord, then afterward ye shall return,¹⁰ it follows that the reference is to the future; but here, if it should enter your mind that we follow the order of the text [and we'abar signifies 'will come'], of what use is a warning after misconduct and seclusion had taken place?

The School of R. Ishmael taught: A man does not warn his wife unless a spirit¹¹ enters into him; as it is said: 'And the spirit of jealousy came upon him and he be jealous of his wife'. What is the meaning [of the word] 'spirit'? — The Rabbis declare, It is a spirit of impurity;¹² but R. Ashi declares, It is a spirit of purity.¹³ Reasonable is the view of him who declares that it is a spirit of purity, because it was taught: and he be jealous of his wife — this is voluntary¹⁴ in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. It is well if you say that it means a spirit of purity, then everything is right; but if you say that it means a spirit of impurity, is it voluntary or obligatory for a man to introduce a spirit of impurity into himself!

[To turn to] the main text: And he be jealous of his wife — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. For her he may defile himself¹⁵ — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever¹⁶ — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. R. Papa said to Abaye — others declare it was R. Mesharsheya who said to Raba: Is this to say that R. Ishmael and R. Akiba differ in this way throughout the Torah, one maintaining that [a precept] is voluntary and the other that it is obligatory? — He replied, They only differ here over texts: And he be jealous of his wife — it is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — He holds the same view as that of the following teacher. It has been taught: R. Eliezer b. Jacob says: Since the Torah declares, Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart,¹⁷ it is possible to think that this applies also in such a circumstance;¹⁸ therefore there is a text to say: And the spirit of jealousy came upon him and he be jealous of his wife.¹⁹ And [what is the reason of] R. Akiba? — The word 'jealous' occurs a second time in the verse.²⁰ And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the repetition of jealous]? — Since it was necessary to write, And she be defiled and afterwards and she be not defiled, the Torah wrote and he be jealous of his wife.²¹ This is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael; Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein. [Similarly] 'For her he may defile himself — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — Since it is written: Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron and say unto them, There shall none defile himself for the dead among his people,²² it was likewise necessary to write, For her he may defile himself. And [from where does] R. Akiba [learn that a priest may so defile himself]? — He derives it from, Except for his kin;²³ what then is the purpose of, For her he should defile himself? [It is to indicate that] it is obligatory. And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the addition of these words]? — 'For her' he may defile himself but not for any of her limbs.²⁴

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 3b

[What reply does] R. Akiba [make to this explanation]? — If that were the sole intention, the All-Merciful should have written 'for her' and then stop; what is the purpose of the words 'he should defile himself? Deduce therefrom.¹ [How does] R. Ishmael [meet this argument]? — Since the Torah wrote 'for her', it likewise wrote 'he may defile himself this is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael: Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein. [And similarly,]'Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever² — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — Since it is written: Thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth,³ it was likewise necessary to write, 'Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever', in order to indicate that if a man belonging to any other Gentile people has intercourse with a Canaanite woman⁴ and begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave. For it has been taught: Whence is it that if a man belonging to any other Gentile people has intercourse with a Canaanite woman and begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave? There is a text to declare, Moreover of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy.⁵ It is possible to think that also if a Canaanite had intercourse with a woman belonging to any other Gentile people and he begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave; therefore there is a text to declare, Which they have begotten in your land⁶ — from those born in your land⁷ and not from those who dwell in your land.⁸ And [from where does] R. Akiba [learn this rule]? — He derives it from, 'Of them shall ye buy'; what then is the purpose of, 'Of them ye shall take your bondmen for ever'? [It indicates that] it is obligatory. And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the addition of these words]? — ‘Of them’ [he may purchase] but not of your brethren. [From where does] R. Akiba [derive this rule]? — It is deduced from the mention of ‘your brethren’ at the end of the verse: But over your brethren the children of Israel ye shall not rule, one over another, with rigour.⁹ [How does] R. Ishmael [meet this argument]? — Since the Torah wrote ‘But over your brethren’, it likewise wrote ‘of them’. This is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael: Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein.

R. Hisda said: Immorality in a house is like a worm in the sesame plant. Further said R. Hisda: Anger in a house is like a worm in the sesame plant. Both these statements refer to a woman, but in the case of a man there is no objection.¹⁰ Further said R. Hisda, At first, before Israel sinned [against morality], the Shechinah abode with each individual; as it is said: For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp.¹¹ When they sinned, the Shechinah departed from them; as it is said: That he see no unclean thing in thee and turn away from thee.¹²

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Whoever performs one precept in this world, it precedes him for the world to come; as it is said: And thy righteousness shall go before thee;¹³ and whoever commits one transgression in this world, it clings to him and precedes him for the Day of Judgment, as it is said: The paths of their way are turned aside; they go up into the waste and perish.¹⁴ R. Eleazar says: It attaches itself to him like a dog; as it is said: He hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her¹⁵ — to lie by her in this world, or to be with her in the world to come.

We learn elsewhere: It is a proper conclusion that if the first evidence [that the woman had secluded herself with the man], which does not prohibit her [to her husband] for all time,¹⁶ is not established by fewer than two witnesses, is it not right that the final evidence [that she had misconducted herself] which prohibits her to him for all time, should not be established by fewer than two witnesses! Therefore there is a text to state, ‘And there be no witness against her’, [implying that], whatever [evidence] there may be against her [is believed, even if it be only one witness]. And with respect to the first evidence [about her seclusion with the man, that one witness suffices may be argued by] a fortiori reasoning as follows: If the final evidence [regarding misconduct], which prohibits her to her husband for all time, is established by one witness, is it not proper that the first evidence, which does not prohibit her to him for all time, should be established by one witness! Therefore there is a text to state, Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her,¹⁷ and elsewhere it states: At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses shall a matter be established;¹⁸ as the ‘matter’ mentioned in this latter case must be confirmed by the testimony of two witnesses, so also here [in the case of the suspected woman] the ‘matter’ must be confirmed by the testimony of two witnesses.¹⁹ Is this deduction to be drawn from the words, ‘Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her’? It ought to be derived from ‘against her’ — i.e., ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning, ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion!²⁰ — He also says similarly²¹ [and his teaching is to be cited as follows]: Therefore there is a text to state ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning, ‘against her’ [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion; and whence is it that merely in a case of misconduct, where there had been no warning or seclusion one witness is not believed? It is stated here, 'Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her', and elsewhere it states: 'At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall a matter be established'; as in the 'matter' mentioned in the latter case two witnesses are required, so also here [where there has been misconduct without warning and seclusion] two witnesses are required. Our Rabbis have taught: Which is the 'first testimony'? Evidence of seclusion, and the 'final testimony' is evidence of 'defilement' [misconduct].

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 4a

And how long is the duration in the matter of seclusion? Sufficient for misconduct, i.e., sufficient for coition, i.e., sufficient for sexual contact, i.e., sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm. Such is the view of R. Ishmael; R. Eliezer says: Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine;¹ R. Joshua says: Sufficient to drink it; Ben Azzai says: Sufficient to roast an egg; R. Akiba says: Sufficient to swallow it; R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Sufficient to swallow three eggs one after the other; R. Eleazar b. Jeremiah says: Sufficient for a weaver to knot a thread; Hanin b. Phineas says: Sufficient for a woman to extend her hand to her mouth to remove a chip of wood [from between the teeth]; Pelemo says: Sufficient for her to extend her hand to a basket and take a loaf therefrom. Although there is no proof for this [last opinion] there is an indication, viz., For on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread.² What is the purpose of all these definitions? — They are necessary; because if we were only taught sufficient for misconduct, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for her misconduct and her submission;³ therefore it is defined as sufficient for coition.⁴ If, however, it were only taught sufficient for coition, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for completed coition; therefore it is defined as sufficient for sexual contact. If, further, we had only been taught sufficient for sexual contact, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for sexual contact and her submission; therefore it is defined as sufficient for misconduct. And how much is the time sufficient for sexual contact? Sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm.

In contradiction of the above [I quote the following]: And be kept close⁵ — but how long is the duration in the matter of seclusion we have not heard. Since, however, it states ‘and she be defiled’, deduce that it is time sufficient for misconduct, i.e., sufficient for coition, i.e., sufficient for sexual contact, i.e., sufficient for a date-palm to rebound.⁶ Such is the view of R. Eliezer; R. Joshua says: Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine; Ben Azzai says: Sufficient to drink it; R. Akiba says: Sufficient to roast an egg; R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Sufficient to swallow it.⁷ Now it is assumed that walking round a date-palm and the rebound of a date-palm are identical [in length of time, and the question thus arises:] R. Ishmael said above, ‘Sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm’, and R. Eliezer disagreed with him; and here R. Eliezer says: ‘Sufficient for a date-palm to rebound’! — Abaye said: ‘Walking round’ means on foot, and ‘rebound’ means by the force of the wind. R. Ashi asked: How is ‘rebound’ to be understood? Does it mean that the palm is blown in one direction and then in its opposite, or perhaps that it is blown in one direction and then in its opposite and finally returns to its original position? — The question remains unanswered.

R. Eliezer said above: ‘Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient for a date-palm to rebound’! — They are alike in duration. R. Joshua said above, ‘Sufficient to drink it’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine’! — Say [that the correct version is], Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine and drinking it. But why not say rather that they are alike in duration? — If so, he would agree with R. Eliezer's view.⁸ Ben Azzai said above ‘Sufficient to roast an egg’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to drink [a cup of wine]’! — They are alike in duration. R. Akiba said above, ‘Sufficient to swallow [a roasted egg]’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to roast an egg’! — Say [that the correct version is], Sufficient to roast an egg and swallow it. But why not say rather that they are alike in duration? — If so, he would agree with Ben Azzai's view. R. Judah b. Bathyra said above, ‘Sufficient to swallow three eggs one after the other’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to swallow [one roasted egg]’! — He spoke in accordance with the view of R. Akiba who said that we fix as the duration a length of time sufficient to roast and swallow an egg, [and with reference to this he said,] ‘speak rather only of the duration of swallowing’, that is ‘sufficient time to swallow three eggs one after the other’, for that is the same as roasting and swallowing [one egg].⁹

‘R. Eleazar b. Jeremiah says: Sufficient for a weaver to knot a thread’. R. Ashi asked: Does this mean two ends which are distant or near?¹⁰ — The question remains unanswered.

‘Hanin b. Phineas said: Sufficient for a woman to extend her hand to her mouth to remove a chip of wood’. R. Ashi asked: Does this mean wedged tightly [between the teeth] or not? — The question remains unanswered.

‘Pelemo said: Sufficient for her to extend her hand to a basket and take a loaf therefrom’. R. Ashi asked: Is it [a loaf] which is wedged in tightly or not, a new or old [basket],¹¹ a hot or cold [loaf],¹²

(8) That cannot be, because he gives a different definition, and so it is impossible to think them alike in duration.

(9) [Why introduce at all the act of roasting, seeing that the act of swallowing by itself can afford a suitable standard for defining the duration?]

(10) I.e., does it include the time spent in bringing the threads together as well as tying them?

wheaten or of barley,¹ soft or hard-baked? — The question remains unanswered.

R. Isaac son of R. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: Each of the teachers defined the duration [of coition] from his own experience. But they included Ben Azzai who was unmarried! — If you wish I can say that he had married and separated [from his wife],² or that he had heard it from his master, or that The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him.³

R. ‘Awira expounded sometimes in the name of R. Ammi and at other times in the name of R. Assi: Whoever eats bread without previously washing the hands is as though he had intercourse with a harlot ; as it is said , For on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread.⁴ Raba said: [On that interpretation] the verse, ‘For on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread’ should have read: ‘On account of a loaf of bread, to a harlot’! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] Whoever has intercourse with a harlot will in the end go seeking a loaf of bread.

R. Zerika said in the name of R. Eleazar: Whoever makes light of washing the hands [before and after a meal] will be uprooted from the world. R. Hiyya b. Ashi said in the name of Rab: With the first washing [before the meal] it is necessary to lift the hands up; with the latter washing [after the meal] it is necessary to lower the hands . There is a similar teaching: Who washes his hands [before the meal] must lift them up lest the water pass beyond the joint,⁵ flow back and render them unclean. R. Abbahu says: Whoever eats bread without first wiping his hands is as though he eats unclean food; as it is stated: And the Lord said: Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their bread unclean.⁶

And⁷ what means, And the adulteress hunteth for the precious life? — R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end stumble through an [unfaithful] married woman; as it is said: ‘And the adulteress hunteth for the precious life’. Raba said: [On that interpretation] the word ‘precious’ should have been ‘haughty’! Furthermore the verse should have read, [The haughty soul] hunteth [the adulteress]! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] Whoever has intercourse with a married woman, even though he had studied Torah, of which it is written: It is more precious than rubies,⁸ i.e., above a High Priest who enters into the innermost part of the Sanctuary, she will hunt him to the judgment of Gehinnom.⁹ R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit is as though he worships idols; it is written here, Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord,¹⁰ and it is written elsewhere, Thou shalt not bring an abomination into thine house.¹¹ R. Johanan himself said: He is as though he had denied the fundamental principle;¹² as it is said: Thine heart be lifted up and thou forget the Lord thy God, etc.¹³ R. Hama b. Hanina said: He is as though he had broken all the laws of sexual morality;¹⁴ it is written here, Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord, and it is written elsewhere, For all these abominations, etc.¹⁵ ‘Ulla said: He is as though he had erected an idolatrous altar; as it is said: Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils;¹⁶ for wherein [bammeh] is he to be accounted of?¹⁷ — read not bammeh but bamah [an idolatrous altar].

What means, Hand to hand, he shall not escape punishment?¹⁸ Rab said: Whoever has intercourse with a married woman, though he proclaim the Holy One, blessed be He, to be Possessor of heaven and earth as did our father Abraham, of whom it is written: I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, God Most High, Possessor of heaven and earth,¹⁹ he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. The students of the School of R. Shila objected: [On that interpretation] the phrase ‘Hand to hand etc.’ should have read: ‘Of my [God’s] hand will not escape punishment’! But, said they of the School of R. Shila, [the meaning is:] Though he received the Torah as did our teacher Moses, of whom it is written: At his right hand was a fiery law unto them,²⁰ he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. R. Johanan objected: [On that interpretation] the phrase ‘Hand to hand’ should have read ‘Hand from hand’!²¹ But, said R. Johanan,

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 5a

[the meaning is:] Though he practise charity in secret,¹ concerning which it is written: 'A gift in secret pacifieth anger,² he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. Whence is there a prohibition for the haughty of spirit? — Raba said in the name of Ze'iri: Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud.³ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [It is derived] from this passage, Thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God,⁴ and it is written: Beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God.⁵ This is in accord with what R. Abin said in the name of R. Elai; for R. Abin said in the name of R. Elai: Wherever it is stated 'Beware' 'lest' and 'Do not' the reference is to a prohibition.

R. 'Awira expounded, sometimes he said it in the name of R. Assi and at other times in the name of R. Ammi: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end be reduced in rank; as it is said: They are exalted, there will be reduction of status;⁶ and lest you think that they remain in existence, the text continues, 'And they are gone'. If, however, he changes [and becomes humble], he will be gathered [to his fathers] in his due time like our father Abraham; as it is said: But when they are lowly, they are gathered in like all⁷ — i.e., like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in connection with whom the word 'all' is used.⁸ If not, They are cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.⁹ What means 'as the tops of the ears of corn'? R. Huna and R. Hisda [explain it]. One says that it means like the awn of the grain, and the other that it means like the ears themselves. This is quite right according to him who says that it means like the awn of the grain, since it is written 'as the tops of the ears of corn'; but according to him who says that it means like the ears themselves, what signifies 'as the tops of the ears of corn'? — R. Assi said, and it was similarly taught in the School of R. Ishmael: It is like a man who enters his field; he gleans the tallest ears.

With him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit.¹⁰ R. Huna and R. Hisda [explain it]. One says that it means the contrite is with Me, and the other that I [God] am with the contrite. The more probable view is in accord with him who holds the meaning to be I am with the contrite; for behold, the Holy One, blessed be He, ignored all the mountains and heights and caused His Shechinah to abide upon Mount Sinai, but did not elevate Mount Sinai [up to Himself].

R. Joseph said: Man should always learn from the mind of his Creator; for behold, the Holy

One, blessed be He, ignored all the mountains and heights and caused His Shechinah to abide upon Mount Sinai, and ignored all the beautiful trees and caused His Shechinah to abide in a bush.¹¹

R. Eleazar also said: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit is fit to be hewn down like an Asherah.¹² It is written here, The high ones of stature shall be hewn down,¹³ and elsewhere it is written: And ye shall hew down their Asherim.¹⁴ Further said R. Eleazar, Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit, his dust will not be disturbed [for the Resurrection]; as it is said: Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust¹⁵ — it is not said ‘ye that lie in the dust’, but, ‘ye that dwell [shokne] in the dust’, i.e., each one who during his lifetime made himself a neighbour [shaken] to the dust [by his humility]. Further said R. Eleazar: Over every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit the Shechinah laments; as it is said: But the haughty he knoweth from afar.¹⁶

R. Awira expounded, and according to another version it was R. Eleazar: Come and see that the manner of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not like the manner of human beings. The manner of human beings is for the lofty to take notice of the lofty and not of the lowly; but the manner of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not so. He is lofty and He takes notice of the lowly, as it is said: For though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly.¹⁷

R. Hisda said, and according to another version it was Mar ‘Ukba: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit, the Holy One, blessed be He, declares, I and he cannot both dwell in the world; as it is said: Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I destroy; him that hath an high look and a proud heart will I not suffer¹⁸ — read not ‘him’ [I cannot suffer], but ‘with him’¹⁹ I cannot [dwell]. There are some who apply this teaching to those who speak slander; as it is said, ‘whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I destroy’.

R. Alexandri said: Every man in whom there is haughtiness of spirit, even the slightest wind will disturb,²⁰ as it is said: But the wicked are like the troubled sea.²¹ If the sea, which contains so many quarters of a log,²² is ruffled by the slightest wind, how much more so a human being who contains but one quarter of a log.²³

R. Hiyya b. Ashi said in the name of Rab: A disciple of the Sages should possess an eighth [of pride].²⁴ R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said: [This small amount of pride] crowns him like the awn of the grain. Raba said: [A disciple of the Sages] who possesses [haughtiness of spirit] deserves excommunication, and if he does not possess it he deserves excommunication.²⁵ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: He should not possess it or part of it; is it a trifling matter concerning which it is written: Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord!²⁶

Hezekiah said: A man's prayer is not heard unless he makes his heart [soft] like flesh; as it is said, And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, shall all flesh come to worship, etc.²⁷ R. Zera said: Concerning flesh it is written: And it is healed;²⁸ but it is not written concerning man, And he is healed.

R. Johanan said: The word for man [adam] indicates dust, blood and gall;²⁹ the word for flesh [basar] indicates shame, stench and worm. Some declare that [instead of ‘stench’ we should have the word] Sheol, since its initial letter corresponds.³⁰

R. Ashi said: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end be degraded; as it is said,

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 5b

For a rising and for a scab,¹ and se'eth ['rising'] means nothing else than elevation, as it is said: Upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are nisaoth [lifted up].² Sappahath ['scab'] means nothing else than attachment; as it is said: Attach me, I pray thee, into one of the priests' offices, that I may eat a morsel of bread.³

R. Joshua b. Levi said: Come and see how great are the lowly of spirit in the esteem of the Holy One, blessed be He, since when the Temple stood, a man brought a burnt-offering and received the reward of a burnt-offering, a meal-offering and he received the reward of a meal-offering; but as for him whose mind is lowly, Scripture ascribes it to him as though he had offered every one of the sacrifices; as it is said: The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit.⁴ More than that, his prayer is not despised; as it continues: A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

R. Joshua b. Levi further said: He who calculates his ways in this world will be worthy to behold the salvation of the Holy One, blessed be He; as it is said: To him that ordereth his way will I show the salvation of God⁵ — read not we-sam [that ordereth] but we-sham [who calculates] his way.⁶

HOW MUST HE WARN HER? etc. This is self-contradictory. You declare, IF HE SAYS TO HER IN THE PRESENCE OF TWO, DO NOT CONVERSE WITH THAT MAN — consequently conversation is the equivalent of seclusion.⁷ He then proceeds to teach: AND SHE CONVERSED WITH HIM, SHE IS STILL PERMITTED TO HER HUSBAND AND PERMITTED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVEOFFERING — consequently conversation is nothing! — Abaye said: This is what he means: [If he said to her,] Do not converse, and she conversed with him, Do not converse, and she secluded herself with him, that is nothing; [but if he said to her,] Do not be secluded with him, and she conversed with him, she is still permitted to her husband and permitted to partake of the heave-offering. Should she have entered a private place with him and stayed a time sufficient for misconduct to have occurred, she is forbidden to her husband and forbidden to partake of the heave-offering.

IF [HER HUSBAND] DIED, SHE PERFORMS THE CEREMONY OF HALIZAH. Why so? Let her also contract a levirate marriage! — R. Joseph said: Scripture declared: And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife⁸ — she may marry 'another' man but not her brother-in-law.⁹ Abaye said to him, According to your argument, Halizah also should be unnecessary! He replied to him, If the husband is living, is not a Get required?¹⁰ So here likewise Halizah is necessary.¹¹ Another version is: R. Joseph said: The All-Merciful declared: And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife, so as not to destroy his house;¹² and you argue, let her also contract a levirate marriage!¹³ Abaye said to him, According to your argument, she should never marry again so as not to destroy another man's house! — He replied to him,

(1) Lev. XIV, 56 interpreted as: having first been elevated, he will become something superfluous among men, and therefore esteemed as nothing.

(2) Isa. II, 14.

(3) I Sam. II, 36. The Hebrew for the verb attach resembles the word for scab, v. Shebu, 6b.

(4) Ps. LI, 19.

(5) Ibid. L, 23.

(6) He calculates the loss incurred in fulfilling a precept against the reward it will bring him, v. Aboth, II, 1.

(7) Since it justifies a warning from the husband.

(8) Deut. XXIV, 2.

(9) [‘Another’ excludes the brother-in-law whose marriage to her is but a continuation, so to speak, of her first marriage. The derivation is based on the superfluous word ‘another’ which is taken to refer to a case where the wife was charged with an ‘unseemly thing’ and her husband died. The meaning of the verse would accordingly be as follows: If she found no favour . . . because he hath found some unseemly thing, he shall write her a bill of divorcement. When she departs out of his house (whether on his death or on divorce) and she goeth and becometh another man's wife, implying she can become the wife only of another man but not the brother-in-law.]

(10) Despite her misconduct. Ibid. 3 mentions, and write her a bill of divorcement. The technical term for this document is Get.

(11) [The brother-in-law taking the place of the dead husband.]

(12) V. supra p. II where it is taught that the wife's immorality destroys the husband's house.

(13) And perhaps destroy the brother-in-law's house.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 6a

Do we compel any other man to marry her [as in the case of a brother-in-law where it is a duty]! Another version is: R. Joseph replied: The text calls [the second husband] ‘another’, because he is not the equal of the first husband, since the latter removes wickedness from his house [by divorcing his wife] whereas the other introduces wickedness into his house [by marrying such a woman]; and you argue, let her also contract a levirate marriage! Abaye said to him, According to your argument, if she does marry another man and he died without issue, she may not contract a levirate marriage since the text calls him ‘another’!¹ — While living with the second husband she may have been of spotless reputation! Raba said: It is an a fortiori argument:² if she is forbidden to [her husband] to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to [her brother-in-law] to whom she is [normally] forbidden! Abaye said to him, According to your argument, if a High Priest betrothed a widow and he died and had a brother who was an ordinary priest, she may not marry him, since if she becomes forbidden to one to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to one to whom she is [normally] forbidden!³ [You say,] ‘If she becomes forbidden’ — she is actually forbidden;⁴ ‘to one to whom she is allowed’ — he is forbidden [to marry her]! But [ask rather as follows: According to Raba's argument] if the wife of a priest had been violated and he died, and he had a brother who was disqualified,⁵ she may not marry him, since if she is forbidden to [her husband]⁶ to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to one to whom she is [normally] forbidden!⁷ — A woman who had been violated is permitted to a non-priest and the prohibition does not apply in his case.⁸

MISHNAH. THE FOLLOWING⁹ ARE PROHIBITED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING:¹⁰ SHE WHO SAYS, ‘I AM UN CLEAN TO THEE’;¹¹ WHEN WITNESSES CAME [AND TESTIFIED] THAT SHE HAD MISCONDUCTED HERSELF;¹² SHE WHO SAYS, I REFUSE TO DRINK [THE WATER]’; WHEN THE HUSBAND IS UNWILLING TO MAKE HER DRINK [THE WATER]: AND WHEN THE HUSBAND COHABITED WITH HER ON THE JOURNEY.¹³

GEMARA. R. Amram said: The following did R. Shesheth tell us and enlighten our eyes from our Mishnah:¹⁴ In the case of a suspected woman where the witnesses against her are in a far-distant land,¹⁵ the water does not prove her.¹⁶ What is the reason? Because Scripture states: And be kept close and she be defiled and there be no witness against her¹⁷ — this is when there is nobody who knows anything against her, thus excluding the case when there are men who know something against her.¹⁸ And he enlightened our eyes from our Mishnah where it is taught: WHEN WITNESSES CAME [AND TESTIFIED] THAT SHE HAD MISCONDUCTED HERSELF. When did the witnesses come? If we say that they came before she drank the water, she is an adulteress;¹⁹ consequently they could only have come after she had drunk the water. This is quite right if you say that the water does not prove her,²⁰ then all is clear; but if you say that [in such a circumstance] the water does prove her, the water may demonstrate retrospectively that the witnesses were false!²¹ — R. Joseph said to him, Still I maintain that the water does prove her, and answer that some merit she possesses causes the water to suspend its effect.²² In what do [R. Joseph and R. Shesheth] differ? — In the matter of her becoming ill, according to the teaching of Rabbi. For we learn: Rabbi says: Merit [in the woman] causes the water of bitterness to suspend its effect, and she never bears a child or thrives, but she gradually grows ill and finally dies through that death.²³ R. Shesheth is of the opinion that both in the view of Rabbi and of the Rabbis she grows ill;²⁴ and R. Joseph is of the opinion that in the view of Rabbi she grows ill but in the view of the Rabbis she does not.²⁵

R. Shimi b. Ashi raised an objection: R. Simeon says: Merit does not cause the water of bitterness to suspend its effect; and if you say that merit does cause the water of bitterness to suspend its effect, you discredit the water in the case of all the women who drink it and defame the pure woman who drank it, since people will say: They were unclean, only their merit caused the water to suspend its effect upon them.²⁶ But if it is so,²⁷ then through [the teaching], ‘Where the witnesses against her are in a far-distant land’, you likewise defame the pure women who drank and people will say: They were unclean, only the witnesses against them are in a far-distant land! — [The reply to R. Shimi is:] You quote R. Simeon; but as R. Simeon holds that merit does not cause the water to suspend its effect, he similarly holds that the existence of witnesses does not cause it to suspend its effect.

Rab raised an objection: The following have their meal-offerings destroyed:²⁸

- (1) [And how can we compel the brother-in-law to marry her?]
 - (2) [To forbid her to the brother-in-law.]
 - (3) As wife of his brother. The conclusion is false, because such a levirate marriage is permissible.
 - (4) A High Priest is not allowed to marry a widow; Lev. XXI, 14.
 - (5) From the priesthood because he was the issue of another marriage which was illegal.
 - (6) A priest could not continue to live with his wife after she had been violated.
 - (7) The argument is false, because the man disqualified from the priesthood could marry his childless brother's widow if she had been violated.
 - (8) I.e., a non-priest was not obliged to divorce his wife who was the victim of violation.
 - (9) Wives of priests.
 - (10) For all time, even if the woman be a priest's daughter (v. Bertinoro).
 - (11) She admits misconduct.
 - (12) Even if she had successfully come through the ordeal, v. Gemara.
 - (13) To Jerusalem, where alone the ordeal was carried out. V. Mishnah p. 30.
 - (14) He found support for his teaching in the statement of the Mishnah.
 - (15) And unable to appear before a Court to give evidence that she misconducted herself.

- (16) It has no effect, though she be guilty.
- (17) Num. V, 13.
- (18) 'No witness' is now interpreted literally, and not as before, viz., only one witness.
- (19) As the result of their evidence; [consequently she is forbidden to partake of the heave-offering, v. Yeb. 44b].
- (20) If there are witnesses of her misconduct who have not testified.
- (21) Because, if she came through successfully, her reputation is cleared. [Why then should she be prohibited to partake of the heave-offering for all time?]
- (22) This point is discussed immediately. If this view is accepted, the water does not affect her although the witnesses are true.
- (23) Through her belly swelling and her thigh falling (Num. V, 27). The passage is cited from infra 22b.
- (24) And the Sages only disagree with him on the question whether she dies. In any case, if she does not grow ill, it cannot be attributed to her merit but to the fact that there are witnesses who have not given evidence.
- (25) So that on either view, if the water has no effect, it is due to her merit.
- (26) Also quoted from infra 22b.
- (27) Viz., that the existence of absent witnesses causes the water not to take effect.
- (28) V. Num. V, 15 for this offering. In the cases mentioned, it is not burnt upon the altar or redeemed by payment in money of its value, but destroyed by fire.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 6b

She who says: 'I am unclean'; and when witnesses came [and testified] that she had misconducted herself.¹ When did the witnesses come? If I say that they came before the offering was hallowed,² then it can become non-holy?³ Consequently they could only have come after it had been hallowed. This is quite right if you say that the water proves her;⁴ consequently she is qualified to have [the flour] hallowed and offered on her behalf, and since it was hallowed from the commencement, it is certainly holy⁵ and for that reason her meal-offering is destroyed. But if you say that the water does not prove her, it becomes evident retrospectively that the hallowing was from the commencement in error,⁶ and therefore [the flour] becomes non-holy!⁷ — Rab Judah of Diskarta⁸ said: Suppose that [after the hallowing] she committed adultery within the Temple-precincts,⁹ since it was hallowed from the commencement, it is certainly holy! R. Mesharsheya objected: But do not the priestly novitiates accompany her?¹⁰ — Rab Judah [meant,] She committed adultery with one of these novitiates. R. Ashi¹¹ said: Suppose it was necessary for her to relieve herself, do you think that the priestly novitiates hang on to her headgear!¹² R. Papa said: The matter is certainly as we originally explained;¹³ and when you argue, [The offering] becomes non-holy, [the answer is that the rule by which the offering is destroyed] is a decree of the Rabbis lest it should be said, we may take [the flour] out of the ministering vessel for secular use.

R. Mari raised an objection: If her offering became ritually defiled before it became hallowed in the vessel, behold it is like all meal-offerings¹⁴ and is redeemed; but if [it became defiled] after it had been hallowed in the vessel, behold it is like all meal-offerings [in such a circumstance] and is destroyed.¹⁵ If the handful of flour¹⁶ was hallowed but there was not sufficient time to offer it before [the husband] died¹⁷ or she died, behold it is like all the meal-offerings and must be destroyed. If the handful had been offered but there was not sufficient time [for the priest] to eat the remainder¹⁸ before [the husband] died or she died, behold it is like all the meal-offerings and is eaten; because it was brought from the commencement in connection with a matter of doubt,¹⁹ it atoned for the doubt which is now ended. If witnesses came [and testified] against her that she had misconducted herself, her meal-offering is destroyed; should the witnesses against her be proved to be perjurers,²⁰ her meal-offering is non-holy?²¹ — You mention perjured witnesses; the fact that they were perjured witnesses is generally known.²²

There is a teaching in accord with the view of R. Shesheth²³ but not for the same reason as his,²⁴ viz., If she be clean²⁵ — [this indicates] there are no witnesses against her in a far-distant land;²⁶ ‘and if she be clean’ — [the addition of and indicates] it is not merit that causes the water to suspend its effect; [‘and if] she [be clean’] — [meaning that she has escaped the effect of the water because she is in fact clean] and not because women who spin by moonlight were discussing her.²⁷ Now as for R. Simeon,²⁸ agreed that he does not expound the conjunction and,²⁹ still there is the case

(1) Quoted from infra p. 144.

(2) By the priest placing the flour in one of the ministering vessels.

(3) By being redeemed; so why does the Mishnah say it is destroyed?

(4) And she drank the water before witnesses testified.

(5) Even after the witnesses gave evidence.

(6) Since witnesses proved her guilty and the ordeal was unnecessary.

(7) And does not even have to be redeemed since the hallowing was based on an error.

(8) [Deskarah, 16 miles N.E. of Bagdad; Obermeyer, Die Landschaft Babylonian, p. 116.]

(9) And witnesses came to testify concerning this act of infidelity.

(10) So that adultery could not occur there.

(11) Who rejects the thought that she could be guilty with one of the novitiates.

(12) When she retired to relieve herself. Consequently she could have the opportunity with another than the novitiates.

(13) That the witnesses came concerning the first act of infidelity.

(14) Which became defiled before being hallowed.

(15) Mishnah, p. 114. What follows is cited in the main from Tosefta Sotah II.

(16) Num. V, 26.

(17) In the event of the husband's death she does not drink the water.

(18) Of the flour which is not burnt upon the altar and is the priest's perquisite.

(19) The woman's chastity.

(20) Zomemim v. Glos. Before the meal-offering was burnt upon the altar.

(21) Though it has been placed in the vessel; and we do not say, as above, that by a Rabbinic decree, it must be destroyed. This contradicts the view given by R. Papa.

(22) So that it will be recognised that the offering was never holy.

(23) Viz., that the water does not take effect when there are absent witnesses.

(24) Which is based on the phrase ‘No witness against her’ (v. supra p. 24). The teaching finds another derivation in support.

(25) Num. V, 28.

(26) The verse is thus explained; if she be really pure and did not escape the effect of the water through the witnesses being far away, then she will conceive.

(27) Women gather together in the moonlight to spin and gossip. To be talked about by them was a sufficient disgrace to suspend the effect of the water.

(28) Who holds that merit does not suspend the effect of the water.

(29) To derive from it a Scriptural basis for his view.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 7a

where there are witnesses against her in a far-distant land!¹ — That is uncommon.²

MISHNAH. HOW DOES [THE HUSBAND] DEAL WITH HER? HE BRINGS HER TO THE COURT OF JUSTICE IN THE PLACE WHERE HE RESIDES, AND THEY ASSIGN TO HIM TWO DISCIPLES OF THE SAGES³ LEST HE COHABIT WITH HER ON THE JOURNEY.⁴ R. JUDAH SAYS, HER HUSBAND IS TRUSTED WITH HER.⁵

GEMARA. Two [disciples of the Sages] and he make three. Is this to say that it supports the teaching of Rab? For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The Rabbis] did not teach [that a woman may be in the company of two men] except in a city; but on a journey there must be three, in case one of them should have need to relieve himself and consequently one of them will be left alone with [the possibility of] immorality!⁶ — No; here the reason is that they should be witnesses against him.⁷ [But the fact that] disciples of the Sages are necessary and not ordinary men, does this not support another teaching of Rab? For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The Rabbis] did not teach [that a woman may be in the company of two men] except in the case of pure men; but in the case of dissolute men not even with ten. It once happened that ten men carried a [live] woman [out of the city] in a coffin [to violate her]! — No; here the reason is that they will know to warn him.⁸

R. JUDAH SAYS, HER HUSBAND etc. It has been taught: R. Judah says: By a fortiori reasoning [it is deduced] that a husband is trusted.⁹ If a husband is trusted in the matter of his wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision,¹⁰ how much more so in the matter of his wife under suspicion in connection with which there is a mere prohibition.¹¹ And [how do] the Rabbis [meet this argument]? — The same reasoning establishes [their view]: in the case of a wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision, since it is so stringent, the husband is trusted; but in the case of a wife under suspicion where [cohabitation] is a mere prohibition, since there is no stringent [penalty] for him, he is not trusted. But does R. Judah derive his view from a fortiori reasoning? He surely derives it from a Scriptural text; for it has been taught: Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest¹² — according to the Torah it is the husband who has to bring his wife; but said the Sages, They assign to him two disciples of the Sages lest he cohabit with her on the journey. R. Jose says: By a fortiori reasoning [it is deduced] that a husband is trusted with her. If a husband is trusted in the matter of his wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision, how much more so in the matter of his wife while under suspicion in connection with which there is a mere prohibition. [The Sages] replied to him, No; if you argue [that he may be trusted] in the case of his wife during menstruation to whom he will have a right [on her recovery], will you argue so in the case of his wife under suspicion when he may never have a right to her!¹³ It further states: Stolen waters are sweet, etc.!¹⁴ R. Judah says: According to the Torah it is the husband who has to bring his wife; as it is said: Then shall the man bring his wife!¹⁵ — At first he argued his view to [the Sages] by a fortiori reasoning; but when they refuted it, he then quoted the text to them. But R. Judah's opinion is the same as that of the first Tanna!¹⁶ — There is a point of difference between them, viz., [the continuation], 'But, said the Rabbis' etc.¹⁷

MISHNAH. THEY BRING HER UP TO THE GREAT COURT OF JUSTICE WHICH IS IN JERUSALEM, AND [THE JUDGES] SOLEMNLY CHARGE HER IN THE SAME WAY THAT THEY CHARGE WITNESSES IN CAPITAL CASES¹⁸ AND SAY TO HER, 'MY DAUGHTER, WINE DOES MUCH, FRIVOLITY DOES MUCH, YOUTH DOES MUCH, BAD NEIGHBOURS DO MUCH.¹⁹ DO IT²⁰ FOR THE SAKE OF HIS GREAT NAME WHICH IS WRITTEN IN HOLINESS SO THAT IT MAY NOT BE OBLITERATED BY THE WATER.'²¹ AND THEY RELATE TO HER MATTERS WHICH NEITHER SHE NOR ALL THE FAMILY OF HER FATHER'S HOUSE IS WORTHY TO HEAR.²² — IF SHE SAID, 'I HAVE MISCONDUCTED MYSELF', SHE GIVES A QUITTANCE FOR HER MARRIAGE-SETTLEMENT²³ AND DEPARTS;²⁴ BUT IF SHE SAYS, 'I AM PURE', THEY BRING HER UP TO THE EAST GATE WHICH IS BY THE ENTRANCE OF NICANOR'S GATE²⁵ WHERE THEY GIVE SUSPECTED WOMEN THE WATER TO DRINK, PURIFY WOMEN AFTER CHILDBIRTH AND PURIFY LEPERS.²⁶ A PRIEST SEIZES HER GARMENTS²⁷ — IF THEY ARE RENT THEY ARE RENT, AND IF THEY BECOME UNSTITCHED THEY ARE UNSTITCHED UNTIL HE UNCOVERS HER BOSOM,²⁸ AND HE UNDOES HER HAIR. R. JUDAH SAYS: IF HER BOSOM WAS BEAUTIFUL HE DOES NOT UNCOVER IT, AND IF HER HAIR WAS BEAUTIFUL HE DOES NOT UNDO IT. — IF SHE WAS CLOTHED IN WHITE, HE CLOTHES HER IN BLACK. IF SHE WORE GOLDEN ORNAMENTS

AND NECKLACES, EAR-RINGS AND FINGER-RINGS, THEY REMOVE THEM FROM HER IN ORDER TO MAKE HER REPULSIVE. AFTER THAT [THE PRIEST] TAKES A COMMON ROPE¹ AND BINDS IT OVER HER BREASTS.² WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK WITH THE EXCEPTION OF HER MALE AND FEMALE SLAVES, BECAUSE HER HEART IS MADE DEFIANT THROUGH THEM. ALL WOMEN ARE PERMITTED³ TO LOOK UPON HER, AS IT IS SAID, THAT ALL WOMEN MAY BE TAUGHT NOT TO DO AFTER YOUR LEWDNESS.⁴

GEMARA. Whence is this?⁵ — R. Hiyya b. Gamda said in the name of R. Jose b. Hanina: From the analogous use of the word 'law'. It is written here, And the priest shall execute upon her all this law;⁶ and elsewhere it is written: According to the tenor of the law which they shall teach thee.⁷ As in this latter case it is [the Court of] seventy-one,⁸ so also in the former it is [the Court of] seventy-one.

AND [THE JUDGES] SOLEMNLY CHARGE HER etc. I quote in contradiction: Just as they solemnly charge her not to drink,⁹ so they solemnly charge her to drink, saying to her, 'My daughter, if the matter is clear to thee that thou art pure, rely upon thy purity and drink; because the water of bitterness is only like dry powder which is placed upon living flesh. If there is a wound, it penetrates and goes through [the skin]; and if there is no wound, it has no effect.¹⁰ — There is no contradiction; here [they charge her not to drink] before [the writing on] the scroll is blotted out,¹¹ and there [they charge her to drink] after it has been blotted out.¹²

AND SAY TO HER etc. Our Rabbis have taught: He tells her narratives and incidents which occurred in the early writings;¹³ for instance, Which wise men have told and have not hid it [from their fathers],¹⁴ namely Judah confessed and was not ashamed; what was his end? He inherited the life of the world to come. Reuben confessed and was not ashamed; what was his end? He inherited the world to come. And what was their reward? What was their reward [you ask]! It was as we have just mentioned. But [the meaning is], What was their reward in this world? Unto them alone the land was given, and no stranger passed among them.¹⁵ It is quite right with Judah; we find that he confessed, for it is written: And Judah acknowledged them, and said: She is more righteous than I.¹⁶ Whence, however, is it that Reuben confessed? — As R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Johanan: What means that which is written: Let Reuben live and not die; and this for Judah?¹⁷ All the years that the Israelites were in the wilderness, Judah's bones¹⁸ kept turning in his coffin until Moses arose and begged mercy for him. He said before Him, Lord of the Universe, who caused Reuben to confess? It was Judah,¹⁹ [as it is stated], 'And this for Judah'; immediately [after Moses prayed], 'Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah', each limb entered its socket.²⁰ But [the angels] would not permit him to enter the heavenly Academy;²¹ [so Moses prayed], 'And bring him in unto his people'. He was unable to discuss the theme which the Rabbis were then debating; [so Moses prayed], 'With his hands let him contend for himself.'²² He was still not able to secure a decision in accordance with the traditional practice; [so Moses prayed], 'Be an help against his adversaries'.²³ It is quite right that Judah confessed so that Tamar should not be burnt; but why did Reuben confess? Surely R. Shesheth has declared: Consider him shameless who [publicly] specifies his sins! — [Reuben confessed] so that his brothers should not be suspected [of his offence].

IF SHE SAID, 'I HAVE MISCONDUCTED MYSELF' etc. Is it to be concluded from this that a quittance is written out?²⁴ — Abaye said: Read [in our Mishnah]: [The document of the marriage-settlement] is torn. Raba replied to him, But the Mishnah mentions A QUITTANCE! But, said Raba, we deal here with places where they do not write a document for a marriage-settlement.²⁵

BUT IF SHE SAYS, 'I AM PURE', THEY BRING HER UP TO THE EAST GATE. 'THEY BRING HER UP'?

But she is already there!¹ — They lead her up² and lead her down, for the purpose of wearying her.³ For it has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: The Court causes the witnesses to be taken from place to place that their mind may become confused and they retract [their evidence, if false].⁴

WHERE THEY GIVE SUSPECTED WOMEN THE WATER TO DRINK etc. This is quite right in the case of suspected women; because it is written: And the priest shall set the woman before the Lord.⁵ Likewise is it with lepers; because it is written: And the priest that cleanseth him shall set the man . . . before the Lord.⁶ But why a woman after childbirth? Is it to say because they come to stand by their offerings; for it has been taught: A person's offering is not sacrificed until he stands by it? If so, it should also apply to men and women with a running issue!⁷ — It does indeed also apply to them, and the Tanna [in the Mishnah] only specifies one of them.⁸ Our Rabbis have taught: They do not give two suspected women the water to drink at the same time, so that the heart of one should not become defiant because of the other.⁹ R. Judah says: It is not from this reason, but Scripture declares, [The priest shall cause] her [to swear]¹⁰ — her alone. And for the first Tanna it is likewise written 'her'!¹¹ — The first Tanna is R. Simeon who expounds the reason of Scriptural texts¹² and [here] he states the reason: What is the meaning of 'her'? Her alone, so that the heart of one should not become defiant because of the other. What difference is there, then, between them? — The difference between them is the case of a woman who is trembling.¹³ But even if [a woman] is trembling, may we give her the water to drink [simultaneously with another woman] when, behold, we may not perform precepts in bundles?¹⁴ For we have learnt: They do not give two suspected women the water to drink at the same time, nor purify two lepers at the same time, nor bore the ears of two slaves at the same time,¹⁵ nor break the necks of two calves at the same time,¹⁶ because we may not perform precepts in bundles! — Abaye said, but others declare it was R. Kahana: There is no contradiction; the latter case referring to one priest,¹⁷ the other to two priests.

A PRIEST SEIZES HER GARMENTS. Our Rabbis have taught: And let the hair of the woman's head go loose.¹⁸ I only have here mention of her head; whence is it derived that it applies to her body?¹⁹ The text states: 'the woman's'.²⁰ If so, what is the object of the text declaring, 'And let the hair of the head go loose'? It teaches that the priest undoes her hair.²¹

R. JUDAH SAYS, IF HER BOSOM WAS BEAUTIFUL etc. Is this to say that R. Judah is afraid of impure thoughts being aroused and the Rabbis do not fear this? Behold we have heard the opposite opinion of them; for it has been taught: In the case of a man [who is to be stoned] they cover him with one piece of cloth in front, and in the case of a woman with two pieces, one in front and one behind, because the whole of her is considered nudity. This is the statement of R. Judah; but the Sages say: A man is stoned naked but a woman is not stoned naked!²² — Rabbah answered: What is the reason here?²³ Lest she go forth from the Court innocent, and the priestly novitiates become inflamed through her, whereas in the other case she is stoned. Should you reply that it may cause them to be inflamed by another woman, Raba²⁴ declared: We have learnt a tradition that the evil impulse only bears sway over what a person's eyes see. Raba asked: Is it, then, that R. Judah contradicts himself and the Rabbis do not contradict themselves? But, said Raba, R. Judah does not contradict himself as we have just explained²⁵

, and the Rabbis likewise do not contradict themselves. What is the reason here?¹ Because [it is written], That all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.² In the other case [of stoning], however, there cannot be a severer warning than that.³ Should you argue, Let both be inflicted upon her,⁴ R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: The text states: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself⁵ — choose for him [or her] a light death. Is this to say that Mishnaic teachers disagree [with respect to this teaching] of R. Nahman?⁶ — No; everybody is in agreement with R. Nahman's teaching, but they differ here on the following point: [the Rabbis] hold that disgrace is worse than physical pain, and [R. Judah] holds that physical pain is worse than disgrace.⁷ IF SHE WAS CLOTHED IN WHITE etc. It has been taught: If black garments became her, they clothe her in mean garments.

IF SHE WORE GOLDEN ORNAMENTS etc. This is obvious. Since she has to be made repulsive how much more is it necessary to do this!⁸ — What you might have thought is that with these ornaments upon her, the disgrace would be greater; as the proverb declares, 'Stripped naked, yet wearing shoes'. Therefore we are taught [that all ornaments must be removed].

AFTER THAT [THE PRIEST] TAKES A COMMON ROPE etc. R. Abba asked R. Huna, Does [the absence of] a common rope invalidate the ceremony of a suspected woman? If the purpose is that her garments should not slip down from her, then a small belt would also suffice; or is it perhaps as the Master said: 'She girded herself with a belt [to adorn herself] for him,⁹ therefore the priest takes a common rope and binds it over her breasts', and consequently [its absence] does invalidate the ceremony? — He replied: You have [the reason stated:] After that he takes a common rope and binds it over her breast so that her garments should not slip down from her.

WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK etc. This is self-contradictory! You say: WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK; consequently it makes no difference whether they be men or women. Then it is taught: ALL WOMEN ARE PERMITTED TO LOOK UPON HER — hence women are [permitted] but men are not! — Abaye answered: Explain it¹⁰ as referring to women. Raba said to him, But the Mishnah states: WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK, it makes no difference whether they be men or women; but women are obliged¹¹ to look upon her, as it is said: 'That all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.' MISHNAH. IN THE MEASURE WITH WHICH A MAN MEASURES IT IS METED OUT TO HIM. SHE ADORNED HERSELF FOR A TRANSGRESSION; THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, MADE HER REPULSIVE. SHE EXPOSED HERSELF FOR A TRANSGRESSION; THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, HELD HER UP FOR EXPOSURE. SHE BEGAN THE TRANSGRESSION WITH THE THIGH AND AFTERWARDS WITH THE WOMB; THEREFORE SHE IS PUNISHED FIRST IN THE THIGH AND AFTERWARDS IN THE WOMB,¹² NOR DOES ALL THE BODY ESCAPE. GEMARA. R. Joseph said: Although the measure¹³ has ceased, [the principle] IN THE MEASURE has not ceased.¹⁴ For R. Joseph said, and similarly taught R. Hiyya: From the day the Temple was destroyed, although the Sanhedrin ceased to function, the four modes of execution¹⁵ did not cease. But they did cease! — [The meaning is:] The judgment¹⁶ of the four modes of execution did not cease. He who would have been condemned to stoning either falls from a roof [and dies] or a wild beast tramples him [to death]. He who would have been condemned to burning either falls into a fire or a serpent stings him. He who would have been condemned to decapitation is either handed over to the [Gentile] Government¹⁷ or robbers attack him. He who would have been condemned to strangulation either drowns in a river or dies of a quinsy.¹⁸

It has been taught: Rabbi¹⁹ used to say: Whence is it that in the measure with which a man measures it is meted out to him? As it is said: By measure in sending her away thou dost contend with her.²⁰ I have here only a se'ah,²¹ whence is it to include a trikab and half a trikab, a kab and half a kab, a quarter, an eighth, a sixteenth and a thirtysecond part of a kab? There is a text to state, For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult.²² And whence is it that every perutah²³ reckons together into a great sum? There is a text to state, Laying one thing to another to find out the account.²⁴ Thus we find in the case of a suspected woman that in the measure with which she measured it was meted out to her. She stood at the entrance of her house to display herself to the man; therefore a priest sets her by the Nicanor-gate and displays her disgrace to all. She wound a beautiful scarf about her head for him; therefore a priest removes her headgear and places it under her feet. She beautified her face for him; therefore her face is made to turn green in colour.¹ She painted her eyes for him; therefore her eyes protrude. She plaited her hair for him; therefore a priest undoes her hair. She signalled to him with her finger; therefore her fingernails fall off. She girded herself with a belt for him; therefore a priest takes a common rope and ties it above her breasts. She thrust her thigh towards him; therefore her thigh falls. She received him upon her body; therefore her womb swells. She gave him the world's dainties to eat; therefore her offering consisted of animal's fodder.² She gave him costly wine to drink in costly goblets; therefore a priest gives her water of bitterness to drink in a potsherd. She acted in secret; and He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High³ directed His face against her [to punish her], as it is said: The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying: No eye shall see me.⁴ Another version is: She acted in secret; the All-present proclaims it in public, as it is said: Though his hatred cover itself with guile, his wickedness shall be openly shewed before the congregation.⁵

Since [the teaching that even the slightest sin is punished] is derived from 'Laying one thing to another to find out the account', why do I require 'For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult'? — That [the punishment is] according to measure. But since that is derived from 'For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult', why do I require 'By measure in sending her away thou dost contend with her'? — It is in accord with the teaching of R. Hinena b. Papa; for R. Hinena b. Papa said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a nation until the time of its banishment into exile, as it is said: 'By measure in sending her away, etc'. But it is not so; for Raba has said: Why are three cups mentioned in connection with Egypt?⁶ One which she drank in the days of Moses; one which she drank in the days of Pharaoh-Necho;⁷ and one which she is destined to drink with her allies! Should you reply that they passed away, and these are different [Egyptians],⁸ behold it has been taught: R. Judah said: Minyamin, an Egyptian proselyte, was a colleague of mine among the disciples of R. Akiba; and Minyamin, the Egyptian proselyte, told me: 'I am an Egyptian of the first generation,⁹ and I married an Egyptian woman of the first generation; I will marry my son to an Egyptian woman of the second generation so that my grandson may be permitted to enter the Community'¹⁰ — But if the above statement was made it was made as follows: R. Hinena b. Papa said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a king until the time of his banishment into exile, as it is said: 'By measure in sending her away, etc'. Amemar applied this teaching of R. Hinena b. Papa to the following: What means the text: For I the Lord change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed?¹¹ 'I the Lord change not' — I have not smitten a people and repeated it;¹² 'therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed' — that is what is written: I will spend Mine arrows upon them¹³ — Mine arrows will be spent, but [the sons of Jacob] will not cease. R. Hamuna said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a man until his measure [of guilt] is filled; as it is said: 'In the fullness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits, etc'.¹⁴ R. Hinena b. Papa expounded: What means the text: Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous; praise is comely for the upright?¹⁵ Read not praise is na'wah ['comely'], but praise is neweh ['a habitation']. This alludes to Moses and David over whose works [in erecting a Sanctuary] their enemies had no power.¹⁶ Of [the Temple planned by] David, it is written: Her gates are sunk in the ground.¹⁷ With regard to Moses the Master said: After the first Temple was erected, the Tent of Meeting was stored away, its boards, hooks, bars, pillars and sockets. Where [were they stored]? — R. Hisda said in the name of Abimi: Beneath the crypts of the Temple.

Our Rabbis have taught: The suspected woman¹⁸ set her eyes on one who was not proper for her; what she sought was not given to her¹⁹ and what she possessed was taken from her;²⁰ because whoever sets his eyes on that which is not his is not granted what he seeks and what he possesses is taken from him.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 9b

We thus find it with the primeval serpent [in the Garden of Eden] which set its eyes on that which was not proper for it; what it sought was not granted to it and what it possessed was taken from it. The Holy One, blessed be He, said: I declared: Let it be king over every animal and beast; but now, Cursed art thou above all cattle and above every beast of the field.¹ I declared, let it walk with an erect posture; but now it shall go upon its belly. I declared: Let its food be the same as that of man; but now it shall eat dust. It said: I will kill Adam and marry Eve; but now, I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed.² Similarly do we find it with Cain, Korah, Balaam, Doeg, Ahitophel, Gehazi, Absalom, Adonijah, Uzziah and Haman, who set their eyes upon that which was not proper for them; what they sought was not granted to them and what they possessed was taken from them.

SHE BEGAN THE TRANSGRESSION WITH THE THIGH etc. Whence is this? Shall I say because it is written: When the Lord doth make thy thigh to fall away and thy belly to swell?³ But it is likewise written: Her belly shall swell and her thigh shall fall away!⁴ — Abaye said: When [the priest] utters the curse, he first curses the thigh and then curses the belly; but when the water produces its effect it does so in its normal order, viz., the belly first and then the thigh. But also in connection with the curse, it is written: Make thy belly to swell and thy thigh to fall away!⁵ — That is what the priest informs her, viz., that it affects her belly first and then the thigh so as not to discredit the water of bitterness.⁶

MISHNAH. AND BECAUSE HE COHABITED WITH THE TEN CONCUBINES OF HIS FATHER, THEREFORE HE WAS STABBED WITH TEN LANCES, AS IT IS SAID, AND TEN YOUNG MEN THAT BARE JOAB'S ARMOUR COMPASSED ABOUT.⁸ AND BECAUSE HE STOLE THREE HEARTS, THE HEART OF HIS FATHER, THE HEART OF THE COURT OF JUSTICE, AND THE HEART OF ISRAEL, AS IT IS SAID, SO ABSALOM STOLE THE HEARTS OF THE MEN OF ISRAEL,⁹ THEREFORE THREE DARTS WERE THRUST THROUGH HIM, AS IT IS SAID, AND HE TOOK THREE DARTS IN HIS HAND, AND THRUST THEM THROUGH THE HEART OF ABSALOM.¹⁰ — IT¹¹ IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD. MIRIAM WAITED A SHORT WHILE FOR MOSES, AS IT IS SAID, AND HIS SISTER STOOD AFAR OFF;¹² THEREFORE ISRAEL WAS DELAYED FOR HER SEVEN DAYS IN THE WILDERNESS, AS IT IS SAID, AND THE PEOPLE JOURNEYED NOT TILL MIRIAM WAS BROUGHT IN AGAIN.¹³ JOSEPH EARNED MERIT BY BURYING HIS FATHER AND THERE WAS NONE AMONG HIS BROTHERS GREATER THAN HE; AS IT IS SAID, AND JOSEPH WENT UP TO BURY HIS FATHER, ETC.,¹⁴ AND THERE WENT UP WITH HIM BOTH CHARIOTS AND HORSEMEN.¹⁵ WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN JOSEPH SINCE NONE OTHER THAN MOSES OCCUPIED HIMSELF WITH HIS BURIAL? MOSES EARNED MERIT THROUGH THE BONES OF JOSEPH AND THERE WAS NONE IN ISRAEL GREATER THAN HE, AS IT IS SAID, AND MOSES TOOK THE BONES OF JOSEPH WITH HIM.¹⁶ WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN MOSES SINCE NONE OTHER THAN THE OMNIPRESENT OCCUPIED HIMSELF [WITH HIS BURIAL], AS IT IS SAID, AND HE BURIED HIM IN THE VALLEY?¹⁷ NOT ONLY CONCERNING MOSES DID THEY SAY THIS, BUT CONCERNING ALL THE RIGHTEOUS, AS IT IS SAID, AND THY RIGHTEOUSNESS SHALL GO BEFORE THEE, THE GLORY OF THE LORD SHALL BE THY REARWARD.¹⁸

GEMARA. Our Rabbis have taught: Samson rebelled [against God] through his eyes, as it is said: And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me, because she is pleasing in my eyes;¹⁹ therefore the Philistines put out his eyes, as it is said: And the Philistines laid hold on him and put out his eyes.²⁰ But it is not so; for behold it is written: But his father and his mother knew not that it was of the Lord!²¹ — When he went [to choose a wife] he nevertheless followed his own inclinations.²² It has been taught: Rabbi says: The beginning of his [Samson's] degeneration occurred in Gaza; therefore he received his punishment in Gaza. 'The beginning of his [Samson's] degeneration was in Gaza', as it is written: And Samson went to Gaza, and saw there an harlot etc.;²³ 'therefore he received his punishment in Gaza,' as it is written: And they brought him down to Gaza.²⁴ But behold it is written: And Samson went down to Timnah!²⁵ — Nevertheless the beginning of his degeneration occurred in Gaza.²⁶

And it came to pass afterward, that he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.²⁷ It has been taught: Rabbi says: If her name had not been called Delilah, she was fit that it should be so called. She weakened²⁸ his strength, she weakened his heart, she weakened his actions. ‘She weakened his strength’, as it is written: And his strength went from him.²⁹ ‘She weakened his heart’, as it is written: And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart.³⁰ ‘She weakened his actions’ since the Shechinah departed from him, as it is written: But he wist not that the Lord had departed from him.³¹

‘And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart’. How did she know this?³² R. Hanin said in the name of Rab: Words of truth are recognisable. Abaye said: She knew that this righteous man would not utter the Divine Name in vain; when he exclaimed: I have been a Nazirite unto God,³³ she said: Now he has certainly spoken the truth.

And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him.³⁴ What means ‘and urged him’? R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: At the time of the consummation, she detached herself from him.

Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing.³⁵ What means ‘any unclean thing’? Furthermore, had she [Samson's mother] up to then eaten unclean things? R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: [She had hitherto eaten] things forbidden to a Nazirite.

But God clave the hollow place that is in Lehi.³⁶ R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: He [Samson] lusted for what was unclean;³⁷ therefore his life was made dependent upon an unclean thing.³⁸

And the spirit of the Lord began, etc.³⁹ R. Hama b. Hanina said: Jacob's prophecy became fulfilled, as it is written: Dan shall be a serpent in the way.⁴⁰

To move him in Mahaneh-Dan.⁴¹ R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: This teaches that the Shechinah kept ringing in front of him like a bell,⁴² it is written here to move him [lefa'amo] in Mahaneh-Dan, and it is written elsewhere A golden bell [pa'amon] and a pomegranate.⁴³ Between Zorah and Eshtaol⁴⁴ — R. Assi said: Zorah and Eshtaol are two great mountains, and Samson uprooted them and ground one against the other.

And he shall begin to save Israel.⁴⁵ R. Hama b. Hanina said:

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 10a

The oath of Abimelech became void, as it is written: That thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son.¹

And the child grew, and the Lord blessed him.² Wherewith did He bless him? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: With his physique which was like that of other men but his manly strength was like a fast-flowing stream.³

And Samson called unto the Lord, and said: O Lord God, remember me, I pray Thee and strengthen me, I pray Thee, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.⁴ Rab said: Samson spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He, Sovereign of the Universe, Remember on my behalf the twenty⁵ years I judged Israel, and never did I order anyone to carry my staff from one place to another.

And Samson went and caught three hundred foxes.⁶ Why just foxes? — R. Aibu b. Nagari said in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba: Samson declared: Let [the animal] come which turns backward⁷ and exact punishment of the Philistines who went back on their oath.⁸

It has been taught: R. Simeon the Pious said: The width between Samson's shoulders was sixty cubits, as it is said: And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight and laid hold of the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts, and plucked them up, bar and all, and put them upon his shoulders;⁹ and there is a tradition that the gates of Gaza were not less than sixty cubits [in width]. And he did grind in the prison house.¹⁰

R. Johanan said: 'Grind' means nothing else than [sexual] transgression; and thus it is stated: Then let my wife grind unto another.¹¹ It teaches that everyone brought his wife to him to the prison that she might bear a child by him [who would be as strong as he was]. R. Papa said: That is what the proverb tells, 'Before the wine-drinker [set] wine, before a ploughman a basket of roots.'

R. Johanan also said: Whoever is faithless, his wife is faithless to him; as it is said: If mine heart have been enticed unto a woman, and I have laid wait at my neighbour's door¹² and it continues, Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her. That is what the proverb tells, 'He among the full-grown pumpkins and his wife among the young ones'.

R. Johanan also said: Samson judged Israel in the same manner as their Father in heaven; as it is said: Dan shall judge his people as One.¹³ R. Johanan also said: Samson was called by the name of the Holy One, blessed be He; as it is said: For the Lord God is a sun and a shield.¹⁴ According to this argument, [his name] may not be erased!¹⁵ — The intention is that [his name] was typical of the name of the Holy One, blessed be He;¹⁶ as the Holy One, blessed be He, shields the whole world, so Samson shielded Israel during his generation.

R. Johanan also said: Balaam was lame in one leg, as it is said: And he went shefi;¹⁷ Samson was lame in both legs, as it is said: An adder in the path.¹⁸

Our Rabbis have taught: Five were created after the likeness of Him Who is above, and all of them incurred punishment on account of [the feature which distinguished] them: Samson in his strength, Saul in his neck,¹⁹ Absalom in his hair,²⁰ Zedekiah in his eyes, and Asa in his feet. 'Samson [was punished] in his strength', as it is written: And his strength went from him.²¹ 'Saul [was punished] in his neck', as it is written: Saul took his sword and fell upon it.²² 'Absalom [was punished] in his hair', as we shall have occasion to explain later. Zedekiah [was punished] in his eyes, as it is written: They put out the eyes of Zedekiah.²³ Asa [was punished] in his feet, as it is written: But in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet,²⁴ and Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, Podagra [gout] attacked him.

Mar Zutra, son of R. Nahman, asked R. Nahman, What is Podagra like? — He answered: Like a needle in living flesh. How did he know this? — Some say he suffered from it himself; others say that he heard it from his teacher;²⁵ and others declare, The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will shew them His covenant.²⁶

Raba expounded: Why was Asa punished? Because he imposed forced labour²⁷ upon the disciples of the Sages, as it is said: Then King Asa made a proclamation unto all Judah; none was exempted.²⁸ What means 'none was exempted'? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Even the bridegroom from his chamber and the bride from her canopy.

It is written: And Samson went down to Timnah,²⁹ and it is written: Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnah!³⁰ R. Eleazar said: Since in the case of Samson he was disgraced there, it is written in connection with it 'went down;' but in the case of Judah, since he was exalted in it,³¹ there is written in connection with it 'goeth up'. R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: There are two places named Timnah; one [was reached] by going down and the other by going up. R. Papa said: There is only one place named Timnah; who came to it from one direction had to descend and from another direction had to ascend, as, e.g., Wardina, Be Bari and the market-place of Neresh.³²

She sat in the gate of Enaim.³³ R. Alexander said: It teaches that she [Tamar] went and sat at the entrance [of the hospice] of our father Abraham, to see which place all eyes ['enaim] look. R. Hanin said in the name of Rab: It is a place named Enaim, as it states: Tappuah and Enam.³⁴ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: [It is so called] because she gave eyes to her words.³⁵ When [Judah] solicited her, he asked her, 'Art thou perhaps a Gentile?' She replied: 'I am a proselyte'. 'Art thou perhaps a married woman?' She replied: 'I am unmarried'. 'Perhaps thy father has accepted on thy behalf betrothals?'³⁶ She replied: 'I am an orphan'. 'Perhaps thou art unclean?' She replied: 'I am clean'.

And he planted a tamarisk tree in Beer-sheba.³⁷ Resh Lakish said: It teaches that he [Abraham] made an orchard and planted in it all kinds of choice fruits. R. Judah and R. Nehemiah [differ in this matter]; one said that it was an orchard and the other that it was a hospice. It is right according to him who said that it was an orchard, since it is written 'and he planted'; but according to him who said that it was a hospice, what means 'and he planted?' — It is similarly written: And he shall plant the tents of his palace, etc.³⁸

And he called there on the name of the Lord, the Everlasting God.³⁹ Resh Lakish said: Read not 'and he called' but 'and he made to call', thereby teaching that our father Abraham caused the name of the Holy One, blessed be He, to be uttered by the mouth of every passer-by. How was this? After [travellers] had eaten and drunk, they stood up to bless him; but, said he to them, 'Did you eat of mine? You ate of that which belongs to the God of the Universe. Thank, praise and bless Him who spake and the world came into being'.

When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; for she had covered her face.¹ Because she had covered her face he thought her to be an harlot! — R. Eleazar said: She had covered her face in her father-in-law's house;² for R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Every daughter-in-law who is modest in her father-in-law's house merits that kings and prophets should issue from her. Whence is this? From Tamar. Prophets [issued from her], as it is written: The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz,³ and kings [issued from her] through David; and R. Levi has said: This is a tradition in our possession from our fathers that Amoz and Amaziah⁴ were brothers.

When she was brought forth.⁵ Instead of muzeth the verb should have been mithwazzeth!⁶ R. Eleazar said: [The verb in the text implies] that after her proofs⁷ were found, Samael⁸ came and removed them, and Gabriel⁹ came and restored them. That is what is written: For the Chief Musician, the silent dove of them that are afar off. Of David, Michtam¹⁰ — R. Johanan said: At the time when her proofs were removed, she became like a silent dove. 'Of David', 'Michtam' — [that means] there issued from her David who was meek [mach] and perfect [tam] to all. Another explanation of 'Michtam' is: his wound [makkah]¹¹ was whole [tammah], since he was born already circumcised. Another explanation of 'Michtam' is: just as in his youth [before he became king] he made himself small in the presence of anyone greater than himself to study Torah, so was he the same in his greatness.¹²

She sent to her father-in-law, saying: By the man whose these are, am I with child.¹³ She ought to have told [the messenger] plainly!¹⁴ — R. Zutra b. Tobiah said in the name of Rab — another version is, R. Hama b. Bizna said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious; and still another version is, R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Better for a man to cast himself into a fiery furnace rather than shame his fellow in public. Whence is this? From Tamar.¹⁵

Discern, I pray thee.¹⁶ R. Hama b. Hanina said: With the word 'discern' [Judah] made an announcement to his father, and with the word 'discern' an announcement was made to him. With the word 'discern' he made an announcement — Discern now whether it be thy son's coat or not;¹⁷ and with the word 'discern' an announcement was made to him — Discern, I pray thee, whose are these.¹⁶ The word 'na' ['I pray thee'] is nothing else than an expression of request. She said to him, 'I beg of thee, discern the face of thy Creator and hide not thine eyes from me'.¹⁸

And Judah acknowledged them, and said: She is more righteous than I.¹⁹ That is what R. Hanin b. Bizna said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious: Joseph who sanctified the heavenly Name in private²⁰ merited that one letter should be added to him from the Name of the Holy One, blessed be He, as it is written: He appointed it in Joseph for a testimony.²¹ Judah, however, who sanctified the heavenly Name in public merited that the whole of his name should be called after the Name of the Holy One, blessed be He.²² When he confessed and said: She is more righteous than I, a Bath Kol²³ issued forth and proclaimed, 'Thou didst rescue Tamar and her two sons from the fire. By thy life, I will rescue through thy merit three of thy descendants from the fire'.

Who are they? Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah.²⁴ ‘She is more righteous than I’ — how did he know this?²⁵ A Bath Kol issued forth and proclaimed, ‘From Me came forth secrets.’²⁶

And he knew her again no more.²⁷ Samuel the elder, father-in-law of R. Samuel b. Ammi said in the name of R. Samuel b. Ammi: Having once known her,²⁸ he did not separate from her again. It is written here, ‘And he knew her again no more [Yasaf], and elsewhere it is written: With a great voice increasing [Yasaf].’²⁹

ABSALOM GLORIED IN HIS HAIR etc. Our Rabbis have taught: Absalom rebelled [against his father] through his hair, as it is said: There was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty . . . And when he polled his head, now it was at every year's end that he polled it because the hair was heavy on him therefore he polled it, he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred shekels, after the king's weight.³⁰ It has been taught that [the king's weight] was the weight with which the men of Tiberias and Sepphoris weigh. Therefore he was hanged by his hair, as it is said: And Absalom chanced to meet the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon his mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth.; and the mule that was under him went on.³¹ He took a sword and wished to cut himself loose;³² but it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael, At that moment Sheol was split asunder beneath him.³³

And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept; and as he went, thus he said: O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son.³⁴ And the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, O my son Absalom, O Absalom my son, my son.³⁵ Why is ‘my son’ repeated eight times? Seven to raise him from the seven divisions of Gehinnom; and as for the last, some say to unite his [severed] head to his body and others say to bring him into the World to Come.

Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up.³⁶ What means ‘had taken’? — Resh Lakish said: He had made a bad purchase for himself.³⁷ The pillar which is in the king's dale, etc. — R. Hanina b. Papa said: In the deep plan of the King of the Universe;³⁸

as it is written: I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house.¹ Similarly it is stated: So he sent him [Joseph] out of the vale of Hebron.² R. Hanina b. Papa said: [The meaning is:] It was through the deep plan of that righteous man [Abraham] who had been buried in Hebron; as it is written: Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs.³

For he said: I have no son.⁴ Had he, then, no sons? Behold it is written: And unto Absalom there were born three sons and one daughter!⁵ — R. Isaac b. Abdimi said: [His meaning was] that he had no son fit for the kingship. R. Hisda said: There is a tradition that whoever burns his neighbour's produce will not leave a son to succeed him; and he [Absalom] had burnt [the produce] of Joab, as it is written: Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there; go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.⁶

IT IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD. MIRIAM etc. Is this like [the other cases mentioned]? There she waited a short while [for Moses], here [the Israelites waited for her] seven days?⁷ — Abaye said: Read that in connection with the good [the principle of measure for measure] does not apply. Raba said to him, But the Mishnah teaches IT IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD! But, said Raba, the Mishnah must be understood thus: It is the same in connection with the good that there is the same measure; nevertheless the measure in the case of the good is greater than the measure in the case of punishment.⁸

And his sister stood afar off.⁹ R. Isaac said: The whole of this verse is spoken with reference to the Shechinah: 'and stood', as it is written: And the Lord came and stood etc.¹⁰ 'His sister', as it is written: Say unto wisdom, thou art my Sister.¹¹ 'Afar off, as it is written: The Lord appeared from afar unto me.¹² 'To know', as it is written: For the Lord is a God of knowledge.¹³ 'What', as it is written: What doth the Lord require of thee?¹⁴ 'Done', as it is written: Surely the Lord God will do nothing.¹⁵ 'To him', as it is written: And called it Lord is peace.¹⁶

Now there arose a new king etc.¹⁷ Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said that he was really new, while the other said that his decrees were made new. He who said that he was really new did so because it is written 'new'; and he who said that his decrees were made new did so because it is not stated that [the former king] died and he reigned [in his stead]. Who knew not Joseph — he was like one who did not know [Joseph] at all.

And he said unto his people, Behold the people of the children of Israel.¹⁸ A Tanna taught: He [Pharaoh] originated the plan first, and therefore was punished first. He originated the plan first, as it is written: And he said unto his people; therefore he was punished first, as it is written: Upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.¹⁹

Come, let us deal wisely with him²⁰ — it should have been with them! — R. Hama b. Hanina said: [Pharaoh meant,] Come and let us outwit the Saviour of Israel. With what shall we afflict them? If we afflict them with fire, it is written: For, behold the Lord will come with fire,²¹ and it continues, For by fire will the Lord plead etc.²² [If we afflict them] with the sword, it is written: And by His sword with all flesh.²³ But come and let us afflict them with water, because the Holy One, blessed be He, has already sworn that he will not bring a flood upon the world; as it is said: For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me, etc.²⁴ They were unaware, however, that He would not bring a flood upon the whole world but upon one people He would bring it; or alternatively, He would not bring [the flood] but they would go and fall into it. Thus it says: And the Egyptians fled towards it.²⁵ This is what R. Eleazar said: What means that which is written: Yea, in the thing wherein they zadu [dealt proudly] against them?²⁶ In the pot in which they cooked were they cooked. Whence is it learnt that 'zadu' means cooking? — Because it is written: And Jacob sod [wa-yazed] pottage.²⁷

R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Simai: There were three in that plan,²⁸ viz. Balaam, Job²⁹ and Jethro. Balaam who devised it was slain; Job who silently acquiesced was afflicted with sufferings; Jethro, who fled, merited that his descendants should sit in the Chamber of Hewn Stone,³⁰ as it is said: And the families of scribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, the Sucathites. These are the Kenites that came of Hammath, the father of the house of Rechab;³¹ and it is written: And the children of the Kenite, Moses' father-in-law etc.³²

And fight against us and get them up out of the land³³ — it should have read 'and we will get us up!'³⁴ — R. Abba b. Kahana said: It is like a man who curses himself and hangs the curse upon somebody else.

Therefore they did set over him taskmasters³⁵ — it should have read 'over them'! — It was taught in the School of R. Eleazar b. Simeon, It indicates that they brought a brick-mould and hung it round Pharaoh's neck; and every Israelite who complained that he was weak was told, 'Art thou weaker than Pharaoh?'

Missim ['taskmasters'] — i.e., something which forms [mesim].³⁶ 'To afflict him with their burdens' - it should have read 'them'! — The [meaning is] to afflict Pharaoh with the burdens of Israel.³⁷

And they built for Pharaoh store cities [miskenoth]. Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said, [They were so called] because they endangered [mesakkenoth] their owners,³⁸ while the other said because they impoverished [memaskenoth] their owners,³⁹ for a master has declared that whoever occupies himself with building becomes impoverished.⁴⁰

Pithom and Raamses³⁵ — Rab and Samuel differ [in their interpretation];⁴¹ one said: Its real name was Pithom, and why was it called Raamses? Because one building after another collapsed [mithroses]. The other said that its real name was Raamses, and why was it called Pithom? Because the mouth of the deep [pi tehom] swallowed up one building after another.

But the more they afflicted him, the more he will multiply and the more he will spread abroad⁴² — it should have read 'the more they multiplied and the more they spread abroad! — Resh Lakish said: The Holy Spirit announced to them. 'The more he will multiply and the more he will spread abroad'.

And they were grieved [wa-yakuzu] because of the children of Israel⁴² — this teaches that they were like thorns [kozim] in their eyes.

with rigour [parek].¹ R. Eleazar said: [It means] with a tender mouth [peh rak];² R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: [It means] with rigorous work [perikah]. And they made their lives bitter with hard service, in mortar and in brick etc. Raba said: At first it was in mortar and in brick; but finally it was in all manner of service in the field. All their service wherein they made them serve with rigour.³ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: They changed men's work for the women and the women's work for the men; and even he who explained [parek] above as meaning ‘with tender mouth’ admits that here it means ‘with rigorous work’.

R. Awira expounded: As the reward for the righteous women who lived in that generation were the Israelites delivered from Egypt. When they went to draw water, the Holy One, blessed be He, arranged that small fishes should enter their pitchers, which they drew up half full of water and half full of fishes. They then set two pots on the fire, one for hot water and the other for the fish, which they carried to their husbands in the field, and washed, anointed, fed, gave them to drink and had intercourse with them among the sheepfolds, as it is said: When ye lie among the sheepfolds etc.⁴ As the reward for ‘When ye lie among the sheepfolds’, the Israelites merited the spoliation of the Egyptians, as it is said: As the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her pinions with yellow gold.⁵ After the women had conceived they returned to their homes; and when the time of childbirth arrived, they went and were delivered in the field beneath the apple-tree, as it is said: Under the apple-tree I caused thee to come forth [from thy mother's womb] etc.⁶ The Holy One, blessed be He, sent down someone from the high heavens who washed and straightened the limbs [of the babes] in the same manner that a midwife straightens the limbs of a child; as it is said: And as for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to cleanse thee.⁷ He also provided for them two cakes, one of oil and one of honey, as it is said: And He made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil etc.⁸ When the Egyptians noticed them, they went to kill them; but a miracle occurred on their behalf so that they were swallowed in the ground, and [the Egyptians] brought oxen and ploughed over them, as it is said: The ploughers ploughed upon my back.⁹ After they had departed, [the Israelite women with their babes] broke through [the earth] and came forth like the herbage of the field, as it is said: I caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field;¹⁰ and when [the babes] had grown up, they came in flocks to their homes, as it is said: And thou didst increase and wax great and didst come with ornaments¹¹ — read not with ornaments [ba'adi ‘adayim] but in flocks [be'edre ‘adarim]. At the time the Holy One, blessed be He, revealed Himself by the Red Sea, they recognised Him first, as it is said: This is my God and I will praise Him.¹²

And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives etc.¹³ Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said they were mother and daughter, and the other said they were daughter-in-law and mother-in-law. According to him who declared they were mother and daughter, they were Jochebed and Miriam; and according to him who declared they were daughter-in-law and mother-in-law, they were Jochebed and Elisheba.¹⁴ There is a teaching in agreement with him who said they were mother and daughter; for it has been taught: ‘Shiphrah’¹⁵ is Jochebed; and why was her name called Shiphrah? Because she straightened [meshappereth] the limbs of the babe. Another explanation of Shiphrah is that the Israelites were fruitful [sheparu] and multiplied in her days. ‘Pu'ah’ is Miriam; and why was her name called Puah? Because she cried out [po'ah] to the child¹⁶ and brought it forth. Another explanation of Pu'ah is that she used to cry out through the Holy Spirit¹⁷ and say: ‘My mother will bear a son who will be the saviour of Israel’.

And he said: When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women etc.¹⁸ What means ‘obnayim’?¹⁹ R. Hanan said: He entrusted them with an important sign and told them that when a woman bends to deliver a child, her thighs grow cold like stones [‘abanim’].²⁰ Another explains [the word ‘obnayim’] in accordance with what is written: Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought his work on the wheels.²¹ As in the case of a potter, there is a thigh on one side, a thigh on the other side and the wooden block in between, so also with a woman there is a thigh on one side, a thigh on the other side and the child in between.

If it be a son, then ye shall kill him.²² R. Hanina said: He entrusted them with an important sign, viz., if it is a son, his face is turned downward and if a daughter, her face is turned upward.²³ But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt spoke to them.²⁴ Instead of alehen [‘to them’] we should have had ‘lahen’!²⁵ — R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: It teaches that he solicited them for immoral intercourse,²⁶ but they refused to yield. But saved the men children alive — A Tanna taught: Not only did they not put them to death, but they supplied them with water and food.²⁷ And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Behold the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women etc.²⁸ What means hayoth?²⁹ If it is to say they were actually midwives,³⁰ do you infer that a midwife does not require another midwife to deliver her child! — But [the meaning is] they said to him, This people are compared to an animal [hayyah] — Judah [is called] a lion's whelp,³¹ of Dan [it is said] Dan shall be a serpent,³² Naphtali [is called] a hind let loose,³³ Issachar a strong ass;³⁴ Joseph a firstling bullock;³⁵ Benjamin a wolf that ravineth.³⁶ [Of those sons of Jacob where a comparison with an animal] is written in connection with them, it is written: but [in the instances where such a comparison] is not written, there is the text: What was thy mother? A lioness; she couched among lions etc.³⁷

And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that He made them houses.³⁸ Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said they are the priestly and Levitical houses, and the other said they are the royal houses. One who says they are the priestly and Levitical houses: Aaron and Moses; and one who says they are the royal houses: for also David descended from Miriam, as it is written: And Azubah died, and Caleb took unto him Ephrath, which bare him Hur,³⁹ and it is written: Now David was the son of that Ephrathite etc.⁴⁰

And Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife and of Jerioth,’ and these were her sons: Jeshur and Shobab and Ardon.⁴¹ ‘The son of Hezron’? He was the son of Jephunneh!⁴² — [It means] that he was a son who turned [panah] from the counsel of the spies. Still, he was the son of Kenaz, as it is written: And Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother, took it!⁴³ — Raba said: He was the stepson of Kenaz.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 12a

There is also evidence for this, since it is written, [And Caleb the son of Jephunneh] the Kenizzite.¹ Conclude, therefore, that Azubah is identical with Miriam; and why was her name called Azubah? Because all men forsook her ['azabuhah] at first.² 'Bogat!'³ But he was married to her! — R. Johanan said: Whoever marries a woman for the name of heaven,⁴ the text ascribes it to him as though he had begotten her. 'Jerioth' — [she was so named] because her face was like curtains.⁵ 'And these were her sons' — read not baneha [her sons] but boneha [her builders].⁶ 'Jesher' [he was so called] because he set himself right [yishsher].⁷ 'Shobab' — [he was so called] because he turned his inclination aside [shibbeb].⁸ 'And Ardon' — [he was so called] because he disciplined [radah] his inclination. Others say: Because his face was like a rose [wered].

And Ashhur the father of Tekoa had two wives, Helah and Naarah.⁹ Ashhur is identical with Caleb; and why was his name called Ashhur? Because his face was blackened [hushheru] through his fasts.¹⁰ ‘The father’- he became a father to her.¹¹ ‘Tekoa’- he fixed [taka] his heart on his Father in heaven.¹² ‘Had two wives’ — [this means] Miriam became like two wives. ‘Helah and Naarah’ — she was not both Helah and Naarah, but at first she was Helah [an invalid] and finally Naarah [a young girl].¹³ And the sons of Helah were Zereth, Zohar and Ethnan.¹⁴ ‘Zereth’ — [Miriam was so called] — because she became the rival [zarah] of her contemporaries [in beauty]. ‘Zohar’ — because her face was [beautiful] like the noon [zoharayim]. ‘Ethnan’ — because whoever saw her took a present [‘ethnan] to his wife.¹⁵

And Pharaoh charged all his people.¹⁶ R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: He imposed the same decree upon his own people.¹⁷ R. Jose son of R. Hanina also said: He made three decrees: first, ‘if it be a son, then ye shall kill him’; then ‘every son that is born ye shall cast into the river’; and finally he imposed the same decree upon his own people.

And there went a man of the house of Levi.¹⁸ Where did he go? R. Judah b. Zebina said that he went in the counsel of his daughter. A Tanna taught: Amram was the greatest man of his generation; when he saw that the wicked Pharaoh had decreed ‘Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river’, he said: In vain do we labour. He arose and divorced his wife.¹⁹ All [the Israelites] thereupon arose and divorced their wives. His daughter said to him, ‘Father, thy decree is more severe than Pharaoh’s; because Pharaoh decreed only against the males whereas thou hast decreed against the males and females. Pharaoh only decreed concerning this world whereas thou hast decreed concerning this world and the World to Come.²⁰ In the case of the wicked Pharaoh there is a doubt whether his decree will be fulfilled or not, whereas in thy case, though thou art righteous, it is certain that thy decree will be fulfilled, as it is said: Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee!²¹ He arose and took his wife back; and they all arose and took their wives back.

And took to wife¹⁸ — it should have read ‘and took back’!²² R. Judah b. Zebina said: — He acted towards her as though it had been the first marriage; he seated her in a palanquin, Aaron and Miriam danced before her, and the Ministering Angels proclaimed, A joyful mother of children.²³

A daughter of Levi.¹⁸ How is this possible! She was one hundred and thirty years old, and he calls her ‘a daughter’! (For R. Hama b. Hanina said: This²⁴ refers to Jochebed whose conception occurred during the journey [to Egypt] and her birth between the walls;²⁵ as it is said: Who was born to Levi in Egypt²⁶ — her birth occurred in Egypt but her conception did not occur there.)²⁷ — Rab Judah said: [She is called ‘a daughter’] because the signs of maidenhood were reborn in her.²⁸

And the woman conceived and bare a son.²⁹ But she had already been pregnant three months!³⁰ — R. Judah b. Zebina said: It compares the bearing of the child to its conception; as the conception was painless so was the bearing painless. Hence [it is learnt] that righteous women were not included in the decree upon Eve.³¹

And when she saw him that he was good.²⁹ It has been taught: R. Meir says: His name was Tob [good]; R. Judah says: His name was Tobiah; R. Nehemiah says: [She foresaw that he would be] worthy of the prophetic gift; others say: He was born circumcised; and the Sages declare, At the time when Moses was born, the whole house was filled with light — it is written here, And when she saw him that he was good, and elsewhere it is written: And God saw the light that it was good.³²

She hid him three months.²⁹ [She was able to do this] because the Egyptians only counted [the period of her pregnancy] from the time that she was restored [to youth], but she was then already pregnant three months.

And when she could not longer hide him³³ — why? She should have gone on hiding him! — But whenever the Egyptians were informed that a child was born, they would take other children there so that it should hear them [crying] and cry with them; as it is written: Take us the foxes, the little foxes etc.³⁴

She took for him an ark of bulrushes³³ — why just bulrushes? R. Eleazar said: Hence [it is learnt] that to the righteous their money is dearer than their body;³⁵ and why so? — That they should not stretch out their hand to robbery.³⁶ R. Samuel b. Nahmani says: [She selected them] because they are a soft material which can withstand both soft and hard materials.³⁷

And daubed it with slime and with pitch³⁸ — A Tanna taught: The slime was inside and the pitch outside so that that righteous child should not smell the bad odour.

And she put the child therein and laid it in the reeds [suf]³⁸ — R. Eleazar said: In the Red [suf] Sea; R. Samuel b. Nahmani said:

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 12b

It means reeds, as it is written: The reeds and flags shall wither away.¹

And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe at the river.² R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: It teaches that she went down there to cleanse herself of her father's idols;³ and thus it says: When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion etc.⁴ And her maidens walked along etc.⁵ R. Johanan said: The word for 'walk' means nothing else than death; and thus it says: Behold I am going to die.⁶ And she saw the ark among the reeds.² When [the maidens] saw that she wished to rescue Moses, they said to her, 'Mistress, it is the custom of the world that when a human king makes a decree, though everybody else does not obey it, at least his children and the members of his household obey it; but thou dost transgress thy father's decree!' Gabriel came and beat them to the ground.

And sent her handmaid to fetch it² — R. Judah and R. Nehemiah [differ in their interpretation]; one said that the word means 'her hand' and the other said that it means 'her handmaid'. He who said that it means 'her hand' did so because it is written ammathah;⁷ he who said that it means 'her handmaid' did so because the text has not yadah [her hand]. But according to him who said that it means 'her handmaid', it has just been stated that Gabriel came and beat them to the ground!⁸ — He left her one, because it is not customary for a king's daughter to be unattended. But according to him who said that it means 'her hand', the text should have been yadah! — It teaches us that [her arm] became lengthened; for a master has said: You find it so⁹ with the arm of Pharaoh's daughter and similarly with the teeth of the wicked, as it is written: Thou hast broken [shibbarta] the teeth of the wicked,¹⁰ and Resh Lakish said: Read not shibbarta but shirbapta [thou has lengthened].¹¹

She opened it and saw the child¹² — it should have been 'and saw'. R. Jose b. R. Hanina said: She saw the Shechinah with him.¹³

And, behold, the boy wept¹² — he is called a 'child' and then a 'boy'! — A Tanna taught: He was a child but his voice was like that of a grown boy; such is the view of R. Judah. R. Nehemiah said to him, If so, you have made our master Moses into one possessed of a blemish;¹⁴ but it teaches that his mother made for him a canopy [such as is used at the marriage] of boys¹⁵ in the ark, saying: 'Perhaps I may not be worthy [to be present at] his marriage-canopy'.

And she had compassion on him and said: Of the Hebrews' children is this.¹² How did she know it? — R. Jose b. R. Hanina said: Because she saw that he was circumcised. 'Is this' — R. Johanan said: It teaches that she unwittingly prophesied that 'this' one will fall [into the river] but no other will fall.¹⁶ That is what R. Eleazar said: What means the text: And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards, that chirp and that mutter?¹⁷ They foresee and know not what they foresee; they mutter and know not what they mutter. They saw that Israel's saviour would be punished through water; so they arose and decreed, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river.¹⁸ After they had thrown Moses [into the water], they said: 'We do not see that sign any longer';¹⁹ they thereupon rescinded their decree. But they knew not that he was to be punished through the water of Meribah.²⁰ That is what R. Hama b. Hanina said: What means the text: These are the waters of Meribah, because they strove?²¹ These are [the waters] about which Pharaoh's magicians saw and erred; and concerning this Moses said: Six hundred thousand footmen etc.²² Moses said to Israel, 'On my account were all of you delivered [from drowning by the edict of Pharaoh]'.

R. Hanina b. Papa said: That day²³ was the twenty-first of Nisan,²⁴ and the Ministering Angels spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He, 'Lord of the Universe! Shall he who will utter a song to Thee by the Red Sea on this day be punished on this day?' R. Aha b. Hanina said: That day was the sixth of Sivan,²⁵ and the Ministering Angels spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He, 'Lord of the Universe! Shall he who will receive the Torah on Mount Sinai on this day be punished on this day?' It is quite right according to him who said that it was the sixth of Sivan, for then it occurred three months [after his birth]; for a master has said: Moses died on the seventh of Adar²⁶ and was born on the seventh of Adar, and from the seventh of Adar to the sixth of Sivan is three months. But according to him who said that it was the twenty-first of Nisan, how could it have been?²⁷ — That year was a leap year;²⁸ the greater part of the first [Adar] and the greater part of the last [Nisan] and a full month in between.²⁹

Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the Hebrew women?³⁰ Why just 'of the Hebrew women'? — It teaches that they handed Moses about to all the Egyptian women but he would not suck. He³¹ said: Shall a mouth which will speak with the Shechinah suck what is unclean! That is what is written: Whom will He teach knowledge etc.?³² — To whom will He teach knowledge and to whom will He make the message understandable? To them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts.

And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Go etc.³³ R. Eleazar said: It teaches that she went quickly like a young woman.³⁴ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: [She is called] the maid [‘almah] because she made the words secret.³⁵

And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away.³⁶ R. Hama b. Hanina said: She prophesied without knowing what she prophesied — Heliki [‘take away’] — behold what is thine [ha sheliki].

And I will give thee thy wages.³⁶ R. Hama b. Hanina said: Not enough that the righteous have their loss restored to them but they also receive their reward in addition.

And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took etc.³⁷ The ‘sister of Aaron’ and not the sister of Moses! — R. Amram said in the name of Rab, and according to others it was R. Nahman who said in the name of Rab: It teaches that she prophesied while she yet was the sister of Aaron only³⁸ and said: 'My mother will bear a son who will be the saviour of Israel'. When Moses was born, the whole house was filled with light; and her father arose and kissed her upon her head, saying 'My daughter, thy prophecy has been fulfilled'; but when they cast him into the river, her father arose and smacked her upon her head, saying: 'Where, now, is thy prophecy!' That is what is written: And his sister stood afar off to know what would be done to him¹ — what would be the fate of her prophecy.

JOSEPH EARNED MERIT etc. Why the difference that first it is written: And Joseph went up to bury his father, and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh etc.,² followed by, And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house,³ and in the sequel it is written: And Joseph returned into Egypt, he and his brethren,⁴ followed by, And all that went up with him to bury his father? — R. Johanan said: At first, before [the servants of Pharaoh] beheld the glory of the Israelites, they did not treat them with respect;⁵ but in the sequel, when they beheld their glory, they treated them with respect. For it is written: And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad;⁶ but is there a threshing-floor for brambles? — R. Abbahu said: It teaches that they surrounded Jacob's coffin with crowns like a threshing-floor which is surrounded with a hedge of brambles, because the sons of Esau, of Ishmael and of Keturah also came. A Tanna taught: They all came to wage war [against the Israelites]; but when they saw Joseph's crown hanging upon Jacob's coffin, they all took their crowns and hung them upon his coffin. A Tanna taught: Sixty-three crowns were hung upon Jacob's coffin.

And there they lamented with a very great and sore lamentation.⁷ It has been taught: Even the horses and asses [joined in the lamentation]. When [the cortege] arrived at the Cave of Machpelah, Esau came and wished to prevent [the interment there], saying to them, Mamre, Kiriath-arba, the same is Hebron⁸ — now R. Isaac has said: Kiriath-arba [is so called] because four couples [were buried there], viz. Adam and Eve, Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, and Jacob and Leah — [Jacob] had buried Leah in his portion and what remains belongs to me'. They replied to him, 'Thou didst sell it'. He said to them, 'Granted that I sold my birth-right, but did I sell my plain heir's right!' They replied: 'Yes, for it is written: In my grave which I [Jacob] have digged for me',⁹ and R. Johanan has said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: The word kirah [dig] means nothing else than 'sale' [mekirah], and thus in the coast-towns they use kirah as a term for 'sale'. — He said to them, 'Produce a document [of sale] for me'. They replied to him, 'The document is in the land of Egypt. Who will go for it? Let Naphtali go, because he is swift as a hind'; for it is written: Naphtali is a hind let loose, he giveth goodly words¹⁰ — R. Abbahu said: Read not 'goodly words' [imre shefer] but imre sefer [words of a document]. Among those present was Hushim, a son of Dan, who was hard of hearing; so he asked them, 'What is happening?' They said to him, '[Esau] is preventing [the burial] until Naphtali returns from the land of Egypt'. He retorted: 'Is my grandfather to lie there in contempt until Naphtali returns from the land of Egypt!' He took a club and struck [Esau] on the head so that his eyes fell out and rolled to the feet of Jacob. Jacob opened his eyes and laughed; and that is what is written: The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance; he shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.¹¹ At that time was the prophecy of Rebekah fulfilled, as it is written: Why should I be bereaved of you both in one day?¹² Although the death of the two of them did not occur on the one day, still their burial took place on the same day. — But if Joseph had not occupied himself with [Jacob's burial], would not his brethren have occupied themselves with it? Behold it is written: For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan!¹³ — They said [among themselves], 'Leave him [to conduct the interment]; for the honour [of our father] will be greater [when it is conducted] by kings than by commoners'.

WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN JOSEPH etc.? Our Rabbis have taught: Come and see how beloved were the commandments by Moses our teacher; for whereas all the Israelites occupied themselves with the spoil, he occupied himself with the commandments, as it is said: The wise in heart will receive commandments etc.¹⁴ But whence did Moses know the place where Joseph was buried? — It is related that Serah, daughter of Asher, was a survivor of that generation. Moses went to her and asked: 'Dost thou know where Joseph was buried?' She answered him, 'The Egyptians made a metal coffin for him which they fixed in the river Nile so that its waters should be blessed'. Moses went and stood on the bank of the Nile and exclaimed: 'Joseph, Joseph! the time has arrived which the Holy One, blessed be He, swore, "I will deliver you", and the oath which thou didst impose upon the Israelites¹⁵ has reached [the time of fulfilment]; if thou wilt shew thyself, well and good; otherwise, behold, we are free of thine oath'. Immediately Joseph's coffin floated [on the surface of the water]. Be not astonished that iron should float; for, behold, it is written: As one was felling a beam, the axe-head fell into the water etc. Alas, my master, for it was borrowed. And the man of God said: Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he cut down a stick and cast it in thither, and made the iron to swim.¹⁶ Now cannot the matter be argued by a fortiori reasoning — if iron floated on account of Elisha who was the disciple of Elijah who was the disciple of Moses, how much more so on account of Moses our teacher! R. Nathan says: He was buried in the sepulchre of the kings; and Moses went and stood by the sepulchre of the kings and exclaimed. 'Joseph! the time has arrived which the Holy One, blessed be He, swore "I will deliver you", and the oath which thou didst impose upon the Israelites has reached [the time of fulfilment]; if thou wilt shew thyself, well and good; otherwise, behold, we are free of thine oath'. At that moment, Joseph's coffin shook, and Moses took it and carried it with him. All those years that the Israelites were in the wilderness, those two chests, one of the dead and the other of the Shechinah,¹⁷ proceeded side by side, and passersby used to ask: 'What is the nature of those two chests?' They received the reply: 'One is of the dead and the other of the Shechinah'. 'But is it, then, the way of the dead to proceed with the Shechinah?' They were told,

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 13b

'This one [Joseph] fulfilled all that was written in the other'.¹ But if Moses had not occupied himself with him, would not the Israelites have occupied themselves with him? Behold, it is written: And the bones of Joseph which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt buried they in Shechem!² Furthermore, if the Israelites had not occupied themselves with him, would not his own sons have done so? And, behold, it is written: And they became the inheritance of the children of Joseph!³ — They⁴ said [to one another], 'Leave him; his honour will be greater [when the burial is performed] by many rather than by few'; and they also said: 'Leave him; his honour will be greater [when the burial is performed] by the great rather than by the small'.

Buried they in Shechem.³ Why just in Shechem? — R. Hama son of R. Hanina said: From Shechem they stole him,⁵ and to Shechem we will restore what is lost. The following verses are contradictory: it is written: And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him,⁶ and it is written: And the bones of Joseph which the children of Israel brought up⁷ etc.! — R. Hama son of R. Hanina said: Whoever performs a task without finishing it and another comes and completes it, Scripture ascribes it to the one who completed it as though he had performed it. R. Eleazar said: He⁸ is likewise deposed from his greatness; for it is written: And it came to pass at that time that Judah went down.⁹ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: He also buries his wife and children; for it is written: Shua's daughter, the wife of Judah, died etc.,¹⁰ and it is written: But Er and Onan died.¹¹

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Why was Joseph called 'bones' during his lifetime?¹² Because he did not interfere to safeguard his father's honour when [his brothers] said to him, Thy servant our father¹³ and he made no reply to them. Rab Judah also said in the name of Rab, and others declare that it was R. Hama son of R. Hanina: Why did Joseph die before his brothers? Because he gave himself superior airs.

And Joseph was brought down to Egypt.¹⁴ R. Eleazar said: Read not 'was brought down' but 'brought down', because he brought Pharaoh's astrologers down from their eminence.¹⁵ And Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's bought him, Rab said: He bought him for himself;¹⁶ but Gabriel came and castrated him,¹⁷ and then Gabriel came and mutilated him [pera'], for originally his name is written Potiphar but afterwards Potiphera.¹⁸

WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN MOSES etc. And the Lord said unto me, Let it suffice thee.¹⁹ R. Levi said: With the word 'suffice' [Moses] made an announcement and with the word 'suffice' an announcement was made to him. With the word 'suffice' he made an announcement: 'Suffice you';²⁰ and with the word 'suffice' an announcement was made to him: 'Let it suffice thee'. Another explanation of 'Let it suffice [rab] thee' is, Thou hast a master [rab], viz., Joshua.²¹ Another explanation of 'Let it suffice thee' is, That people should not say: How severe the Master is and how persistent the pupil is.²² And why so? In the School of R. Ishmael it was taught: According to the camel is the burden.²³

And he said unto them, I am an hundred and twenty years old this day.²⁴ Why does the text state 'this day?' [The meaning is], This day are my days and years completed.²⁵ Its purpose is to teach you that the Holy One, blessed be He, completes the years of the righteous from day to day, and from month to month; for it is written: The number of thy days I will fulfil.²⁶ I can no more go out and come in²⁴ — what means 'go out and come in'? If it is to be understood literally, behold it is written: And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died; his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated;²⁷ it is also written: And Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto mount Nebo;²⁸ and it has been taught: Twelve steps were there, but Moses mounted them in one stride! — R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: [It means] to 'go out and come in' with words of Torah, thus indicating that the gates of wisdom were closed against him. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tent of meeting.²⁹ A Tanna taught: That was a Sabbath when two teachers [gave discourses] and the authority was taken from one to be transferred to the other. It has further been taught: R. Judah said: Were it not for a Scriptural text, it would be impossible to utter the following. Where did Moses die? In the portion of Reuben, for it is written: And Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto mount Nebo, and Nebo was located in the portion of Reuben, for it is written: And the children of Reuben built . . . and Nebo etc.³⁰ — It was called Nebo because three prophets [nebi'im] died there, viz. Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. — And where was Moses buried? In the portion of Gad, for it is written: And he provided the first part for himself etc.³¹ Now what was the distance between the portion of Reuben and that of Gad? Four mil.³² Who carried him those four mil? It teaches that Moses was laid upon the wings of the Shechinah, and the Ministering

Angels kept proclaiming, He executed the justice of the Lord, and His judgments with Israel,³³ and the Holy One, blessed be He, declared: Who will rise up for Me against the evil-doers? Who will stand up for Me against the workers of iniquity?³⁴

Samue³⁵ said [that God declared], Who is as the wise man? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing?³⁶ R. Johanan said [that God declared], Where shall wisdom be found?³⁷ R. Nahman said [that God announced], So Moses died there etc.³⁸ Semalyon³⁹ said: So Moses died there, the great Sage of Israel.⁴⁰

It has been taught: R. Eliezer the Elder said: Over an area of twelve mil square, corresponding to that of the camp of Israel, a Bath Kol made the proclamation, ‘So Moses died there’, the great Sage of Israel. Others declare that Moses never died; it is written here, ‘So Moses died there’, and elsewhere it is written: And he was there with the Lord.⁴¹ As in the latter passage it means standing and ministering, so also in the former it means standing and ministering.

And He buried him in the valley in the land of Moab over against Beth-peor.⁴² R. Berechyah said: Although [Scripture provides] a clue within a clue, nevertheless no man knoweth of his sepulchre.⁴² The wicked Government once sent to the governor¹ of Beth-peor [the message], 'Shew us where Moses is buried'. When they stood above, it appeared to them to be below; when they were below, it appeared to them to be above. They divided themselves into two parties; to them who were standing above it appeared below, and to those who were below it appeared above. This is in fulfilment of what is said: 'No man knoweth of his sepulchre'. R. Hama son of R. Hanina said: Even Moses our teacher does not know where he is buried; it is written here, 'No man knoweth of his sepulchre', and it is written elsewhere, And this is the blessing wherewith Moses the man of God blessed.² R. Hama son of R. Hanina also said: Why was Moses buried near Beth-peor? To atone for the incident at Peor.³

R. Hama son of R. Hanina further said: What means the text: Ye shall walk after the Lord your God?⁴ Is it, then, possible for a human being to walk after the Shechinah; for has it not been said: For the Lord thy God is a devouring fire?⁵ But [the meaning is] to walk after the attributes of the Holy One, blessed be He. As He clothes the naked, for it is written: And the Lord God made for Adam and for his wife coats of skin, and clothed them,⁶ so do thou also clothe the naked. The Holy One, blessed be He, visited the sick, for it is written: And the Lord appeared unto him by the oaks of Mamre,⁷ so do thou also visit the sick. The Holy One, blessed be He, comforted mourners, for it is written: And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son,⁸ so do thou also comfort mourners. The Holy one, blessed be He, buried the dead, for it is written: And He buried him in the valley,⁹ so do thou also bury the dead.

'Coats of skin' — Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said that it means a material that grows from the skin, and the other a material from which the [human] skin derives pleasure.¹⁰

R. Simlai expounded: Torah begins with an act of benevolence¹¹ and ends with an act of benevolence. It begins with an act of benevolence, for it is written: And the Lord God made for Adam and for his wife coats of skin, and clothed them;¹² and it ends with an act of benevolence, for it is written: ‘And He buried him in the valley’.

R. Simlai expounded: Why did Moses our teacher yearn to enter the land of Israel? Did he want to eat of its fruits or satisfy himself from its bounty? But thus spake Moses, ‘Many precepts were commanded to Israel which can only be fulfilled in the land of Israel. I wish to enter the land so that they may all be fulfilled by me’. The Holy One, blessed be He, said to him, ‘Is it only to receive the reward [for obeying the commandments] that thou seekest? I ascribe it to thee as if thou didst perform them’; as it is said: Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors; yet he bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.¹³ ‘Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great’ — it is possible [to think that his portion will be] with the [great of] later generations and not former generations; therefore there is a text to declare, ‘And he shall divide with the strong’, i.e., with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob who were strong in Torah and the commandments. ‘Because he poured out his soul unto death’ — because he surrendered himself to die, as it is said: And if not, blot me, I pray thee etc.¹⁴ ‘And was numbered with the transgressors’ — because he was numbered with them who were condemned to die in the wilderness. ‘Yet he bare the sins of many’ — because he secured atonement for the making of the Golden Calf. ‘And made intercession for the transgressors’ — because he begged for mercy on behalf of the sinners in Israel that they should turn in penitence; and the word pegi’ah [‘intercession’] means nothing else than prayer, as it is said: Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to Me.¹⁵

MISHNAH. [THE HUSBAND] BRINGS HER MEAL-OFFERING¹⁶ IN A BASKET OF PALM-TWIGS AND PLACES IT UPON HER HANDS IN ORDER TO WEARY HER. WITH ALL OTHER MEAL-OFFERINGS, THE BEGINNING AND END OF THEIR [SACRIFICE] ARE IN MINISTERING VESSELS; BUT WITH THIS, ITS BEGINNING IS IN A BASKET OF PALM-TWIGS AND ITS END IN A MINISTERING VESSEL. ALL OTHER MEAL-OFFERINGS REQUIRE OIL AND FRANKINCENSE, BUT THIS REQUIRES NEITHER OIL NOR FRANKINCENSE. ALL OTHER MEAL-OFFERINGS CONSIST OF WHEAT, BUT THIS CONSISTS OF BARLEY. THE MEAL-OFFERING OF THE ‘OMER,¹⁷ ALTHOUGH CONSISTING OF BARLEY, WAS IN THE FORM OF GROATS; BUT THIS WAS IN THE FORM OF COARSE FLOUR. RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS: AS HER ACTIONS WERE THE ACTIONS OF AN ANIMAL, SO HER OFFERING [CONSISTED OF] ANIMAL’S FODDER. GEMARA. It has been taught: Abba Hanin says in the name of R. Eliezer: What is the purpose [of placing the basket upon her hands]? In order to weary her so that she may retract.¹⁸ If the Torah has such consideration¹⁹ for them who transgress His will, how much more so for them who perform His will. WITH ALL OTHER MEAL-OFFERINGS etc. The following is quoted in contradiction: How is the procedure of meal-offerings? A man brings a meal-offering from his house² in silver or golden baskets, places it in a ministering vessel, hallows it in a ministering vessel, adds to it its oil and frankincense, and carries it to a priest who carries it to the altar and brings it near unto the south-west corner opposite the point of the altar's horn, and that suffices. He then moves the frankincense to one side [of the vessel], takes a handful [of the flour] from a place where its oil is abundant, sets it in a ministering vessel, hallows it in a ministering vessel, gathers its frankincense and places it on the top thereof, and sets it upon the altar and fumigates it in a ministering vessel. He next salts [the handful of flour] and sets it upon the fire. When the handful has been offered, the remainder may be eaten, and the priests are allowed to mix it with wine, oil and honey, and are only forbidden to make it leaven.³ Now here it is taught that [meal-offerings are brought only] in silver or golden baskets!⁴ — R. Papa said: The correct version [of the Mishnah] is: in vessels which are proper to be used as ministering vessels. It therefore follows that a basket of palm-twigs is not proper to be used as a vessel. This would not agree with the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah; for it has been taught: As regards a ministering vessel of wood, Rabbi disqualifies it but R. Jose son of R. Judah allows it! — If you wish you may say that it is in accord even with the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, because he is referring to [wooden vessels which are] valuable, but does he say that with regard to [wooden vessels which are] inferior!⁵ Does R. Jose son of R. Judah not hold with the text: Present it now unto thy governor?⁶

‘Places it in a ministering vessel and hallows it in a ministering vessel’. Is the conclusion to be drawn from this that the ministering vessels only hallow when such is the intention!⁷ — The correct version is: places it in a ministering vessel in order to hallow it in a ministering vessel. ‘Adds to it its oil and frankincense’; as it is said: He shall pour oil upon it, and put frankincense thereon.⁸ ‘And carries it to a priest’; for it is written: And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons etc.⁹ ‘Who carries it to the altar’; for it is written: And he shall bring it unto the altar.¹⁰ Brings it near unto the south-west corner opposite the point of the altar's horn, and that suffices’. Whence is this? — For it is written: And this is the law of the meal-offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the Lord, before the altar;¹¹ and it has been taught: ‘Before the Lord’ — it is possible [to think that this means] on the west [side of the altar],¹² therefore the text declares, ‘Before the altar’.¹³ If [Scripture only had] ‘before the altar’, it is possible [to think that this means] on the south side, therefore the text declares, ‘Before the Lord’. So what was the procedure? He sets it on the south-west corner opposite the point of the altar's horn, and that suffices. R. Eleazar says: It is possible [to think that the meaning is] he sets it on the west of the horn or the south of the horn; but you can answer: Wherever you find two texts, one self-confirmatory and confirming the words of the other, whereas the second is self-confirmatory but annuls the words of the other, we abandon the latter and accept the former. Thus when you emphasize ‘before the Lord’ on the west [side of the altar],¹⁴ you annul ‘before the altar’ on the south side;¹⁵ but when you emphasize ‘before the altar’ on the south side,¹⁴ you confirm ‘before the Lord’ on the west side.¹⁴ What, then, is the procedure? He brings it on the south of the horn. But how do you confirm it?¹⁶ — R. Ashi said: This Tanna holds that the whole of the altar stood in the north.¹⁷

What means ‘and that suffices’?¹⁸ — R. Ashi said: It was necessary [to mention this], because otherwise it may have occurred to me to say that the bringing of the meal-offering itself [to the altar without the ministering vessel] is required. Consequently we are informed [that the contrary is the correct procedure]. But say that it is really so [and the ministering vessel is not necessary]! — The text states: And it shall be presented unto the priest, and he shall bring it unto the altar¹⁹ — as the presentation to the priest is in a [ministering] vessel, so also the bringing to the altar must be in a [ministering] vessel.

‘He then moves the frankincense to one side [of the vessel]’, so that none of it may be included in the handful taken of the meal-offering; as we have learnt: If, when he took a handful, there came into his hand a pebble or particle of salt or grain of frankincense, it is disqualified.²⁰ ‘Takes a handful [of flour] from a place where its oil is abundant’ — whence is this? For it is written: Of the fine flour thereof and of the oil thereof;²¹ of the bruised corn thereof and of the oil thereof.²² ‘Sets it in a ministering vessel and hallows it in a ministering vessel’ — for what purpose, since he has already hallowed it once? — It is analogous to the case of blood: although the knife²³ hallows it in the animal's neck, [the priest] again hallows it in a ministering vessel;²⁴ so here, too, there is no difference. ‘Gathers its frankincense and places it on the top thereof; for it is written: And all the frankincense which is upon the meal-offering.²⁵ 'And sets it upon the altar and fumigates it in a ministering vessel'. He fumigates it in a ministering vessel' [you say]!¹ — The correct version is: and sets it upon the altar in a ministering vessel to fumigate it. He next salts [the handful of flour] and sets it upon the fire'; for it is written: And every oblation of thy meal-offering shalt thou season with salt.² 'When the handful has been offered, the remainder may be eaten'. Whence is this? — For it is written: And the priest shall burn the memorial of it etc.,³ and it is written: And that which is left of the meal-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons'.⁴ 'When the handful has been offered etc.' — this⁵ is differently explained by two teachers; for it has been reported: From what time does the taking of the 'handful' render the eating of the remainder permissible? R. Hanina says: When the fire takes hold of it; R. Johanan said: When the fire burns the greater part of it. 'And the priests are allowed to mix it with wine, oil and honey' — for what reason? The text states: By reason of the anointing,⁶ i.e., as a mark of eminence, in the same manner as kings take their food. 'And are only forbidden to make it leaven'; for it is written: It shall not be baked with leaven, their portion⁷ — R. Simeon b. Lakish says: [It means] that even their portion must not be baked with leaven.

WITH ALL OTHER MEAL-OFFERINGS etc. But do all other meal-offerings⁸ require oil and frankincense? Behold, there is the meal-offering of the sinner concerning which the All-Merciful said: He shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon!⁹ — This is what he intends: All other meal-offerings require oil and frankincense, and consist of wheat in the form of fine flour; but the meal-offering of the sinner, although it does not require oil and frankincense, consists of wheat in the form of fine-flour; the meal-offering of the 'omer, although it consists of barley, requires oil and frankincense and is in the form of groats; but this one [of the suspected woman] does not require oil and frankincense, and consists of barley in the form of coarse flour.

It has been taught: R. Simeon said: It is right that the meal-offering of a sinner should require oil and frankincense, so that a sinner should not gain;¹⁰ why, then, are they not required? That his offering should not be luxurious. It is also right that an ordinary sin-offering¹¹ should require drink-offerings, so that a sinner should not gain; why, then, are they not required? That his offering should not be luxurious. The sin-offering of a leper, however, and his trespass-offering do require drink-offerings because they are not due to sin. But that is not so; for, behold R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: On account of seven faults does the plague of leprosy occur etc.!¹² — In this case he received atonement [of his sin] by the plague¹³ he suffered; and when he brings an offering, it is only to allow him to participate in what is holy.¹⁴ According to this conclusion, the sin-offering of a Nazirite should require drink-offerings, since it is not due to a sin! He holds with R. Eliezer ha-Kappar who said: A Nazirite is also a sinner.¹⁵

He had heard R. Meir say: She fed him with the dainties of the world; therefore her offering is animal's fodder.¹ Then said he to him, You may be right about a rich woman, but what of a poor woman! But [the reason is], As her actions were the action of an animal, so her offering [consisted of] animal's fodder.

MISHNAH. [THE PRIEST] TAKES AN EARTHENWARE BOWL AND POURS HALF A LOG OF WATER INTO IT FROM THE LAVER. R. JUDAH SAYS: A QUARTER [OF A LOG]. JUST AS [R. JUDAH] REDUCES THE AMOUNT OF WRITING,² SO HE REDUCES THE QUANTITY OF WATER. [THE PRIEST] ENTERS THE TEMPLE AND TURNS RIGHT. THERE WAS A PLACE THERE A CUBIT SQUARE IN EXTENT WITH A MARBLE TABLET, TO WHICH A RING WAS ATTACHED. HE LIFTS THIS OUT, TAKES SOME DUST FROM BENEATH IT WHICH HE PUTS [INTO THE BOWL] JUST SUFFICIENT TO BE VISIBLE ABOVE THE WATER; AS IT IS SAID, AND OF THE DUST THAT IS ON THE FLOOR OF THE TABERNACLE THE PRIEST SHALL TAKE, AND PUT IT INTO THE WATER.³

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: [The priest takes] a new earthenware bowl — such is the opinion of R. Ishmael. What is R. Ishmael's reason?⁴ — He derives it from the common use of the word 'vessel' [here and in the law] of a leper. As with the latter new earthenware was required, so here likewise was new earthenware required. Whence is it that there [with a leper it must be new]? — For it is written: And the priest shall command to kill one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water⁵ — as it must be running water which has not been previously used, so also it must be a vessel which has not been previously used. According to this argument, as there [with a leper] it had to be running water, so also here [with a suspected woman] it had to be running water! — In the view of R. Ishmael that is indeed so; for R. Johanan said the water from the laver⁶ was according to R. Ishmael spring-water, and the Sages declare that it can be ordinary water. It may, however, be objected [to this argument] that as with a leper it is necessary to have cedar wood, hyssop and scarlet,⁷ [so are these required with the water of bitterness]⁸ — Rabbah said: The text mentions in an earthen vessel,⁹ i.e., a vessel to which I referred previously.¹⁰ Raba said: [The Rabbis in our Mishnah] did not teach [that a used vessel may be employed] except when its exterior is not blackened [by smoke]; but if its exterior is blackened it is unfit for use. What is their reason? — It is analogous to the water: just as the water must not be changed in appearance,¹¹ so also the vessel must not be changed in appearance. Raba asked: How is it if the earthenware had been blackened and re-whitened by being passed through the furnace again? Do we say that since it has once been rejected, it remains rejected; or perhaps, since it has been restored, it is suitable? — Come and hear: ‘R. Eleazar says: If a man twisted cedar wood, scarlet and hyssop into a cord for the purpose of carrying his bundle on his back, they are unfit [to be used in the ceremony of purification];’ and yet they are here again smoothed out!¹² But in that case we suppose that [some of the material] has been peeled off.¹³

[THE PRIEST] ENTERS THE TEMPLE AND TURNS RIGHT etc. For what reason? Because a Master has declared: All the turns which thou dost make must only be to the right.

THERE WAS A PLACE THERE A CUBIT etc. Our Rabbis have taught: ‘And of the dust that is etc.’ — it is possible to think that [the priest] may prepare [dust] from outside and bring it in; therefore there is a text to state, ‘On the floor of the tabernacle’. If ‘on the floor of the tabernacle’, it is possible to think that he may dig for it with an axe; therefore there is a text to state ‘that is’. How was it done? If [dust] is there, take of it; if none is there, put some there [and take of it]. Another [Baraita] taught: ‘And of the dust that is’ — this teaches that he prepares some from outside and brings it in. ‘On the floor of the tabernacle’ — Issi b. Judah says: It includes the floor

(10) Viz., in the law of the leper. Hence it is established that a new vessel is also necessary in the ceremony of the water of bitterness.

(11) Although they do not insist on running water, it must not be discoloured by dirt.

(12) When they are disconnected. So by analogy the earthenware cannot be made fit for use by re-whitening.

(13) While it was used as a cord; therefore the restoration is not complete. But in the case of the vessel there is complete restoration and so it is allowed.

[of the Tabernacle] in Shiloh, Nob, Gideon and the permanent Temple; Issi b. Menahem says: It is unnecessary [to include the permanent Temple];¹ if in the case of a minor defilement² Scripture does not differentiate [between the temporary Tabernacle and the permanent Temple], in the case of the defilement of a married woman³ how much more so [is it unnecessary to differentiate]. Why, then, does the text state ‘on the floor of the tabernacle’? He may not take it from the midst of a heap.⁴

The following question was asked: If there is no dust, how is it about putting ashes there? According to the view of Beth Shammai, the question does not arise because they said that we never find ashes called dust; but the question does arise according to the view of Beth Hillel because they said that we do find ashes called dust.⁵ How is it then? Although the word ‘dust’ is used, it is here written ‘on the floor of the tabernacle’;⁶ perhaps, however, the phrase ‘on the floor of the tabernacle’ is intended to be understood according to the interpretation of Issi b. Judah and Issi b. Menahem?⁷ — Come and hear: for R. Johanan said in the name of R. Ishmael: In three places the halachah crushes the Scriptural text under heel:⁸ the Torah states with dust,⁹ whereas the halachah allows [the blood to be covered] with anything; the Torah states no razor,¹⁰ whereas the legal decision is [that a Nazirite may not shave] with anything; the Torah states a book,¹¹ whereas the legal decision [allows] any [form of document]. Now if this¹² is so, it should also have been enumerated! — He taught [some instances] and omitted others. What else, then, did he omit?¹³ — He omitted [the shaving] of a leper;¹⁴ for it has been taught: And it shall be on the seventh day that he shall shave all his hair — that is a generalization; off his head and his beard and his eyebrows — that is a particularization; even all his hair he shall shave off¹⁵ — that is again a generalization. Now [the rule of exegesis is]: when there is a general proposition, followed by the enumeration of particulars, and this is followed by a general proposition, include only that which resembles the particulars.¹⁶ As the particulars refer to a part [of the body] where the hair grows and is visible, so every place where the hair grows and is visible [comes within the scope of the law]. What does it include? It includes the hair on the private part. What does it exclude? It excludes that of the arm-pit and the whole body [which is normally covered]. The halachah, however, is: he shaves himself as smooth as a gourd.¹⁷ For we have learnt: When [the priest] comes to shave the leper, he passes a razor over all his flesh;¹⁸ and it continues,¹⁹ On the seventh day he shaves²⁰ the second shaving after the manner of the first.²¹ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [R. Johanan] enumerated instances where the halachah crushes the Scriptural text under heel; but here it crushes a Rabbinical teaching²² under heel.²³ R. Papa said: [R. Johanan] enumerated instances where the halachah crushes the Scriptural text under heel and overthrows it; but here it crushes the text under heel and extends it.²⁴ R. Ashi said: According to whom is this teaching [that only the visible parts of the body are to be shaved]? It is R. Ishmael who expounds [the Torah] by the rule of generalization and particularization.²⁵

(1) In Jerusalem.

(2) I.e., entrance into the Temple-precincts while ritually unclean. This is not an offence punished by a Court with death.

(3) Which is a capital crime.

(4) It must first be scattered on the floor. [In contradiction to the second Baraita cited which permits the bringing in dust from elsewhere and putting it forthwith into the water].

(5) This matter, with reference to covering the blood after slaughter of an animal, is discussed in Hul. 88b.

(6) So it is impossible to think that ashes could be meant.

(7) If these words intend the inclusion of temporary Sanctuaries and the Temple, then ‘dust’ could here signify ashes.

(8) I.e., practice goes beyond the letter of the Torah.

- (24) [By shaving the whole body the demands of the text are not set aside but extended.]
- (25) He elaborated thirteen rules of interpretation, and that quoted above is one of them. [And so according to R. Ishmael in whose name the above enumeration was reported by R. Johanan the list is complete].

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 16b

According to whom [is the teaching that he must be shaved the second time] as smooth as a gourd? It is R. Akiba who expounds [the Torah] by the rule of amplification and limitation; for it has been taught: 'And it shall be on the seventh day that he shall shave all his hair' — that is an amplification; 'off his head and his beard and his eyebrows' — that is a limitation; 'even all his hair he shall shave off' — that is again an amplification. Now [the rule of exegesis is]: Where there is an amplification, followed by a limitation, and this is followed by an amplification, the amplification applies to the whole. In which respect is there an amplification? It includes all the body [to be shaved]. In which respect is there a limitation? It excludes the hair which grows inside the nostril. How is it, then, with our original question [whether ashes may be used when there is no dust]? — Come and hear: For R. Huna b. Ashi said in the name of Rab: If there is no dust there, he brings decayed herbage and hallows it! — But this is no proof. Decayed herbage may indeed be [called] dust but not ashes.

JUST SUFFICIENT TO BE VISIBLE ABOVE THE WATER. Our Rabbis have taught: Three things must be visible, viz., the dust in the ceremony of the suspected woman, the ashes in the ceremony of the red heifer¹ and the spittle in the ceremony of Halizah.² They said in the name of R. Ishmael, Also the blood of the bird.³ What is R. Ishmael's reason? — Because it is written: And shall dip them in the blood of the bird etc.;⁴ and it has been taught: 'in the blood' — it is possible [to think that they must be dipped] in blood and not in water; therefore the text declares '[over the running] water'. If Scripture [had only mentioned] 'water', it would be possible [to think that they must be dipped] in water and not in blood; therefore the text declares 'in the blood'. What, then, was the procedure? He brings water in which the blood of the bird is recognisable. What is the quantity? A quarter [of a log]. And [why is this instance not included in their enumeration by] the Rabbis? — That is part of the subject-matter; for thus said the All-Merciful, Dip in blood and water.⁵ [How is this argument met by] R. Ishmael? — In that case, the All-Merciful should have written: 'And he shall dip in them'; so why [is it stated] in blood and in water? That [the blood] must be recognisable. And [how is this argument met by] the Rabbis? — If the All-Merciful had written: 'And he shall dip in them', I might have imagined [that he was to dip] in each separately; therefore He wrote ‘in blood and in water’ to indicate that they must be mixed. [How does] R. Ishmael [answer this point]? That they are to be mixed [is learnt from] another verse; it is written: And kill one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water.⁶ [How do] the Rabbis [answer this point]? — If [we had to learn it] from that passage, we might have thought that he is to kill it near a vessel, press the jugular veins,⁷ and receive the blood in another vessel. Hence we are informed [by this verse that the killing must be done over the vessel containing the water].

R. Jeremiah asked R. Zera, How is it if [the bird] was so big that [its blood] effaced [all trace of] the water, or if it was so small that [all trace of its blood] was effaced by the water? He answered: Have I not told thee not to take thyself beyond the legal decision?⁸ The Rabbis estimated [the quantity of a quarter of a log] by a free bird;⁹ and this is never so big that [its blood] should efface [all trace of] the water, nor so small that [all trace of its blood] should be effaced by the water.

Our Rabbis have taught: If he put the dust [in the bowl] before the water, it is invalid; but R. Simeon allows it. What is the reason of R. Simeon? — Because it is written: And for the unclean they shall take of the dust of the burning of the sin-offering,¹⁰ and it has been taught: R. Simeon said: Was it dust and not ashes? The text changes the expression to indicate that a conclusion was to be drawn from it by the rule of analogy: it is mentioned here ‘dust’, and there [in the ceremony of the suspected woman] it is also mentioned ‘dust’; as in the second instance the dust had to be placed over the water,¹¹ so also here the dust had to be placed over the water; and further, as it is valid here if he put the dust on before the water, so also there [in the ceremony of the suspected woman] it is valid if he put the dust on before the water.¹² Whence is this derived there [in the rite of the red heifer]? — There are two texts: It is written thereto,¹³ consequently the ashes are first; and it is written running water in a vessel, consequently the water is first. So what was the procedure? He can put either in first. [How is this interpretation answered by] the Rabbis?¹⁴ — ‘In a vessel’ — precisely so;¹⁵ ‘thereto’- that they are to be mixed. But say rather that ‘thereto’ means precisely so;¹⁶ and ‘in a vessel’ means that the water must be poured directly into the vessel from the spring!¹⁷ — As we find that everywhere it is the qualifying element which is on top,¹⁸ so also here¹⁹ the qualifying element must be on top.

- (18) [In the case of a suspected woman, and of a leper, the qualifying elements — i.e., the dust which gives the water of bitterness its efficacy and the blood of the bird — must be placed on top as indicated by the plain meaning of the Scriptural texts: Num. V, 17, and Lev. XIV, 6.]
- (19) With the ashes of the red heifer.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 17a

MISHNAH. WHEN HE COMES TO WRITE THE SCROLL, FROM WHAT PLACE DOES HE WRITE? FROM IF NO MAN HAVE LAIN WITH THEE¹ . . . BUT IF THOU HAST GONE ASIDE, BEING UNDER THY HUSBAND ETC.² HE DOES NOT, HOWEVER, INCLUDE, THEN THE PRIEST SHALL CAUSE THE WOMAN TO SWEAR,³ BUT CONTINUES WITH, THE LORD MAKE THEE A CURSE AND AN OATH . . . AND THIS WATER THAT CAUSETH THE CURSE SHALL GO INTO THY BOWELS AND MAKE THY BELLY TO SWELL, AND THY THIGH TO FALL AWAY.⁴ HE DOES NOT, HOWEVER, INCLUDE, AND THE WOMAN SHALL SAY, AMEN, AMEN. R. JOSE SAYS, HE MAKES NO OMISSIONS.⁵ R. JUDAH SAYS, HE WRITES NONE OF ALL THIS EXCEPT, THE LORD MAKE THEE A CURSE AND AN OATH ETC. AND THIS WATER THAT CAUSETH THE CURSE SHALL GO INTO THY BOWELS ETC. AND DOES NOT INCLUDE, AND THE WOMAN SHALL SAY, AMEN, AMEN.

GEMARA. On what point do they differ? — They differ in [the interpretation of] the following verse: And the priest shall write these curses in a book.⁶ R. Meir⁷ is of the opinion that curses denotes [the passages which are] actually curses;⁸ the curses⁹ is to include the curses which result from the benedictions;¹⁰ ‘these’ is to exclude the curses in Deuteronomy;¹¹ ‘the these’ is to exclude instructions [given to the officiating priest] and the responses of Amen [made by the woman]. R. Jose agrees with all that has been stated, except that he interprets the particle ‘eth¹² as indicating the inclusion of instructions and responses, whereas R. Meir draws no deductions from the occurrences of the particle ‘eth. R. Judah, on the other hand, expounds all the above points as implying limitation; ‘curses’ denotes [the passages which are] actually curses; ‘the curses’ is to exclude the imprecations which result from the benedictions; ‘these’ is to exclude the imprecations in Deuteronomy; ‘the these’ is to exclude instructions and responses. What is the difference that R. Meir interprets the definite article [in the curses] as implying amplification and the definite article [in the these] as implying limitation? — When the definite article occurs in connection with amplification¹³ it also denotes amplification, and when it occurs in connection with limitation¹⁴ it also denotes limitation. But R. Meir does not accept the rule that an affirmative is to be deduced as the corollary of a negative!¹⁵ — R. Tanhum said: It is written hinnaki.¹⁶

R. Akiba expounded: When husband and wife are worthy, the Shechinah abides with them; when they are not worthy fire consumes them.¹⁷ Raba said: [The fire which results] from the woman is severer than that from the man.¹⁸ What is the reason? In the case of the former [the letters aleph and shin] are consecutive, but not in the case of a man.¹⁹

MISHNAH. FIFTEEN [CATEGORIES OF] WOMEN EXEMPT THEIR RIVALS¹ AND THE RIVALS OF THEIR RIVALS² AND SO ON, AD INFINITUM,³ FROM THE HALIZAH⁴ AND FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE;⁵ AND THESE ARE THEY: HIS DAUGHTER,⁶ THE DAUGHTER OF HIS DAUGHTER⁷ AND THE DAUGHTER OF HIS SON;⁷ THE DAUGHTER OF HIS WIFE,⁸ THE DAUGHTER OF HER SON AND THE DAUGHTER OF HER DAUGHTER; HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW,⁹ HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW'S MOTHER,¹⁰ AND HIS FATHER-IN-LAW'S MOTHER,¹⁰ HIS MATERNAL SISTER,¹¹ HIS MOTHER'S SISTER,¹¹ HIS WIFE'S SISTER AND HIS MATERNAL BROTHER'S WIFE;¹²

(1) Heb., zarah, זרה 'rival'. Where a husband has more than one wife, each woman is a zarah in relation to the other. The term is derived from צר which signifies oppression, hence 'rival', 'adversary', as in I Sam. I, 6 (cf. Kimhi a.l.) or 'to tie up', 'to bind', hence 'associate', 'co-wife'.

(2) The co-wives of a rival through a second marriage.

(3) וקיגו ; ויגו lit., 'to the end of the world'.

(4) במקד (rt. . קד , 'to take off' or 'to loosen'), the ceremony of drawing off the shoe of the brother of her husband who died without issue. According to Biblical law (v. Deut. XXV, 5-9) the brother-in-law must either marry the widow (v. following note) or be subjected to halizah.

(5) זונה, rt. זנה 'to marry the levir'. Any woman coming under the fifteen categories enumerated below is not only herself exempt from halizah and yibbum but exempts also her own rivals as well as the rivals of her rivals, ad infinitum, as explained anon.

(6) Who had been married to his brother who subsequently died childless. Since he is forbidden to marry his daughter he is thereby also forbidden to marry any of her rivals, the widows of his deceased childless brother. 'HIS DAUGHTER' includes even one born to him as a result of outrage, v. infra.

(7) Cf. previous note. All the fifteen categories enumerated are among the near relatives whom a man is forbidden to marry in accordance with the explicit and implicit prohibitions in Lev. XVIII, 6ff.

(8) From a former husband.

(9) Who, after the death of her husband, had married his brother who subsequently died childless.

(10) The prohibition to marry in this case is derived in Sanhedrin 75a from Lev. XVIII, 17.

(11) Who was married to his paternal brother. The laws of the levirate marriage and halizah are applicable to a paternal, but not to a maternal brother.

(12) Who, after the death of her husband, had married his paternal brother.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 2b

THE WIFE OF HIS BROTHER WHO WAS NOT HIS CONTEMPORARY,¹ AND HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW,² ALL THESE EXEMPT THEIR RIVALS AND THE RIVALS OF THEIR RIVALS, AND SO ON, AD INFINITUM, FROM THE HALIZAH AND FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE. IF, HOWEVER, ANY AMONG THESE³ DIED,⁴ OR MADE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL,⁵ OR WERE DIVORCED, OR WERE FOUND INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION, THEIR RIVALS ARE PERMITTED;⁶ THOUGH, OF COURSE, ONE

CANNOT SAY OF A MAN'S MOTHER-IN-LAW, OF THE MOTHER OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW AND OF THE MOTHER OF HIS FATHER-IN-LAW THAT THEY WERE FOUND INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION OR THAT THEY MADE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL.⁷

HOW IS THE EXEMPTION OF THEIR RIVALS [BY THE WOMEN MENTIONED], TO BE UNDERSTOOD? IF A MAN'S DAUGHTER OR ANY OTHER OF THESE FORBIDDEN RELATIVES WAS MARRIED TO HIS BROTHER WHO HAD ALSO ANOTHER WIFE [AT THE TIME] WHEN HE DIED, THEN AS HIS DAUGHTER IS EXEMPT SO IS HER RIVAL EXEMPT. IF HIS DAUGHTER'S RIVAL WENT AND MARRIED A SECOND BROTHER OF HIS,⁸ WHO ALSO HAD YET ANOTHER WIFE WHEN HE DIED, THEN AS THE RIVAL OF HIS DAUGHTER IS EXEMPT SO IS ALSO HIS DAUGHTER'S RIVAL'S RIVAL EXEMPT, EVEN IF THERE WERE A HUNDRED [BROTHERS].⁹

HOW [IS ONE TO UNDERSTAND THE STATEMENT THAT] IF THEY HAD DIED, THEIR RIVALS ARE PERMITTED?¹⁰ IF A MAN'S DAUGHTER OR ANY OTHER OF THESE FORBIDDEN RELATIVES WAS MARRIED TO HIS BROTHER WHO HAD ALSO ANOTHER WIFE, THEN, IF HIS DAUGHTER DIED OR WAS DIVORCED, AND HIS BROTHER DIED SUBSEQUENTLY, HER RIVAL IS PERMITTED.¹⁰

THE RIVAL OF ANY ONE WHO IS ENTITLED TO MAKE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL¹¹ BUT DID NOT EXERCISE HER RIGHT, MUST PERFORM HALIZAH [IF HER HUSBAND DIED CHILDLESS], AND MAY NOT CONTRACT LEVIRATE MARRIAGE.¹²

GEMARA. Consider: All these¹³ are deduced from the [exemption of] a wife's sister.¹⁴ Why then was not HIS WIFE'S SISTER mentioned¹⁵ first?¹⁶ And if it be replied that the Tanna enumerated¹⁷ [the forbidden relatives] in the order of the degrees of their respective severity,¹⁸ and that it [our Mishnah] represents the view of R. Simeon who regards burning¹⁹ as the severest,²⁰ [it may be retorted that], if that is the case,²¹ HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW should have been mentioned¹⁶ first, since [Scripture] enunciated the principle of burning in the case of a mother-in-law.²² And, furthermore, HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW should have come¹⁵ immediately after HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW, since, next to burning, stoning²³ is the severest penalty! — But [this in fact is the proper reply]: Since [the prohibition of intercourse with] 'HIS DAUGHTER'²⁴ has been arrived at by exposition²⁵ it is given preference.²⁶

(1) Lit., 'in his world', i.e., who died before he was born. Such a brother's widow and her rivals etc. are exempt. If, for instance, C was born after his brother A had died childless, so that his widow, N married (in accordance with the laws of the levirate marriage) a contemporary brother of his, B, who had another wife, or wives, and B also died childless, all B's widows are exempt from halizah and yibbum as far as C is concerned on account of N who is forbidden to him.

(2) Who married his brother after the death of his son. The marriage of a daughter-in-law is forbidden for ever, even after the death of one's son.

(3) Lit., '(in the case of) all of them'.

(4) Prior to the death of her husband who subsequently died childless.

(5) Such a declaration, mi'un iuthn, may be made against her husband (without any further necessity for a divorce) by a wife, while she is a minor, or as soon as she becomes of age, prior to cohabitation, in cases where she was betrothed either (a) as an orphan, by her mother or brothers or (b) even in the lifetime of her father (v. infra 109a) if she was once divorced (after her father had contracted for her a betrothal) and was betrothed again while still a minor.

(6) I.e., levirate marriage may be contracted, or halizah must be performed.

(7) For, having given birth they must be of age.

(8) Whenever one of the surviving brothers is not related to either of the widows, but another brother is, it is his duty to perform the levirate marriage or to submit to halizah.

(9) Everyone of whom had also another wife or wives and the rival's rival married them in turn, ad infinitum.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 3a

[The law, surely,] concerning all the others also was arrived at¹ by exposition!² — Granted that in respect of [exemption from] the levirate marriage [the law in relation to them] was arrived at by exposition, the principle of prohibition [of sexual intercourse] with them has been explicitly enunciated in Scripture, [while as regards] his daughter³ the very principle underlying the prohibition [of intercourse with her] has been arrived at by exposition; for Raba⁴ stated: R. Isaac b. Abdimi told me, 'Hennah⁵ is derived from hennah⁶ and zimmah⁷ is derived from zimmah'.⁸

Now that it has been stated that preference is given to whatever is arrived at by exposition, the Tanna should have placed⁹ HIS WIFE'S SISTER last!¹⁰ — As he was dealing with a prohibition due to sisterhood¹¹ he mentioned also HIS WIFE'S SISTER. Then let him relegate⁹ the entire passage¹² to the end!¹³ — But [this is really the explanation]: The Tanna follows the order of the respective degrees of kinship. He, therefore, mentions [first] HIS DAUGHTER, THE DAUGHTER OF HIS DAUGHTER AND THE DAUGHTER OF HIS SON because they are his own next of kin; and since he enumerated three generations of his relatives in descending order he enumerated also three generations of her¹⁴ relatives in descending order. Having enumerated three generations of her¹⁴ relatives in descending order he proceeded to enumerate also three generations of her relatives in ascending order. He then mentions HIS SISTER and HIS MOTHER'S SISTER who are his blood¹⁵ relatives;¹⁶ and while dealing with prohibitions due to brotherhood he also mentions HIS WIFE'S SISTER. And it would indeed have been proper that HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW should be placed before THE WIFE OF HIS BROTHER WHO WAS NOT HIS CONTEMPORARY, since it is not on account of kinship¹⁷ that the latter is forbidden, but as he was dealing with a prohibition due to brotherhood he mentioned also THE WIFE OF HIS BROTHER WHO WAS NOT HIS CONTEMPORARY and then mentioned HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

What argument can be advanced for using¹⁸ the expression EXEMPT¹⁹ and not that of²⁰ 'prohibit'?²¹ — If 'prohibit' had been used it might have been assumed that the levirate marriage only was forbidden but that halizah²² must nevertheless be performed,²³ hence it was taught²⁴ [that halizah also need not be performed]. Let it then be stated,²⁵ 'She is forbidden to perform halizah!²⁶ — No harm, surely, is thereby done.²⁷ But why indeed should not [the expression of prohibition be applicable to halizah]? If you were to say that halizah is permissible, [one might say that] levirate marriage is also permitted!²⁸ — As a rival²⁹ is forbidden only where the commandment [of the levirate marriage] is applicable but is permitted where the commandment is not applicable,³⁰ it was therefore necessary to use the expression, EXEMPT.³¹

What justification is there for stating, FROM THE HALIZAH AND FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE when it would have been sufficient to state³² FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE only?³³ — If FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE only had been stated it might have been assumed that she must perform halizah³⁴ though she is exempt from the levirate marriage, hence it was taught³⁵ that whoever is subject³⁶ to the obligation of levirate marriage is also subject to halizah and whosoever is not subject to the obligation of the levirate marriage is not subject to halizah.

Let it [first] be stated,³⁷ FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE [and then] FROM THE HALIZAH,³⁸ or else only FROM THE HALIZAH?³⁹ — This Mishnah represents the view of Abba Saul who maintains that the commandment of halizah takes precedence over that of levirate marriage.⁴⁰

What [was intended] to be excluded [by the] numeral at the beginning⁴¹ and what [again was intended] to be excluded [by the] numeral at the end?⁴²

(1) In respect to their exemption from the levirate marriage.

(2) By deduction from the law of a wife's sister.

(3) V. n. 2.

(4) Others, 'Rab', who was a disciple of R. Isaac b. Abdimi, v. Tosaf. s.v. rnts a.l.

(5) vbv ('they' or 'theirs') in Lev. XVIII, 10 which deals according to Talmudic interpretation with the daughter of his son, or of his daughter that was born from an outraged woman, but not with the daughter herself.

(6) Ibid. v. 17 which places a daughter on the same footing as a son's and a daughter's daughter. By this analogy the inference is arrived at that intercourse even with a daughter from an outraged woman is forbidden.

(7) Vnz ('lewdness' or 'wickedness'), ibid. where the penalty of burning is not mentioned.

- (8) Ibid. XX, 14 where the penalty of burning with fire is explicitly stated. Thus it is shown that the very foundation of the prohibition of sexual intercourse with a daughter from an outraged woman, as well as the death penalty of burning which the crime involves, are entirely dependent on inferences arrived at by exposition, v. Sanh. 51a.
- (9) Lit., 'let him teach'.
- (10) In the list in our Mishnah; since, as will be shewn infra, the exemption from levirate marriage in respect of all the others is derived by exposition from 'his wife's sister'.
- (11) 'His mother's sister', v. our Mishnah.
- (12) Which deals with the prohibitions through sisterhood.
- (13) Of the list.
- (14) His wife's.
- (15) Lit., 'his own'.
- (16) While a daughter-in-law is not consanguineous.
- (17) A daughter-in-law should, consequently, receive priority.
- (18) In our Mishnah.
- (19) Which might imply that the levirate marriage in these cases is not obligatory but optional.
- (20) v. supra p. 4, n. 13.
- (21) Since, in fact, no marriage with a deceased brother's widow is permitted whenever the obligation of the levirate marriage does not exist.
- (22) V. Glos.
- (23) Since a prohibition could not very well apply to halizah which is a harmless act, the expression of 'prohibit' in respect of halizah would have been interpreted as a 'prohibition to be married to anyone before halizah had been performed'.
- (24) By the use of the expression, 'exempt'.
- (25) In our Mishnah.
- (26) And, consequently, the expression 'prohibit' which is preferable to that of 'exempt' (v. supra notes 6 and 8) could well be used for the levirate marriage.
- (27) Lit., 'what does he do', i.e., there is no reason why halizah should be forbidden. Hence the expression of 'prohibit' could not properly be used.
- (28) The expression of 'prohibit' in relation to halizah could, consequently, properly have been used. Why then was 'exempt' preferred to 'prohibit'?
- (29) Of one's daughter, for instance.
- (30) If his daughter, e.g., had married one who was not his near of kin, her rival, on the death of her husband, is not forbidden to marry the father; v. infra 13a.
- (31) 'Prohibit' might have implied that a daughter, e.g., always causes her rival to be prohibited to her father whether the precept of the levirate marriage is applicable or not.
- (32) Lit., 'let him teach'.
- (33) It is obvious that if one is exempt from the levirate marriage there could be no question of being subject to halizah which is only the result of a refusal to contract the prescribed marriage.
- (34) In order that the law of the levirate marriage be not entirely abrogated.
- (35) By the use of the expression, 'exempt'.
- (36) Lit., 'goes up' sc. to the gate, i.e., the court (cf. Deut. XXV, 7.)
- (37) In our Mishnah.
- (38) The marriage surely is of greater importance than the halizah, the latter being only an alternative of the former. V. Deut. XXV. 7.

(39) The exemption from the marriage being then self-evident.

(40) Infra 39b, 109a. And if only FROM THE HALIZAH had been stated, there would be no basis for this inference.

(41) Of our Mishnah, 'FIFTEEN'.

(42) Of the list; 'ALL THESE', implying the 'FIFTEEN' mentioned. If nothing were to be excluded, there would be no need for the addition of a cardinal at the beginning, or of a reference to it at the end of a list which presumably enumerated all possible cases.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 3b

— [They were intended] to exclude the respective rulings of Rab and R. Assi.¹ What, [however, do the numerals] exclude according to Rab and R. Assi? — If they share each other's views, one numeral would serve to exclude the rival of one who made a declaration of refusal,² and the other to exclude the rival of a wife whom [her husband] remarried after having divorced her.³ If they do not share the views of each other, [each would regard] one [numeral as serving] to exclude the ruling of his colleague;⁴ and the other numeral, as serving to exclude either the rival of one who made a declaration of refusal² or the rival of a wife whom [her husband] remarried after having divorced her.³

According to Rab and R. Assi these⁵ should have been enumerated in our Mishnah! — [This could not be done] because the law of the rival's rival⁶ is not applicable [to these cases].⁷

Whence is this law⁸ derived?⁹ — [From] what our Rabbis taught: And thou shalt not take a woman to her sister, to be a rival to her, to uncover her nakedness, 'aleha [beside her] in her lifetime,¹⁰ what need was there for the expression 'aleha'?¹¹ Because it was stated, Her husband's brother shall go in 'aleha [unto her],¹² it might have been imagined¹³ that Scripture¹⁴ speaks even of any of all the forbidden relatives enumerated in the Torah. Hence it was here¹⁰ stated, 'aleha'¹⁵ and elsewhere¹² it was also stated 'aleha'.¹⁶ Just as elsewhere it is in the case of a precept¹⁷ so here also it is in the case of a precept;¹⁷ and yet did not the All Merciful say, Thou shalt not take.¹⁸ We are thus in a position to know the law concerning herself;¹⁹ whence do we derive the law concerning her rival? — From the Scriptural expression, To be a rival to her.¹⁰ We have so far deduced the law concerning her rival only. Whence do we arrive at the law concerning her rival's rival? — From the fact that Scripture uses the expression *li-zeror*²⁰ and not that of la-zor.²¹ Thus we have deduced the law concerning a wife's sister, whence is the law concerning the other forbidden relatives to be inferred? — It can be answered: As a wife's sister is singled out in that she is a forbidden relative, the penalty for presumptuous intercourse with her is *kareth*²² and for unwitting intercourse a sin-offering, and she is forbidden to the levir, so also any woman who is a forbidden relative, and the penalty for presumptuous intercourse with whom is *kareth*²² and for unwitting intercourse a sin-offering, is forbidden to the levir. Now we know the law concerning themselves only;²³ whence is the law concerning their rivals deduced? — It may be answered: As a wife's sister is singled out in that she is a forbidden relative, kareth is incurred by presumptuous intercourse with her and a sin-offering for unwitting intercourse, and she is forbidden to the levir, and her rival is forbidden, so also in the case of any woman who is a forbidden relative, and for presumptuous intercourse with whom is incurred the penalty of kareth and for unwitting intercourse a sin-offering, and who is forbidden to the levir, her rival is forbidden. Hence have the

Sages said: FIFTEEN [CATEGORIES OF] WOMEN EXEMPT THEIR RIVALS AND THEIR RIVALS' RIVALS, AND SO ON, AD INFINITUM, FROM THE HALIZAH AND FROM THE LEVIRATE MARRIAGE. One might assume that the six more rigidly forbidden relatives²⁴ are also included in the ruling,²⁵ so that their rivals also²⁶ are forbidden,²⁷ hence it must be stated.²⁸ As a wife's sister is singled out in that she is a forbidden relative, kareth is incurred for presumptuous intercourse with her and a sin-offering for unwitting intercourse, she may be married to the other brothers, but is forbidden to the levir, and her rival is forbidden, so also in the case of any woman who is a forbidden relative, for presumptuous intercourse with whom is incurred the penalty of kareth and for unwitting intercourse a sin-offering, who may marry one of the other brothers, but is forbidden to the levir, her rival also is forbidden; excluded, however, are the six more rigidly forbidden relatives. Since they may not be married to the other brothers, their rivals are permitted; for [the law of] 'rival'²⁹ is applicable only [to widows] of a brother.³⁰

Thus we have deduced the prohibition. Whence, however, is the penalty inferred? — Scripture said, For whosoever shall do any of these abominations etc. [shall be cut off from among their people.]³¹

The reason,³² then, is because the All Merciful has written, 'aleha',³³ otherwise it would have been said that levirate marriage may be contracted with the wife's sister; what is the reason? Is it because we assume that a positive precept,³⁴ supersedes a negative precept?³⁵ Surely, it is possible that³⁶ the rule that a positive precept supersedes a negative precept applies only where the latter is a mere prohibition; does it, however, supersede a prohibition involving the penalty of kareth?³⁵ Furthermore, whence is it derived that it may supersede even a mere prohibition?

(1) Infra 11a and 12a.

(2) A minor who was one of the wives of a deceased childless brother, on declaring her refusal to marry the levir, exempts thereby her rivals from the levirate marriage but not from halizah.

(3) If one of the widows of a deceased brother was divorced once, and then remarried to him after she had married another man, she causes the exemption of her rivals from the levirate marriage, v. infra 11b. The halizah, however, must be performed.

(4) According to Rab that of R. Assi, and vice versa.

(5) The subjects of their respective rulings, i.e., the sotah (v. Glos.) and the barren wife, who, they maintain, infra 11a, 11b, exempt their rivals both from the levirate marriage and from halizah.

(6) V. our Mishnah.

(7) Since neither a sotah nor a barren woman may marry any one of the brothers.

(8) Of our Mishnah, that forbidden relatives as well as their rivals and rivals' rivals, ad infinitum, are exempt from the levirate marriage and from halizah.

(9) Lit., 'whence these words'.

(10) Lev. XVIII, 18.

(11) Which does not add any point to the law enunciated.

(12) Deut. XXV, 5.

(13) Lit., 'I hear'.

(14) Since it drew no distinction between a brother's wife who was a forbidden relative and one that was not forbidden.

(15) I.e., 'beside her'.

(16) I.e., 'unto her'. In both cases the respective terms 'beside her' and 'unto her' are expressed by the same Heb. word vllkg.

(17) That of levirate marriage.

(18) Two sisters, Lev. XVIII, 18. The verse in Lev. thus means that the prohibition of marrying the wife's sister is in force even where she is his dead brother's widow, in regard to whom the precept, 'her husband's brother shall go in unto her', might apply.

(19) Lit., 'there is not to me but she', sc. the forbidden relative herself.

(20) rurk 'to be a rival',

(21) rmk 'to oppress', the longer form li-zeror implies many rivals, i.e., rivals of the rivals. The last question and answer are deleted by R. Tam and Nahmanides. Cf. t rdv , uvdv

(22) V. Glos.

(23) The forbidden relatives.

(24) Enumerated infra 13a.

(25) Relating to the other forbidden relatives.

(26) If they and their rivals were married to a stranger.

(27) To marry the man whom the forbidden relatives themselves are not allowed to marry.

(28) Lit., 'say'.

(29) I.e., the rival's exemption from the levirate marriage and halizah.

(30) Where one of the widows is a forbidden relative of one of the surviving brothers and no forbidden relative of the deceased. As the relative is forbidden to marry the brother, her rival also is forbidden to him as 'his brother's wife'. Where the relative, however, is married to a stranger, her rival is permitted to those to whom the relative herself is forbidden.

(31) Lev. XVIII, 29.

(32) Why a wife's sister is forbidden the levirate marriage.

(33) V. the texts from Lev. and Deut. and the analogy supra.

(34) The commandment of the levirate marriage.

(35) The prohibition to marry one's wife's sister.

(36) Lit., 'say'.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 4a

— Because¹ it is written, Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff . . .² Thou shalt make thee twisted cords,³ and R. Eleazar said,⁴ 'Whence is the rule of proximity [of texts] derived from the Torah?⁵ As it is said, They are established⁶ for ever and ever, they are done in truth and uprightness.'⁷ Furthermore, R. Shesheth stated⁸ in the name of R. Eleazar who stated it in the name of R. Eleazar b. Azariah: Whence is it proved that a sister-in-law, who falls to the lot of a levir who is afflicted with boils, is not muzzled?⁹ From the Biblical text, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn,¹⁰ and in close proximity to it is written If brethren dwell together.¹¹ Furthermore R. Joseph said: Even he who does not base interpretations on the proximity [of Biblical texts] anywhere else does base them [on the texts] in Deuteronomy,¹² for R. Judah who does not elsewhere base any interpretations [on textual proximity], bases such interpretations on the Deuteronomic text.¹³ And whence is it proved that elsewhere he¹⁴ does not advance such interpretation?¹⁵ — From what has been taught: Ben 'Azzai said, It was stated, Thou shall not suffer a sorceress to live,¹⁶ and it is also stated, Whosoever lieth with a beast shall surely be put to death;¹⁷ one subject was placed near the other to indicate that as the man who lies with a beast is to suffer the death penalty of stoning so also is a sorceress to suffer the death penalty of stoning. Said R. Judah to him: Shall we, because one subject was placed in close proximity to the other, lead out a person¹⁸ to be stoned? In truth¹⁹ [the penalty of the sorceress is derived from the following]: The necromancer and the charmer were included among the sorcerers; why then were they mentioned separately?²⁰ In order that the others may be compared to them, and to tell you that as the necromancer and the charmer are subject to the death penalty of stoning,²⁰ so is a sorceress also subject to the penalty of stoning.

And whence is it proved that in Deuteronomy הֵ' ²¹ does advance such interpretation?¹⁵ — From what we learned: A man may marry a woman who has been outraged or seduced by his father or his son. R. Judah prohibits in the case of a woman outraged or seduced by one's father.²² And in connection with this, R. Giddal said in the name of Rab: What is R. Judah's reason? Because it is written, A man shall not take his father's wife, and shall not uncover his father's skirt,²³ the 'skirt' which his father saw he shall not uncover. And whence is it inferred that this is written with reference to an outraged woman? — From the preceding section of the text where it is written, Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver²⁴ near which it is stated, A man shall not take etc.²⁵ And the Rabbis?²⁶ — If one text had occurred in close proximity to the other the exposition would have been justified;²⁷ now, however, that it does not occur in close proximity²⁸ [it must be concluded that] the context speaks of a woman who is awaiting the decision of the levir²⁹ and that, [in marrying such a woman, a son]³⁰ transgresses two negative precepts.³¹

And what is the reason why [R. Judah] derives laws [from the proximity of texts] in Deuteronomy? — If you wish I might say: Because [there the deduction]³² is obvious; and if you prefer I might say: Because [there the text] is superfluous.³³ 'If you prefer I might say: Because [there the deduction] is obvious', for, otherwise,³⁴ the All Merciful should have written the prohibition in the section of forbidden relatives. 'And if you prefer I might say: Because [there the text] is superfluous', for otherwise³⁵ the All Merciful should have written, A man shall not take his father's wife.²⁵ what need was there for adding,³⁶ And shall not uncover his father's skirt?²⁵

(1) This is an answer to the second question. The first is answered infra 5b.

(6) 'Semukim'.

(7) Ps. CXI, 8. The proximity of the two texts (Deut. XXII, 11 and 12) may consequently be taken to indicate that though the wearing of mingled stuff (linen and wool) is forbidden in ordinary cases (Deut. XXII, 11) it is nevertheless permitted in the case of the performance of a positive precept such as that of the making of 'twisted cords' or zizith (v. Glos.) on the four corners of a garment (ibid. v. 12).

(8) Mak. 23a.

(9) I.e., she is not prevented from objecting to the levirate marriage, and is entitled to halizah. 'Muzzled' (rt. OXj) is taken from Deut. XXV, 4 from which this law is derived.

(10) Deut. XXV, 4.

- (11) Ibid. v. 5, forming the introduction to the law of halizah. Thus it has been shewn that a law may be based on the proximity of Biblical texts, and this confirms the conclusion in respect of 'mingled stuff' in zizith (v. Deut. XXII, 11).

- (30) Of the levir for whose decision the woman is waiting.
- (31) Infra 97a. One is that of marrying a woman who is virtually his father's wife being subject still to the levirate marriage, and the other is that of marrying an aunt, the wife of his father's deceased brother.
- (32) From the proximity of the texts.
- (33) Lit., 'free', 'disengaged'. i.e., unnecessary for the contexts and consequently free for interpretation and exposition.
- (34) Lit., 'if so', i.e., if the text was meant to convey its plain meaning only.
- (35) Cf. previous note.
- (36) Lit., 'wherefore to me'.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 4b

Hence it must be concluded that the text was meant to provide a superfluous text.¹

Similarly in the case of zizith,² if you wish I might reply:³ Because [there⁴ the deduction] is obvious. And if you prefer I might reply:⁵ Because [there⁶ the text] is superfluous.⁷ 'If you prefer I might say: Because [there the deduction] is obvious', for otherwise,⁸ the All Merciful should have written [the precept] in the section of zizith;⁹ with what other practical rule in view has he written it here?¹⁰ 'And if you prefer, I might reply: Because [there the text] is superfluous', for observe: It is written, Neither shall there come upon thee a garment of two kinds of stuff mingled together.¹¹ What need then was there for stating, Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff?¹² Hence it must be concluded that the object was to provide a superfluous text.¹³

But [surely] both these texts¹⁴ are required? For if the All Merciful had only written, Neither shall there come upon thee¹⁵ it might have been assumed that all kinds of ‘putting on’ were forbidden by the All Merciful, even that of clothes dealers,¹⁶ hence the All Merciful, has written, Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff,¹⁷ [shewing that the ‘putting on’ must be] of the same nature as that of wearing for personal comfort. And if the All Merciful had only written, Thou shalt not wear¹⁸ it might have been assumed that only wear [is forbidden] because the pleasure derived therefrom is great, but not mere ‘putting on’, hence the All Merciful has written, Neither shall there come upon thee!¹⁹ — If so,²⁰ the All Merciful should have written, ‘Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff’ what need was there for adding, ‘Wool and linen’? For²¹ observe: It is written, Neither shall there come upon thee a garment of two kinds of stuff mingled together,¹⁵ and in connection with this a Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael taught: Whereas garments generally²² were mentioned in the Torah, and in one particular case²³ Scripture specified wool and linen,²³ all must consequently be understood as having been made of wool and linen, what need, then, was there for the All Merciful's specific mention of wool and linen? Consequently it must be concluded that its object was to provide a superfluous text.²⁴

But the text²⁵ is still required [for another purpose]! For it might have been assumed [that the limitation²⁶ applies] only to ‘putting on’, where the benefit is not great, but that in respect of wear, the benefit from which is great, any two kinds were forbidden by the All Merciful, hence has the All Merciful written, ‘wool and linen’!²⁷ — If so, Scripture should have omitted it altogether²⁸ and [the law²⁹ would have been] deduced [by analogy between] ‘mingled stuff’³⁰ and ‘mingled stuff’³¹ [the latter of which occurs in connection with the law] of ‘putting on’.³²

As to the Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael, is the reason [why ‘mingled stuff’ is permitted in zizith] because the All Merciful has written ‘wool and linen’, but if He had not done so, would it have been assumed that the All Merciful had forbidden two kinds of stuff in the zizith? But, surely, it is written, And they shall make them fringes in the corners of their garments³³ and a Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael [taught]: Wherever ‘garment’ [is written] such as is made of wool or flax [is meant], and yet the All Merciful said that in them ‘purple’ shall be inserted, and purple, surely, is wool. And whence is it deduced that purple is wool? Since linen³⁴ is flax, purple must be wool.³⁵ — [The text] was necessary; for it might have been assumed [that the interpretation is] according to Raba. For Raba pointed out a contradiction: It is written, the corner,³⁶ [which implies that the fringes must be of the same] kind of [material as that of the] corner,³⁷ but then it is also written, wool and linen.³⁸ How then [are these texts to be reconciled?] Wool and linen discharge [the obligation to provide fringes] both for a garment of the same, as well as of a different kind of material, while other kinds [of material]³⁹ discharge [the obligation for a garment made] of the same kind [of material] but not for one made of a different kind [of material].⁴⁰

But the Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael,⁴¹ surely, does not hold the same view as Raba!⁴² — [The text]⁴³ is still necessary; for it might have been assumed that Raba's line of argument⁴⁴ should be followed: ‘The corner’ [implies that the fringes must be made of the same] kind of [material as the] corner, and that what the All Merciful meant was this: ‘Make wool [fringes] for wool [garments] and linen ones for linen; only when you make wool fringes for wool garments you must dye them’; but no wool fringes may be made for linen or linen fringes for wool, hence the All Merciful has written ‘wool and linen’ [to indicate] that even wool fringes [may be] made for linen garments or linen fringes for woollen garments.⁴⁵

 - (35) As the garments were either of wool or flax, and linen (flax) was specified in the case of one, all the others must have been wool. Now since it has been shewn that purple is wool, it obviously follows that woollen zizith or fringes are permissible in a garment of flax. What was the need, then, for a specific text to prove the permissibility of mingling wool and flax in zizith?
 - (36) Num. XV, 38.

- (37) I.e., if the material of the corner is wool the fringes must be wool; if of flax the fringes must be of flax.
- (38) Cf. Deut. XXII, 11f: Mingled stuff, wool and linen thou shalt make the twisted cords, which shews that the fringes may be made either of wool or of flax whatever the material of the corner might be.
- (39) Silk for instance.
- (40) So also according to the Tanna of R. Ishmael's school, (as will be explained in the Gemara anon) if Scripture had not specified 'wool and linen' it might have been assumed that in a woollen garment the fringes must be made of wool while in a garment of flax they must be made of flax, hence wool and linen were specified to shew on the basis of semukim that mingled stuffs also are allowed in zizith.
- (41) At the moment it is assumed that the suggestion is that he is in agreement with Raba's argument in all respects.
- (42) For, according to him, since 'garment' denotes only such as is made of wool and linen, garments made of other materials require no fringes (zizith). What need, then, was there for the expression of wool and linen to differentiate these from other materials?
- (43) Wool and linen.
- (44) Though not his view, applying his method of reasoning only in regard to a garment made of wool or linen.
- (45) I.e., that mingled stuffs are permissible in the performance of the precept of zizith.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 5a

This¹ is satisfactory according to the view of the Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael;² as to the Rabbis,³ however, how do they arrive at the deduction?⁴ — They derive it from his head;⁵ for it was taught: [Scripture stated], 'His head';⁵ what need was there for it?⁶ — Whereas it has been stated, Ye shall not round the corners of your head,⁷ one might infer that [this law⁸ applies to] a leper also, hence it was explicitly stated, his head;⁹ and this Tanna is of the opinion that rounding all the head is also regarded as 'rounding'.¹⁰ This [conclusion, however,] may be refuted: The reason why the prohibition of¹¹ 'rounding' [may be superseded is] because it is not applicable to everybody!¹² — But [the inference] is derived from his beard;¹³ as it was taught: 'His beard';¹³ what need was there for stating it?¹⁴ — Whereas it was said, Neither shall they shave off the corners of their beard,¹⁵ one might infer that this prohibition applies also to a leprous priest,¹⁶ hence it was explicitly stated, 'his beard'.¹⁷ And since there is no object in applying it to a prohibition which is not incumbent upon everybody,¹⁸ let it be applied to a prohibition which is incumbent upon all.¹⁹ But this²⁰ is still required [for its own context]! For since it might have been assumed that as priests are different from [other people]. Scripture having imposed upon them additional commandments, and so even a prohibition which does not apply to everybody is not superseded in their case; [therefore] it was necessary to teach us that it does supersede.²¹ — In truth the inference comes from 'his head' [in the manner deduced by] the following²² Tanna. For It was taught: His head:²³ what need was there for mentioning it?²⁴ Whereas Scripture had stated, There shall no razor come upon his head,²⁵ one might infer that the same prohibition is applicable to a leprous nazirite²⁶ also, hence it was explicitly stated, 'his head'.²⁷ This,²⁸ however, may be refuted: The reason why a [leprous] nazirite [may shave his head] is because he is also in a position to obtain absolution.²⁹ For, were not this the reason,³⁰ what then of the accepted rule,³¹ that no positive precept may supersede a negative and positive precept combined; why not deduce the contrary from the law³² of the [leprous] nazirite?³³ Consequently, [it must be conceded that] the reason why no deduction may be made [from the law of the nazirite is] because it may be refuted [on the grounds] that in his case absolution is possible; so here also the refutation may be advanced, 'Since in his case absolution is possible'!³⁴ — The deduction, in fact, is made

- (1) The deduction from semukim that a positive precept supersedes a negative one.
 - (2) Since on the lines of his interpretation the text, 'wool and linen' is superfluous and consequently free for the deduction mentioned.
 - (3) Who do not interpret 'garment' as denoting such as is of wool and flax.
 - (4) The text, 'wool and linen', being required for the completion of the plain meaning of the text, there remains no superfluous expression for the deduction. V. supra n. 2.
 - (5) Lev. XIV, 9, dealing with the purification of the leper.
 - (6) It was previously stated, and shave off all his hair (Lev. XIV, 8) which obviously includes that of the head.
 - (7) Lev. XIX. 27.
 - (8) The prohibition to round the corners of the head.
 - (9) Indicating that, despite the general prohibition, it is the leper's duty to round his head.
 - (10) Though the text speaks of rounding the corners. Such a rounding then, though generally forbidden, is in the case of a leper, permitted, because Scripture explicitly stated 'shave all the hair of his head' (Lev. XIV, 9). Thus it has been proved that the positive precept of the shaving of the leper supersedes the prohibition of rounding off one's head. Similarly, in the case of the levirate marriage, it might have been assumed that the positive precept of marrying the deceased brother's widow supersedes the prohibition of marrying a wife's sister; hence the necessity for a special text (v. supra 3b end and p. 10, n. 7) to prove that it does not.
 - (11) Lit., 'what as to the negative (command)'.
 - (12) Lit., 'equal in all'; women being exempt. (V. Kid. 35b). The prohibition of the marriage of a wife's sister, however, is applicable to the man and to the woman, the brother-in-law as well as the sister-in-law.
 - (13) Which also occurs in the regulations for the purification of the leper. (V. Lev. XIV, 9).
 - (14) Seeing that it was previously mentioned (Lev. XIV, 8) that the leper must 'shave off all his hair', which obviously includes that of his beard.
 - (15) Lev. XXI, 5.
 - (16) The prohibition of shaving the corners of one's head having been addressed to the priests. V. Lev. XXI, 1ff.
 - (17) Indicating that in the case of a leprous priest the precept of shaving supersedes the prohibition of 'shaving'.
 - (18) That such a prohibition is superseded by a positive precept having been deduced supra from 'his head'.
 - (19) Thus it has been proved that a positive precept supersedes any prohibition even if the latter is generally applicable. Marriage between a levir and his deceased brother's widow who is his wife's sister might, consequently, have been assumed to be permitted had not an explicit text pointed to its prohibition.
 - (20) The text, 'his beard'.
 - (21) How, then, can the same text which is required for the purpose mentioned also be used for a general deduction.
 - (22) Lit., '(manner) of that'.
 - (23) Lev. XIV, 9.
 - (24) Cf. supra, p. 16, n. 7.
 - (25) Num. VI, 5 dealing with the laws of the nazirite.
 - (26) So Rashal. Cur. edd. read, 'leper and nazirite'.
 - (27) Thus it is proved that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition. Cf. supra, note 7.
 - (28) The deduction from the nazirite.
 - (29) Heb. she'elah vkta 'request', i.e., the nazirite may request a qualified person to disallow his vow and thus avoid the prohibition of shaving.
 - (30) Lit., 'if you will not say so'.

(31) Lit., 'that which is established for us'.

(32) Lit., 'let it be deduced'.

(33) The shaving of a nazirite's head is forbidden (a) by the precept that he must grow his hair long and (b) by the prohibition of allowing a razor to come upon his head.

(34) Whence, then, is it proved that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition?

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 5b

from the first cited text:¹ Since² Scripture could have used the expression, Thou shalt make thee fringes,³ what need was there for that of 'twisted cords'? Consequently it must have been intended for the purpose of allowing that text to be used for the deduction.⁴ But this⁵ is required for the determination of the number [of threads, thus]:⁶ 'Twisted cord' implies two threads,⁷ [and so] 'twisted cords'⁸ implies four threads, therefore,⁹ one twisted cord is to be made [of the four] and from the middle of it separate threads¹⁰ are to hang down!¹¹ — If so,¹² Scripture should have stated, Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff wool and linen:¹³ what need was there to add 'together'?¹³ Consequently it must have been intended for the purpose of allowing a free text for the deduction.¹⁴ But this text too¹⁵ is required for the deduction that two stitches¹⁶ form a combination¹⁷ and that one stitch does not! — If so, the All Merciful should have written, Thou shalt not wear wool and linen together; what need was there for inserting 'mingled stuff'? Hence it must be concluded that the purpose was to allow a free text for deduction.¹⁸ But is not this text¹⁹ still required [for the deduction that 'mingled stuff'²⁰ is not forbidden] unless it was hackled, spun and twisted?²¹ — But [the fact is that] all this is deduced from the expression of 'mingled stuff'.²²

So far it has been shewn that a positive precept supersedes a mere prohibition,²³ where, however, do we find that it supersedes also a prohibition involving kareth,²⁴ and that in consequence [the explicit expression] "aleha"²⁵ should be required to forbid it?²⁶ And if it be replied that this²⁶ might be deduced from circumcision,²⁷ [it may be retorted]: Circumcision stands in a different category,²⁸ for concerning it thirteen covenants²⁹ were made!³⁰ From the paschal lamb?³¹ — The paschal lamb also stands in a different category³² since it too involves kareth!³⁰ From the daily offering?³¹ — The daily offering also stands in a different category³³ since it is also a regular [offering]!³⁰ [Now though] it³⁴ cannot be derived from one³⁵ it might be derived from two. From which shall it be derived? [If the reply is]: Let it be derived from circumcision and the paschal lamb, [it may be retorted]: These also involve kareth.³⁶ From the paschal lamb and the daily offering? — Both are also intended for the Most High.³⁷ From circumcision and the daily offering? — Both were also in force before the giving of the law,³⁸ this being according to the view of him who holds that the burnt-offering which Israel offered in the wilderness was the daily burnt-offering.³⁹ Nor [can the derivation be made] from all of them, since they were all in force before the giving of the law.⁴⁰

But [this is the reason for] the need of a special text:⁴¹ It might have been assumed⁴² that this⁴³ should be derived from the precept of honouring one's father and mother; for it was taught: Since one might have assumed that the honouring of one's father and mother should supersede the Sabbath, it was explicitly stated, Ye shall fear every man his mother and his father, and ye shall keep My Sabbaths,⁴⁴ it is the duty of all of you⁴⁵ to honour Me. Now is not the case in point one where the parent said to him, 'Slaughter for me',⁴⁶ or 'Cook for me',⁴⁶ and the reason [why the parent must not be obeyed is] because the All Merciful has written, 'Ye shall keep my Sabbaths',⁴⁴ but had that not been so⁴⁷ it⁴⁸ would have superseded?⁴⁹ — No;

- (1) 'Mingled stuff' in the case of zizith. (V. Deut. XXII, 11, 12 and supra p. 15, n. 3).
- (2) Lit., 'if so', i.e., if according to the Rabbis the expression, 'wool and linen', is required for its own context and that text, therefore, is not available for deduction.
- (3) The expression used in Num. XV, 38 in the section dealing with the precept of the fringes.
- (4) That a positive precept supersedes a prohibition. Cf. supra, p. 10, n. 13.
- (5) The expression of 'twisted cords', ohkhsd, Deut. XXII, 12.
- (6) In the fringes.
- (7) The twisted cord cannot be made of less than two threads.
- (8) The plural, i.e., twice two.
- (9) To harmonize this text (Deut. XXII, 12) which implies twisted cords, with that of Num. XV, 38, and that they put with the fringe of each corner a thread of blue, which implies only twisted threads.
- (10) The four threads are inserted into the corner of the garment and, having been folded to form a fringe of eight threads, they are joined (by winding one of the threads round the others) into one twisted cord which extends over a section of length and is then separated again into eight separate threads.
- (11) Men. 39b. Now, since the expression, 'twisted cords', is required for the determination of the number of the threads, how could the Rabbis deduce from it the law of 'mingled stuff' in the fringes?
- (12) That the law of 'mingled stuff' in the fringes was not to be deduced from the text cited.

- (20) Of wool and flax.
- (21) An etymological explanation of, or a play upon, the words 'mingled stuff' zbyga, in Deut. XXII, 11. zbyga is assumed to be an abbreviation of zubu huy gua.
- (22) The use of the peculiar expression, zbyga, and not the usual ohtkf, implies both (a) the deduction mentioned, (v. previous note) and (b) the deduction that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition (v. supra p. 10, n. 13).

- (28) Lit., 'what in respect of circum-cision'.
- (29) The expression 'covenant' (in various grammatical forms) occurs thirteen times in Gen. XVII, the section dealing with the precept of circumcision, v. Ned. 31b.
- (30) Hence it may also supersede the Sabbath. It supplies, however, no proof that a positive precept which is not so stringent (such as the marriage with the levir) also supersedes a prohibition involving kareth.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 6a

this is a case¹ of ass driving.² And [you say that] it does not supersede³ even in such a case?⁴ But then what of the generally accepted rule that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition. Should it not be inferred from this case that it does not supersede!⁵ And if it be replied that the prohibitions of the Sabbath are different⁶ because they are more stringent,⁷ surely the following Tanna, [it may be pointed out,] speaks of prohibitions generally⁸ yet no one advances any objection.⁹ For it was taught: Since it might have been assumed that if his father had said to him,¹⁰ 'Defile yourself',¹¹ or if he said to him, 'Do not restore',¹² he must obey him, it was explicitly stated, Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father, and ye shall keep my Sabbaths,¹³ it is the duty of all of you to honour Me!¹⁴ — The real reason¹⁵ is because this objection may be advanced: Those¹⁶ are in a different category¹⁷ since they are also essentials in the execution of the precept.¹⁸

But [the reason¹⁹ is because] it might have been assumed that this²⁰ should be derived from the precept of the building of the Sanctuary. For it was taught: Since it might have been assumed that the building of the Sanctuary should supersede the Sabbath, it was explicitly stated, Ye shall keep My Sabbaths, and reverence My Sanctuary;²¹ it is the duty of all of you to honour Me. Now is not the case in point one of [a father's order to his son to] build or to demolish,²² and yet the reason [why it does not supersede the Sabbath is] because the All Merciful has written, 'Ye shall keep

My Sabbaths',²³ but had that not been written it would have superseded?²⁴ — No; the case in point is one of ass driving.²⁵

And [you say] that it²⁶ does not supersede a prohibition even in such a case?²⁷ But what of the generally accepted rule that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition? Should we not infer from this case that it does not supersede! And if it be replied that the prohibitions of the Sabbath are different²⁸ because they are of a more stringent nature,²⁹ surely the following Tanna [it may be pointed out] speaks of prohibitions generally³⁰ yet no one advances any refutation.³¹ For it was taught: Since it might have been assumed that if his father had said to him,³² 'Defile yourself',³³ or if he said to him, 'Do not restore',³⁴ he must obey him, hence it was explicitly stated, Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father etc.,³⁵ it is the duty of all of you to honour Me!³⁶ — The true reason³⁷ is because this objection may be advanced: Those³⁸ are in a different category³⁹ since they are also essentials in the execution of the precept.⁴⁰ [But the law relating to] essentials in the execution of a precept could be derived from the previously cited text!⁴¹ — That is so indeed. What need, then, was there for the text, Ye shall keep My Sabbaths, and reverence My Sanctuary?²³ — It is required for the following deduction:⁴² As it might have been imagined that a man should reverence the Sanctuary, it was explicitly stated in the Scriptures, Ye shall keep My Sabbaths, and reverence My Sanctuary;²³ the expression of 'keeping' was used in relation to the Sabbath and [in the same verse] that of 'reverence' in relation to the Sanctuary [in order that the following comparison may be made]: As in the case of 'keeping' used in relation to the Sabbath

(1) Lit., 'negative precept'.

(2) I.e. where a father ordered his son to desecrate the Sabbath by driving an ass; a prohibition which, unlike slaughtering or cooking, does not involve the penalty of kareth. V. Shab. 154a.

(3) Lit., 'and even thus', sc. even the mere prohibition of ass driving.

(4) A mere prohibition not involving the penalty of kareth.

(5) Even a mere prohibition which does not involve the penalty of kareth.

(6) From other prohibitions.

(7) Since the infringement of any one of the laws of the Sabbath is regarded as the sin of idolatry (v. 'Er. 69b), even a mere prohibition which does not involve kareth, cannot be superseded by a positive precept.

(8) Lit., 'stands in the world', i.e., he compares with the prohibitions of the Sabbath others which have no connection with it.

(9) That the prohibitions of the Sabbath being more stringent than others should not be compared with them.

(10) His son who was a priest.

(11) For the dead, which is forbidden to a priest. V. Lev. XXI, 1ff.

(12) A lost animal. V. Deut. XXII, 1.

(13) Lev. XIX, 3.

(14) Thus it has been shewn that prohibitions generally may be compared with those of the Sabbath. The suggestion, therefore, that the parents' order supra concerned the performance of the act of ass driving is untenable. If, consequently, the order must have consisted of a request to perform an act involving the penalty of kareth, that case well supplies a satisfactory answer to the question (supra 5b) as to what need was there for the text, 'aleha', in Lev. XVIII, 18.

(15) Why no satisfactory reply to the question, what need is there for the text 'aleha', may be obtained from the precept of honouring one's parents.

(16) A father's orders to his son to slaughter or to cook on the Sabbath.

- (17) From such a precept as the levirate marriage.
- (18) Lit., 'it is a preparation of the precept'. The precept of honouring a father cannot possibly be performed by the son unless he actually executes the act of slaughtering or of cooking, which he has been ordered by his father to do, so that the fulfilment of the positive precept (honouring one's parents) is entirely dependent on its superseding the prohibition (that, e.g., of cooking). Hence it was necessary to have an explicit text to indicate that, even in such a case, a positive precept does not supersede a prohibition. In the case of the levirate marriage, however, the infringement of the prohibition is not absolutely essential to the fulfilment of the precept, since, instead of the marriage, halizah may be arranged, and the question remains, what need is there of the verse "aleha".
- (19) Why the text, "aleha" (Lev. XVIII, 18) was needed to indicate that wherever the deceased childless brother's widow was the living brother's forbidden relative no levirate marriage must take place.
- (20) That a positive precept supersedes a prohibition involving kareth and consequently that the levirate marriage may take place even in such a case (v. previous note).
- (21) Lev. XIX, 30.
- (22) Actions which are among the principal classes of labour that are forbidden on the Sabbath under the penalty of kareth.
- (23) Lev. XIX, 30.
- (24) Thus it follows that a positive precept does supersede a prohibition even though the latter involves kareth.
- (25) Which does not involve kareth.
- (26) A positive precept.
- (27) Which does not involve kareth.
- (28) From other prohibitions.
- (29) Cf. supra p. 21, n. 13.
- (30) Cf. supra p. 21, n. 14.
- (31) Cf. supra p. 21, n. 15.
- (32) His son who was a priest.
- (33) Cf. supra p. 21, n. 17.
- (34) Cf. supra p. 21, n. 18.
- (35) Lev. XIX, 3.
- (36) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 2.
- (37) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 3.
- (38) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 4.
- (39) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 5.
- (40) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 6.
- (41) Lit., 'from there', from Lev. XIX, 3, and this superfluous text serves to extend the principle of a positive precept superseding a negative precept involving kareth to a case such as levirate marriage. Hence the need of the text "aleha".
- (42) Lit., 'for as it was taught'.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 6b

one does not reverence the Sabbath but Him who ordered the observance of the Sabbath, so in the case of 'reverence' used in relation to the Sanctuary, one is not to reverence the Sanctuary but Him who gave the commandment concerning the Sanctuary. And what is regarded as the 'reverence of the Sanctuary'? — A man shall not enter the Temple mount¹ with his stick, shoes or money bag² or with dust upon his feet, nor may he use it for making a short cut;³ and spitting [is there forbidden] by inference a minori ad majus.⁴ This, however, might apply⁵ only to the time when the Sanctuary was in existence; whence is it deduced that the same holds good of the time when the Sanctuary no longer exists? It was expressly stated in Scripture, Ye shall keep My Sabbaths, and reverence My Sanctuary,⁶ as the ‘keeping’ that was used in relation to the Sabbath holds good forever, so also the ‘reverence’ used in relation to the Sanctuary must hold good forever.⁷

Really [the reason⁸ is because] it might have been assumed that this⁹ should be derived from the prohibition of kindling a fire [on the Sabbath]. For a Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael taught: Wherefore was it stated, Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations?¹⁰ ‘Wherefore ‘was it stated’!¹¹ Surely if one is to follow R. Jose, it was to intimate that [kindling a fire on the Sabbath is] a prohibition only;¹² and, if one is to follow R. Nathan, it was to intimate that even a single transgression involves one in the prescribed penalties;¹³ for it was taught: ‘The prohibition of kindling a fire [on the Sabbath] was mentioned separately¹⁴ in order to [indicate that its transgression is] a prohibition only;¹⁵ so R. Jose, while R. Nathan maintains that the intention was to intimate that even a single transgression involves the offender in the prescribed penalties’!¹³ And Raba explained that the Tanna¹⁶ found difficult the expression of habitations,¹⁷ [arguing thus]: What need was there for Scripture to state ‘habitations’? [Is not this¹⁸ obvious?] For consider: The observance of the Sabbath is a personal obligation, and any personal obligation is valid both in the Land [of Israel] and outside the land;¹⁹ what need, then, was there for the All Merciful to write it²⁰ in connection with the Sabbath? This was explained by a disciple in the name of R. Ishmael: Whereas it was stated in the Scriptures, And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be put to death,²¹ one might infer [that the death penalty may be executed] both on week-days and on the Sabbath and, as regards the application of the text, Everyone that profaneth it²² shall surely be put to death,²³ this might be said to refer to the several kinds of labour other than the execution of a judicial death sentence; or again it might be inferred²⁴ that it²⁵ refers even to a judicial execution of a death sentence and, as regards the application of He shall surely be put to death²³ [this might be said to refer] to week-days but not to the Sabbath; or again it might be thought²⁶ to apply also to the Sabbath; hence it was expressly stated, Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations,²⁷ and further on it is stated, And these things shall be for a statute of judgment unto you throughout your generations in all your habitations;²⁸ as the expression of ‘habitations’ mentioned below²⁸ refers to the Beth din, so the expression ‘habitations’ mentioned here²⁷ refers also to the Beth din, and concerning this the All Merciful said, ‘Ye shall kindle no fire’.²⁹ Now, are we not to assume this statement to be in agreement with the view³⁰ of R. Nathan who holds that the object was to intimate that even a single transgression involves the offender in the prescribed penalties,³¹ and the reason³² is because the All Merciful has written, Ye shall kindle no fire,²⁷ but had that not been the case it would have superseded the [Sabbath]!³³ — No; this may be according to R. Jose.³⁴

Granted, however, [that it is according to the view of] R. Jose, might it not be suggested that R. Jose said that ‘kindling a fire [on the Sabbath] is mentioned separately in order to indicate that it is a mere prohibition’ [in the case only of] ordinary burning; the burning by the Beth din,³⁵ [however, is surely a case of] boiling of the metal bar³⁶ concerning which R. Shesheth said that there is no difference between the boiling of a metal bar and the boiling of dyes?³⁷ — R. Shimi b. Ashi replied: This Tanna³⁸ [requires Scriptural texts] not because elsewhere he holds that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition, but because this³⁹ might have been obtained by inference a minori ad majus; and it is this that he meant to say: 'As regards the application of the text, Every one that profaneth it⁴⁰ shall surely be put to death,⁴¹ it might have been said to apply to the several kinds of labour other than that of the execution of a judicial death sentence, but that a judicial death sentence does supersede the Sabbath, by inference a minori ad majus:

(9) Cf. supra p. 22, n. 8.

(10) Ex. XXXV, 3.

(11) The prohibition of kindling a fire, surely, is included in the general prohibition of labour on Sabbath.

(12) I.e., only a negative commandment the transgression of which does not, like the other Sabbath offences, involve the penalties of stoning or kareth. The former, if the offender was warned beforehand of the consequence of his offence, the latter, where no such warning had been given.

(13) Lit., 'to divide', i.e., one of the thirty-nine kinds of labour that are forbidden on the Sabbath was singly specified in order to indicate that to incur the prescribed penalties it is not necessary to commit all the thirty-nine transgressions (as the one general, all-embracing prohibition of about might have seemed to imply). The mention of one prohibition (kindling of fire) separately breaks up, so to speak, (divides), all the others into single units, indicating that, as in its own case, so in that of all the others first mentioned together with it, every single transgression involves the penalty of stoning, kareth, or a sin-offering.

(14) Lit., 'went out'.

(25) The prohibition of labour.

(26) Lit., 'or it is not but'.

(27) Ex. XXXV, 3.

(28) Num. XXXV, 29, referring to the death penalties of murderers.

(29) I.e., execute no death penalty of burning on the Sabbath. The death penalty of 'burning' was executed by pouring molten lead through the condemned man's mouth into his body, thus burning his internal organs.

(30) Lit., 'what, (is it) not?'

(31) Of death or kareth. V. supra p. 25, n. 1.

(32) Why the death penalty of burning — a kind of work — which according to R. Nathan would involve kareth must not be executed on the Sabbath.

(33) Though the penalties involved include that of kareth. Thus it follows that a positive precept may supersede even such a prohibition. So also in the case of the levirate marriage it might have been assumed that the precept of marrying one's deceased childless brother's widow supersedes the prohibition of marrying a consanguineous relative despite the fact that such a transgression involves elsewhere the penalty of kareth; hence it was necessary for Scripture to add, 'aleha' (Lev. XVIII, 18), to indicate that even a levirate marriage is in such a case forbidden. (V. supra 3b and 5b).

(34) V. supra p. 24, n. 12.

(35) The death penalty of burning.

(36) Cf. supra note 4.

(37) Lit., 'what (difference is it) to me', Shab. 106a. The dyes were boiled in connection with the construction of the Tabernacle that was made by Moses, and any kind of labour that was there performed is included among the thirty-nine principal kinds of labour which are forbidden on the Sabbath (v. Shab. 73a) and involve the penalty of kareth. Cf. supra p. 26, n. 8.

(38) Who deduced from Scriptural texts that a judicial death sentence may not be executed on the Sabbath.

(39) The assumption that the execution of a judicial death sentence might supersede the Sabbath.

(40) The Sabbath.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 7a

If the Temple service which is of high importance and supersedes the Sabbath¹ is itself superseded by [a death sentence for] murder, as it is said, Thou shalt take him from Mine altar, that he may die,² how much more reasonable is it that the Sabbath which is superseded by the Temple service should be superseded by [a death sentence for] murder'. How, then, could it be said, 'Or it might rather [etc.]'?³ — He means this: The burial of a meth mizwah⁴ might prove [the contrary], since it supersedes the Temple service⁵ and does not nevertheless supersede the Sabbath.⁶ Then⁷ he argued: It might be inferred a minori ad majus that the burial of a meth mizwah should supersede the Sabbath, [thus]: If the Temple service which super sedes the Sabbath is superseded by the burial of a meth mizwah, by deduction from Or for his sister,⁸ how much more should the Sabbath which is superseded by the Temple service be superseded by the burial of a meth mizwah; hence it was explicitly stated, Ye shall kindle no fire.⁹ [etc].¹⁰

According to our previous assumption, however, that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition, what is meant by, 'Or it might rather [etc.]'?¹¹ — It is this that was meant: 'As regards the application of the text, Every one that profaneth it¹² shall surely be put to death,¹³ it might have been said to apply to the several kinds of labour other than the execution of a judicial death sentence, but that a judicial death sentence does supersede the Sabbath, for a positive precept¹⁴ supersedes the prohibition. Then¹⁵ he argued: It might be suggested that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition in the case of a mere prohibition only; has it, however, been heard to supersede a prohibition which involves kareth? Then he concluded: 'Even where¹⁶ a positive precept supersedes a prohibition, is not the prohibition of a more serious nature than the precept?¹⁷ And yet the positive precept comes and supersedes the prohibited; on what grounds, then, should a distinction be made between a minor and a major prohibition?¹⁸ Hence it was explicitly stated, Ye shall kindle no fire⁹ [etc.].¹⁹

But²⁰ [this is the reason why a specific text] was needed:²¹ It might have been assumed that this [case of a] brother's wife should be regarded as a subject which was included in a general proposition²² and was subsequently singled out in order to predicate another law,²³ the predication of which is not intended to apply to itself alone but to the whole of the general proposition. For it was taught: 'A subject which was included in a general proposition and was subsequently singled out, etc. How [is this to be understood]? But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings [that pertain unto the Lord], having his uncleanness upon him,²⁴ were not peace-offerings included among the other holy things?²⁵ Why, then, were they subsequently singled out? In order that [the others] may be compared to them, and in order to tell you that as peace-offerings are distinguished by being consecrated objects of the altar so must also all other things²⁶ be consecrated objects of the altar, the objects consecrated for Temple repair only being excluded.'²⁷ Similarly here it might have been argued:²⁸ Since a brother's wife was included among all the other forbidden relatives, why was she singled out? In order that [the others] may be compared to her, and in order to tell you that as a brother's wife is permitted²⁹ so also are all the other forbidden relatives permitted.³⁰

Are these, however, similar? There,³¹ both the general proposition³² and the particular specification²⁴ relate to a prohibition, but here³³ the general proposition relates to a prohibition while the particular specification relates to something which is permitted!³⁴ This, surely, is rather to be compared to an object that was included in a general proposition and was subsequently singled out in order to be made the subject of a fresh statement, which you cannot restore to the restrictions of the general proposition unless Scripture specifically restores it; for it was taught: Anything which was included in a general proposition and was subsequently excluded in order to be made the subject of a fresh statement, cannot be restored to the restrictions of the general proposition unless Scripture has explicitly restored it.³⁵ How³⁶ [may this principle be illustrated]? And he shall kill the he-lamb in the place where they kill the sin-offering and the burnt-offering in the place of the Sanctuary; for as the sin-offering is the priest's so is the guilt-offering.³⁷ Now since there was no need to state, 'As the sin-offering so is the guilt-offering.'³⁸ why did Scripture explicitly state. As the sin-offering so the guilt-offering? Because seeing that the guilt-offering of the leper was singled out³⁹ in order to impart a new law concerning the thumb of the right hand and the great toe of the right foot,⁴⁰ it might have been assumed that it required no application of blood to, and no burning of the prescribed portions of the sacrifice upon the altar;

(1) Labour prohibited on the Sabbath may be performed in connection with the service of the Temple.

(2) Ex. XXI, 14. This is taken to mean that he may be removed from the altar even if he has to perform service thereon.

(3) Supra 6b. Since the inference was made a minori ad majus how could anyone dispute it?

(4) V. Glos.

(5) A priest may defile himself by the burial of a meth mizwah though he thereby becomes disqualified from performing the Temple service. V. Meg. 3b.

(6) Burial is forbidden on the Sabbath. So also, it could be argued, the execution of a death sentence, though it supersedes the Temple service, need not necessarily supersede the Sabbath.

- (18) As a positive precept supersedes an ordinary prohibition so it should also supersede one which involves kareth.
- (19) V. supra note 3.
- (20) Now that it is concluded that the need of the Scriptural text prohibiting the execution of a death sentence on Sabbath is because otherwise the permissibility thereof might have been argued a minori, and not on the ground of the principle that a positive command supersedes a prohibition, there is no proof available for the assumption that a positive precept supersedes a prohibition which involves kareth, and thus the original question again arises: What need was there for the specific text of Lev. XVIII, 18, 'aleha' (supra p. 8), to indicate the obvious? (i.e., that the positive precept of the levirate marriage does not supersede the prohibition of marrying a consanguineous relative).

hence it was explicitly stated, 'As the sin-offering so is the guilt-offering': As the sin-offering¹ requires application of the blood to, and burning of the prescribed portions upon the altar, so does the guilt-offering also require application of the blood to, and burning of the prescribed portions upon the altar.² Had Scripture not restored it,³ however, it would have been assumed that it was singled out only in respect of what was explicitly specified but not in any other respect;⁴ so also here,⁵ I would assume, only a brother's wife who was explicitly mentioned [can be said] to be permitted⁶ but not any of the other forbidden relatives!⁷

But⁸ it might have been assumed that the law of a wife's sister⁹ should be deduced from what has been found in the case of a brother's wife; as a levir may marry his brother's wife so he may also marry his wife's sister.¹⁰

Are, however, the two cases¹¹ similar? In the one case¹² there is only one prohibition; in the other¹³ there are two prohibitions!¹⁴ — It might have been assumed that since she¹⁵ was permitted¹⁶ [in respect of one prohibition]¹⁷ she was also permitted [in the case of the other].¹⁸ And whence is it derived that we assume that 'since something was permitted [in one respect] it was also permitted [in the other]'? — From what was taught: In the case of a leper whose eighth day [of purification]¹⁹ fell on the Passover eve,²⁰ and who, having observed a discharge of semen on that day,²¹ had taken a ritual bath, the Sages said: Although no other *tebul yom*²² may enter [the Temple mount],²³ this one²⁴ may enter, for it is better that the positive precept,²⁵ the non-observance of which involves kareth, shall supersede a positive precept²⁶ the infringement of which involves no kareth.²⁷ And in connection with this R. Johanan said: According to the Torah, not even [the infringement of] a positive precept is involved,²⁸ for it is said, And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah . . . before the new court.²⁹ What is meant by the new court? Rabbi³⁰ replied: That they enacted therein new laws, ordaining that a *tebul yom*³¹ must not enter the camp of the Levites.³² And 'Ulla said: 'What is the reason?'³³ Since he was given permission³⁴ in respect of his leprosy,³⁵ permission was also given to him in respect of his discharge of the semen.³⁶ But is this case³⁷ similar to that of 'Ulla?

(5) The case of the levirate marriage.

(6) Lit., 'that was permitted is permitted'.

(7) The question consequently arises again: What need was there for 'aleha' in Lev. XVIII, 18. (Cf. supra p. 30, n. s).

(8) The reason why a superfluous text (v. previous note) was needed.

(9) For this reading v. Bah.

(10) Hence it was necessary to have the superfluous text, 'aleha' (v. supra n. 4) to shew that the law was not so.

- (26) That a leper like certain other unclean persons must be sent out from the Levitical camp in which the Temple mount is included.
- (27) If he were not allowed to enter the Temple mount his purification from leprosy could not have been completed (cf. supra p. 31, n. 16) and he would in consequence have been prevented from participating in the paschal lamb. By allowing him to enter he is enabled to complete his purification, while nightfall would also terminate the uncleanness due to the discharge, and thus he is in a position to participate in the evening in the paschal lamb which during the day is prepared for him by a deputy.
- (28) In allowing the leper in the conditions mentioned to enter the Temple court.
- (29) II Chron. XX, 5, referring to a day when Israel completed a period of purification.
- (30) This is the reading also in Zeb. 32b. Cur. edd. enclose in parentheses 'R. Johanan'.
- (31) V. Glos.
- (32) Which proves that the prohibition for a tebul yom to enter the Levitical camp was not of Pentateuchal origin, having been first enacted in the days of Jehoshaphat.
- (33) Why was a leper in the circumstances mentioned permitted to extend his hands into the Sanctuary whither an unclean person, according to 'Ulla, may not project even part of his body?
- (34) To project his hands into the Sanctuary.
- (35) Despite the prohibition for an unclean person, though the days of his purification have been duly observed, to enter the Sanctuary even partially, prior to the offering of the prescribed sacrifices.
- (36) Thus it is proved that since something was permitted in one respect the permission remains in force even when another prohibition may be involved in another respect. The same argument might have also applied to a wife's sister or widow of a deceased brother. Hence the need of the text, 'aleha'.
- (37) A brother's wife who is also one's wife's sister.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 8a

[The comparison] might well be justified where the deceased brother married [first]¹ and the surviving brother married [his brother's wife's sister] afterwards,² for, in this case, since the prohibition of brother's wife was removed,³ that of wife's sister⁴ is also removed; but where the surviving brother had married [first] and the deceased brother had married subsequently, the prohibition of wife's sister was Surely in force first!⁵ Furthermore, even where the deceased had married [first], [the comparison] would be justified in the case where the deceased had married and died, and the surviving brother had married afterwards so that [the widow] was eligible in the interval,⁶ where, however, the deceased had married, and before he died his wife's sister was married by his surviving brother, [his widow] was never for a moment eligible for his brother! Does not 'Ulla admit that if the leper observed semen on the night preceding the eighth day⁷ of his purification he must not project his hand into the Sanctuary on account of his thumb⁸ because at the time he was eligible to bring the sacrifice [of the cleansed leper]⁹ he was not free from uncleanness?¹⁰

But [this is really the explanation]: If 'aleha' was at all needed, [it was for such a case as] where the deceased brother had married [first] and died, and the surviving brother married [the widow's sister] subsequently.¹¹

If you prefer I can say [that the reason¹² is because] it¹³ might have been deduced by means of R. Jonah's analogy. For R. Jonah — others say, R. Huna son of R. Joshua — said: 'Scripture stated: For whosoever shall do any of these abominations shall be cut off,¹⁴ all forbidden relatives were compared to a brother's wife';¹⁵ [so in this case also it might have been said], as a brother's wife is permitted¹⁶ so also are all other forbidden relatives permitted; hence the All Merciful has written, 'aleha'.¹⁷

Said R. Aha of Difti¹⁸ to Rabina: Consider! All forbidden relatives¹⁹ might be compared to a brother's wife²⁰ and might equally be compared to a wife's sister,²¹ what reason do you see for comparing them to a wife's sister?²¹ Compare them rather to a brother's wife!²⁰ — If you wish I might say: When a comparison may be made for increasing as well as for decreasing restrictions, that for increasing restrictions must be preferred. If you prefer, however, I might say: In the former cases²² there are two prohibitions in the one as well as in the other,²³ and a double prohibition may justly be inferred from a double prohibition; in the latter case, however,²⁴ only one prohibition is involved,²⁵ and a double prohibition may not be inferred from a single one.

Raba said: [That] a forbidden relative herself²⁶ [may not contract the levirate marriage] requires no Scriptural text to prove it, since no positive precept can supersede a prohibition which involves kareth; if a Scriptural text was at all needed it was for the purpose of forbidding a rival.

And in the case of a forbidden relative is no Scriptural text required [to prohibit her levirate marriage]? Surely it was taught, 'Thus we are in a position to know the law concerning herself'!²⁷ — On account of her rival.²⁸ Was it not taught, however, 'Now we know the law concerning themselves'?²⁹ — On account of their rivals.³⁰

Come and hear: Rabbi said: [Instead of] and take, [Scripture stated], and take her,³¹ [and instead of] and perform the duty of a husband's brother [Scripture stated], and perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her,³¹ in order to prohibit³² [the levirate marriage of] forbidden relatives and their rivals!³³ — Read, 'To forbid [the levirate marriage of] the rivals of the forbidden relatives'. But two texts, surely, were mentioned;³⁴ was not one for the forbidden relative and the other for her rival? — No; both were for the rival, but one indicates prohibition³⁵ of a rival where the precept³⁵ is applicable, and the other indicates permission to marry the rival where the precept³⁵ is not applicable.³⁶ What is the reason? — [Because instead of] ‘And perform the duty of a husband's brother’ [Scripture stated] And perform the duty of a husband's brother UNTO HER, [which indicates that] only where levirate marriage is applicable is a rival forbidden³⁷ but where levirate marriage is not applicable³⁶ a rival is permitted.³⁷ R. Ashi said: [This³⁸ may] also be inferred from our Mishnah where it was stated, FIFTEEN [CATEGORIES OF] WOMEN EXEMPT THEIR RIVALS, but it was not stated, ‘are exempt³⁹ and exempt [their rivals]’. This proves it.

In what respect does the case of a forbidden relative differ⁴⁰ that it should require no text?⁴¹ Obviously because no positive precept may supersede a prohibition which involves kareth. But then the case of a rival also should require no text,⁴¹ since no positive precept may supersede a prohibition which involves kareth!⁴² — Said R. Aha b. Bebai Mar to Rabina, Thus it has been stated in the name of Raba: In the case of a rival also no Scriptural text⁴¹ was needed; if a text was needed at all it was for the purpose of permitting a rival where the precept¹ is not applicable. What is the reason?² — Scripture stated, 'aleha',³ to indicate that only in the case of 'unto her'⁴ is she⁵ forbidden,⁶ where the other, however, may not, she is permitted.

Said Rami b. Hama to Raba: Might it not be suggested⁷ that the forbidden relative⁸ herself is permitted⁹ where the precept¹⁰ is not applicable? — Is not [such an argument contrary to the principle of inference] a minori ad majus? Being forbidden where the precept¹⁰ is applicable, would she be permitted where the precept is not applicable? — ['The case of a] rival', the first replied, 'could prove it, since she is forbidden⁹ where the precept¹⁰ is applicable, and is permitted⁹ where the precept¹⁰ is not applicable'. 'It is for your sake,' the other replied, 'that Scripture states, In her life-time,¹¹ so long as she¹² lives'.¹³ But is not the expression,¹⁴ In her life-time,¹¹ required for the exclusion [of the prohibition of marriage] after her¹² death?¹⁵ — This is deduced from the text, And a woman to her sister.¹¹ If [the deduction were only] from the text. 'And a woman to her sister',¹¹ it might have been said that if she¹⁶ was divorced the sister would be permitted, hence it was expressly stated, 'In her life-time.'¹¹ So long as she¹⁶ is alive, even though she has been divorced, [her sister must] not [be married]!¹⁷ — But, said R. Huna b. Tahlifa in the name of Raba, two Scriptural texts are available; it is written, Thou shalt not take a woman to her sister, to be a rival to her¹⁸ [implying two],¹⁹ and it is also written, To uncover her nakedness,²⁰ which implies that only one is forbidden; how then [are the two texts to be reconciled]? Where the precept²¹ is applicable both are forbidden;²² where the precept²¹ is not applicable she²³ is forbidden but her rival is permitted. Might not the deduction be reversed: Where the precept²¹ is applicable she²³ is forbidden but her rival is permitted, but where the precept is not applicable both are forbidden!²² — If so, ‘aleha’ should not have been stated.²⁴

Said R. Ashi to R. Kahana: Whence is it derived that the expression ‘aleha²⁵ indicates prohibition? Is it not possible that it implies permission, and that it is this that the All Merciful meant to imply: Thou shalt not take a woman to her sister, to be a rival to her,²⁵ neither herself nor her rival where ‘unto her’²⁶ is not applicable,²⁷ but where ‘unto her’²⁶ is applicable²⁸ both are permitted!²⁹ — If so, how could the ‘uncovering of the nakedness’ of one³⁰ be possible? If in the case where the precept³¹ is applicable, both are permitted;³² and if where the precept is not applicable both are forbidden!³³

[Reverting to] the [above] text, Rabbi said: Instead of And take, Scripture stated, ‘And take her’ and instead of ‘And perform the duty of a husband's brother’, Scripture stated, ‘And perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her’, in order to prohibit [the levirate marriage of] forbidden relatives and their rivals. Are, then, rivals mentioned here at all? And, furthermore, the law of rivals has been derived from the expression To be her rival!³⁴ — The expression To be her rival is employed by Rabbi for R. Simeon's deduction.³⁵ Where,³⁶ however, is the rival mentioned?³⁷ — What he meant is this: If so,³⁸ Scripture should have stated, And take; why then did it state, ‘And he shall take her’?³⁹ To indicate that wherever there are two to be taken,⁴⁰ he⁴¹ having the choice of marrying whichever he prefers⁴² both are permitted,⁴³ but if not,⁴⁴ both are forbidden; And perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her,⁴⁵ indicates that where levirate marriage is applicable there is the rival forbidden, where, however, levirate marriage is not applicable the rival is permitted.

As to the Rabbis,⁴⁶ to what do they apply the verse ‘And he shall take her’? — They require it for the deduction of R. Jose b. Hanina. For R. Jose b. Hanina said: ‘And he shall take her’⁴⁵ teaches that he⁴⁷ may divorce her with a letter of divorce⁴⁸ and that he may remarry her;⁴⁹ And he shall perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her, even against her will.⁵⁰ And Rabbi?⁵¹ — The law of R. Jose b. Hanina is deduced from To a wife,⁴⁵ and that the marriage may take place against her will is deduced from Her husband's brother shall go in unto her.⁴⁵

What does Rabbi do with [the expression], ‘aleha’? — He requires it [for another deduction], as we learnt: The Beth din⁵² are under no obligation⁵³ unless [they ruled] concerning a prohibition the punishment for which is kareth, if the transgression was wilful, and a sin-offering if the transgression was unwitting; and so it is with the anointed High priest.

(1) Of the levirate marriage.

(2) I.e., how is the permissibility deduced?

(3) Lev. XVIII, 18.

(4) Lit., ‘in the place of vHkg with reference to the verse ‘Her husband's brother shall go in unto her’ (v. supra p. 8, n. 9) i.e., where the command of levirate marriage would otherwise apply.

(5) The rival.

(6) To be married, cf. supra p. 35, n. 12.

- (7) On the lines of the argument just advanced.
- (8) I.e., the wife's sister.
- (9) To be married.
- (10) Of the levirate marriage.
- (11) Lev. XVIII, 18.
- (12) One's wife.
- (13) Her sister must not be married. (Other forbidden relatives, as has been shewn supra, are deduced from one's wife's sister).
- (14) Lit., 'that'.
- (15) I.e., that the prohibition of a wife's sister which on the present assumption is limited to cases where the precept of levirate marriage is applicable, applies only during the lifetime of one's wife.
- (16) The wife.
- (17) But it can still be maintained that where no levirate marriage is applicable, there is no prohibition of marrying the wife's sister.
- (18) Lev. XVIII, 18.
- (19) I.e., that both the wife's sister and her rival are forbidden to be married. (This, as will be shewn infra, is deduced from the expression li-zeror.)
- (20) Lev. XVIII, 18, emphasis on her (sing.).
- (21) Of the levirate marriage.
- (22) To be married.
- (23) The forbidden relative herself.
- (24) Since even without this additional phrase the two contradictory texts would have been naturally reconciled by applying the former (prohibition of both) to a case where the precept of the levirate marriage is inapplicable, and the latter (permission of the rival) to a case where it is applicable. The addition of the phrase must consequently have been intended to impart a new law, viz. that a rival is forbidden, like the forbidden relative herself, where the precept of the levirate marriage is applicable.
- (25) Lev. XVIII, 18.
- (26) V. supra p. 8, n. 9.
- (27) I.e., where the law of the levirate marriage does not apply.
- (28) Where levirate marriage does apply.
- (29) The concluding part of the verse vhhvc vhkg meaning where he has to go 'unto her', the sister of his wife who is the widow of his brother, he may do so even in her (his wife's) life-time.
- (30) V. Lev. XVIII, 18, implying, as explained supra, the prohibition of one only.
- (31) Of the levirate marriage.
- (32) So that there are two, not only one.
- (33) And there is none.
- (34) Heb. li-zeror (Lev. XVIII, 18), supra 3b. How then could it be said to be derived from a different text?
- (35) V. infra 28b.
- (36) V. Emden a.l. Cur. edd. read 'here'.
- (37) In Deut. XXV, 5, the text cited by Rabbi. Clearly, it was not mentioned at all; how then could Rabbi derive from the text a law concerning a subject of which no mention was made?
- (38) That the text refers to the forbidden relative only and not to a rival.
- (39) Deut. XXV, 5.
- (40) Lit., 'takings', i.e., when the deceased childless brother is survived by two widows, and the levir has to decide which of them to marry.

- (41) The levir.
- (42) I.e., when neither of the two is a forbidden relative.
- (43) The emphasis on 'her' in And take her implies that there is a choice between two, and the phrase 'and take her' is taken to imply that the levir is in a position to choose whichever he pleases, since either of them must be capable of having the phrase 'and take her' applied to her.
- (44) If one cannot be married by him on account of her being his forbidden relative.
- (45) Deut. XXV, 5.
- (46) Who made the deduction from li-zeror.
- (47) The levir.
- (48) After he married her; and she requires no halizah.
- (49) Though the precept of the levirate marriage has been fulfilled and she might have been assumed to be forbidden to him as a brother's wife. The text is interpreted as follows: And he takes her to him to wife, as soon as he has taken her, she is regarded henceforth in all respects as his wife, i.e., as if she had never been forbidden to him as a brother's wife.
- (50) Emphasis on 'unto her' (v. Tosaf).
- (51) Whence does he derive the law deduced by R. Jose b. Hanina?
- (52) Who are guilty of an erroneous ruling.
- (53) To bring the sacrifice prescribed in Lev. IV, 13ff.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 9a

Nor [are they liable] in respect of idolatry unless [they ruled] concerning a matter the punishment for which is kareth, if it was committed wilfully and a sin-offering if committed unwittingly;¹ and we also learnt: [For the unwitting transgression of any] commandment in the Torah the penalty for which, if committed wilfully, is kareth and, if committed unwittingly a sin-offering, the private individual brings a sin-offering of a lamb or a she-goat; the ruler brings a goat; and the anointed High Priest and the Beth din bring a bullock. In the case of idolatry the individual and the ruler and the anointed High Priest bring a she-goat while the Beth din² bring a bullock and a goat, the bullock for a burnt-offering and the goat for a sin-offering. Whence is this deduced? From the following. For our Rabbis taught: When the sin wherein they have sinned is known:³ Rabbi said, here⁴ we read 'aleha⁵ and further on⁶ we also read 'aleha;⁷ as further on⁶ the prohibition involves the penalty of kareth if the transgression was wilful and that of a sin-offering if it was unwitting, so here⁸ also, [the ruling must be concerning] a prohibition which involves the penalty of kareth if the transgression was wilful and that of a sin-offering if it was unwitting.⁹

Proof has thus been adduced for the case of the congregation; whence for that of the anointed High Priest? — It is written in relation to the High Priest, So as to bring guilt upon the people;¹⁰ this shews that the anointed High Priest is like the congregation. And for an individual and a ruler? — The inference is made by a comparison of Things¹¹ with Things.¹² 'Nor [are they liable] in respect of idolatry unless [their ruling] concerned a matter the punishment for which is kareth if it was committed wilfully, and a sin-offering if committed unwittingly'. As regards the congregation in the matter of idolatry, deduction¹³ is made by comparison between From the eyes¹⁴ and From the eyes.¹⁵ [The law¹⁶ of] a private individual, a ruler and an anointed High Priest [is deduced] from, And if one soul¹⁷ which implies that there is no distinction between a private individual, a ruler and an anointed High Priest, while the waw¹⁸ connects them with the previous subject,¹⁹ and consequently the latter²⁰ may be deduced from the former.²¹

Whence, however, do the Rabbis²² arrive at this inference?²³ — They deduce it from the Biblical interpretation which R. Joshua b. Levi taught to his son: Ye shall have one law for him that doeth aught in error. But the soul that doeth aught with a high hand etc.,²⁴ all the Torah is compared to the prohibition of idolatry;²⁵ as in regard to idolatry [obligation is incurred only where] the offence involves the punishment of kareth²⁶ when it was committed wilfully and a sin-offering²⁷ when committed unwittingly, so also in the case of any other transgression [it must be such] as involves kareth when committed wilfully and a sin-offering when committed unwittingly.

Proof has thus been found for the case of a private individual, a ruler and an anointed High Priest²⁸ both in regard to idolatry and the rest of the commandments; whence, however, [is it proved that the same law applies also to] the congregation in the case of idolatry? — Scripture said, And if one soul,²⁹ and the former³⁰ may be deduced from the latter.³¹ Whence, however, [is it deduced that the same law applies to] the congregation in the case of the other commandments? — Deduction is made by comparison between ‘From the eyes’ and ‘From the eyes’.³²

And what does Rabbi do with the text of One law:³³ — He applies it to the following.³⁴ Whereas we find that Scripture made distinction between individuals and a group,³⁵ individuals being punished by stoning and their money, therefore, being spared, while a group are punished by the sword and their money is consequently destroyed, one might also assume that a distinction should be made in respect of their sacrifices; hence it was explicitly stated, Ye shall have one law.³³

R. Hilkiah of Hagronia³⁶ demurred: Is the reason³⁷ because the All Merciful has written, Ye shall have one law,³³ so that had it not so been written it might have been thought that a distinction should be made [in respect of their sacrifices]? What, however, could they bring! Should they bring a bullock? The congregation,³⁸ surely, brings a bullock for the transgression of any one of all the other commandments!³⁹ [Should they bring] a lamb? An individual, surely, brings a lamb if he transgressed any of the other commandments!⁴⁰ A he-goat? A ruler brings one in the case of transgression of any of the other commandments!⁴⁰ A bullock for a burnt-offering and a goat for a sin-offering? Such, surely, are brought by the congregation in the case of idolatry!⁴⁰ Should they, then, bring a she-goat? This, surely, is also the sin-offering of a private individual!⁴¹ — [The text]⁴² was required, because it might have been suggested that whereas the congregation, in the case of an erroneous ruling, brings a bullock for a burnt-offering and a he-goat for a sin-offering, these⁴³ should also bring the same sacrifices, but] in the reverse order;⁴⁴ or [it might have been assumed to be] necessary⁴⁵ but that there was no remedy;⁴⁶ hence it was necessary to teach us.⁴⁷

Said Levi to Rabbi: What ground is there for stating⁴⁸ FIFTEEN? Sixteen should have been stated! — The other replied: It seems to me that this man has no brains in his head. ‘Do you mean’, he continued, ‘a man's mother who had been outraged by his father?’⁴⁹ The case of a man's mother who has been outraged by his father is a matter in dispute between R. Judah and the Rabbis,⁵⁰ and the author of our Mishnah does not deal with any controversial matter’. But does he not? Surely, the prohibition due to a Rabbinical ordinance and the prohibition due to the levir's sanctity,⁵¹ concerning which R. Akiba and the Rabbis are in dispute,⁵² are mentioned! — We mean, in our chapter. But, surely it was taught,⁵³ 'Beth Shammai permit rivals to the other brothers and Beth Hillel prohibit them'!⁵⁴ — The view of Beth Shammai where it is in contradiction to that of Beth Hillel is of no consequence.⁵⁵

Is there not the case of the wife of a man's brother who was not his contemporary.⁵⁶ concerning which R. Simeon and the Rabbis are in dispute,¹ and which is nevertheless mentioned? — R. Simeon does not dispute the case where the birth² was first, and the levirate marriage³ later.⁴ Did not R. Oshaia, however, say¹ that R. Simeon disputed the first case also?⁵ — Surely. R. Oshaia's view was refuted.

Did not, however, Rab Judah state in the name of Rab, and R. Hiyya also taught: In the case of all these⁶ it may happen that she who is forbidden to one brother may be permitted to the other¹ while she who is forbidden to the other brother may be permitted to the one, and that her sister who is her sister-in-law may be subject either to halizah or to the levirate marriage.⁷ And Rab Judah interpreted [it⁸ as referring to those]⁹ from one's MOTHER-IN-LAW onwards but not to the first six categories. What is the reason? Because in the case of a daughter this¹⁰ is possible only [with one born] from a woman who had been outraged but not [with one born] from a legal marriage,¹¹ [and the author of our Mishnah] deals only with cases of legal matrimony and not with those of outraged women.¹² And Abaye interpreted it⁸ [as referring] also to a daughter from a woman who had been out raged, because, since [the application of Rab's statement] is quite possible in her case, it matters not whether she was born from a woman who was legally married or from one that had been outraged; but not to the wife of a brother who was not his contemporary. What is the reason? Because [the application of Rab's statement in this case] is possible only according to the view of R. Simeon and not according to that of the Rabbis, [the author of our Mishnah] does not deal with any matter which is in dispute. And R. Safra interprets it¹³ as referring also to the wife of a brother who was not his contemporary, and [in his opinion] it¹³ is possible in the case of six brothers in accordance with the view of R. Simeon.¹⁴

(1) Infra 18b.

(2) Of a third brother. (V. infra n. 4).

(3) Between the second brother and the widow of the first brother who died without issue (V. following note).

(4) In such a case, R. Simeon agrees that the third brother must not marry the widow, because at the time when he was born the widow was forbidden to him as 'the wife of his brother who was not his contemporary'. R. Simeon's disagreement with the Rabbis is limited to the case where the first brother, A, died childless and his widow was married to the second brother, B, prior to the birth of the third brother, C. If subsequently B died also childless, R. Simeon, contrary to the opinion of the Rabbis, allows the levirate marriage between the widow and C, because when C was born the widow was already the wife of B, and C's levirate marriage now is not due to A whose widow was a married woman when he was born, but to B whose contemporary he is.

(5) I.e., where C (v. note 4) was born before the levirate marriage between A's widow and B took place.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 10a

And your mnemonic is, 'Died, born, and performed the levirate marriage; died, born, and performed the levirate marriage'!¹ — Rabbi² does not accept these rules.³

R. Adda Karhina stated before R. Kahana in the name of Raba: Rabbi, in fact, does accept these rules,⁴ but it was this that he meant to say to [Levi]:⁵ [The application of the statement⁴ to] a woman outraged by one's father is possible only in one [of its parts]; it is impossible, however, to apply it in [both its parts], for if Jacob outraged his two sisters,⁶ it is possible [to apply that part of the statement relating to] 'her sister who is her sister-in-law',⁷ but not that of 'she who is forbidden to one brother may be permitted to the other',⁸ and if he outraged two strangers,⁹ it is possible [to apply the statement], 'she who is forbidden to one brother may be permitted to the other'¹⁰ but not that of 'her sister who is her sister-in-law'.¹¹

R. Ashi said: Rabbi, in fact, does not accept these rules¹² and [our Mishnah] does deal with matters in dispute, and as to the meaning¹³ of 'It seems to me that this man has no brains in his head' which he¹⁴ addressed to him,¹⁵ what he meant was this: 'Why did you not carefully consider our Mishnah? For our Mishnah represents the view of R. Judah who forbids the marriage of a woman that was outraged by one's father,¹⁶ as it was taught: Six forbidden relatives come under greater restrictions,¹⁷ since they are to be married to strangers only,¹⁸ and their rivals are permitted.¹⁹ [These are:] his mother, his father's wife and his father's sister [etc.].²⁰ Now, what is meant by "his mother"? If it be assumed to mean one who was legally married to his father, such a woman surely is "his father's wife".²¹ Must it not consequently mean one who was outraged by his father? And yet it was stated, "since they are to be married to strangers only", implying "to strangers only but not to the brothers". Now, who has been heard to hold such an opinion? Surely it was R. Judah who forbids marriage with a woman who was outraged by one's father.²² Hence²³ it was not included in our Mishnah.'²⁴

Said Rabina to R. Ashi: [Such a levirate relationship]²⁵ is possible even according to R. Judah if and when one had married²⁶ illegally!²⁷ — The author of the Mishnah is not concerned with an 'if'.²⁸ Said R. Ashi to R. Kahana: This²⁹ is also possible without the 'if',³⁰ where Jacob³¹ outraged his daughter-in-law, begat from her a son, and then Reuben³² died without issue, and she thus came into levirate relationship with her son;³³ and since she is forbidden to him,³⁴ her rival also is likewise forbidden!³⁵ — The other replied: [The author of our Mishnah] deals only with lawful brotherhood but not with brotherhood which is due to a forbidden act.

Levi nevertheless³⁶ inserted it³⁷ in his Mishnah. For Levi taught: One's mother sometimes exempts her rival³⁸ and sometimes she does not exempt her. If his mother, for instance,³⁹ was lawfully married to his father, and then she was married⁴⁰ to his paternal brother⁴¹ who subsequently died, such a mother does not exempt her rival.⁴²

(1) Now, since in the case of 'the wife of a brother who was not his contemporary' the application of Rab's statement is only possible according to the view of R. Simeon but not according to that of the Rabbis, and since the statement is based on our Mishnah, it is obvious that our Mishnah deals also with a case which is in dispute.

(2) Cf. Bah. Cur. edd. insert, 'but'.

(3) Of Rab and R. Hiyya. Our Mishnah consequently deals only with that case in which R. Simeon and the Rabbis are in agreement. (V. supra 9b top).

(4) Of Rab and R. Hiyya, supra 9b.

(5) Whom he addressed supra 9a.

(6) And after one of them had given birth to a child, C, and the other to one, D, the first was married by A and the second by B, two of Jacob's sons from another wife.

(7) For should A and B die childless their wives who are sisters as well as sisters-in-law come under the law of the levirate marriage in relation to C and D the brothers of A and B.

(8) Both being forbidden to C as well as to D. The mother of C is forbidden to C as mother and to D as mother's sister, and the mother of D is similarly forbidden to D and C.

(9) Cf. n. 8.

(10) Since the women are strangers and the restrictions mentioned in note 10 do not apply.

(11) The women being sisters-in-law only but not sisters. Thus it has been shown that the statement could not be applied in its entirety to the case of an outraged woman. Hence it was excluded from the enumeration in our Mishnah.

(12) Of Rab and Hiyya.

(18) No paternal brother of the person concerned may ever marry them.

(19) To marry the brother of their deceased husband who had been married to their rival (one of the six relatives) illegally (Maimonides). If the marriage was with a stranger the permissibility of marriage is obvious since the laws of rivals apply only to a brother's widow.

(21) Who was specifically mentioned.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 10b

If his mother, however, was a woman that had been outraged by his father and was then married to his paternal brother who subsequently died, such a mother does exempt her rival.¹ And though the Sages taught in our Mishnah FIFTEEN we must add a case like this as a sixteenth.

Resh Lakish said to R. Johanan: According to Levi who maintains that an 'if'² is also included,³ let our Mishnah also include⁴ the case of a levir who gave halizah to his sister-in-law⁵ and later betrothed⁶ her and died without issue, for since [the widow of such a one] is forbidden,⁷ her rival also is forbidden!⁸ — The other replied: Because in this case the law of the rival of the rival⁹ cannot be applied.¹⁰ But could he¹¹ not have answered¹² him¹³ [that the brothers] are only subject to the penalties of a negative precept,¹⁴ and that those who are subject to the penalties of a negative precept are¹⁵ under the obligations of halizah and the levirate marriage?¹⁶ — He¹⁷ answered him¹⁸ in accordance with the view he¹⁸ holds. 'According to my view,' he¹⁹ argued, [the brothers] are only subject to the penalties of a negative precept,²⁰ and those who are subject to the penalties of a negative precept are²¹ under the obligations of halizah and the levirate marriage,²² but even according to your view that they are subject to the penalty of kareth [the case could not have been included in our Mishnah] because the law of the rival's rival cannot be applied'.²³

It has been stated: Where [a levir] had performed the ceremonial of halizah with his sister-in-law, and then betrothed her, Resh Lakish holds that he is not subject to the penalty of kareth for the haluzah,²⁴ but the other brothers are subject to kareth for the haluzah.²⁵ In the case of the rival,²⁶ both he²⁷ and the other brothers are subject to kareth for a rival.²⁸ R. Johanan, however, holds that neither he²⁷ nor the other brothers are subject to kareth either for the haluzah or for her rival.²⁹ What is the reason of Resh Lakish? — Scripture stated, That doth not build,³⁰ since he has not built he must never again build.³¹ He himself is thus placed under the prohibition of building no more,³² but his brothers remain in the same position in which they were before.³³ Furthermore, the prohibition to build no more applies only to herself,³⁴ her rival, however, remains under the same prohibition as before.³³ And R. Johanan?³⁵ — Is it inconceivable³⁶ that at first halizah should be allowed to be performed by any one of the brothers³⁷ and with either of the widows of the deceased brother³⁸ and that now one or other of these persons should³⁹ be involved in kareth!⁴⁰ But [in point of fact] he⁴¹ merely acts as agent for the brothers while she⁴² acts as agent for her rival.⁴³

R. Johanan pointed out to Resh Lakish the following objection: 'If a levir who submitted to halizah from his sister-in-law, later betrothed her and died,⁴⁴ [the widow] requires halizah from the surviving brothers'. Now, according to me who maintains that [the surviving brothers]⁴⁵ are subject to the penalties of a negative precept only, one can well understand why she requires halizah from the other brothers.⁴⁶ According to you, however, why should she require halizah?⁴⁷ — Explain, then, on the lines of your reasoning, the final clause, 'If one of the brothers⁴⁸ actually⁴⁹ betrothed her, she has no claim upon him'⁵⁰ R. Shesheth replied: The final clause represents the opinion of R. Akiba who holds that a betrothal with those who are subject thereby to the penalties of a negative precept is of no validity.⁵¹ Should it not then have been stated,

‘according to the view of R. Akiba she⁵² has no claim upon him’!⁵³

- (1) Since her marriage with the deceased brother was not unlawful, her rival (any other wife of her husband) is subject to the same laws as any other rival in the case of the fifteen relatives of our Mishnah.
 - (2) Cf. p. 47, n. 4, supra.
 - (3) By R. Judah who, as has been shewn supra, is the author of our Mishnah. Though he prohibits the marriage of a woman that was outraged by one's father, he nevertheless, according to Levi's recital, included the case in our Mishnah.
 - (4) Lit., ‘teach’.
 - (5) Whom he is in consequence forbidden to marry.
 - (6) Since the marriage in such a case is forbidden under a negative precept the transgression of which does not involve the penalty of kareth, the betrothal is legally valid.
 - (7) To the brothers of the levir who gave the halizah: this prohibition, according to Resh Lakish infra involving the penalty of kareth.
 - (8) To the brothers. Why then was not this case also added to the fifteen?
 - (9) V. our Mishnah.
 - (10) Her rival (as well as herself), being forbidden to all the other brothers (as brother's wife or as the haluzah of one of the brothers), can never have any of the wives of the brothers as her rival. In the case of the forbidden relatives in our Mishnah, they are forbidden to one of the brothers only, hence they or their rivals are not otherwise precluded from marrying one of the other brothers.
 - (11) R. Johanan.
 - (12) Lit., ‘and he should say’.
 - (13) Resh Lakish.
 - (14) If they married the haluzah, their deceased brother's widow, with whom halizah had been performed by one of them. According to R. Johanan, infra, contrary to the view of Resh Lakish, no penalty of kareth is involved in such a marriage, whether the transgressor be the brother who performed the halizah or any of the other brothers.
 - (15) Unlike those subject to the penalty of kareth who are exempt from halizah and from the levirate marriage.
 - (16) I.e., though the marriage with them is forbidden by a negative precept, they remain nevertheless under the obligations of the levirate relationship and must, therefore, undergo the ceremonial of halizah. Why, then, did not R. Johanan give Resh Lakish this reply which would well account for the omission from our Mishnah of the case he mentioned?

 - (25) Consequently should any of the other brothers betroth the haluzah, the betrothal is invalid.
 - (26) Of a haluzah (v. previous note). A rival is exempt from halizah and the levirate marriage by the action of the haluzah.

- (36) Lit., 'is there (such) a thing'?
- (37) Lit., 'if he prefers, this one participates in the halizah and if he prefers etc.'

- (39) In case of a betrothal.
- (40) Though the others are not.
- (41) The brother who participated in the halizah.
- (42) The widow who performed the halizah ceremonial.
- (43) Hence all the brothers as well as all the rivals are in this respect in exactly the same position. As the brother and the widow who between them carried out the halizah ceremonial are in a case of subsequent marriage exempt from kareth and are subject only to the penalties of a negative precept, so also are all the others on whose behalf they acted.
- (44) Without issue.
- (45) In subsequently marrying the haluzah.
- (46) Since the negative precept which bars them from the levirate marriage does not supersede halizah.
- (47) Marriage with them would involve the penalty of kareth, and whenever such a penalty is involved the parties are not subject to the laws of halizah!
- (48) Other than the one who participated in the halizah.
- (49) Lit., 'stood'.
- (50) I.e., the betrothal is invalid, she receives no kethubah, and no divorce is needed. This obviously proves that the penalty for such an ensuing marriage is kareth, as Resh Lakish maintains; for had it been, as R. Johanan asserts, that of a negative precept only, the betrothal should have been valid.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 11a

— This is rather a difficulty.

R. Ashi holds the same opinion as Resh Lakish¹ and explains it² in accordance with the ruling of R. Simeon.³ Rabina holds the same opinion as R. Johanan⁴ and explains it⁵ in accordance with the ruling of the Rabbis.⁶ 'R. Ashi holds the same opinion as Resh Lakish and explains it in accordance with the ruling of R. Simeon', thus: If [a levir] who submitted to halizah from his sister-in-law had subsequently betrothed her, she⁷ requires halizah from the brothers. Who are these brothers? Those born [subsequently].⁸ According to whose view? According to that of R. Simeon.⁹ If one of the previously born¹⁰ brothers, however, betrothed her, she has no claim upon him.¹¹ According to whose view? According to that of Resh Lakish.¹¹

'Rabina holds the same opinion as R. Johanan and explains it in accordance with the ruling of the Rabbis', thus: If [a levir] who submitted to halizah from his sister-in-law had subsequently betrothed her, she requires halizah from the brothers. Who are these brothers? Those born [prior to the halizah]. According to whom? According to R. Johanan.¹² If one of the subsequently¹³ born brothers, however, betrothed her, she has no claim upon him. According to whose view? According to that of the Rabbis.¹⁴

It has been stated: In the case where [the levir] had intercourse with his sister-in-law¹⁵ and one of the other brothers had intercourse with her rival, there is a difference of opinion between R. Aha and Rabina. One said: [It involves¹⁶ a transgression subject] to kareth and the other said: [The transgression] of a positive precept.¹⁷ He who said, '[A transgression subject] to kareth' follows Resh Lakish;¹⁸ and he who said, '[The transgression] of a positive precept' follows R. Johanan.¹⁹

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: The rival of a sotah²⁰ is for bidden.²¹ What is the reason?²² — Because uncleanness is ascribed to her²³ as to the cases of incest.²⁴ R. Hisda raised an objection:²⁵ R. Simeon²⁶ said, the intercourse²⁷ or halizah of the brother of the first husband exempts her rival!²⁸ — Rab can answer you, 'I speak of a sotah that is Biblically forbidden,²⁹ and you talk of a sotah that is only Rabbinically forbidden'.³⁰

But as to him who raised this objection, what did he imagine?³¹ — He thought that Rabbinical provisions were given the same force as Biblical laws.³²

R. Ashi raised an objection: If she³³ entered with the man into a private place and remained with him for a period sufficient for the consummation of defilement, she is forbidden to her house,³⁴ she may not eat of terumah,³⁵ and if he died she must undergo the ceremony of halizah

(1) That any brother, other than the one who submitted to the halizah, who married the widow after she had performed the halizah is subject to the penalty of kareth (v. supra 10b).

(2) The first clause of the statement cited in the discussion between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish, according to which halizah is required.

(3) Who maintains that a brother born after the levirate marriage of his elder brother is not subject, in relation to the deceased brother, to the restriction of a 'brother who was not his contemporary'. The first clause then, which requires halizah, may consequently refer to brothers born after both the halizah and the betrothal had taken place. The widow of the levir not being forbidden to them on account of her first deceased husband, is subject to halizah on account of the second. (The final clause which clearly agrees with the view of Resh Lakish requires of course no explanation).

(4) Who maintains that the brother who performed the halizah as well as all the other brothers are forbidden to marry the widow subsequent to the halizah, not under the penalty of kareth but under that of a negative precept. Hence the ruling in the first clause that halizah is required.

(5) The final clause. (Cf. n. 2 supra).

(6) Who hold that even a brother born after the levirate marriage (v. n. 3 supra) is subject to the restrictions of 'a brother who was not his contemporary'. The final clause may accordingly refer to such brothers to whom the widow is forbidden for this reason (not on account of the halizah that had been performed) and the marriage or betrothal with whom is consequently invalid. (The first clause obviously is in agreement with R. Johanan).

(7) In the case where the levir who betrothed her also died without issue.

- (8) After the halizah and the betrothal. Having been born after the halizah they have never been subject to the levirate relationship on account of the first deceased brother and the halizah of the levir had, therefore, imposed no restrictions upon them in relation to the widow.
- (9) V. supra n. 3. Hence it is the duty of one of these brothers to submit to halizah which is incumbent upon them as brothers of the levir who also died without issue.
- (10) Prior to the performance of the halizah.
- (11) Since according to Resh Lakish the performance of the halizah by one of the brothers had caused the prohibition of the widow upon all other contemporary brothers under the penalty of kareth, such a betrothal is invalid.
- (12) V. supra p. 51, n. 4.
- (13) After the performance of the halizah.
- (14) V. supra p. 51, n. 6.
- (15) The widow of his deceased childless brother.
- (16) For the other brother.
- (17) The precept is to perform one levirate marriage but not more than one, a transgression to which no penalty is attached.
- (18) In whose view (supra 10b) the levir who marries, or participates in halizah with the widow, does not act as the agent of the other brothers. Hence, despite the fact that in the levir's own case the prohibition to marry the rival is regarded as having the force of a positive precept, in that of the other brothers the original prohibition to marry a brother's wife remains in force and marriage with her involves, therefore, the penalty of kareth.
- (19) Who regards the levir as the agent of the brothers (supra 10b). Hence they are subject to the same prohibition. As in the levir's own case so in that of the other brothers the levirate obligations supersede the prohibition of marrying a brother's wife, and with it the original penalty of kareth.
- (20) VYUX, a married woman suspected of adultery, who is subject to the ordeal prescribed in Num. V, 12ff. V. Glos.
- (21) To the levir; in the case where there are witnesses that the sotah had committed the crime and her husband subsequently died childless. The rival and certainly the sotah herself are in such a case exempt from both the levirate marriage and the halizah.
- (22) So Bah. Cur. edd. omit.
- (23) She being defiled. Num. V, 13.
- (24) Defile ye not yourselves. Lev. XVIII, 24. As the rival in the latter case is forbidden, so is she in the former.
- (25) The following refers to a case where a woman married a second husband on the basis of a report by one witness that her first husband had died in a foreign country. If later it was discovered that her first husband was alive, she must be divorced by both. If both died childless prior to the divorce she requires halizah from a brother of each but may not, according to the Rabbis, marry either of them.
- (26) Disagreeing with the Rabbis in one point.
- (27) Her second marriage having been entered into through an innocent error, no penalty is incurred by her as far as her relationship with the levir from the first marriage is concerned. Hence, in the opinion of R. Simeon, either marriage or halizah is permitted, v. infra 87a.
- (28) From this it follows that the rival of a married woman who had intercourse with another husband is permitted to the levir both according to R. Simeon and according to the Rabbis (the latter having only disputed the case of the married woman herself). Why, then, did Rab state that the rival of a sotah is forbidden?
- (29) A woman that was faithless to her husband. (Num. V, 12ff).
- (30) The woman who married a second husband under an honest misapprehension. Biblically she is permitted to live again with her husband since her second marriage was entered into on the basis of a report by a witness, on the strength of which she was by Biblical law fully permitted to contract the marriage.

(31) He must surely have known that the one was Biblical and the other only Rabbinical!
hrte htn vk hrtesu rt. hrt or trt (cf. Gr. ) ‘to speak’, ‘enquire’, ‘argue’.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 11b

though she may not marry the levir!¹ — Rab can answer you. ‘I speak of a definite sotah, and you speak of a doubtful one’. But why should a definite sotah be different? Obviously because in relation to her the expression of ‘uncleanness’ is used;² is not, however, the expression of ‘uncleanness’ also used in relation to a doubtful sotah! For it was taught: R. Jose b. Kipper said in the name of R. Eleazar, The remarriage by a husband of his divorced wife is forbidden after marriage³ and permitted after betrothal,⁴ because it is stated in the Scriptures. After that she is defiled.⁵ The Sages, however, say, the one as well as the other⁶ is forbidden,⁷ and the expression⁸ ‘After that she is defiled’ implies the inclusion of a sotah who secluded herself with a man!⁹ — The underlying meaning of ‘secluded herself’ is ‘sexual intercourse’. Why then did he say ‘secluded herself’? — In order to employ a euphemism.¹⁰ But in relation to sexual intercourse, [surely,] uncleanness was actually mentioned in the Scriptures. She being defiled secretly!¹¹ — To subject the offence¹² to a negative precept.¹³ And R. Jose b. Kipper?¹⁴ — He does not hold the view that a negative precept is applicable to a sotah, even in the case where she had actually committed adultery. What is the reason? — [Because in reference to the remarriage of a divorced wife] Scripture uses the expression of¹⁵ becoming¹⁶ as well as that of matrimony.¹⁷

Rab Judah inquired of R. Shesheth: What is the law in regard to the rival of a woman whom her former husband remarried after her second marriage and died?¹⁸ According to the view of R. Jose b. Kipper the question does not arise. For R. Jose b. Kipper having stated that ‘uncleanness’ is mentioned in the case of him who remarried his divorced wife, it follows that her rival is subject to the very same restrictions. And if [objection be raised] from the Scriptural text, She is an abomination,¹⁹ [it may be replied that the implication is] that she is an abomination and not her children,²⁰ her rival, however, being an abomination. The question, however, arises on the view of the Rabbis: Does the Scriptural text,²¹ despite the fact that the Rabbis had applied the expression ‘uncleanness’ to the sotah, also bear its ordinary meaning,²² or since it²³ was once torn away [from its ordinary meaning] it must in all respects so remain?²⁴ Others say: According to the Rabbis no question arises, for since the text has once been torn away [from its ordinary meaning] it must in all respects so remain. The question, however, arises according to the view of R. Jose b. Kipper: What is the law? [Is it assumed that] although R. Jose b. Kipper stated that the expression of ‘uncleanness’ refers to the remarriage of a divorced wife, the All Merciful has written ‘She is an abomination’ to indicate that ‘she’ is an abomination but not her rival,²⁵ or is the implication, perhaps, that ‘she’ is an abomination, but her children are not; a rival, however, being an abomination?²⁶ — The other replied: You have learnt it, ‘If one of them²⁷ was a permitted wife and the other a forbidden one; if he²⁸ submit to halizah he must submit to that of the forbidden one,²⁹ and if he marries he marries the permitted one.’²⁹ Now what is meant by ‘permitted’ and ‘forbidden’? If it be suggested that ‘permitted’ means permitted for all the world,³⁰ and ‘forbidden’ means forbidden for all the world,³¹ what practical difference, in view of the fact that she is in either case suitable for him,³² could this make to him? Consequently ‘permitted’ must mean permitted to him, and ‘forbidden’, forbidden to him; and this may happen where³³ he³⁴ remarried his divorced wife;³⁵ and yet it was taught, ‘and if he marries he marries the permitted one’!³⁶ — No; ‘permitted’ may still mean permitted to all the world³⁰ and ‘forbidden’, forbidden for all the world,³¹ and as to your question, ‘what practical difference, in view of the fact that she is in either case suitable for him, could this make’, one must take into account the moral lesson³⁷ of R. Joseph. For R. Joseph stated: Here³⁸ Rabbi taught that a man shall not pour the water out of his cistern so long as others may require it.³⁹

Come and hear: ‘Where a man remarried his divorced wife after she had been married,⁴⁰ she and her rival are to perform the halizah.’ Is it possible to say ‘she and her rival’?⁴¹ Consequently it must mean, ‘Either she or her rival.’⁴² Did you not, however, have recourse to an interpretation?⁴³ [You might as well] interpret thus: She is to perform halizah, while her rival may either perform halizah or be married by the levir.

R. Hiyya b. Abba said: R. Johanan inquired as to what is the law⁴⁴ in regard to a rival of a divorced woman whom her former husband remarried after her second marriage. Said R. Ammi to him: Enquire rather regarding herself!⁴⁵ — Concerning herself I have no question since her case may be inferred a minori ad majus: If she is forbidden to him⁴⁶ to whom she was originally⁴⁷ permitted, how much more so to the man⁴⁸ to whom she was originally⁴⁷ forbidden!⁴⁹ The question, however, remains concerning her rival: Is the inference a minori ad majus strong enough to exclude a rival⁵⁰ or not?

R. Nahman b. Isaac taught as follows: R. Hiyya b. Abba said, R. Johanan enquired as to what is the law⁴⁴ in regard to a divorced woman whom her husband remarried after her second marriage. Said R. Ammi to him: Enquire rather regarding her rival! — Concerning her rival I have no question, for an inference a minori ad majus⁵¹ is not strong enough to exclude a rival,⁵⁰ the question, however, remains regarding herself. Is the inference a minori ad majus strong enough [to be acted upon] where a precept⁵² is involved or not?

(1) If the sotah herself must go through the ceremony of halizah, much more so her rival; how then could Rab state that the rival of a sotah (and much more so the sotah herself, v. supra p. 53, n. 1) is exempt from halizah?

(2) Num. V, 13.

(3) With a second husband who subsequently died or divorced her.

(4) Where no marriage with the second man took place, and he died.

(5) Deut. XXIV, 4, referring, in the opinion of R. Eleazar, to a divorced woman who had married a second husband.

(6) Married or betrothed.

(7) This is deduced by the Sages from And goeth and becometh another man's wife (Deut. XXIV, 2) which, they maintain, implies betrothal as well as marriage.

(8) Lit., ‘but what do I establish’.

(9) That the husband must not take her back. This clearly shews that the expression of ‘uncleanness’ was also used concerning a doubtful sotah.

- (10) Lit., 'he took a nice (or superior) expression'.
- (11) Num. V, 13; what need, then, was there for the implication of the text of Deut. XXIV, 4?
- (12) Of remarrying a sotah.
- (13) Lit., 'to cause to stand concerning it in a negative (prohibition)'; the negative can only be derived from Deut. XXIV, 4: May not take her again to be his wife.
- (14) Who applies the entire text to the remarriage of a divorced wife, whence does he derive the law concerning the sotah?
- (15) Lit., 'it is written concerning it'.
- (16) Deut. XXIV, 2, And she departeth out of his house, and goeth and becometh (V, h, u) another man's wife.
- (17) Ibid., Or if the latter husband (ahiv) die, implying that the divorced woman's connection with the second man must be that of 'husband and wife', i.e., lawful matrimony. In the case of the sotah the intercourse was unlawful and cannot come, therefore, under the prohibition of Deut. XXIV, 4.
- (18) Is the rival subject to the levirate marriage and halizah?
- (19) Deut. XXIV, 4, dealing with a woman remarried after divorce. The text She is an abomination. thv vfgu, might be taken to imply that the designation, and consequently the restrictions, refer to the woman only (thv = she) and not to her rival.
- (20) I.e., the exclusion of thv may refer not to her rival but to her children who, unlike their mother who is regarded as an 'abomination', may marry into priestly families.
- (21) Describing the woman (or the act of remarrying the first husband after divorce and second marriage) as 'uncleanness'.
- (22) I.e., its bearing on the woman remarried (v. previous note), with whose case the text in its ordinary meaning is concerned, and consequently on her rival also.
- (23) The expression of uncleanness.
- (24) Lit., 'that it was uprooted it was uprooted', i.e., since it was removed from its context and applied to the sotah, it can never be re-applied to its original case. Hence a rival would not come under the same restrictions as the sotah herself.
- (25) To whom, consequently, the restrictions would not apply.
- (26) And consequently subject to the same restrictions as the woman herself.
- (27) Two widows of a brother who died without issue.
- (28) The levir.
- (29) Infra 44a, and thereby liberates also the other widow, her rival.
- (30) I.e., even to priests.
- (31) In case she was once, e.g., a divorced woman and is thus forbidden to marry a priest.
- (32) He being an ordinary Israelite.
- (33) Lit., 'and what is it'.
- (34) The deceased brother.
- (35) In which case the woman who was remarried is forbidden to the levir as she was forbidden to his deceased brother who had married her unlawfully, while her rival, having been lawfully married, is permitted to the levir.
- (36) Which clearly shews that the rival of a woman remarried by her former husband is subject to the levirate marriage.
- (37) Lit., 'because of'.
- (38) In the Mishnah cited where it is stated that halizah is to be performed with the forbidden one.
- (39) A man should not destroy anything which may be of use to others though it is of no use to him. In the case under discussion, the levir submits to halizah from the forbidden one and thus liberates the permitted one to marry even a priest to whom she would have been forbidden had the halizah been performed by her.

- (40) To a second husband who divorced her or died.
- (41) Halizah surely is performed by one of the widows only!
- (42) Which supplies an answer to the enquiry addressed by Rab Judah to R. Shesheth.
- (43) 'He and her rival' was interpreted as 'Either etc.'
- (44) In respect of the levirate marriage.
- (45) The remarried woman.
- (46) Her first husband.
- (47) Before she married her second husband.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 12a

— The other replied,¹ You have learned it: If one of them was a permitted wife and the other a forbidden one; if she submits to halizah he must submit to that of the forbidden one; and if he marries, he marries the permitted one. Now, what is meant by 'permitted' and 'forbidden'? If it be suggested that 'permitted' means permitted to all the world and 'forbidden' means forbidden to all the world, what practical difference, in view of the fact that she is in either case suitable for him, could this make to him? Consequently 'permitted' must mean permitted to him, and 'forbidden', forbidden to him; and this may happen where he remarries his divorced wife; and yet it was taught. 'If he marries he marries the permitted one'!² — No; 'permitted' may still mean permitted to all the world, and 'forbidden', forbidden to all the world; and as to your question. 'What practical difference, in view of the fact that she is in either case suitable for him, could this make'? One must take into account the moral lesson of R. Joseph. For R. Joseph said: Here, Rabbi taught that a man shall not pour the water out of his cistern so long as others may require it.³

Come and hear: 'Where a man remarried his divorced wife after she had been married, she and her rival are to perform halizah.' Is it possible to say 'she and her rival'? Consequently it must mean, 'either she or her rival.'⁴ Did you not, however, have recourse to an interpretation? [You might as well] interpret thus: She is to perform halizah, while her rival may either perform halizah or be married by the levir.

R. Levi b. Memel said in the name of Mar 'Ukba in the name of Samuel: The rival of a mema'eneth⁵ is forbidden. To whom [is she forbidden]? If it be suggested, to the brothers,⁶ [it may be retorted], now that she herself⁷ is permitted,⁸ for Samuel said, 'If she refused one brother she is permitted to marry the other',⁹ is there any question that her rival is permitted!⁸ Hence [it means] to himself.¹⁰ Wherein, however, does the mema'eneth¹¹ differ¹² that she is in consequence permitted to the other brothers? Obviously, in that she had taken no action in relation to them;¹³ but her rival also had taken no action in relation to them!¹⁴ — It is an enactment made to prevent marriage with the rival of one's daughter¹⁵ who was a mema'eneth.¹⁶

Is, however, the rival of one's daughter who is a mema'eneth forbidden? Surely we learned, IF,

HOWEVER, ANY AMONG THESE DIED, OR MADE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL, OR WERE DIVORCED¹⁷ [etc.] THEIR RIVALS ARE PERMITTED. Now, against whom was the declaration of refusal made? If it be suggested that she refused the husband, then this case is identical with that of a divorced woman.¹⁸ Consequently it must refer to refusal of the levir!¹⁹ — No; it may, in fact, refer to the refusal of a husband, but there are two kinds of divorce.²⁰

Wherein, however, does the refusal of a husband differ?²¹ Obviously in that she thereby annuls the original marriage; but when she refused the levir she has also annulled the original marriage! — [It differs] in respect of what Rami b. Ezekiel had learnt. For Rami b. Ezekiel learnt: If she²² declared her refusal against the husband she is permitted to marry his father;²³ if against the levir, she is forbidden to his father.²⁴ From this it clearly follows that from the moment she becomes subject to the levirate marriage²⁵ she is looked upon as his²⁶ daughter-in-law; similarly here also²⁷ she is looked upon as the rival of his daughter from the moment she²⁸ becomes subject to the levirate marriage.

Said R. Assi: The rival of a woman incapable of procreation is forbidden;²⁹ for it is said in the Scriptures, And it shall be that the firstborn that she beareth,³⁰ which excludes a woman incapable of procreation, since she does not bear.³¹ R. Shesheth raised an objection: In the case where three brothers were married to three women who were strangers to one another, and one of them having died, the second brother addressed to her³² a ma'amar³³ and died, behold these³⁴ must perform the halizah but may not marry the levir; for it is said, And one of them die [etc.] her husband's brother shall go in unto her,³⁵ only she³⁶ who is tied to one levir³⁷ but not she who is tied to two levirs;³⁸ and concerning this it was taught: R. Joseph said, 'This is the rival of a paternal brother's wife whose prohibition³⁹ is due to her double subjection to the levirate marriage,⁴⁰ a case the like of which we do not find through out the Torah'.⁴¹ Now, what does the expression 'This is' exclude? Does it not exclude the rival of a woman incapable of procreation, who is permitted!⁴² — No; it excludes the rival of a woman incapable of procreation who is forbidden. What, then, is meant by the expression, 'This is'?⁴³ — It is that in this case, where the subjection to the levirate marriage has caused the prohibition, her rival requires halizah; in the case, however, of a woman incapable of procreation even halizah is not required. What is the reason? — The prohibition of the one⁴⁴ is Pentateuchal;⁴⁵ that of the other only Rabbinical.⁴⁶

We learnt; IF, HOWEVER, ANY AMONG THESE DIED, OR MADE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL, OR WERE DIVORCED, OR WERE FOUND INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION, THEIR RIVALS ARE PERMITTED!⁴⁷ — This is no difficulty; the one⁴⁸ is a case where he⁴⁹ knew her defect⁵⁰ while the other⁵¹ is a case where⁵² he did not know of it.⁵³ The inference from our Mishnah also proves this; for it was stated WERE FOUND⁵⁴ and not 'were'. This proves it.

- (51) Our Mishnah.
- (52) The husband now deceased.
- (53) At the time he married her. Since her defect was unknown to him the marriage which had taken place under a misapprehension is invalid. The woman, therefore, is not his lawful wife, and her rival cannot be regarded as a legal rival. Hence the statement in our Mishnah that such a rival is permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 12b

The law is that the rival of a woman incapable of procreation is permitted, even though he¹ knew her defect,² and even the rival of one's own daughter who was incapable of procreation [is permitted].³ But what about the expression WERE FOUND⁴ in our Mishnah? — Read, 'were'.

When Rabin came⁵ he stated in the name of R. Johanan: The rival of a mema'eneth,⁶ the rival of a woman incapable of procreation, as well as the rival of a divorced woman who had been remarried to her former husband,⁷ are all permitted.

R. Bebai recited before R. Nahman: Three [categories of] women may⁸ use an absorbent⁹ in their marital intercourse:¹⁰ A minor, a pregnant woman and a nursing woman. The minor,¹¹ because [otherwise] she might¹² become pregnant, and as a result¹³ might die. A pregnant woman,¹¹ because [otherwise] she might¹² cause her foetus to degenerate into a sandal.¹³ A nursing woman,¹¹ because [otherwise] she might¹² have to wean her child prematurely¹⁴ and this would result in his death. And what is the age of such a minor?¹⁵ From the age of eleven years and one day until the age of twelve years and one day. One who is under,¹⁶ or over this age¹⁷ must carry on her marital intercourse in the usual manner. This is the opinion of R. Meir. The Sages, however, say: The one as well as the other carries on her marital intercourse in the usual manner, and mercy will be vouchsafed from heaven,¹⁸ for it is said in the Scriptures. The Lord preserveth the simple.¹⁹

Since it has been stated, 'because she might become pregnant and as a result might die' it may be implied that it is possible for²⁰ a minor to be pregnant and not die. But, if so, one could imagine a case where²¹ a mother-in-law should be in a position to make a declaration of refusal,²² whereas we learned, ONE CANNOT SAY OF A MAN'S MOTHER-IN-LAW, THE MOTHER OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW AND THE MOTHER OF HIS FATHER-IN-LAW THAT THEY WERE FOUND INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION OR THAT THEY MADE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL! — Read, 'because she might become pregnant and die';²³ for Rabbah b. Liwai said: She²⁴ is subject to an age limitation. Prior to that period²⁵ she does not conceive at all; during that period²⁵ she dies and her embryo dies; after that period²⁵ both she and her embryo survive. But is it really so? Surely, Rabbah b. Samuel recited: One cannot say of a man's mother-in-law, the mother of his mother-in-law and the mother of his father-in-law that they were found incapable of procreation or that they made a declaration of refusal, since they have already given birth to children!²⁶ — But [the reading], in fact, is, 'because she might become pregnant and as a result might die'. But, [then, the previously mentioned] difficulty remains!²⁷ — R. Safra replied: Children are like marks of puberty.²⁸ Others Say: Children are more conclusive proof than the marks of puberty. What practical difference is there between the two statements? — [It is this: That] even he who follows R. Judah who stated, '[a girl may exercise the right of refusal] until the black²⁹ predominates'³⁰ admits in the case of children.³¹

- (1) The deceased brother, at the time when he married.
 - (2) And nevertheless consented to the marriage, which is consequently valid, and the woman is his lawful wife.
 - (3) The rival of a forbidden relative is forbidden only where the latter would have been subject to the precept of the levirate marriage if she had been no relative. In the case of a wife incapable of procreation, however, since she is not subject to the levirate marriage even where she is no relative at all, her rival even where she (the wife) is a forbidden relative, is regarded as the rival of one in relation to whom the precept of levirate marriage is not applicable at all. Cf. , ukusd , ufkv quoted by Rashi.

 - (22) In the case, for instance, where the minor gave birth to a child in her twelfth year and that child was betrothed before the year was over. The minor who thus becomes a mother-in-law is entitled to make a declaration of refusal before, and until she enters her thirteenth year.

(23) I.e., while conception is a matter of doubt, death is a certainty whenever conception happened to take place.

(24) A minor.

(25) The age of eleven years and one day to the age of twelve and one day.

(26) Rabbah does not state, 'since they already grew up' but 'gave birth', which proves that even a minor (not yet grown up) is capable of bearing living children.

(27) From here it appears that a minor can bear children while from our Mishnah it follows that she cannot.

(28) As soon, therefore, as she gave birth to a child the minor is assumed to have passed out of the age of minority into that of puberty. Hence it is impossible for a mother, whatever her age, ever to make a declaration of refusal to which a minor only is entitled.

(29) I.e., the pubic hair.

(30) The growth of two hairs which the Rabbis regard as a definite mark of puberty not being considered by R. Judah as conclusive proof. Keth. 36a, B.B. 156a, Nid. 52a.

(31) That they provide definite proof of puberty irrespective of the state of the hair.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 13a

R. Zebid, however, stated: No children are possible prior to the appearance of the marks of puberty.¹ Then let an examination be held!² — There is the possibility that they might have fallen off.³ This reply is perfectly satisfactory according to him who holds that such a possibility is taken into consideration;⁴ what, however, can be said according to him who holds that no such contingency need be considered? — Even according to him who holds that no such contingency need be considered, the possibility must be taken into consideration in this case on account of the pains of birth.⁵

HOW IS THE EXEMPTION OF THEIR RIVALS [BY THE WOMEN MENTIONED] TO BE UNDERSTOOD? Etc. Whence is this law⁶ deduced? — Rab Judah replied: [From] Scripture which stated, li-zeror,⁷ [implying that] the Torah included many rivals.⁸ R. Ashi replied. 'It⁹ is arrived at by reasoning: Why is a rival forbidden? Surely because she takes the place of the forbidden relative; the rival's rival also takes the place of the forbidden relative'.

HOW [IS ONE TO UNDERSTAND THE STATEMENT THAT] IF THEY HAD DIED etc. Even if he¹⁰ married¹¹ first and then divorced?¹² This, then, would be contradictory [to the following Mishnah]: '[The case of] three brothers two of whom were married to two sisters and the third was married to a stranger, and one of the husbands of the sisters divorced his wife while the one who married the stranger died, and he who had divorced his wife then married the widow¹³ and died, is one concerning which it has been said, that if they died or were divorced, their rivals are permitted'.¹⁴ The reason, then,¹⁵ is because the divorce¹⁶ took place first and the marriage¹⁷ was subsequent to it, but had the marriage¹⁷ taken place first and the divorce¹⁶ after it, [the rival would] not [have been permitted]!¹⁸ — R. Jeremiah replied: Break it up!¹⁹ He who taught the one did not teach the other. The one Tanna²⁰ is of the opinion that it is the death²¹ which subjects the widow to the levirate marriage²² while the other²³ holds the opinion that it is the original marriage that subjects her to the levirate marriage.²⁴ Raba said: [Both statements] may, in fact, represent the views of [one Tanna,] it²⁵ being a case of 'this; and there is no need to state that'.²⁶

WHOSOEVER IS ENTITLED TO MAKE A DECLARATION OF REFUSAL [etc.]. Then let her²⁷ declare her refusal now²⁸ and thus enable [her rival] to be married to the levir!²⁹ May it then³⁰ be suggested that this supports R. Oshaiah? For R. Oshaiah said: She³¹ may annul [the levir's] ma'amar³² by her declaration of refusal,³³ but may not sever by such a declaration the levirate bond!³⁴ — No;³⁵ the case of the rival of a forbidden relative is different;³⁶ for Rami b. Ezekiel learnt: If a minor made a declaration of refusal against her husband she is permitted to marry his father.³⁷ If, however, she made her declaration of refusal against the levir³⁸ she is forbidden to marry his father.³⁹ From this it clearly follows that from the moment she becomes subject to the levirate marriage⁴⁰ she is looked upon as his⁴¹ daughter-in-law; similarly here also⁴² she is looked upon as the rival of his daughter from the moment she becomes subject to the levirate marriage.⁴³ MISHNAH. [IN THE CASE OF THE FOLLOWING] SIX RELATIVES, MARRIAGE WITH WHOM IS MORE RESTRICTED THAN WITH THESE,⁴⁴ IN THAT THEY MAY ONLY BE MARRIED TO STRANGERS,⁴⁵ MARRIAGE WITH THEIR RIVALS IS PERMITTED:⁴⁶ HIS MOTHER.⁴⁷ HIS FATHER'S WIFE,⁴⁸ HIS FATHER'S SISTER,⁴⁸ HIS PATERNAL SISTER.⁴⁸ HIS FATHER'S BROTHER'S WIFE⁴⁸ AND HIS PATERNAL BROTHER'S WIFE.⁴⁸

BETH SHAMMAI PERMIT THE RIVALS⁴⁹ TO THE SURVIVING BROTHERS, AND BETH HILLEL PROHIBIT THEM.

- (1) Should an apparent minor, whatever her age, ever give birth to a child it must be taken for granted that the marks of puberty had already appeared, and the age of minority had passed.
 - (2) Why should the existence of the marks be left to conjecture when an examination would definitely determine the facts?
 - (3) And the examination would prove nothing.
 - (4) This is a question in dispute in Nid. 46a.
 - (5) Which may have caused the falling off of the hair.
 - (6) Lit., 'these words'. That a rival's rival is also exempt.
 - (7) Lev. XVIII, 18, to be a rival. V. supra 3b.
 - (8) For explanation, v. p. 12, n. 8.
 - (9) The exemption of a rival's rival.
 - (10) The brother now deceased.
 - (11) The rival.
 - (12) His first wife, the forbidden relative. In such a case, is the rival, though the two were rivals prior to the divorce, permitted to the levir wherever the forbidden relative was dead or divorced at the time their husband died and the question of the levirate marriage arose?
 - (13) Lit., 'her',
 - (14) Infra 30a.
 - (15) Why the rival in this case is permitted.
 - (16) Of one of the sisters.
 - (17) Of the widow.
 - (18) How, then, could this be reconciled with our Mishnah from which it has been inferred that 'even if he married first and then divorced' the rival is permitted?
 - (19) tcr, , rt. rc, , Heb. rca 'break', 'divide'.

- (20) Of our Mishnah.
- (21) Of the husband.
- (22) And if at that time the women were no longer rivals it matters little whether marriage or divorce (cf. supra nn. 5 and 4) took place first.
- (23) The Tanna of the Mishnah cited from 30a infra.
- (24) Consequently, if the marriage of the second took place after the divorce of the first, levirate marriage is permitted since the two have never been real rivals. If, however, the marriage preceded the divorce, even if only by a fraction of time, the two have become rivals, and the rival of a forbidden relative is forbidden for ever, even after the rivalry had ceased.
- (25) The statements and arrangement of our Mishnah and that cited from 30a infra
- (26) uz rruk l'hrm ihu uz, one of the systems adopted in arranging legal statements. Our Mishnah permits 'this', the case of the rival whose marriage preceded the divorce of the forbidden relative, and consequently 'there is no need to state that', the case (infra 30a) of a rival whose marriage followed the divorce of the forbidden relative. (Cf. supra n. 12).
- (27) The forbidden relative who is still a minor.
- (28) And thus annul the original marriage.
- (29) Since as a result of the annulment of the marriage the other would no more be the rival of a forbidden relative.
- (30) As such a declaration is not allowed.
- (31) A minor.
- (32) V. Glos. Since the actual marriage had not yet taken place.
- (33) She has only to perform the halizah; but there is no need for a divorce which would have been required had she been of age (v. infra 50b).
- (34) I.e., she has no power to annul the original marriage in order to be exempt thereby from halizah also. Similarly here (v. note 4) the declaration of the minor has no force to annul the original marriage and thus (v. supra note 3) to enable her rival to marry the levir.
- (35) The inference from our Mishnah provides no support for R. Oshaia.
- (36) The prohibition of a minor's declaration in this case is not Biblical, but a Rabbinical enactment made in order to prevent laxity in the law of rivals of forbidden relatives (cf. infra n. 17).
- (37) The refusal having completely annulled the marriage, the minor and her former father-in-law are now mere strangers.
- (38) I.e., after the death of her husband, when she became subject to the levirate marriage of his brother.
- (39) Her former father-in-law who is also the father of the levir whom she refused.
- (40) Lit., 'falling'.
- (41) The levir's father's.
- (42) The case of a rival of one's daughter.
- (43) Had the original marriage been allowed to be annulled by the daughter's present declaration, and had her rival in consequence been permitted to marry the minor's father, any rival of one's daughter might similarly be allowed and thus an important restriction against incest would be broken down. (V. supra n. 10 and cf. text and notes, supra 12a).
- (44) The fifteen enumerated in the previous Mishnah, supra 2af.
- (45) But never to one's paternal brothers.
- (46) Though they themselves ate forbidden. Their husbands having been strangers, the law prohibiting the marriage of rivals, which is only applicable in connection with the levirate marriage, does not apply. Should one's brother unlawfully marry one of these six relatives his marriage would be regarded as null and void and the law relating to the rivals would still be inapplicable. (Cf. Maimonides, Commentary on the Mishnah a.l.).

- (47) Who is also forbidden to his paternal brother as 'his father's wife'.
 (48) Who obviously stands in the same relationship to his paternal brother.
 (49) In respect of the levirate marriage.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 13b

IF THEY¹ PERFORM THE HALIZAH,² BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE THEM INELIGIBLE TO MARRY A PRIEST,³ AND BETH HILLEL DECLARE THEM TO BE ELIGIBLE.⁴ IF THEY WERE MARRIED TO THE LEVIRS, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE THEM ELIGIBLE [TO MARRY A PRIEST],⁵ AND BETH HILLEL DECLARE THEM INELIGIBLE.⁶ THOUGH THESE FORBADE WHAT THE OTHERS PERMITTED, AND THESE REGARDED AS INELIGIBLE WHAT THE OTHERS DECLARED ELIGIBLE, BETH SHAMMAI, NEVERTHELESS, DID NOT REFRAIN FROM MARRYING WOMEN FROM [THE FAMILIES OF] BETH HILLEL, NOR DID BETH HILLEL [REFRAIN FROM MARRYING WOMEN] FROM [THE FAMILIES OF] BETH SHAMMAI. [SIMILARLY, IN RESPECT OF] ALL [QUESTIONS OF RITUAL] CLEANNESS AND UNCLEANNES, WHICH THESE DECLARED CLEAN WHERE THE OTHERS DECLARED UNCLEAN, NEITHER OF THEM ABSTAINED FROM USING THE UTENSILS OF THE OTHERS FOR THE PREPARATION OF FOOD THAT WAS RITUALLY CLEAN.⁷

GEMARA. R. Simeon b. Pazzi said: What is Beth Shammai's reason?⁸ — Because it is written, The outside⁹ wife of the dead shall not be married unto one not of his kin;¹⁰ 'outside'¹¹ implies that there is also an internal,¹² and the All Merciful said, She shall not marry [unto one not of his kin].¹³ And Beth Hillel?¹⁴ — They require the text for the exposition which Rab Judah reported in the name of Rab. For Rab Judah stated in the name of Rab: Whence is it deduced that betrothal [by a stranger] is of no validity in the case of a sister-in-law?¹⁵ For it is said in the Scriptures, The wife of the dead shall not be married¹⁶ outside¹⁷ unto one not of his kin;¹⁸ there shall be no validity in any marriage of a stranger with her.¹⁹ And Beth Shammai? — Is it written 'la-huz'?²⁰ Surely 'huzah'²¹ was written. And Beth Hillel? — Since the expression used was huzah²² it is just the same as if la-huz had been written; as it was taught: R. Nehemiah said, 'In the case of every word which requires a 'lamed' at the beginning²³ Scripture has placed a 'he'²⁴ at the end; and at the School of R. Ishmael the following examples were given:²⁵ Elim, Elimah;²⁶ Mahanayim, Mahanayimah;²⁷ Mizrayim, Mizraimah;²⁸ Dibelathaimah;²⁹ Yerushalaimah;³⁰ midbarah.³¹

Whence do Beth Shammai derive the deduction made by Rab Judah in the name of Rab? — It is derived from Unto one not of his kin.³² Then let Beth Hillel also derive it from 'Unto one not of his kin'! — This is so indeed. What need, then, was there for 'huzah'? — To include one who was only betrothed.³³ And the others? — They derive it from the use of ha-huzah where huzah could have been used.³⁴ And the others? — A deduction from huzah ha-huzah does not appeal to them.

Raba said: Beth Shammai's reason³⁵ is that one prohibition³⁶ cannot take effect on another prohibition.³⁷ This explanation is satisfactory in the case where the deceased had married first and the surviving brother married³⁸ afterwards, since the prohibition of marrying a wife's sister³⁹ could not come and take effect on the prohibition of marrying a brother's wife;⁴⁰ where, however, the surviving brother had married first⁴¹ and the deceased married later,⁴² the prohibition of 'wife's sister' was, surely, first!⁴³ — Since the prohibition of a 'brother's wife' cannot take effect on the prohibition of 'wife's sister', [any of the other widows] is the rival of a forbidden relative to whom⁴⁴ the precept of the levirate marriage is inapplicable, and is consequently permitted.⁴⁵

IF THEY HAD PERFORMED THE HALIZAH, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE THEM INELIGIBLE etc. Is not this obvious?⁴⁶ — [It had to be stated] in order to exclude [the instruction] of R. Johanan b. Nuri who said: Come and let us issue an ordinance that the rivals⁴⁷ perform the halizah but do not marry the levir.⁴⁸ Hence it was taught that Beth Hillel declare them eligible.⁴⁹

IT THEY WERE MARRIED TO THE LEVIRS etc. BETH HILLEL DECLARE THEM INELIGIBLE. What need again was there for this? — Because it was taught, IF THEY PERFORM THE HALIZAH⁵⁰ it was also taught, IF THEY WERE MARRIED TO THE LEVIRS.⁵¹

We learned elsewhere: The Scroll of Esther⁵² is read on the eleventh, the twelfth, the thirteenth, the fourteenth or the fifteenth [of Adar].⁵³ but not earlier⁵⁴ or later.⁵⁵ Said Resh Lakish to R. Johanan: Apply here the text of Lo tithgodedu,⁵⁶ you shall not form separate sects!⁵⁷ (Is not Lo tithgodedu required for its own context, the All Merciful having said, 'You shall not inflict upon yourselves any bruise for the dead'?⁵⁸ — If so, Scripture should have said, Lo tithgodedu,⁵⁹ why did it say 'Lo tithgodedu'?⁶⁰ hence it must be inferred that its object was this.⁶¹ Might it not then be suggested that the entire text refers to this only?⁶² — If so, Scripture should have said, Lo thagodu;⁶³ why did it say 'Lo tithgodedu'? Hence the two deductions.)⁶⁴ — The former answered: Have you not yet learned,⁶⁵ 'Wherever it is customary to do manual labour on the Passover Eve until midday it may be done; wherever it is customary not to do any work it may not be done'?⁶⁶ The first said to him: I am speaking to you of a prohibition, for R. Shaman b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan: 'Scripture having said, To confirm these days of Purim in their appointed times,⁶⁷ the Sages have ordained for them different times,⁶⁸ and you speak to me of a custom!⁶⁹ But is there no prohibition there?⁷⁰ Surely we learned, 'Beth Shammai prohibit work during the night⁷¹ and Beth Hillel permit it'!⁷² — The other said to him: In that case,⁷³ anyone seeing [a man abstaining from work] would suppose him to be out of work.⁷⁴ But do not BETH SHAMMAI PERMIT THE RIVALS TO THE OTHER BROTHERS AND BETH HILLEL FORBID THEM!⁷⁵

(1) The rivals.

(2) With the brothers.

(3) In the opinion of Beth Shammai the halizah is legal and any woman who performed legal halizah is, like one divorced, forbidden to marry a priest.

(4) In their opinion the halizah was unnecessary and may, therefore, be treated as if it had never taken place.

(5) When their husbands die.

(24) The he being the he local.

(25) Lit., 'he recited' or 'taught'.

(26) 'To okht appears as vnkht (Ex. XV, 27) instead of okhtk.

(27) 'To ohbj n' appears as vnhnj n (II Sam. XVII, 24) instead of ohnj nk.

(28) 'To ohrmn', vnhrmn, Gen. XII, 10.

(29) 'To oh, kcs, vnh, kcs (Num. XXXIII, 47).

(30) 'To ohkaurh' (Jerusalem) vnhkaurh (Ezek. VIII, 3).

(31) 'To rdsn (wilderness or place-name) crdsn (I Chron. V, 9).

(32) Deut. XXV, 5.

(33) To the deceased brother. Such a widow also is subject to the levirate marriage as if she had been actually married. 'Huzah' implies (cf. supra p. 68, n. 3) 'outside', i.e., one who is not within the marriage bond.

(34) The addition of the 'he' in vmuj V where vmuj would have conveyed the same meaning implies the inclusion of the betrothed. (V. n. 6.)

(35) V. p. 68, n. 2, supra.

(36) That, e.g., of marrying a brother's wife.

(37) That of marrying a forbidden relative (e.g., a daughter). Since the latter prohibition takes no effect in such a case, the forbidden relative whom the levirate bond does not consequently affect may be regarded as non-existent, so far as her levirate obligations are concerned. Her rivals, therefore, come under the category of complete strangers and are consequently permitted to the brothers.

(38) A sister of his brother's wife.

(39) Which arose later.

(40) As legally the widow is only 'his brother's wife' but not 'his wife's sister', her rivals may justly be regarded as strangers who are permitted.

(41) And his wife's sister has in consequence become forbidden to him.

(42) When the prohibition of a brother's wife arose.

(43) And consequently had taken effect; why then are her rivals permitted? This objection is based on the assumption that Raba, in stating the prohibition of marrying a forbidden relative cannot take effect owing to the prohibition of 'brother's wife', was referring only to such prohibitions as are due to a marriage contract, e.g., a wife's sister.

- (44) Lit., 'in the place'.
- (45) V. supra p. 69, n. 10.
- (46) What need then was there for stating it.
- (47) Of forbidden relatives.
- (48) And being subject to halizah, even though on account of a Rabbinical ordinance only, it might have been assumed that they are ineligible for marriage with a priest. (Cf. supra p. 67, n. 9.)
- (49) Indicating that the rivals in such a case are not even Rabbinically subject to the halizah.
- (50) For the reason given supra. V. previous note.
- (51) Halizah and marriage usually being the only alternatives.
- (52) vkhdn 'scroll', always signifies in Rabbinical literature the Scroll of Esther, unless the context explicitly or implicitly points to any other scroll.

- (56) ussud, , tk (Deut. XIV, 1), rendered by E.V. Ye shall not cut yourselves, is here taken as a form of the root sdt, 'to bind', implying the formation of separate groups, sects, factions.
- (57) Why, then, was the Scroll allowed to be read on different days by different classes of people?
- (58) Cf. supra n. 13 for the rendering of E.V.
- (59) Which would have implied the prohibition of cutting or bruising the body. (V. p. 70, n. 13.)
- (60) The longer form, the Hithpael.
- (61) Lit., 'for this it came', to imply both 'cutting the body for the dead', and 'the formation of sects'.
- (62) The formation of sects.
- (63) Which would have been understood to refer to the undesirable formation of sects.
- (64) It has thus been shewn that the formation of sects is undesirable; why then was it allowed to form separate groups to read the Scroll of Esther on different dates?
- (65) Or 'You should have replied' (Rashi).
- (66) Which shews that, despite the undesirability of forming separate groups, different customs are allowed.
- (67) Esth. IX, 31, emphasis on 'appointed times', ovhbnzc.
- (68) I.e., a group who were ordained to read the Scroll on a particular date must not read it on any other date.
- (69) Manual labour on the Passover Eve is universally permitted, and its prohibition in certain places is not a matter of law but merely a question of custom.
- (70) In the case of work on the Passover Eve. (Both the day and the night preceding the Passover are designated j xp crg Passover Eve).
- (71) Preceding the first Passover night.
- (72) Which shews, since some would be acting in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai while others would follow Beth Hillel, that even in the case of a prohibition the formation of sects is allowed.
- (73) Lit., 'there', where some people do no work though permitted.
- (74) The question of sects does not arise in such a case.
- (75) A dispute which creates faction, some following the ruling of the one authority and others that of the other.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 14a

— Do you imagine that Beth Shammai acted in accordance with their views? Beth Shammai did not act in accordance with their views.

R. Johanan, however, said: They certainly acted [in accordance with their views]. Herein they¹ differ on the same point as do Rab and Samuel. For Rab maintains that Beth Shammai did not act in accordance with their views, while Samuel maintains that they certainly did act [in accordance with their views]. When?² If it be suggested, prior to the decision of the heavenly voice,³ then what reason has he who maintains that they did not act [in accordance with their own view]? If, however, after the decision of the heavenly voice, what reason has he who maintains that they did act [in accordance with their views]? — If you wish I could say, prior to the decision of the heavenly voice; and if you prefer I could say, after the heavenly voice. ‘If you wish I could say, prior to the heavenly voice’, when, for instance, Beth Hillel were in the majority: One maintains⁴ that they⁵ did not act [according to their view] for the obvious reason that Beth Hillel were in the majority; while the other maintains⁶ that they did act [according to their view, because] a majority is to be followed only where both sides are equally matched;⁷ in this case, however, Beth Shammai were keener of intellect. ‘And if you prefer I could say, after the heavenly voice’; one maintains that they⁵ did not act [according to their view] for the obvious reason that the heavenly voice had already gone forth;⁸ while the other who maintains that they did act [according to their view] is [of the same opinion as] R. Joshua who declared that no regard need be paid to a heavenly voice.⁹

Now as to the other who ‘maintains that they did act [according to their views]’¹⁰ — should not the warning, ‘Lo tithgodedu, you shall not form separate sects’¹¹ be applied? — Abaye replied: The warning against opposing sects is only applicable to such a case as that of two courts of law in the same town, one of whom rules in accordance with the views of Beth Shammai while the other rules in accordance with the views of Beth Hillel. In the case, however, of two courts of law in two different towns [the difference in practice] does not matter. Said Raba to him: Surely the case of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel is like that of two courts of law in the same town! The fact, however, is, said Raba, that the warning against opposing sects is only applicable to such a case as that of one court of law in the same town, half of which rule in accordance with the views of Beth Shammai while the other half rule in accordance with the views of Beth Hillel. In the case, however, of two courts of law in the same town [the difference in practice] does not matter.

Come and hear: In the place of R. Eliezer, wood was cut on the Sabbath wherewith to produce charcoal on which to forge the iron.¹² In the place of R. Jose the Galilean the flesh of fowl was eaten with milk.¹³ In the place of R. Eliezer only¹⁴ but not in the place of R. Akiba; for we learnt: R. Akiba laid it down as a general rule that any labour which may be performed on the Sabbath Eve¹⁵ does not supersede the Sabbath!¹⁶ — What an objection is this! The case, surely, is different [when the varied practices are respectively confined to] different localities. What then did he who raised this question imagine?¹⁷ — It might have been assumed that owing to the great restrictions of the Sabbath [different localities are regarded] as one place, hence it was necessary to teach us [that the law was not so].

Come and hear: R. Abbahu, whenever he happened to be in the place of R. Joshua b. Levi, carried¹⁸ a candle,¹⁹ but when he happened to be in the place of R. Johanan²⁰ he did not carry a candle!²¹ — What question is this! Has it not been said that the case is different [when the varied practices are respectively confined to] varied localities? — This is the question.²² How could R.

Abbahu act in one place in one way and in another place in another way?²³ — R. Abbahu is of the same opinion as R. Joshua b. Levi,²⁴ but when he happened to be in R. Johanan's place he did not move a candle out of respect for R. Johanan. But his attendant,²⁵ surely was also there!²⁶ — He gave his attendant the necessary instructions.

Come and hear: THOUGH THESE FORBADE WHAT THE OTHERS PERMITTED . . . BETH SHAMMAI, NEVERTHELESS, DID NOT REFRAIN FROM MARRYING WOMEN FROM THE FAMILIES OF BETH HILLEL, NOR DID BETH HILLEL [REFRAIN FROM MARRYING WOMEN] FROM THE FAMILIES OF BETH SHAMMAI. Now, if it be said that they²⁷ did not act [in accordance with their own view] one can well understand why THEY DID NOT REFRAIN [from intermarrying with one another].²⁸ If, however, it be said that they²⁷ did act [in accordance with their own view], why did they not refrain? That Beth Shammai did not refrain from marrying women from the families of Beth Hillel may well be justified because such²⁹ are the children of persons guilty only of the infringement of a negative precept,³⁰ but why did not Beth Hillel refrain from [marrying women from the families of] Beth Shammai? Such,³¹ surely, being children of persons who are guilty of an offence involving kareth, are bastards!³² And if it be suggested that Beth Hillel are of the opinion that the descendant of those who are guilty of an offence involving kareth is not a bastard,³³ surely, [it may be retorted], R. Eleazar said: Although Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel are in disagreement on the questions of rivals, they concede that a bastard is only he who is descended from a marriage which is forbidden as incest and punishable with kareth! Does not this then conclusively prove that they²⁷ did not act [in accordance with their own view]? — No; they²⁷ acted, indeed, [in accordance with their own view], but they²⁷ informed them³⁴ [of the existence of any such cases] and they³⁴ kept away.

This³⁵ may also be proved by logical inference; for in the final clause it was stated. [SIMILARLY IN RESPECT OF] ALL [THE QUESTIONS OF RITUAL] CLEANNESS AND UNCLEANNES, WHICH THESE DECLARED CLEAN WHERE THE OTHERS DECLARED UNCLEAN, NEITHER OF THEM ABSTAINED FROM USING THE UTENSILS OF THE OTHERS FOR THE PREPARATION OF FOOD THAT WAS RITUALLY CLEAN.

(1) R. Johanan and R. Lakish.

(2) I.e., to what period does the dispute just mentioned refer?

(3) kue , C (v. Glos. s.v. Bath Kol), which decided that the law in practice was always to be in accordance with the rulings of Beth Hillel (v. 'Er. 13a).

(4) Lit., 'according to him who said'.

(5) Beth Shammai.

(6) Lit., 'and he who said'.

(7) In qualifications and attainments.

(8) And decided the issue in favour of Beth Hillel.

(9) B.M. 59b, Ber. 52a, 'Er. 7a, Pes. 114a.

(10) Even after the heavenly voice.

(11) Cf. supra p. 70, n. 13.

(12) The knife required for the performance of circumcision. The circumcision of a child, his health permitting, must take place on the eighth day of his birth (v. Gen. XVII, 12) even though it happened to fall on a Sabbath when manual labour is prohibited. And since the precept itself supersedes the Sabbath, all its requisites such as the wood and coals (for the preparation of warm water) and the knife may also be performed on the Sabbath.

(13) Though it is forbidden to eat meat, or any dishes made of meat, together with milk or any preparation of milk. R. Jose exempts the flesh of fowl from the general prohibition of the consumption of meat and milk. Shab. 130a, Hul. 116a.

(14) Lit., 'yes'; only there was the preparation of the requisites of circumcision permitted on the Sabbath.

(15) Such as the cutting of wood, the production of coals and the forging of the knife.

(16) Now, in view of the undesirability of creating different sects, why were all these varied practices allowed?

(17) It should have been obvious to him that different localities may differ in their custom. (Cf. supra p. 53, n. 11.)

(18) Lit., 'moved'.

(19) On the Sabbath. A candle, though it was burning when Sabbath set in, according to R. Joshua who follows R. Simeon in permitting mukzeh (v. next note), be moved on the Sabbath after the flame has gone out.

(20) R. Johanan, following R. Judah, forbids the carrying or moving of a candle that had been burning when the Sabbath set in though it had subsequently gone out. As it was burning at the commencement of the Sabbath it was at that time fit for no other use and is regarded, therefore, as mukzeh, i.e., 'something set aside', that is not to be used for any other purpose. Anything that was mukzeh when the Sabbath began remains so until it ends.

(21) Is not the practice of carrying a candle in one place and not carrying it in another as undesirable as the formation of opposing sects?

(22) Lit., 'we say thus'.

(23) Lit., 'how did he do here thus' (bis).

(24) V. supra note 3.

(25) Who well knew that his master was of the same opinion as R. Joshua b. Levi. The tgna was in many cases both an attendant on the master and also one of his learned disciples.

(26) And might move such a candle on the Sabbath even in R. Johanan's place.

(27) Beth Shammai.

(28) Since, in practice, both schools followed the same principles.

(29) The descendants from the marriages with strangers contracted by the rivals who, in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel, performed no halizah.

(30) Even Beth Shammai who require the rivals to perform the halizah regard such marriages as the infringement of a prohibition only ('The wife of the dead shall not be married abroad', Deut. XXV, 5), which does not involve kareth. The children of such marriages are consequently not deemed to be bastards.

(31) Descendants from marriages between rivals and brothers-in-law. Such marriages, which are permitted by Beth Shammai, are regarded by Beth Hillel as forbidden under the prohibition of marrying one's brother's wife, which involves the penalty of kareth.

(32) How, then, did they intermarry with families containing such members?

(33) A bastard being the descendant only of such marriages as are subject to one of the capital punishments that are carried out under the jurisdiction of a court.

(34) Beth Hillel.

(35) That Beth Shammai duly informed Beth Hillel of any families contracting marriages which according to the ruling of the latter were forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Yevamoth 14b

Now, if it be agreed that the required information was supplied¹ one well understands why they² did not abstain.³ If, however, it be assumed that no such information was supplied, one can still understand why Beth Shammai did not abstain from using the utensils of Beth Hillel, since that which was regarded by Beth Hillel as ritually unclean was deemed by Beth Shammai to be ritually clean; but why did not Beth Hillel abstain from using the utensils of Beth Shammai when that which was deemed clean by Beth Shammai was regarded as unclean by Beth Hillel? Must it not, then, be concluded that they supplied them with the required information! Our point is thus proved.

In what respect is the one⁴ more conclusive proof⁵ than the other?⁶ — It might have been thought that the case of a rival⁷ receives due publicity,⁸ hence it was necessary [for the inference from the final clause] to be cited.

[Reverting to] the previous text, 'R. Eleazar said: Although Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel are in disagreement on the question of rivals they concede that a bastard is only he who is descended from a marriage forbidden as incest and punishable by kareth'. Who concedes? If it be said, Beth Shammai to Beth Hillel;⁹ this, surely, is obvious, since the children of those who are guilty of the infringement of a negative precept¹⁰ are deemed legitimate.¹¹ Must it not consequently be the case that Beth Hillel conceded to Beth Shammai;¹² but this very case is subject to the penalty of kareth! — The fact is that Beth Shammai conceded to Beth Hillel; and the purpose was to exclude the opinion of R. Akiba, who maintains that a descendant from persons guilty of the infringement of a negative precept is deemed a bastard.¹³ Hence it was taught¹⁴ that a descendant from persons guilty of the infringement of a negative precept is not deemed a bastard.

Come and hear: Although Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel are in disagreement on the questions of rivals, sisters,¹⁵ an old bill of divorce,¹⁶ a doubtfully married woman,¹⁷ a woman whom her husband had divorced¹⁸ and who stayed with him over the night in an inn,¹⁹ money, valuables, a perutah and the value of a perutah,²⁰ Beth Shammai did not, nevertheless, abstain from marrying women of the families of Beth Hillel, nor did Beth Hillel refrain from marrying those of Beth Shammai. This is to teach you that they shewed love and friendship towards one another, thus putting into practice the Scriptural text, Love ye truth and peace.²¹ R. Simeon said: They abstained [from marrying] in cases of certainty but did not abstain in doubtful cases.²² Now, if you agree that they²³ acted [in accordance with their own views] one can well understand why they abstained. If, however, you assume that they did not so act, why did they abstain? — And how do you understand this? Even if it be granted that they did act (in accordance with their own views), one can only understand why Beth Hillel abstained from intermarrying with Beth Shammai, because the latter, in the opinion of Beth Hillel, were guilty of offences involving kareth and their descendants were consequently bastards; as to Beth Shammai, however, why did they abstain from intermarrying with Beth Hillel, when they were [even in the opinion of Beth Shammai] only guilty of the infringement of a negative precept and [their descendants] were consequently legitimate? — As R. Nahman said elsewhere that the statement was required only for the case of the rival herself, so here also the Statement is required for the case of the rival herself.²⁴

Why is a doubtful case different from a case of a certainty? Obviously because it is forbidden. Is not a doubtful case also forbidden? — Do not read, 'from a doubtful case', but 'from a case unknown', since when they received the information they kept away.²⁵ And what does he teach us thereby? That they shewed love and friendship to one another? But this is exactly the same as the first clause!²⁶ — He teaches us this: That the entire Mishnah represents the views of R. Simeon.

Come and hear: R. Johanan b. Nuri said: ‘How is this law²⁷ to be promulgated in Israel? Were we to act in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai,²⁸ the child would, in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel, be a bastard.²⁹ And were we to act in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel,³⁰ the child, according to the ruling of Beth Shammai, would be tainted;³¹ come, then, and let us issue an ordinance that the rivals perform the halizah¹ but do not marry any of the brothers’.² They had hardly time to conclude the matter before confusion set in. Said R. Simeon b. Gamaliel to them, 'What now could we do with previous rivals'?³ Now, if you assume that they⁴ acted [in accordance with their own rulings] one can understand why he said, 'What shall we do'.⁵ If, however, you assume that they did not so act, what is the meaning of 'What shall we do'?⁶ — R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: This⁷ was required only in the case of the rival herself;⁸ and this is the meaning of the objection 'what shall we do': 'How shall we, according to Beth Shammai, proceed with those rivals [who married⁹ in accordance with the rulings] of Beth Hillel? Should they be asked to perform the halizah, they would become despised by their husbands; and should you say, "Let them be despised", [it could be retorted]. Her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace'.¹⁰

Come and hear: R. Tarfon¹¹ said: Would that the rival of [my] daughter¹² were to fall to my lot¹³ so that I could marry her!¹⁴ — Read, 'that I could make her marry [another]'.¹⁵ But he said, 'Would'!¹⁶ — It¹⁷ implies objection to the ordinance¹⁸ of R. Johanan b. Nuri.¹⁹

Come and hear: It happened that R. Gamaliel's daughter was married to his brother Abba who died without issue, and that R. Gamaliel married her rival!²⁰ — But how do you understand this? Was R. Gamaliel²¹ one of the disciples of Beth Shammai!²² But [this is the explanation]: R. Gamaliel's daughter was different because she was incapable of procreation.²³ Since, however, it was stated in the final clause, 'Others say that R. Gamaliel's daughter was incapable of procreation' it may be inferred that the first Tanna is of the opinion that she was not incapable of procreation! — The difference between them²⁴ is the question whether he²⁵ knew her²⁶ defect²⁷ or not.²⁸ And if you wish I might say that the difference between them²⁴ is the case where he²⁵ married [the rival] first and subsequently divorced [his wife].²⁹ And if you wish I might say that the difference between them²⁴ is whether a stipulation³⁰ in the case of matrimonial intercourse is valid.³¹

R. Mesharsheya raised an objection: It once happened that R. Akiba gathered the fruit of an ethrog³² on the first of Shebat³³ and subjected it to two tithes,³⁴ one³⁵ in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai³⁶ and the other³⁷ in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel.³⁸ This proves that they³⁹ did act [in accordance with their rulings!] — R. Akiba was uncertain of his tradition, not knowing whether Beth Hillel said the first of Shebat⁴⁰ or the fifteenth of Shebat.⁴⁰

Mar Zutra raised an objection: It once happened that Shammai the Elder's daughter-in-law was confined with child⁴¹ and he⁴² broke an opening through the concrete of the ceiling and covered it above the bed with the proper festival roofing⁴³ for the sake of the child.⁴⁴ Does not this prove that they³⁹ did act [in accordance with their rulings]?⁴⁵ — In that case, any onlooker might assume that it was done in order to increase the ventilation.⁴⁶

Mar Zutra raised an objection: It once happened with Jehu's Trough in Jerusalem, which was connected by means of a hole with a ritual bathing pool,⁴⁷ and in which⁴⁸ all ritual cleansing in Jerusalem was performed, that Beth Shammai sent and had the hole widened; for Beth Shammai maintain that the greater part [of the intervening wall] must be broken through.⁴⁹ But we have also learned that the combination of bathing pools⁵⁰ may be effected by a connecting tube of the size of the mouth-piece of a leather bottle in diameter and circumference,⁵¹ viz., a tube in which two fingers may conveniently be turned round.⁵² Does not this prove that they⁵³ did act [in accordance with their rulings]?⁵⁴ — There

- (1) So that any stranger might be permitted to marry them, even according to Beth Shammai.
 - (2) And thus prevent their children from being branded bastards according to Beth Hillel. (V. supra note 6).
 - (3) Tosef. Yeb, I; the rivals who, relying on Beth Shammai, married brothers-in-law, prior to the ordinance, whose children would, were the ordinance of R. Johanan b. Nuri to be accepted, become bastard.
 - (4) Beth Shammai.
 - (5) Since some may have married brothers-in-law. V. supra n. 1.
 - (6) No such marriage could possibly have taken place.
 - (7) R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's precaution.
 - (8) Who may have married a stranger without previous halizah, in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel. It has no reference at all to the children, who would not be regarded bastards even according to Beth Shammai.
 - (9) Strangers, previously performing the halizah.
 - (10) Prov. III, 17. The ways of the law must lead to no unpleasantness for the innocent.
 - (11) A disciple of Beth Shammai.
 - (12) Who was married to a brother of his.
 - (13) As levir.
 - (14) Which shews that Beth Shammai acted in accordance with their ruling that the rival of a forbidden relative is permitted to the brothers.
 - (15) Which is, of course, permitted according to Beth Hillel. The Heb. vb~~t~~at 'I will marry her' (verb. neut. Kal) may be easily mistaken for vb~~t~~hat 'I will cause her to marry another' (verb. act. Hif.).
 - (16) Which implies a desire to shew something novel. Marrying a stranger, in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel, is the usual practice.
 - (17) The expression 'would'.
 - (18) Lit., 'to bring out', 'to exclude (the view)'.
(19) Who desired to institute for rivals halizah to enable them to marry strangers, though prohibiting their marriage with the brothers
 - (20) Thus acting in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai. (V. p. 79, n. 12.)
 - (21) A descendant of the house of Hillel.
 - (22) Obviously not. How, then, could it be assumed that he acted in accordance with a ruling of Beth Shammai?
 - (23) And the rival of such a woman is permitted to the brothers. V. Mishnah supra 2b.
 - (24) The 'Others' and the first Tanna.
 - (25) The husband, R. Gamaliel's brother.
 - (26) R. Gamaliel's daughter's.
 - (27) At the time of their marriage.
 - (28) V. supra 12a. According to the first Tanna, the rival of R. Gamaliel's daughter was permitted only because her husband was unaware of her defect, and their marriage consequently took place under a misconception. Such a marriage being invalid, R. Gamaliel's daughter was not a legal wife, and her rival consequently was a mere stranger to her father. According to the 'Others', who use the expression 'was incapable' and not 'was discovered to be incapable', the rival was permitted to R. Gamaliel irrespective of whether his daughter's defect had or had not been known, to her husband.
 - (29) V. supra 13a. Such as was the case with R. Gamaliel's daughter. The first Tanna is of the opinion that the rival was permitted to R. Gamaliel because at the time his brother died she was no more his daughter's rival. The 'Others', however, maintain that so long as the two were rivals for any length of time (in this case, between the time of the marriage with the rival and the divorce of R. Gamaliel's daughter) they remain legally as rivals for all time, and the only reason why R. Gamaliel was allowed to marry the rival of his daughter was because his daughter had the defect of being incapable of procreation, and the rival of such a woman is permitted to the brothers. V. supra 2b.

(30) That the woman, e.g., suffers from no illness or that she is not afflicted with any infirmity.

(31) Such a stipulation was made by the husband in the case of R. Gamaliel's daughter. The first Tanna is of the opinion that the stipulation is valid, and since an infirmity was subsequently discovered, the marriage is null and void and the rival as a mere stranger is consequently permitted. The 'Others', however, regard a stipulation in connection with marital intercourse as invalid. R. Gamaliel's marriage with the rival was consequently permitted only because his daughter was incapable of procreation.

(32) V. Glos.

(33) The eleventh month in the Hebrew calendar, the first day of which is regarded by Beth Shammai as the New Year for trees. The period of the gathering was about the end of the second year of the septennial cycle and the beginning of the third.

(34) The 'second tithe' which is due in the second year of the septennial cycle, and the 'tithe for the poor' which is due in the third year of the cycle.

(35) The 'tithe for the poor'.

Come and hear: R. Eleazar b. Zadok said: When I was learning Torah with R. Johanan the Horonite² I noticed that in the years of dearth he used to eat dry bread with salt. I went home and related it to my father, who said to me, 'Take some olives to him'. When I brought these to him and he observed that they were moist³ he said to me, 'I eat no olives'.⁴ I again went out and communicated the matter to my father, who said to me, 'Go tell him that the jar was broached,⁵ only the lees had blocked up the breach',⁶ and we learned: A jar containing pickled olives, Beth Shammai said, need not be broached;⁷ but Beth Hillel say: It must be broached.⁸ They admit, however, that where it had been broached and the lees had blocked up the holes, it is clean.⁹ And though he¹⁰ was a disciple of Shammai, he always conformed in practice¹¹ to the rulings of Beth Hillel. Now, if it be conceded that they¹² did act in accordance with their own rulings, one can well understand why his¹⁰ action was worthy of note;¹³ if, however, it were to be contended that they did not so act, in what respect was his conduct noteworthy!¹⁴

Come and hear: R. Joshua was asked, 'What is the law in relation to the rival of one's daughter'? He answered them, 'It is a question in dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel'. — 'But [he was asked] in accordance with whose ruling is the established law?' 'Why should you,' he said to them, 'put my head between two great mountains, between two great groups of disputants, aye, between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel? I fear they might crush my head! I may testify to you, however, concerning two great families who flourished in Jerusalem, namely, the family of Beth Zebo'im of Ben 'Akmai and the family of Ben Kuppai of Ben Mekoshesh,¹⁵ that they were descendants of rivals¹⁶ and yet some of them were High Priests who ministered upon the altar'. Now, if it be conceded that they¹⁷ acted [in accordance with their own rulings] it is quite intelligible why he said, 'I fear'.¹⁸ If, however, it be suggested that they¹⁷ did not so act, why did he say, 'I fear'?¹⁹ But even if it be granted that they did act [according to their rulings], what [cause had he for saying,] 'I fear'? Surely R. Joshua said that a bastard was only he who was a descendant of one of those who are subject to capital punishments which are within the jurisdiction of the Beth din!²⁰ — Granted that he²¹ was not a bastard, he is nevertheless tainted;²² as may be deduced by inference a minori ad majus from the case of the widow: If the son of a widow²³ who is not forbidden to all²⁴ is nevertheless tainted,²⁵ [how much more so the son of a rival]²⁶ who is forbidden to all.²⁷

They asked him concerning rivals and he answered them about the sons of the rivals! — They really asked him two questions: 'What is the law concerning the rivals? And if some ground could be found in their case in favour of the ruling of Beth Hillel, what is the law according to Beth Shammai in regard to the sons of the rivals, [who married]²⁸ in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel'?²⁹ What practical difference is there?³⁰ — That a solution may be found, according to Beth Hillel, for the question of the child³¹ of a man who remarried his divorced wife.³² Do we³³ apply the inference a minori ad majus, arguing thus: 'If the son of a widow who was married to a High Priest, who is not forbidden to all,³⁴ is nevertheless tainted,³⁵ how much more so the son of her³⁶ who is forbidden to all',³⁷ or is it possible to refute the argument, thus: 'The case of the widow is different because she herself is profaned'?³⁸ And he said to them, 'With reference to the rivals I am afraid;³⁹

(4) He hesitated to eat them owing to the possibility (Rashi) or the certainty (Tosaf. a.l. s.v. rnt) that the earthen jar in which they were kept had been touched by an 'am ha-arez and, being moist, received the uncleanness imparted to them by the jar which, by Rabbinical enactment, had become unclean by the touch of the 'am ha-arez.

(5) Keeping olives in a broached container is clear evidence that the owner had no desire to retain the sap that exudes from the olives; and only liquids which are desired by the owner render the fruit susceptible to Levitical uncleanness.

(6) And thus the undesired 'moisture remained on the olives. As such moisture does not render the fruit susceptible to uncleanness (v. previous note) the olives may safely be eaten even by the scrupulous.

(7) Because in their opinion the moisture that exudes from the olives is regarded as a fruit juice which does not render food susceptible to Levitical uncleanness.

(8) The moisture is regarded by them as actual oil which does render food susceptible to uncleanness. Broaching is consequently necessary in order to indicate thereby that the owner had no desire to preserve the liquid.

(9) I.e., the liquid, having clearly been shewn to be unwanted, does not render the olives susceptible to Levitical uncleanness. 'Ed. IV, 6.

as to the sons of the rivals¹ I may testify to you'.²

Come and hear: In the days of R. Dosa b. Harkinas the rival of a daughter was permitted to marry the brothers.³ From this it may be inferred that [Beth Shammai] acted [in accordance with their own rulings].⁴ This proves the point.

[To turn to] the main text. In the days of R. Dosa b. Harkinas, the rival of a daughter was permitted to marry the brothers. This ruling was very disturbing to the Sages, because he⁵ was a great scholar⁶ and his eyes were dim so that he was unable to come to the house of study.⁷ When a discussion took place as to who should go and communicate with him, R. Joshua said to them, 'I will go'. 'And who after him?' — 'R. Eleazar b. Azariah.' 'And who after him?' — 'R. Akiba'. They went and stood at the entrance of his house. His maid entered and told him, 'Master, the Sages of Israel are come to you'. 'Let them enter', he said to her; and they entered. Taking hold of R. Joshua he made him sit upon a golden couch. The latter said to him, 'Master, will you ask your other disciple to sit down?' 'Who is he?' [the Master] enquired. — 'R. Eleazar b. Azariah'. 'Has our friend Azariah a son?' [the Master] exclaimed, and applied to him this Scriptural text, I have been young and now I am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread;⁸ and so took hold of him also and made him sit upon a golden couch. 'Master', said he,⁹ 'will you ask your next disciple also to sit down?' 'And who is he?' [the Master] asked. — 'Akiba the son of Joseph'. 'You are,' [the Master] exclaimed, 'Akiba son of Joseph whose name is known from one end of the world to the other! Sit down, my son, sit down. May men like you multiply in Israel'. Thereupon they began to address to him all sorts of questions on legal practice¹⁰ until they reached that of the daughter's rival. 'What is the halachah', they asked him, 'in the case of a daughter's rival?' 'This,' he answered them, 'is a question in dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel.' 'In accordance with whose ruling is the halachah?' — 'The halachah,' he replied, 'is in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel.' 'But, indeed,' they said to him, 'it was stated in your name that the halachah is in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai!' He said to them: 'Did you hear, "Dosa"¹¹ or "the son of Harkinas?"'¹² — 'By the life of our Master,' they replied. 'We heard no son's name mentioned.'¹³ 'I have,' he said to them, 'a younger brother who is a dare-devil¹⁴ and his name is Jonathan and he is one of the disciples of Shammai.¹⁵ Take care that he does not overwhelm you on questions of established practice, because he has three hundred answers to prove that the daughter's rival is permitted. But I call heaven and earth to witness that upon this mortar¹⁶ sat the prophet Haggai¹⁷ and delivered the following three rulings: That a daughter's rival is forbidden, that in the lands of Ammon and Moab the tithe of the poor is to be given in the Seventh Year,¹⁸ and that proselytes may be accepted from the Cordyenians and the Tarmodites.'¹⁹

A Tanna taught: When they came²⁰ they entered through one door; when they went out they issued through three different doors.²¹ He came upon R. Akiba, submitted his objections to him and silenced him.²² 'Are you', he called out, 'Akiba whose name rings from one end of the world to the other? You are blessed indeed to have won fame while you have not yet attained the rank of oxherds.' 'Not even,' replied R. Akiba, 'that of shepherds.'

'In the lands of Ammon and Moab the tithe of the poor is given in the Seventh Year,' because a Master said: Those who came up from Egypt²³ had conquered many cities which those who came up from Babylon²⁴ did not conquer, and the first sanctification²³ was intended for that time only but not for the future.²⁵ Hence they were allowed [cultivation]²⁶ in order that the poor²⁷ might find their support there in the Seventh Year.²⁸

'And that proselytes may be accepted from the Cordyenians and the Tarmodites'. But [the law, surely,] is not so! For Rami b. Ezekiel learnt: No proselyte may be accepted from the Cordyenians. — R. Ashi replied: The statement was Kartuenians,²⁹ as people, in fact, speak of 'disqualified Kartuenians'.

Others say: Rami b. Ezekiel learnt, 'No proselytes are to be accepted from the Kartuenians'. Are not Kartuenians the same as Cordyenians? — R. Ashi replied: No; Kartuenians are a class by themselves, and Cordyenians are a class by themselves, as people, in fact, speak of 'disqualified Kartuenians'.³⁰

Both R. Johanan and Sabya maintain that no proselytes may be accepted from the Tarmodites. Did R. Johanan, however, say such a thing? Surely we learned: All blood stains [on women's garments] that come from Rekem³¹ are levitically clean,³² and R. Judah declares them unclean because [the people there] were proselytes though misguided;³³ [those that come] from the heathens³⁴ are levitically clean.³⁵ And the difficult point was raised

(1) Whether they are tainted or not.

(2) V. supra 15b, which shews that they were not tainted, since they were permitted to occupy the highest office in the priesthood.

(3) Of the father of that daughter.

(4) Since the permission to marry was issued by a brother of R. Dosa (v. infra) who was a member of Beth Shammai.

(5) R. Dosa, who was thought to be the author of the ruling.

Some suggest iubua ruj c 'keen — witted youth'. R. Dosa appears to have been playing upon the rhyme of ah katan, bekor satan, and Jonathan.

(15) And it must have been Jonathan who dared to issue a ruling in accordance with the views of his school against those of Beth Hillel.

(16) vfusn or mortar-shaped seat.

(17) [That does not mean that he was a contemporary of Haggai the prophet, but that he had an incontrovertible tradition on the matter, Me'iri.]

(18) Of the septennial cycle. The countries of Ammon and Moab, though conquered by Moses and included in the boundary of the Land of Israel, were in the days of the Second Temple excluded. The laws of the Seventh or Sabbatical year, which apply to the Land of Israel, were consequently inapplicable to the lands of Ammon and Moab. Any Jews living in those countries, it was ordained by the Rabbis, were to be allowed to cultivate their fields in this year, but besides the 'first tithe' which is due in all other years, they were to give the tithe of the poor also.

(19) Despite the opinion of some Rabbis that they were to be regarded as bastards. Cordyene or Kardu was in Babylon; Tarmod or Tadmor, (Palmyra) lay in an oasis of the desert of Syria. [According to Obermeyer (p. 133) the question as to the legitimacy of the offering of the Kardu was on account of the possible intermarriage of the non-Jewish inhabitants with the Jewish converts, won over to Christianity by the Christian missions from Edessa in the first century.]

(20) To interview R. Dosa.

(32) Only the menstrual blood of the daughters of Israel is levitically unclean; and no pure Israelites lived at Rekem.

that having stated categorically,¹ '[those that came] from the heathens' [he must also imply,] 'even those from Tarmod'!² And R. Johanan replied: This proves that proselytes may be accepted from Tarmod.³ And if it be replied [that R. Johanan only said], 'This',⁴ but he himself does not hold this view,⁵ surely R. Johanan said, 'The halachah is in accordance with an anonymous Mishnah'!⁶ — It is a question in dispute between Amoraim as to what was actually the view of R. Johanan.

Why are no [proselytes to be accepted] from Tarmod? — R. Johanan and Sabya give different reasons. One says, 'On account of the slaves of Solomon,'⁷ and the other says, 'On account of the daughters of Jerusalem.'⁸

According to him who Says. 'On account of the slaves of Solomon,' the reason is quite intelligible, because he may hold the opinion that the child of a heathen or a slave who had intercourse with a daughter in Israel is a bastard. According to him, however, who said, 'On account of the daughters of Jerusalem', what is the reason? — R. Joseph and the Rabbis dispute the point, and both of them in the name of Rabbah b. Bar Hana. One maintains that [the number was] twelve thousand [foot]men and six thousand archers, and the other maintains that there were twelve thousand men and, of these, six hundred archers. At the time when the heathens entered the Temple, everyone made for the gold and the silver, but they made for the daughters of Jerusalem; as it is said in the Scriptures. They have ravished the women in Zion, the maidens in the cities of Judah.⁹

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: The following verse was uttered by the Genius of the Universe:¹⁰ I have been young and now I am old¹¹ For who else could have said it! If the Holy One, blessed be He, be suggested, is there any old age in his case? Then David must have said it? But was he so old? Consequently it must be concluded that the Genius of the Universe had said it.

R. Samuel b. Nahmani further said in the name of R. Jonathan: What is [the meaning of] the Scriptural text,¹² The adversary hath spread out his hand upon all her treasures?¹³ — This [refers to] Ammon and Moab. At the time when the heathens entered the Temple all made for gold and silver, but they turned to the Scroll of the Law, saying, 'That in which it is written, An Ammonite or a Moabite shall not enter into the assembly of the Lord,¹⁴ shall be burned with fire.'

The Lord hath commanded concerning Jacob that they that are round about him should be his adversaries.¹⁵ Rab said: As, for instance, Humania towards Pum Nahara.¹⁶

Rab Judah said in the name of R. Assi: If at the present time a heathen betroths [a daughter in Israel], note must be taken of such betrothal since it may be that he is of the ten tribes.¹⁷ But, surely, anything separated [from a heterogeneous group] is regarded as having been separated from the majority!¹⁸ — [R. Assi's statement refers] to places where they have settled;¹⁹ for R. Abba b. Kahana said: And he put them in Halah and in Habor, on the river of Gozan, and the cities of the Medes;²⁰ Halah is Halwan,²¹ and Habor

(1) Lit., 'he decides and teaches'.

(2) But can that be so in view of the doubtful character of the admixture of Jewish stock of its inhabitants?

(3) Nid. 56b. I.e., they are not regarded as an admixture of Jewish stock and tainted from birth and disqualified. How then could it be said supra that R. Johanan maintains that proselytes may not be accepted from the Tarmodites?

(4) 'This proves etc.' supra.

(5) I.e., he disagrees with the Mishnah.

(6) Which, as has been shewn, implies that proselytes may be accepted from Tarmod.

(7) Who married Jewish women.

(17) Whom Shalmaneser had carried away into captivity (II Kings XVIII, 11) where they intermarried with the heathens. Children born from such marriages are bastards, and R. Assi holds that a bastard's betrothal is valid.

(18) I.e., if it is not known to which group or class a person or object that comes from a mixed multitude belongs, it is always assumed that the unit came from the majority. Now, since the ten tribes represent only a minority of the heathens, it should be assumed that the betrothal was not made by one of the ten tribes but by a heathen.

(19) And formed a majority of the inhabitants (Tosaf. s.v. t, fusc a.l.). Rashi: A group which is in a settled condition, (kabu'a, v. Keth. 15a and Glos.), though it is a minority, is deemed to represent a half of the whole multitude.

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. ON THE THREE DAYS PRECEDING THE FESTIVITIES¹ OF IDOLATERS, IT IS FORBIDDEN TO TRANSACT BUSINESS WITH THEM, TO LEND ARTICLES TO THEM OR BORROW ANY FROM THEM, TO ADVANCE, OR RECEIVE ANY MONEY FROM THEM, TO REPAY A DEBT, OR RECEIVE REPAYMENT FROM THEM.² R. JUDAH SAYS: WE SHOULD RECEIVE REPAYMENT FROM THEM, AS THIS CAN ONLY DEPRESS THEM;³ BUT THEY [THE RABBIS]⁴ SAID TO HIM: EVEN THOUGH IT IS DEPRESSING AT THE TIME, THEY ARE GLAD OF IT SUBSEQUENTLY.

GEMARA. Rab and Samuel [differed]: the one quoting [from this Mishnah] ed, while the other quoted 'ed.⁵ The one who quoted ed is not in error, nor is the one who quoted 'ed in error.⁶ The one who quoted ed is not in error, since Scripture says: For the day of their calamity is at hand;⁷ so also is he who quotes 'ed not in error, for Scripture also says: Let them bring their witnesses [testimonies] that they may be justified.⁸ Why does he who quotes ed not have 'ed? — He might say, the term ed ['calamity'] is more applicable [to idolatry]. Why then does not the one who quotes 'ed have ed? — He might say: What is it that brings about that calamity [if not] their testimony? hence the term 'ed ['testimony'] is more apt.

But does the verse, Let them bring their witnesses that they may be justified, refer to idolaters at all? It surely refers to Israel; as R. Joshua b. Levi said: All the good deeds which Israel does in this world will bear testimony unto them in the world to come, as it is said: Let them bring their witnesses that they may be justified — that is Israel; And let them hear and say: It is truth — these are the idolaters. Whereupon R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said that the one who quotes 'ed derives it from this verse: They that fashion a graven image are all of them vanity, and their delectable things shall not profit,' and their own witnesses see not, nor know.⁹

R. Hanina b. Papa — some say R. Simlai — expounded [the foregoing verse] thus: In times to come,¹⁰ the Holy One, blessed be He, will take a scroll of the Law in His embrace and proclaim: 'Let him who has occupied himself herewith, come and take his reward.' Thereupon all the nations will crowd together in confusion, as it is said: All the nations are gathered together, etc.¹¹ The Holy One, blessed be He, will then say to them: 'Come not before Me in confusion, but let each nation come in with its scribes;' as it is said, and let the peoples be gathered together,'¹ and the word le'om [used here] means a kingdom, as it is written, and one kingdom [u-leom] shall be stronger than the other kingdom.² (But can there be confusion in the presence of the Holy One, blessed be He? — [No;] it is only that they be not confused, and so hear what He says to them.) Thereupon the Kingdom of Edom³ will enter first before Him. (Why first? Because they are the most important. Whence do we know they are so important? — Because it is written: And he shall devour the whole earth and shall tread it down and break it in pieces;⁴ and R. Johanan says that this refers to Rome, whose power is known to the whole world. And whence do we know that the most important comes forward first? — Because R. Hisda said: When a king and a community appear before the [Heavenly] tribunal, the king enters first, as it is said: That He maintain the cause of His servant [King Solomon] and [then] the cause of His people Israel.⁵ And why is it so? — You may say, because it is not the way of the world that a king shall wait without; or you may say [in order that the king shall plead] before the anger [of the Judge] is roused.)⁶ The Holy One, blessed be He, will then say to them: 'Wherewith have you occupied yourselves?' They will reply: 'O Lord of the Universe, we have established many market-places, we have erected many baths, we have accumulated much gold and silver, and all this we did only for the sake of Israel, that they might [have leisure] for occupying themselves with the study of the Torah.' The Holy One, blessed be He, will say in reply: 'You foolish ones among peoples, all that which you have done, you have only done to satisfy your own desires. You have established marketplaces to place courtesans therein; baths, to revel in them; [as to the distribution of] silver and gold, that is mine, as it is written: Mine is the silver and Mine is the gold, saith the Lord of Hosts;⁷ are there any among you who have been declaring this?' And 'this' is nought else than the Torah, as it is said: And this is the Law which Moses set before the children of Israel.⁸ They will then depart crushed in spirit. On the departure of the Kingdom of Rome, Persia will step forth. (Why Persia next? — Because they are next in importance. And how do we know this? — Because it is written: And behold another beast, a second like to a bear;⁹ and R. Joseph learned¹⁰ that this refers to the Persians, who eat and drink greedily like the bear, are fleshly like the bear, have shaggy hair like the bear, and are restless like the bear.)¹¹ The Holy One, blessed be He, will ask of them: 'Wherewith have ye occupied yourselves?'; and they will reply 'Sovereign of the Universe, we have built many bridges, we have captured many cities, we have waged many wars, and all this for the sake of Israel, that they might engage in the study of the Torah. Then the Holy One, blessed be He, will say to them: ‘You foolish ones among peoples, you have built bridges in order to extract toll, you have subdued cities, so as to impose forced labour;¹² as to waging war, I am the Lord of battles, as it is said: The Lord is a man of war;¹³ are there any amongst you who have been declaring this?’ and ‘this’ means nought else than the Torah, as it is said: And this is the Law which Moses set before the Children of Israel¹⁴. They, too’ will then depart crushed in spirit. (But why should the Persians, having seen that the Romans achieved nought, step forward at all? — They will say to themselves: ‘The Romans have destroyed the Temple, whereas we have built it.’)¹⁵ And so will every nation fare in turn. (But why should the other nations come forth, seeing that those who preceded them had achieved nought? They will say to themselves: The others have oppressed Israel, but we have not. And why are these [two] nations singled out as important, and not the others? — Because their reign will last till the coming of the Messiah.) The nations will then contend: ‘Lord of the Universe, hast Thou given us the Torah, and have we declined to accept it? (But how can they argue thus, seeing that it is written, The Lord came from Sinai and rose from Seir unto them, He shined forth from Mount Paran?¹⁶ And it is also written, God cometh from Teman.¹⁷ What did He seek in Seir, and what did He seek in Mount Paran?¹⁸ — R. Johanan says: This teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, offered the Torah to every nation and every tongue, but none accepted it, until He came to Israel who received it. [How, then, can they say that the Torah was not offered to them?] Their contention will be this: ‘Did we accept it and fail to observe it? But surely the obvious rejoinder to this their plea would be: ‘Then why did you not accept it?’ — This, then, will be their contention: ‘Lord of the Universe, didst Thou suspend the mountain over us like a vault¹⁹ as Thou hast done unto Israel and did we still decline to accept it?’ For in commenting on the verse: And they stood at the netherpart of the mountain²⁰ R. Dimi b. Hama said: This teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, suspended the mountain over Israel like a vault, and said unto them: ‘If ye accept the Torah, it will be well with you, but if not, there will ye find your grave.’) Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, will say to them: ‘Let us then consider the happenings of old,’ as it is said, Let them announce to us former things,²¹ ‘there are seven commandments which you did accept.²² did you observe them?’ (How do we know that they did not observe them? — For R. Joseph learned:²³ He standeth and shaketh the earth, He seeth and maketh the nations to tremble:²⁴ what did He see? He saw that the nations did not observe even the seven precepts which the sons of Noah had taken upon themselves,²⁵ and seeing that they did not observe them, He stood up and released them therefrom.²⁶ Then they benefited by it; according to this it pays to be a sinner! — Said Mar the son of Rabina:

The release from those commands only means that even if they observed them they would not be rewarded. But why should they not? Is it not taught: R. Meir used to say. 'Whence do we know that even an idolater who studies the Torah is equal to a High Priest? From the following verse: Ye shall therefore keep My statutes and My ordinances which, if a man do, he shall live by them.¹ It does not say "If a Priest, Levite, or Israelite do, he shall live by them," but "a man"; here, then, you can learn that even a heathen who studies the Torah is equal to a High Priest!' — What is meant, then, is that they are rewarded not as greatly as one who does a thing which he is bidden to do, but as one who does a thing unbidden. For, R. Hanina said: He who is commanded and does, stands higher than he who is not commanded and does.²)

The nations will then say, 'Sovereign of the Universe, has Israel, who accepted the Torah, observed it? The Holy One, blessed be He, will reply, 'I can give evidence that they observed the Torah.' 'O Lord of the Universe,' they will argue, 'can a father give evidence in favour of his son? For it is written, Israel is My son, My firstborn.'³ Then will the Holy One, blessed be He, say: 'Heaven and Earth can bear witness that Israel has fulfilled the entire Torah.' But they will [object], saying: 'Lord of the Universe, Heaven and Earth are partial witnesses, for it is said, If not for My covenant with day and with night. I should not have appointed the ordinances of Heaven and Earth.'⁴ (And R. Simeon b. Lakish further said: What is conveyed by the phrase. And there was evening and there was morning the sixth day?⁵ It teaches us that God made a condition with the works of creation, saying: 'If Israel accept my Law it will be well, but if not, I shall reduce you to a state of chaos'⁶; which accords with the comment of R. Hezekiah on the verse, Thou didst cause sentence to be heard from Heaven, the earth trembled and was still:⁷ If the earth trembled, how could it be still, and if it was still, how could it tremble? But at first it trembled, and subsequently it became still.)⁸ Then the Holy One, blessed be He, will say, ‘Some of yourselves shall testify that Israel observed the entire Torah. Let Nimrod come and testify that Abraham did not [consent to] worship idols; let Laban come and testify that Jacob could not be suspected of theft;⁹ let Potiphar's wife testify that Joseph was above suspicion of immorality; let Nebuchadnezzar come and testify that Hanania, Mishael and Azariah did not bow down to an image; let Darius come and testify that Daniel never neglected the [statutory] prayers;¹⁰ let Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, and Eliphaz the Temanite [and Elihu¹¹ the son of Barachel the Buzite]¹² testify that Israel has observed the whole Torah; as it is said, Let them [the nations] bring their [own] witnesses, that they [Israel] may be justified.’¹³

The nations will then plead. ‘Offer us the Torah anew and we shall obey it.’ But the Holy One, blessed be He, will say to them, ‘You foolish ones among peoples, he who took trouble [to prepare] on the eve of the Sabbath can eat on the Sabbath, but he who has not troubled on the eve of the Sabbath, what shall he eat on the Sabbath? Nevertheless, I have an easy command which is called Sukkah;¹⁴ go and carry it out.’¹⁵ (But how can you say so: does not R. Joshua b. Levi say: What is [the meaning of] the verse, The ordinances which I command thee this day to do them?¹⁶ It is that this day only [the present] is the time to do them,’ they cannot be done tomorrow [in times to come]: this day is the time in which to do them, but not in which to be rewarded for them. [Why then should they be offered this observance in the Messianic time?] — Because the Holy One, blessed be He, does not deal imperiously with His creatures.¹⁷ And why does He term it an easy command? — Because it does not affect one's purse.) Straightaway will every one of them betake himself and go and make a booth on the top of his roof; but the Holy One, blessed be He, will cause the sun to blaze forth over them as at the Summer Solstice.¹⁸ and every one of them will trample down his booth and go away, as it is said, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.¹⁹ (But you have just said ‘The Holy One, blessed be He, does not deal imperiously with his creatures? — True! but with the Israelites, too, it occasionally happens that the summer solstice extends till the Festival [of Tabernacles] and they are vexed [by the heat].¹ But does not Raba say: He who is vexed thereby is freed from dwelling in the Sukkah?² — Granted, they would [in such circumstances] be freed, but would Israelites contemptuously trample it down?) Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, will laugh at them, as it is said, He that sitteth in heaven laugheth.³ Said R. Isaac: 'Only on that day is there laughter for the Holy One, blessed be He!' Some connected that comment of R. Isaac with the following teaching: R. Jose says, In time to come idol-worshippers will come and offer themselves as proselytes. But will such be accepted? Has it not been taught⁴ that in the days of the Messiah proselytes will not be received; likewise were none received in the days of David or of Solomon? — Well, they will be self-made proselytes,⁵ and will place phylacteries on their foreheads and on their arms, fringes in their garments, and a Mezuzah on their doorposts, but when the battle of Gog-Magog will come about⁶ they will be asked, 'For what purpose have you come?' and they will reply: 'Against God and His Messiah' as it is said, Why are the nations in an uproar, and why do the peoples mutter in vain, etc.⁷ Then each of the proselytes will throw aside his religious token and get away, as it is said, Let us break their bands asunder⁸, and the Holy One, blessed be He, will sit and laugh, as it is said: He that sitteth in heaven laugheth.⁹ [It was on this that] R. Isaac remarked that there is no laughter for the Holy One, blessed be He, except on that day. But is there not, indeed? Yet Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: 'The day consists of twelve hours; during the first three hours the Holy One, blessed be He, is occupying Himself with the Torah, during the second three He sits in judgment on the whole world, and when He sees that the world is so guilty as to deserve destruction, He transfers Himself from the seat of Justice to the seat of Mercy;¹⁰ during the third quarter, He is feeding the whole world, from the horned buffalo to the brood of vermin; during the fourth quarter He is sporting with the leviathan,¹¹ as it is said, There is leviathan, whom Thou hast formed to sport therewith'?¹² Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Yes, He sports with His creatures, but does not laugh at His creatures except on that day.¹³

R. Aba said to R. Nahman b. Isaac: Since the day of the destruction of the temple, there is no laughter for the Holy One, blessed be He. Whence do we know that there is not? Shall we say from the verse, And on that day did the Lord, the God of Hosts, call to weeping and lamentation?¹⁴ But this refers to that day and no more. Shall we then say, from this verse: If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I do not remember thee?¹⁵ But this, too, excludes forgetfulness, but not laughter. Hence, [it is known] from the verse, I have long time held my peace, I have been still, and refrained myself, now will I cry.¹⁶ What then does God do in the fourth quarter?¹⁷ — He sits and instructs the school children,¹⁸ as it is said, Whom shall one teach knowledge, and whom shall one make to understand the message? Them that are weaned from the milk.¹⁹ Who instructed them theretofore?²⁰ — If you like, you may say Metatron,²¹ or it may be said that God did this as well as other things. And what does He do by night? — If you like you may say, the kind of thing He does by day; or it may be said that He rides a light cherub, and floats in eighteen thousand worlds; for it is said, The chariots of God are myriads, even thousands shinan.²² Do not read Shinan, [repeated], but she-enan [that are not];²³ or it may be said, He sits and listens to the song of the Hayyoth,²⁴ as it is said, By the day the Lord will command His lovingkindness and in the night His song shall be with me.²⁵

R. Levi says: He who discontinues [learning] words of the Torah and indulges in idle gossip will be made to eat glowing coals of juniper, as it is said, They pluck salt-wort with wormwood; and the roots of juniper are their food.²⁶

Resh Lakish says: To him who is engaged in the study of the Torah by night, the Holy One extends a thread of grace by day, as it is said, By day the Lord will command his lovingkindness, and in the night his song shall be with me.²⁷ For what reason will the Lord command his lovingkindness by day? — because His song shall be with me in the night.

Some report the exposition of Resh Lakish thus: To him who is engaged in the study of the Torah in this world, which is likened unto the night, the Holy One, blessed be He, extends the thread of grace in the future world, which is likened unto the day, as it is said: By day the Lord, etc.

Rab Judah says in the name of Samuel: Why is it written, And Thou makest man as the fishes of the sea, and as the creeping things, that have no ruler over them?²⁸ Why is man here compared to the fishes of the sea? To tell you, just as the fishes of the sea, as soon as they come on to dry land, die, so also man, as soon as he abandons the Torah and the precepts [incurs destruction]. Another explanation: Just as the fishes of the sea, as soon as the sun scorches them, die; so man, when struck by the sun, dies. This can be applied to the present world, or to the future world. You can, in accordance with R. Hanina, apply this to the present world, for R. Hanina says: Everything is in Heaven's hands, except cold and heat, as is said, 'colds and heat-boils are in the way of the froward, he that keepeth his soul holdeth himself far from them;²⁹ or, according to R. Simeon b. Lakish, it can be applied to the future life, for R. Simeon b. Lakish says: There is no

Gehenna in the Future World,³⁰ but the Holy One, blessed be He, brings the sun out of its sheath, so that it is fierce: the wicked are punished by it, the righteous are healed by it. The wicked are punished by it, as it is said: For, behold, the day cometh, it burneth as a furnace; and all the proud, and all that work wickedness, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall set them ablaze, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.¹ It shall leave them neither root — in this world, nor branch — in the world to come. The righteous are healed by it, as it is said, But unto you that fear My name, shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings.¹ Moreover, they will revel therein, as it is said, And ye shall go forth, and gambol as calves of the stall.² Another explanation:³ Just as among fish of the sea, the greater swallow up the smaller ones, so with men, were it not for fear of the government, men would swallow each other alive. This is just what we learnt: R. Hanina, the Deputy High Priest, said, Pray for the welfare of the government, for were it not for the fear thereof, men would swallow each other alive.⁴

R. Hinena b. Papa pointed to the following contradiction: Scripture says, As to the Almighty, we do not find him [exercising] plenteous power,⁵ yet it says, Great is our Lord and of abundant power⁶ and also, Thy right hand, O Lord, is become glorious in power!⁷ [The answer is] there is no contradiction here: the former refers to the time of judgment,⁸ the latter refers to a time of war.⁹

R. Hama b. Hanina pointed to another contradiction: Scripture says, Fury is not in me,¹⁰ yet it also says. The Lord revengeth and is furious!¹¹ But there is really no contradiction: the former refers to Israel, the latter to idolaters.¹² R. Hinena b. Papa [or R. Aha b. Hanina] explains the foregoing verse thus: Fury is not in me, for I already vowed;¹³ would that I had not so vowed, then, as the briars and thorns in flame I would with one step burn it altogether.¹⁴

This¹⁵ accords with the following teaching of R. Alexandri: What is the meaning of the verse, And it shall come to pass on that day that I will seek to destroy all the nations¹⁶ — ‘seek’ among whom? What the Holy One, blessed be He, says is, I will seek their records:¹⁷ if they have any meritorious deeds to their credit, I will redeem them, but if not, I will destroy them. This also accords with what Raba said: What is the meaning of the verse, Howbeit He will not stretch out a hand for a ruinous heap though they cry in his destruction ?¹⁸ — The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Israel, ‘When I judge Israel, I do not judge them as I do the idolaters concerning whom it is said, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it,¹⁹ but I only exact payment from them [little at a time] as the hen does her picking.’²⁰ Another explanation: Even if Israel does before Me but few good deeds at a time, like hens picking in a rubbish heap, I will make it accumulate to a large sum, as it is said, though they pick little they are saved.²¹ Another rendering is: As a reward of their crying unto Me, I help them.²² This is similar to what R. Abba said, What is the meaning of the verse, Though I would redeem them, yet they have spoken lies against Me?²³ I thought I would redeem them by depriving them of monetary possessions in this world, so that they be worthy to merit the world to come, yet they etc. Which is in agreement with what R. Papi said in the name of Raba: What is the meaning of the verse, Though I have trained [yissarti], strengthened their arms, yet do they imagine mischief against Me?²⁴ The Holy One, blessed be He, says, I thought I would chastise them²⁵ with suffering in this world, so that their arm might be strengthened in the world to come, yet they etc.

R. Abbahu commended R. Safra to the Minim²⁶ as a learned man, and he was thus exempted by them from paying taxes for thirteen years.²⁷ One day, on coming across him, they said to him; 'It is written: You only have I known [or loved] from all the families of the earth; therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities;²⁸ if one is in anger does one vent it on one's friend?' But he was silent and could give them no answer; so they wound a scarf round his neck and tortured him. When R. Abbahu came and found him [in that state] he said to them, Why do you torture him? Said they, 'Have you not told us that he is a great man? he cannot explain to us the meaning of this verse!' Said he, 'I may have told you [that he was learned] in Tannaitic teaching; did I tell you [he was learned] in Scripture?' — 'How is it then that you know it?' they contended. 'We,' he replied. 'who are frequently with you, set ourselves the task of studying it thoroughly, but others²⁹ do not study it as carefully.' Said they, 'Will you then tell us the meaning?' 'I will explain it by a parable.' he replied. 'To what may it be compared? To a man who is the creditor of two persons, one of them a friend, the other an enemy; of his friend he will accept payment little by little, whereas of his enemy he will exact payment in one sum!'³⁰

Said R. Aba b. Kahana: What is the meaning of the verse, That be far from Thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked?³¹ What Abraham said is: 'Sovereign of the Universe, it is profanation to do after this manner.'³² And does not God act after this manner? Is it not written, And I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked?³³ — That refers to one who is not thoroughly righteous. But not to one who is wholly righteous? Is it not written, And begin [the slaughter] with my sanctuary,³⁴ which, R. Joseph learned, should not be read my sanctuary but my sanctified ones, namely the men who fulfilled the Torah from Aleph to Taw? — There, too, since it was in their power to protest against [the wickedness of the others] and they did not protest, they are not regarded as thoroughly righteous.

R. Papa mentioned the following contradiction: It is written, God is angry every day,³⁵ while it is also written Who could stand before His anger?³⁶ But there is really no contradiction; the latter refers to an individual, the former to men collectively.³⁷ Our Rabbis taught: God is angry every day, but how long does His anger last? — A moment. And how long is a moment? — one fifty three thousand eight hundred forty eighth of an hour is a moment.³⁸ No creature could ever precisely fix this moment, except Balaam the wicked, of whom it is written who knew the knowledge of the Most High.¹ Is that possible? He did not know the mind of his animal, how could he have known the mind of the Most High! (What is meant by the words 'he did not know the mind of his animal'? — At the time when he was seen riding on his ass, they said to him, 'Why do you not ride on a horse?'² And he replied, 'I consigned mine to the meadow.' Whereupon the ass said,³ Am I not thy ass — 'Just for carrying burdens,' he interrupted; she continued, upon whom thou hast ridden — 'Only casually' he again interrupted; but she continued, ever since I was thine? 'What is more [she added] I have carried you by day and have been thy companion by night;' for the word I was wont [hiskanti], used here, is analogous to the word let her be his companion [sokeneth] used elsewhere.)⁴ What, then, is the meaning of He knew the knowledge of the Most High? — He knew the exact hour when the Holy One, blessed be He, is angry. This, indeed, is what the Prophet is alluding to when he says, O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal; that ye may know the righteousness of the Lord.⁵ Said R. Eleazar: The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Israel, O my people, see how many righteous acts I did for you, in that I abstained from anger all those days, for had I been in anger, none would have remained or been spared of Israel's enemies.⁶ This, too, is what Balaam refers to when he says, How can I curse, seeing that God doth not curse, and how can I be wrathful, seeing that the Lord hath not been wrathful?⁷ And how long does His wrath last? — A moment [Rega']. And how long is a Rega'? Said Amemar (others say, Rabina): As long as it takes to utter this word. And whence do we know that His wrath lasts a moment? — Because it is written, For His anger is for a moment, His favour is for a life-time;⁸ or, if you wish, from this verse: Hide thyself for a little moment, until the wrath be past.⁹ When is He wrathful? — Said Abaye: During the first three hours,¹⁰ when the comb of the cock is white. And is it not white at all other times? — At other times it has red streaks, at that time there are no red streaks in it.

R. Joshua b. Levy used to be pestered by a Min [with taunts] about scriptural verses. One day the Rabbi took a cock and, placed it between the legs of the bed and watched it, thinking. 'When that hour will arrive, I shall curse him.' When that hour did arrive, he was dozing. Whereupon he said: You can learn from this that it is not proper to act thus: His tender mercies are over all His works¹¹ is what Scripture says, and it also says. Neither is it good for the righteous to punish.¹²

It was taught in the name of R. Meir: It is when the kings place their crowns on their heads and bow down to the sun,¹³ that the Holy One, blessed be He, at once becomes wrathful.

Said R. Joseph: No one should recite the Prayer¹⁴ of the Additional Service on the first day of the New Year,¹⁵ during the first three hours of the day, in private,¹⁶ lest, since judgment is then proceeding, his deeds may be scrutinised and the prayer rejected. But if that be so, it should apply to congregational prayer also! — The [collective] merits of a congregation are greater. In that case, [the Prayer] of the Morning Service, too, should not be recited in private! — That is not so, since there is sure to be a congregation praying at the same time,¹⁷ the prayer will not be rejected. But have you not said,¹⁸ 'During the first three hours the Holy One, blessed be He, is occupying Himself with the Torah, during the second three He sits in judgment over the whole world'? — You may reverse [the order]; or, if you wish, you may say it need not be reversed: [while occupied with] the Torah, which Scripture designates as ‘truth’, as it is written, buy the truth and sell it not,¹⁹ the Holy One, blessed be He, will not overstep the line of justice; [but when sitting in] judgment, which is not designated by Scripture as ‘truth’,²⁰ the Holy One, blessed be He, may overstep the line of justice [towards mercy].

[To revert to] the above text:²¹ ‘R. Joshua b. Levi said: What is the meaning of the verse, The ordinances which I command thee this day to do them? It is that this day only is the time to do them; they cannot be done in the time to come: this day is the time in which to do them, but not in which to be rewarded for them’. R. Joshua b. Levi also said:²² All the good deeds which Israel does in this world will bear testimony unto them in the world to come, as it is said, Let them bring their witnesses that they may be justified; let them hear and say it is truth. Let them bring their witnesses that they may be justified — that is Israel; let them hear and say it is truth — these are the idolaters. R. Joshua b. Levi also said:²³ All the good deeds which the Israelites do in this world will come and flutter before the faces of the idolaters in the world to come, as it is said, Keep therefore and do them, for this, your wisdom and understanding [will be] in the eyes of the peoples.²⁴ It does not say in the presence of the peoples, but, in the eyes of the peoples; that teaches you that they will come and flutter before the faces of the idolaters in the world to come. R. Joshua b. Levi further said: The Israelites made the [golden] calf only in order to place a good argument in the mouth of the penitents,²⁵ as it is said, O that they had such a heart as this always, to fear Me and keep all My commandments etc.²⁶

This last statement accords with what R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: David was not the kind of man to do that act,²⁷ nor was Israel the kind of people to do that act.²⁸ David was not the kind of man to do that act, as it is written, My heart is slain within me;²⁹ nor were the Israelites the kind of people to commit that act, for it is said, O that they had such a heart as this always etc. Why, then, did they act thus?

[God predestined it so] in order to teach thee that if an individual hath sinned [and hesitates about the effect of repentance] he could be referred to the individual [David], and if a community commit a sin they should be told: Go to the community.¹ And both these instances are necessary; for if [the case of] the individual only were mentioned. [it might have been thought that pardon is granted] because his sin is not generally known, but in the case of a community whose sins are publicly known it might not be so; if, on the other hand, the case of a community only were mentioned, it might have been thought, because they command greater mercy,² but with an individual, whose merits are not so numerous, it is not so; hence both are necessary.

This accords with the following saying of R. Samuel b. Nahmani, who said in the name of R. Jonathan: What is the meaning of the verse The saying of David the son of Jesse, and the saying of the man raised on high.³ [It means this:] The saying of David the son of Jesse, the man who elevated the yoke of repentance.⁴

R. Samuel b. Nahmani in the name of R. Jonathan also said: Every good deed that one does in this world precedes him and walks in front of him in the world to come, as it is said: And thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy rearward.⁵ Likewise, every transgression that one commits clasps him and leads him on the day of judgment, as it is said, They clasp him in the course of their way.⁶ R. Eleazar said: It is tied on to him like a dog, as it is said, He hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, to be with her;⁷ [it is to say that] to lie by her in this world, [would mean for him] to be with her in the world to come.

Said Resh Lakish: Come let us render gratitude to our forebears,⁸ for had they not sinned, we should not have come to the world, as it is said: I said ye are gods and all of you sons of the Most High; now that you have spoilt your deeds, ye shall indeed die like mortals etc.⁹ Are we to understand that if the Israelites had not committed that sin they would not have propagated? Had it not been said, And you, be ye fruitful and multiply?¹⁰ — That refers to those who lived up to the times of Sinai. But of those at Sinai, too, it is said, Go say to them, Return ye to your tents¹¹ which means to the joy of family life?¹² And is it not also said, that it might be well with them and with their children?¹³ — It means to those of their children who stood at Sinai. But did not Resh Lakish [himself] say. What is the meaning of the verse This is the book of the generations of Adam?¹⁴ Did Adam have a book? What it implies is that the Holy One, blessed be He, showed to Adam every [coming] generation with its expositors, every generation with its sages, every generation with its leaders; when he reached the generation of R. Akiba¹⁵ he rejoiced at his teaching, but was grieved about his death, and said, How precious are Thy thoughts unto me, O God!¹⁶ Also, what of the teaching of R. Jose:¹⁷ The Son of David will only come when all the souls destined to [inhabit earthly] bodies will be exhausted, as it is said, For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth, for the spirit should fall before me and the spirits which I have made?¹⁸ — Do not take Resh Lakish's saying to mean that [if our ancestor had not sinned] we should not have come to the world, but that [they would have become immortal and] we should have been [disregarded] as if we had never come to the world. Does that mean then that if they had not sinned, they would have been immune from death? But there are written [in the Torah] the chapter about the widow of a man dying without issue, and the chapter about inheritances!¹⁹ — These were written conditionally. But are conditional passages written [in the Torah]? — Certainly; for R. Simeon b. Lakish said:²⁰ What is the meaning of the verse, And it was evening and it was morning the sixth day?²¹ It teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, made a condition with all creation, saying, If Israel will accept the Torah all will be well, but if not, I will turn the world void and without form.

The following objection was then raised: ‘The verse, O that they had such a heart as this always that it may be well with them and their children²² cannot obviously refer to the abolition of the angel of death, since the decree [of death] had already been made?’²³ It means therefore that the effect of Israel's acceptance of the Torah would be that no nation or tongue could prevail against them, as it is said, that it might be well with them and their children after them’?²⁴ He [Resh Lakish] may be of the same opinion as the following Tanna, for it is taught: R. Jose said, The Israelites accepted the Torah only so that the Angel of Death should have no dominion over them, as it is said: I said ye are gods [i.e. immortals] and all of you children of the Most High, now that you have spoilt your deeds, ye shall indeed die like mortals.²⁵ But against R. Jose, too, [it may be argued] that the verse that it may be well with them and their children for ever holds out the promise of well-being but not of deathlessness? — R. Jose may reply: The abolition of death is surely as desirable a kind of well-being as you might wish for. Then how does the first Tanna²⁶ explain the phrase: Ye shall indeed die? — What may be meant here by dying is to become impoverished²⁷ for a Master has said:²⁸ Four [kinds of persons] may be regarded as dead, they are: the poor, the blind, the leprous, and the childless; the poor, for it is said, for all the men are dead which sought thy life²⁹ — now these ‘men’ were Dathan and Abiram, and they surely were not then dead, they only became reduced in their material circumstances; the blind, as it is said: He hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead;³⁰ the leprous, as it is said, Let her not, I pray thee, be as one who is dead;³¹ the childless, as it is said, Give me children, or else I die.³²

Our Rabbis taught: In the verse, If ye walk in my statutes,³³ the word if is used in the sense of an appeal, similar to the verse, O that my people would hearken unto Me, that Israel would walk in my ways . . . I should soon subdue their enemies;³⁴ or in the verse, O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments: Then had thy peace been as a river, thy seed also had been as the sand, etc.³⁵

Our Rabbis taught: In the verse, O that they had such a heart always.³⁶ Moses said to the Israelites, Ye are an ungrateful people, the offspring of an ungrateful ancestor. When the Holy One, blessed be He, said to you³⁷. Who might grant that they had such a heart always³⁸, you should have said: 'Thou grant!' [They proved themselves] ungrateful by saying. this light bread;¹ ‘the offspring of an ungrateful ancestor’, for it is written, The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the Tree, and I did eat.² Yet Moses indicated this to the Israelites only after forty years had passed, as it is said, And I have led you forty years in the wilderness . . . but the Lord hath not given you a heart to know, and eyes to see and ears to hear, unto this day.³ Said Raba:⁴ From this you can learn that it may take one forty years to know the mind of one's master.

R. Johanan said on behalf of R. Bana'ah: What is the meaning of the verse, Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters, that send forth the feet of the ox and the ass?⁵ [It means this: [Blessed is Israel; when they occupy themselves with Torah and acts of kindness their inclination is mastered by them, not they by their inclination,⁶ as it is said, Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters. For what is meant by ‘sowing’ but doing kind deeds, as it is said,⁷ Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap according to mercy; and what is meant by ‘water’ is Torah, as it is said, Oh ye who are thirsty come to the water.⁸ [The phrase,] that send forth the feet of the ox and the ass, [was explained in the] Tanna debe Eliyyahu⁹ thus: In order to study the words of the Torah one must cultivate in oneself the [habit of] the ox for bearing a yoke and of the ass for carrying burdens.

ON THE THREE DAYS PRECEDING THEIR FESTIVALS IT IS FORBIDDEN TO DO ANY BUSINESS TRANSACTION WITH THEM.

Is all this period necessary? Have we not learnt:¹⁰ ‘At four periods of the year it is necessary for one, when selling cattle to another for slaughter, to let him know if its dam had been sold or if its young had been sold to be slain [the same day]:¹¹ namely, the eve of the last day of the Feast [of Tabernacles].¹² the eve of the first day of Passover, the eve of Pentecost, and the Eve of the New Year,¹³ and, according to R. Jose the Galilean, also on the day preceding the Eve of the Day of Atonement, in Galilee’?¹⁴ — In those cases where the animals are bought for consumption, one day is enough, but in the case where these are required for sacrifices, three days are needed.¹⁵ But are three days enough in the case of sacrifices? Have we not learnt’;¹⁶ ‘The laws relating to Passover should be discussed for thirty days before the Passover; R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says two weeks’? — We, with whom blemishes [disqualifying a sacrifice] abound, since we disqualify an offering even because of a blemish in the eye-lid, require thirty days; but for the heathen, who only take note of a missing limb, three days suffice. And so also R. Eleazar said: How do we know that [an animal] short of a limb is forbidden to Noachides [for use as a sacrifice]? — Because it is written, Of every living thing of all flesh two of every sort shall thou bring into the ark.¹⁷ The Torah thus says. ‘Bring such cattle whose principal limbs are living [i.e. sound]’. But is not this phrase needed to exclude such animals as are trefa,¹⁸ so that they were not [brought into the ark]? — Trefa is excluded by the phrase, to keep seed alive.¹⁹ This answer holds good according to the one who is of the opinion that an animal which is trefa cannot bear any young;²⁰

 - (14) From the mention made in Lev. XXIII, 32 of the ninth day of the month Tishri, it is deduced that the partaking of meals on that day, the eve of the Day of Atonement, is as much a religious observance as the fasting on the Day of Atonement, hence the meals on that day were specially lavish. Thus, the assumption is that the animals needed for the festival are slain only on the preceding day: why then extend the prohibition to three days?

but according to the one who holds that a trefa animal can bear, what answer would you give? — [This:] The words spoken [to Noah] are, Thou shalt bring with thee, which implies such as are like thyself. But how can we tell that Noah himself was not mortally affected? — Because he is described as perfect.¹ Does this not rather mean that he was perfect in his manners? — That is implied by his being described as righteous.² But does not this phrase rather mean 'perfect' in his manners and 'righteous' in his deeds? — It cannot enter your mind [in any case] that Noah himself was mortally affected; for were he so affected, would the Divine Law³ have bidden him take in animals similarly affected, and keep out whole ones? Well, now that we deduce this⁴ from the phrase with thee, wherefore do we need the phrase to keep seed alive? — 'With thee' might mean such as could just keep him company, even if they be old or castrate, therefore the Divine Law had to indicate 'to keep seed alive.'

The question was asked: Does THREE DAYS mean inclusive of the FESTIVALS or apart from the FESTIVALS? Come and hear: R. Ishmael says: On the three preceding and the three following [days] it is forbidden.⁵ Now if it should enter your mind that the numbers given are inclusive of the Festival itself, R. Ishmael must be taken to include the day of the Festival both in the preceding and following days!⁶ — [Not at all!] It is only because he uses the words ‘three preceding’ that he also speaks of the ‘three following’.⁷

Come then and hear the comment of R. Tahlifa b. Abdimi in the name of Samuel: According to R. Ishmael, it should always be forbidden [to transact business with idolaters because of] Sunday!⁸ Now, were we to take it that the festival is to be included, there would still remain Wednesday and Thursday on which dealing would be permitted! — According to R. Ishmael, there is no question but that the period does not include the festivals themselves. It is only according to the Rabbis’ opinion⁹ that I ask what [is the law],

Said Rabina: Come and hear [the following Mishnah]: These are the festivals of idolaters, Kalenda, Saturnalia and Kratesis,¹⁰ now R. Hanin b. Raba explained that Kalenda [lasts for] eight days after the [Winter] Equinox, and Saturnalia [is kept on the] eight days preceding the Equinox; as a mnemonic take the verse, Thou hast beset me behind and before. Now, were you inclined to think that the periods are inclusive of the Festivals, then there are [at times] ten days.¹¹ The Tanna may regard the whole Kalenda as one day.

Said R. Ashi: Come and hear: [Our Mishnah says] ON THE THREE DAYS PRECEDING THE FESTIVITIES OF THE IDOLATERS. Now were it to mean that the period is to include the festival itself, it might have said, ‘At the Festivals of the idolaters for three days;’¹² or, even if you contend that the words PRECEDING THE FESTIVAL are necessary to avoid [their being applied to] those after the festival, it might still have said, ‘At the festivals of the idolaters for three days preceding them’;¹³ but [from the words actually used]¹⁴ you can only deduce that the period is exclusive of the festival. This is conclusive.

The question was asked: Is it [forbidden] because of the profit, or perhaps because Thou shalt not put a stumbling block before the blind?¹⁵ The difference would affect a case where an idolater has an animal of his own. If you say [one must not sell him one] because of profit, here, too, the profit is derived; if however you say it is because of placing a stumbling block before the blind, here, then, he has [a sacrifice] of his own.¹⁶

And if he has one of his own does the placing of a stumbling block before the blind not apply? Have we not learnt¹⁷ that R. Nathan said:

(5) Infra 7b.

(6) In which case the days following would have been given as two, and not three.

(7) Although apart from the Festival they are, indeed, only two.

(8) Infra 7b. Each Sunday, which is a festive day, with the three preceding and three following days would rule out the whole week. The passage in editions is obscure, owing to censorial tampering. The interpretation here given is borne out by Rashi. One might suggest the reading rxut okugk t ouh instead of rxut 'Sunday would render it permanently forbidden'.

(9) Who forbid only the preceding, but not the following days.

(10) V. infra p. 36, note 9.

(11) That is the eight Kalenda together with the two preceding days instead of the three days mentioned in the Mishnah.

(12) But not PRECEDING THE FESTIVAL.

(13) Implying that the prohibition refers also to the festivals themselves.

(14) Which say distinctly, THREE DAYS PRECEDING THE FESTIVALS — a phrase which places the festive days themselves outside the terms of reference of the Mishnah, as too obvious to be stated.

(15) Lev. XIX, 14. Is the reason for forbidding business transactions with idolaters near their festivals because any profit they may derive might be made a cause for thanksgiving to the idols, to which an Israelite should not be party, or because of the means or the opportunity that might be thus afforded to the idolater of acquiring and offering an animal for sacrifice to the idols, of the prohibition of which he may be ignorant, the Israelite thus causing him to 'stumble'?

(16) The prohibition therefore should not apply.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 6b

How do we know that one should not hold out a cup of wine to a Nazirite¹ or a limb from a living animal to a Noachide?² From Scripture, which says, Thou shalt not put a stumbling block before the blind.³ Now here, too, were it not held out to him he could take it himself, yet the one [who hands it] is guilty of placing a stumbling block before the blind!⁴ Here we may be dealing with a case of two persons on opposite sides of a river.⁵ You can prove it, indeed, by the use of the words 'one should not hold out': it does not say, 'one should not hand'. This proves it.

The question was asked: What if one did transact business?⁶ — R. Johanan says: [The proceeds of] the transaction are forbidden. R. Simeon b. Lakish says [the proceeds of] the transaction are permitted. R. Johanan cited [the following as] an argument against Resh Lakish: As to the festivals of idolaters, if one transacts any business [the proceeds] are forbidden. Does not this refer to [the period] preceding the festivals? — No, [it refers to] the festival exclusively.

Some report it was R. Simeon b. Lakish who cited [this passage] as an argument against R. Johanan: 'As to the festivals of idolaters, if one transacts any business [the proceeds] are forbidden'. During their festivals only it is forbidden, but before their festival it is not?⁷ — No, by 'their festivals' the Tanna means the one as well as the other.

There is a Baraitha⁸ which is in accordance with the view of Resh Lakish: The prohibition of transacting business with them [before their festivals] only applies to unperishable articles⁹ but not to perishable articles; and even in the case of unperishable articles, if the transaction is made, [the proceeds] are permitted. R. Zebid learned out of the Baraitha of R. Oshaia:¹⁰ An article that is perishable may be sold to them, but may not be bought from them.¹¹

A certain Min once sent on his festival day a Caesarean denar¹² to R. Judah Nesi'a¹³, while Resh Lakish happened to sit before him. Said he, 'What shall I do? if I accept it, he will go and praise [the idols for it]; if I do not accept it, he will be displeased.' 'Take it,' answered Resh Lakish, 'and drop it into a well in the messenger's presence.' 'But this will displease him all the more!' 'I mean you should do it by sleight of hand.'

TO LEND ARTICLES TO THEM OR BORROW ANY FROM THEM. It is quite right to forbid lending to them, which benefits them; but surely borrowing from them can only mean deprivation to them! — Said Abaye: We forbid the borrowing from them as a safeguard against lending to them. But Raba said: It is all on account of their going to offer thanks.¹⁴

TO LEND THEM MONEY OR BORROW ANY FROM THEM.

It is quite right to forbid lending them money, which profits them, but why not borrow any from them? Abaye said: The borrowing is forbidden as a safeguard against lending. Raba, however, said: Both are [forbidden] because of their going to offer thanks.

TO REPAY A DEBT, OR RECEIVE REPAYMENT FROM THEM.

The [forbidding of] repayment is quite right, since it benefits them, but to recover from them, surely, means to deprive them! — Said Abaye: The recovery is forbidden as a safeguard against repayment. Raba said: It is all because of their going to offer thanks.

And all [the instances given in our Mishnah] are necessary; for if it only mentioned transacting business with them, I might have said [it is forbidden] because it profits them and they will go and offer thanksgiving for it, but to borrow from them, which means a deprivation to them, would be quite in order. If [on the other hand] it only mentioned borrowing articles from them, I might have thought it is because the importance that the idolater attaches¹⁵ to it [would induce him to] go and offer thanksgiving for it, but to borrow money from him might only cause him anxiety, as he might think, 'My money may not be returned again.' Were the case of lending money only mentioned, [it might be thought this is] because he might say, 'I can enforce payment,' and he would have good cause for thanksgiving, but to recover from them money which will never return to the lender we might regard as troublesome, so that he would not offer thanks for it — hence all the instances are necessary.

R. JUDAH SAYS: WE SHOULD RECEIVE REPAYMENT FROM THEM, [AS THIS CAN ONLY DEPRESS THEM; BUT THE RABBIS SAID TO HIM: EVEN THOUGH IT IS DEPRESSING AT THE TIME, THEY ARE GLAD OF IT SUBSEQUENTLY].

Does R. Judah, then, disregard the idea that though it is depressing at the time it is pleasing subsequently? Is it not taught: R. Judah says, A woman must not smear lime on her face on Mo'ed¹⁶ because it disfigures her; R. Judah, however, admits that if the lime can still be scraped off during Mo'ed, it may be applied on Mo'ed for though she is troubled by it for the while, it will eventually please her!¹⁷ — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Leave alone the laws relating to [work permitted on] Mo'ed: they are all of the trouble now, pleasure later' kind.¹⁸ Rabina said: To an idolater, the matter of repayment is always irksome.

Our Mishnah is not in accord with [the opinion of] R. Joshua b. Karha. For it is taught: R. Joshua b. Karha says, A loan made against a document, should not be recovered from them,¹⁹ but a loan made against the word of mouth may be recovered from them, since it is, as it were, rescued from their hands.²⁰

R. Joseph was sitting behind R. Abba while R. Abba was sitting facing R. Huna who, as he was sitting [and lecturing], stated: [In one instance] the halachah²¹ is to be decided according to R. Joshua b. Karha and [in another] the halachah is according to R. Judah. The law [decided] according to R. Joshua is the one about which we have just spoken; that according to R. Judah refers to what we learnt:²² If one gives wool to a dyer to be dyed red and he dyed it black, or to be dyed black and he dyed it red,

(1) Who is forbidden to partake of any strong drink, Num. VI, 1 seq.

(2) Supra p. 5, note 7.

(3) Lev. XIX, 14.

(4) The selling of an animal to an idolater is surely analogous to this and should therefore be forbidden.

(5) So that the one could not have attained the prohibited article without the agency of the other.

(6) With an idolater before his festival; may he derive any benefit from the proceeds?

(7) Hence this teaching is contrary to R. Johanan's ruling.

(8) Tosef. A.Z.I.

(9) Such as will remain in good condition till the festival.

(10) R. Oshaia, and R. Hiyya, both disciples of R. Judah the prince, compiled a collection of Baraitas; v. infra, p. 284, n. 6.

(11) As the disposal of such an article is gratifying to the idolater.

(12) [(i) Coined in commemoration of the coronation; or (ii) coined at Caesarea in Cappadocia, the only Greek colony that enjoyed the right of coinage in gold under the Romans; v. Zuckermann, Ueber Talm. Gewicht, u. Mun, p. 28.]

(13) Judah II, lived in Tiberias in the middle of the third century.

(14) The lender's dependence on him is also a matter of gratification.

(15) The knowledge that the Israelite is in need of his articles, coupled with the certainty of having them safely returned, would give him great satisfaction.

(16) Full term, Hol Hammo'ed sgun ka ukuj — lit., 'the weekdays of the Festival' — the intermediate days of Passover and the Feast of Tabernacles, when many kinds of work, including those necessary for personal appearance, forbidden on Festivals, are permitted. The lime which remained smeared on the face for some days showed its beautifying effect on its removal.

(17) M.K., 8b. Thus R. Judah expresses the very opinion which he seems to oppose in our Mishnah.

(18) Such as the slaying of animals for consumption, the preparation of food-articles and the like.

(19) From idolaters before their festivals, as the redemption of the bond is a matter of gratification.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 7a

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 7a

R. Meir says: The dyer should refund to the owner the value of his wool.¹ R. Judah says: If the increase in value [through the dyeing] exceeds the outlay thereon, the owner may refund the outlay, or if the outlay exceeds the increased value, he may offer him the increase in value.² Thereupon R. Joseph turned his face away [and remarked]: It was right and necessary [to state] that the halachah is according to R. Joshua b. Karha.³ We might indeed have applied the principle:⁴ '[Where the opinions of] an individual and of a majority [conflict] the halachah is according to the majority', so we are given to understand that here the halachah is according to the individual. But wherefore state that the law is according to R. Judah? It is a commonplace that where differing opinions [are quoted, and one of these is] subsequently quoted anonymously, the law is decided according to the anonymous opinion.⁵ Now, these differing opinions are quoted in Baba Kamma, and there is the subsequent anonymous opinion in Baba Mezi'a,⁶ where we learn that the party which changes [an agreement] has the lesser right, likewise whichever party alters his mind has the lesser right!⁷

And as to R. Huna?⁸ — [His statement is necessary] because the Mishnah has not [retained its original] order,⁹ so that it might be said that the anonymous statement was quoted earlier and the differing opinions later. But if that were so, you can apply to every case of differing opinions followed by an anonymous one the argument that the Mishnah has not retained its original order!¹⁰ R. Huna, however, [could reply thus]: The argument that the Mishnah has not its original order could not be admitted in regard to the same Tractate, but it could be used in regard to two Tractates.¹¹ And as to R. Joseph?¹² — He holds that all [those dealing with] torts¹³ are to be regarded as one tractate; or, if you wish, it could be said, because this rule is included among legal and fixed decisions, thus: 'The party which changes an agreement has the lesser right; and whichever party alters his mind has the lesser right.'¹⁴

Our Rabbis taught:¹⁵ One should not say to another [on the Sabbath], 'We shall see whether you will stay on with me [to do work] this evening.'¹⁶ R. Joshua b. Karha says: One may say to another, 'We shall see whether you will stay on with me this evening.' Said Rabbah b. Bar-Hana in the name of R. Johanan, the halachah is according to R. Joshua b. Karha.

Our Rabbis taught: If one consulted a sage who declared [the person or article] as unclean, he should not consult another sage who might declare it as clean; if one sage declared as forbidden, one should not consult another sage who might declare as permitted. If of two sages present one declares as unclean and the other as clean, one forbids and the other permits, then if one of them is superior to the other in learning and in point of number¹⁷ his opinion should be followed, otherwise, the one holding the stricter view should be followed. R. Joshua b. Karha says: In laws of the Torah¹⁸ follow the stricter view, in those of Soferim¹⁹ follow the more lenient view.²⁰ Said R. Joseph: The halachah is according to R. Joshua b. Karha.

Our Rabbis taught: If they²¹ reverted [to their usual practices] none of them should ever be accepted.²² This is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: If they reverted in secret matters, they should not be accepted,²³ but if in things done in public they should be accepted.²⁴ Some say that, if they observed [in their penitent state] even secret things, they should be accepted,

- (1) In the undyed state, and he has the right to retain the dyed wool, however much its value may have increased.
- (2) And claim the wool; since, in the case of the dyed wool being worth more than undyed wool plus the cost of dyeing, the dyer will benefit by miscarrying the order.
- (3) That a loan made on a verbal understanding may be recovered from idolaters, contrary to the opinion of the Rabbis of our Mishnah.
- (4) Ber. 9a.
- (5) Yeb. 42b.
- (6) 15a.
- (7) And since here the dyer, by miscarrying the order, changed the agreement, it might be taken for granted that he would be placed at a disadvantage in accordance with the ruling of R. Judah.
- (8) What was the object of his assertion?
- (9) In which it was originally propounded.
- (10) And since this principle is generally accepted (v. Yeb 42) R. Huna's explanation is inadmissible.
- (11) And in this case the differing opinions and the anonymous one are each in a separate Tractate; R. Huna's statement was therefore necessary.
- (12) Why did he then disapprove of R. Huna's statement?
- (13) Baba Kamma, Baba Mezi'a, and Baba Bathra.
- (14) It was therefore too obvious to be stated that the decision is according to R. Judah.
- (15) Shab. 150a.
- (16) Since he engages him, even though by mere insinuation, on the Sabbath to do work.
- (17) I.e., of disciples or followers.
- (18) Laws explicitly stated in Scripture.
- (19) Laws enacted by the Scribes (sofer-scribe) from the time of Ezra onward.
- (20) V. Tosef. 'Eduy. I.
- (21) I.e., 'amme ha-arez — people who are ignorant and careless about religious observances, particularly those relating to the tithe which they would generally withhold from the Levite — their utensils and food articles were consequently held by the Haber (v. note 7) in Levitical uncleanness. This made them unacceptable to the Haber's society. And the discussion that follows is whether they could be accepted again.
- (22) Regarded as Haberim (plural of Haber), those particular about religious observances and the giving of the tithe. On Haber v. Weinberg and Krauss, Jeshurun 1929, 1930.
- (23) They prove themselves hypocrites and are not to be trusted.
- (24) Their frankness may be taken to show that they give an undertaking to act rightly and will stand by it.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 7b

but if only things done in public they should not be accepted. R. Simeon and R. Joshua b. Karha say: Whether in the one case or in the other they should be accepted, for it is said, Return, O backsliding children.¹ Said R. Isaac, the native of Kefar Acco, in the name of R. Johanan: The halachah is according to the latter pair.

MISHNAH. R. ISHMAEL SAYS ON THE THREE PRECEDING DAYS AND THE THREE FOLLOWING DAYS IT IS FORBIDDEN;² BUT THE SAGES SAY BEFORE THEIR FESTIVITIES IT IS FORBIDDEN, BUT AFTER THEIR FESTIVITIES IT IS PERMITTED.

GEMARA. Said R. Tahlifa b. Abdimi in the name of Samuel: According to R. Ishmael it should always be forbidden [to transact business with idolaters because of] Sunday.³

BUT THE SAGES SAY, BEFORE THEIR FESTIVITIES IT IS FORBIDDEN, BUT AFTER THEIR FESTIVITIES IT IS PERMITTED. Is not [the opinion of] the Sages identical with that of the first Tanna?⁴ — The exclusion of the festivals themselves is the point on which they differ. The first Tanna holds that the period is exclusive of the festival, but these latter Rabbis hold that it includes the festivals. Or it might probably be said that they differ on the question of business transactions carried out,⁵ the first Tanna holding that [the proceeds of] such transactions are permissible, while our latter Rabbis hold that [the proceeds of] these transactions are forbidden. It might also be said that this ruling of Samuel is a matter on which they differ. For Samuel said:⁶ In the Diaspora⁷ the prohibition is limited to their festival day only. The first Tanna accepts Samuel's ruling, while our last Rabbis do not hold with Samuel. You may further say that they differ in the ruling of Nahum the Mede. For it is taught:⁸ Nahum the Mede says, The prohibition applies to only one day before their Festivals. The first Tanna does not accept the ruling of Nahum the Mede, and our latter Rabbis do agree with Nahum the Mede's ruling.

To revert to [the above text]: 'Nahum the Mede says: The prohibition applies to only one day before their festivals.' Thereupon they said to him: 'This matter ought to be suppressed and left unsaid.'⁹ But are there not our latter Rabbis who hold the same opinion?¹⁰ — Our latter Rabbis may be none other than Nahum the Mede.¹¹

Another [Baraita] taught: Nahum the Mede says, One may sell [to idolaters] a male or old horse in war time.¹² Whereupon they said to him: This matter ought to be suppressed and left unsaid. But is there not Ben Bathyra who holds the same opinion; for we learnt: Ben Bathyra permits [the sale of] a horse?¹³ — Ben Bathyra makes no distinction between the sale of horses and mares, whereas Nahum the Mede, who does make that distinction will share the opinion of the Rabbis;¹⁴ but according to the Rabbis: This matter ought to be suppressed and left unsaid.¹⁵

It is [further] taught: Nahum the Mede says: The dill plant is subject to tithe whether [in its state of] seeds, or vegetables, or pods.¹⁶ Whereupon he was told: This matter ought to be suppressed and left unsaid. But is there not R. Eliezer who holds the same opinion; for we learnt: R. Eliezer said: The dill plant is subject to tithe whether in its state of seeds, or vegetable, or pods?¹⁷ — There the garden variety is meant.¹⁸

Said R. Aha b. Minyomi to Abaye: A great man has come from our place,¹⁹ but whatever he says he is told that it ought to be suppressed and left unsaid. He replied: There is one instance in which we do follow his ruling. It is taught: Nahum the Mede says: One may ask for one's own needs in the course of the Benediction [concluding with] 'Who heareth prayer.'²⁰ — As to this ruling, he said, an exception had to be made, for it is hanging on strong ropes!²¹ It is taught: R. Eliezer says: One should first pray for his own needs and then recite The Prayer.²² as it is said; A prayer for the afflicted [himself] when he is overwhelmed, and [then] poureth forth his meditation before the Lord;²³ and by 'meditation,' only prayer is meant, as it is said, And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide.²⁴ But R. Joshua says: One should first recite The Prayer and then ask for his own needs, as it is said, I pour out my meditation²⁵ before Him [then] I declare my [own] affliction before Him.²⁶ Now, as to R. Eliezer, what of the verse, I pour out my meditation etc.? — He interprets it thus, ‘I pour out my meditation before Him when I had already declared my [own] affliction.’ And as to R. Joshua [how does he explain] the verse, A prayer for the afflicted when he is overwhelmed etc.? — He explains it thus: When is the [personal] ‘prayer for the afflicted’ offered? When he had poured forth his meditation before the Lord. Well now, as for these scriptural verses, they prove no more the statement of the one than they prove that of the other; is there any [principle] underlying their dispute? — It is the one explained by R. Simlai; for R. Simlai gave the following exposition:²⁷ One should always recount the praises of the Omnipresent and then offer his supplications.²⁸ Whence do we learn it? From [the prayer of] our Teacher Moses which is recorded thus: O Lord God, Thou hast begun to show Thy servant Thy greatness etc., and then only, Let me go over, I pray Thee, and see the good land.²⁹

Now R. Joshua holds that we are guided by [the example of] Moses,¹ while R. Eliezer says we should not follow the example of Moses; it is different with Moses whose greatness is so outstanding.² The Sages, however, say [the decision is] neither according to the one nor according to the other, but that one should pray for his personal needs at the Benediction [concluding with], 'Who heareth prayer'. Rab Judah in the name of Samuel declared that the halachah is that one should pray for his personal needs only at the Benediction [ending with], 'Who heareth prayer'.

Said Rab Judah the son of Samuel b. Shilath in the name of Rab: Even though it was said that one should pray for his private needs only at 'Who heareth prayer,' nevertheless, if he is disposed to supplement any of the Benedictions [by personal supplications] relevant to the subject of each particular Benediction, he may do so. [So also] said R. Hiyya b. Ashi in the name of Rab:³ Even though it has been said that one should pray for his own needs only at 'Who hearest prayer', still if [for example] one has a sick person at home, he may offer [an extempore] prayer at the Benediction for the Sick;⁴ or if he is in want of sustenance, he may offer a [special] prayer in connection with the Benediction for [Prosperous] Years.⁴ R. Joshua b. Levi said: Though it has been decided that private prayers for personal needs only may be inserted in the Benediction 'Who heareth prayer'⁵, yet if one is disposed to offer supplication after The Prayer to the extent of the Day of Atonement Service.⁶ he may do so.⁷

MISHNAH. THESE ARE THE FESTIVITIES OF THE IDOLATERS:⁸ KALENDA,⁹ SATURNALIA,¹⁰ KRATESIS,¹¹ THE ANNIVERSARY OF ACCESSION TO THE THRONE AS WELL AS [ROYAL] BIRTHDAYS AND ANNIVERSARIES OF DEATHS. THIS IS R. MEIR'S OPINION. BUT THE SAGES SAY, A DEATH AT WHICH BURNING [OF ARTICLES OF THE DEAD] TAKES PLACE IS ATTENDED BY IDOLATRY, BUT WHERE THERE IS NOT SUCH BURNING THERE IS NO IDOLATRY. HOWEVER, THE DAY OF SHAVING ONES BEARD OR LOCK OF HAIR,¹² OR THE DAY OF LANDING AFTER A SEA VOYAGE, OR THE DAY OF RELEASE FROM PRISON, OR IF AN IDOLATER HOLDS A BANQUET FOR HIS SON — THE PROHIBITION ONLY APPLIES TO THAT DAY AND THAT PARTICULAR PERSON.

GEMARA. Said R. Hanan b. Raba: KALENDA is kept on the eight days following the [winter] equinox. SATURNALIA on the eight days preceding the equinox. As a mnemonic take the verse, Thou hast beset me behind and before.¹³

Our Rabbis taught.¹⁴ When primitive Adam saw the day getting gradually shorter, he said, 'Woe is me, perhaps because I have sinned, the world around me is being darkened and returning to its state of chaos and confusion; this then is the kind of death to which I have been sentenced from Heaven!' So he began keeping an eight days' fast. But as he observed the winter equinox and noted the day getting increasingly longer, he said, 'This is the world's course', and he set forth to keep an eight days' festivity. In the following year he appointed both¹⁵ as festivals. Now, he fixed them for the sake of Heaven, but the [heathens] appointed them for the sake of idolatry.

This is quite right according to the one who holds that the world was created in Tishri,¹⁶ so that he saw the short days before seeing the longer days; but according to the one holding that the world was created in Nisan, Adam must have seen the long days as well as the short ones!¹⁷ — Still, he had not yet seen the very short days. Our Rabbis taught: When Adam, on the day of his creation, saw the setting of the sun he said! 'Alas, it is because I have sinned that the world around me is becoming dark; the universe will now become again void and without form — this then is the death to which I have been sentenced from Heaven!' So he sat up all night fasting and weeping and Eve was weeping opposite him. When however dawn broke, he said: 'This is the usual course of the world!' He then arose and offered up a bullock whose horns were developed before its hoofs, as it is said [by the Psalmist], And it [my thanksgiving] shall please the Lord better than a bullock that hath horns and hoofs.¹⁸ Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The bullock which Adam offered had only one horn in its forehead, as the verse says, And it shall please the Lord better than a bullock that is horned and hoofed. But does not 'horned' imply two horns? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: 'Horned' is here spelt [defectively].¹⁹

R. Mattena asked: When Rome appoints a Kalend and there are towns in its vicinity subjected to her, is it forbidden or permitted [to transact business etc.] in those towns?²⁰ R. Joshua b. Levi said: On the Kalends the prohibition applies to all. R. Johanan said: The prohibition applies only to [the Romans] who celebrate it. A Baraita is taught which accords with the view of R. Johanan: Even though it was said that when Rome institutes Kalends they extend to all the towns in its vicinity which are subjected to it, yet the actual prohibition is only in regard to those who celebrate it. As to Saturnalia, Kratesis, Royal Celebrations, or the day on which a king is proclaimed, the prohibition applies to the period preceding them, but thereafter it is permitted. If an idolater gives a banquet for his son the prohibition is limited to that day and that man.

Said R. Ashi: We ourselves have learnt likewise. For our Mishnah states²¹ [AS TO] THE DAY OF SHAVING ONE'S BEARD OR LOCK OF HAIR, OR THE DAY OF LANDING AFTER A SEA VOYAGE, OR THE DAY OF RELEASE FROM PRISON — THE PROHIBITION ONLY APPLIES TO THAT DAY AND THAT PARTICULAR PERSON. Now, it rightly says. THAT DAY, thereby excluding the preceding and following [days], but what is THAT MAN meant to exclude, unless it excludes those subjected to him? From here then you deduce it!

It has been taught: R. Ishmael says,²² Israelites who reside outside Palestine serve idols though in pure innocence. If, for example, an idolater gives a banquet for his son and invites all the Jews in his town, then, even though they eat of their own and drink of their own and their own attendant waits on them, Scripture regards them as if they had eaten of the sacrifices to dead idols, as it is said, And he will call thee and thou wilt eat of his sacrifice.²³ But does not this apply to actual eating? — Said Raba: If that were so, the verse would have only said, And thou shalt eat of his sacrifice; why then say, And he will call thee? That extends the prohibition to the time of the participation. Hence

during the entire thirty days [following a marriage celebration] whether it is or it is not mentioned that the banquet is connected with the wedding, [participation in it] is forbidden; from that time onward, however, if it is stated that it is connected with the wedding, it is forbidden, but if its connection with the wedding is not mentioned, it is permitted. And how long [is it forbidden] if it is connected with the wedding? — Said R. Papa: For a twelvemonth thereafter. And how long is it forbidden beforehand? — Said R. Papa in the name of Raba: From the time when the barley is placed in the tub.¹ Is it, then, permitted [to partake of food in the house] after the twelvemonth? Yet R. Isaac the son of R. Mesharsheya, who happened to be in the house of a certain idolater more than a year after a marriage, when he heard that they were feasting [because of that event] abstained from eating there! It is different with R. Isaac the son of R. Mesharsheya who was a highly esteemed man.²

KRATESIS etc. What does KRATESIS mean? Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: [the anniversary of] the day on which Rome extended her dominion.³ But have we not learnt Kratesis and the day on which Rome extended her dominion? — Said R. Joseph: Rome extended her dominion twice; once in the days of Cleopatra⁴ the queen [of Egypt] and [once before] in the days of the Greeks. For when R. Dimi came⁵ he said: Thirty-two battles did the Romans fight against the Greeks and could not prevail against them until the Romans made an alliance with the Israelites. And these were the conditions made with them: If the kings are [chosen] from among us, the princes should be chosen from your midst, and if the kings are chosen from among you, the princes shall come from our midst. Then the Romans sent word to the Greeks as follows: Hitherto we have been fighting matters out, now let us argue them out: Of a pearl and a precious stone which shall form a setting for which?⁶ They sent the reply: 'The pearl for the precious stone.' And of a precious stone and an onyx which shall form a setting to the other? 'The precious stone to the onyx.' was the reply. And of an onyx and the Book of the Law which shall serve as the setting for the other? 'The onyx for the Book of the Law,' they replied. The Romans then sent word: In that case, the Book of the Law is in our possession, for Israel is with us. Thereupon the Greeks gave in.

For twenty-six years did the Romans keep faith with Israel, thereafter they subdued them.

What scriptural support did they have for their former attitude and what for the latter? To the former may be applied the words: Let us take our journey and let us go.⁷ And to the latter may be applied the words: Let my lord now pass before his servant.⁸

Whence can it be proved that Rome kept faith with Israel for twenty six years? [From the following:]⁹ For R. Kahana said: When R. Ishmael b. Jose was ill they sent word to him: Rabbi, tell us the two or three things which thou hadst told us in thy father's name. He then told them: One hundred and eighty years before the Temple was destroyed did Rome cast her rule over Israel; eighty years before the destruction of the Temple it was decreed that neighbouring countries of Palestine¹⁰ were to be regarded as ritually unclean,¹¹ and likewise all glass vessels.¹² Forty years before the Temple was destroyed did the Sanhedrin abandon [the Temple] and held its sittings in Hanuth.¹³ Has this any legal bearing? — Said R. Isaac b. Abdimi: It indicates that [from that time onward] they did not deal with cases of fines.¹⁴ 'Cases of fines'! How can that enter your mind? Has not Rab Judah said [the following] in the name of Rab: Verily that man, R. Judah b. Baba by name, be remembered for good, for were it not for him the laws of fine would have been forgotten in Israel? 'Forgotten'! Surely, they could be studied? — Nay, they would have been abolished;¹⁵ for the wicked Government of Rome¹⁶ issued a decree that he who ordains a Rabbi shall be slain, likewise he who is ordained shall be put to death, the town in which an ordination takes place shall be destroyed and the tehum¹⁷ in which the ordination is held shall be laid waste. What did R. Judah b. Baba do? He went and sat down between two mountains and between two large towns between two tehums,¹⁸ namely, between Usha and Shefar'am¹⁹ and there he ordained five elders: R. Meir, R. Judah [b. Il'ai]. R. Jose, R. Simeon and R. Eleazar b. Shammua (R. Awia adds also R. Nehemiah). On seeing that they were detected by the enemies, he said to them, 'Flee, my children!' but they said to him, 'And you, O Rabbi, what about you?' 'I,' he replied. 'will lie still before them, even as a stone that is not turned.' It was stated that the Romans did not move from there until they drove three hundred iron spears into his body and made his corpse like a sieve!²⁰ — But said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Say not that 'cases of fines' ceased, but that capital cases ceased. Why? — Because when the Sanhedrin saw that murderers were so prevalent that they could not be properly dealt with judicially, they said: Rather let us be exiled from place to place than pronounce them guilty [of capital offences] for it is written²¹ And thou shalt do according to the sentence, which they of that place which the Lord shall choose shall tell thee, which implies that it is the place that matters.²²

- (1) Some time prior to a wedding, barley was customarily sown in tubs to sprout forth in time for the wedding, when they were placed before the bridal pair to symbolise fertility (Rashi).
 - (2) And importance would have been attached to his partaking of the celebration even at a later period.

 - (9) Shab. 15a.
 - (10) Syria and Asia Minor.
 - (11) One who went outside Palestine was regarded as defiled and on returning had to undergo the usual process of purification. According to Graetz this measure was intended to stem the migration of the people, and in particular of the priests, from the Holy Land.
 - (12) [Glass vessels imported from those countries were regarded as unclean; probably to protect the glass industry in Palestine. V. L. Ginzberg's lecture on The Place of the Halachah, etc., p. 6. Hebrew University. Jerusalem, 1931.]
 - (13) [A place on the Temple mount, v. Sanh. (Sonc, ed.) p. 267, n. 4.]
 - (14) These could only be dealt with by Rabbis ordained in Palestine by the laying on of hands vflinx (v. Sanh. 13b-14a). This mode of ordination, first mentioned in connection with the appointment by Moses of Joshua as his successor (Num. XXVII, 20), was continued, according to tradition, unbroken throughout the succeeding generations; it ceased about the 4th century when the academies of Palestine declined. An attempt by Jacob Berab to re-introduce the Semichah in Palestine, in 1538, ended in failure.

 - (17) ouj , , fuller term , ca ouj , a Sabbath limit is an area of 2000 cubits (about 1516 metres) round an inhabited place, forming the limit within which it is permitted to walk on Sabbath (v. Er. 42a).

(18) I.e., in an area adjacent to neither of the two towns, in the meaning of the decree.

(19) Towns in Galilee near Tiberias.

(20) These Rabbis were thus qualified to deal with the imposition of fines some 100 years after the Destruction; how then can R. Isaac b. Abdimi say that cases of fines ceased to be dealt with 40 years before the Destruction?

(21) Deut. XVII, 10.

(22) Capital cases were only dealt with by any court of 23 while the Sanhedrin sat in the Hewn-Stone Chamber of the Temple: the abandoning of their seat therefore meant the cessation of judging capital cases. V. Sanh. (Sonc, ed.) p. 267, n. 7.

taught: Persian rule lasted thirty-four years after the building of the Temple, Greece ruled one hundred eighty years during the existence of the Temple, the Hasmonean rule lasted one hundred three years during temple times, the House of Herod ruled one hundred three years. Thence onward, one should go on counting the years as from the Destruction of the Temple. Hence we see that it was two hundred six years,¹ yet you say one hundred eighty years! — But for twenty six years the Romans kept faith with Israel² and did not subdue them, and therefore those years are not reckoned in the period during which Rome cast her dominion over Israel.

Said R. Papa, if a³ Tanna is uncertain about the minor figures [of any year] let him ask a notary what year it is according to his reckoning and add twenty thereto; he will then find his solution.⁴ As a mnemonic sign take the verse, Thus I have been twenty years in Thy house.⁵

If on the other hand a notary is uncertain, let him ask a Tanna what the year is according to his reckoning and deduct therefrom twenty years and he will find his solution.⁶ As a mnemonic [memorise] 'The Scribe is sparing the Tanna is redundant.'⁷

The Tanna debe Eliyyahu taught.⁸ The world is to exist six thousand years; the first two thousand years are to be void;⁹ the next two thousand years are the period of the Torah, and the following two thousand years are the period of the Messiah. Through our many sins a number of these have already passed [and the Messiah is not yet].

From when are the two thousand years of the Torah to be reckoned? Shall we say from the Giving of the Torah at Sinai? In that case, you will find that there are not quite two thousand years from then till now [i.e., the year four thousand after the Creation], for if you compute the years [from the Creation to the Giving of the Torah] you will find that they comprise two thousand and a part of the third thousand;¹⁰ the period is therefore to be reckoned from the time when Abraham and Sarah had gotten souls in Haran¹¹ for we have it as a tradition that Abraham was at that time fifty-two years old. Now, to what extent does our Tanna encroach [on the other thousand]? Four hundred and forty-eight years! Calculate it and you will find that from the time when they had gotten souls in Haran till the giving of the Torah there are just four hundred and forty-eight years.¹²

Said R. Papa: If the Tanna¹³ does not know the exact number of years [of the period of the Messiah] that have passed let him ask a notary what year he uses in his writings, and on adding forty-eight to it he will find his solution.¹⁴ As a mnemonic

(1) Before the destruction, i.e., at the end of the Greek dominion, that Rome began, to extend her dominion.

(2) V. p. 40.

(3) So D.S., a.l.

(4) The Eras in use among Jews in Talmudic Times are: (a) ERA OF CONTRACTS , urya ihbn dating from the year 380 before the Destruction of the Second Temple (312-1 B.C.E.) when, at the Battle of Gaza, Seleucus Nicator, one of the followers of Alexander the Great, gained dominion over Palestine. It is also termed Seleucid or Greek Era ohbuh ihbn. Its designation as Alexandrian Era connecting it with Alexander the Great (Maim. Yad, Gerushin 1, 27) is an anachronism, since Alexander died in 323 B.C.E. — eleven years before this Era began (v. E. Mahler, Handbuch der jüdischen Chronologie, p. 145). This Era, which is first mentioned in Mac. I, 10, and was used by notaries or scribes for dating all civil contracts, was generally in vogue in eastern countries till the 16th cent, and was employed even in the 19th cent, among the Jews of Yemen, in South Arabia (Eben Saphir, Lyck, 1866, p. 62b). (b) THE ERA OF THE DESTRUCTION (of the Second Temple) , hcv icrj k the year 1 of which corresponds to 381 of the Seleucid Era, and 69-70 of the Christian Era. This Era was mainly employed by the Rabbis and was in use in Palestine for several centuries, and even in the later Middle Ages documents were dated by it. One of the recently discovered Genizah documents bears the date 13 Tammuz 987 after the Destruction of the Temple — i.e. 917 C.E. — (Op. cit. p. 152, also Marmorstein ZDMG, Vol. VI, p. 640). The difference between the two Eras as far as the tens and units are concerned is thus 20. If therefore a Tanna, say in the year 156 Era of Dest. (225 C.E.), while remembering, naturally, the century, is uncertain about the tens and units, he should ask the notary what year it is according to his — Seleucid — era. He will get the answer 536 (156 + 380), on adding 20 to which he would get 556, the last two figures giving him the year [1] 56 of the Era of Destruction.

(5) Gen. XXXI 41.

(6) If in the same year, (225 C.E.) — 536 Seleucid Era — the Scribe, remembering that he is in the 6th century is uncertain as to the exact number of the year to be used by him, he will ascertain from the Tanna that it is the year 156 E. of D., and on subtracting 20 will get 136, the last two figures of which give him the tens and units of his year [5] 36.

(7) I.e., in regard to the use of vowel letters the Scribe (of Biblical scrolls) frequently employing the scriptio defectiva, where the Tanna uses the scriptio pleno. Thus, the Scribe has to deduct from, the Rabbi to add to, the given number.

(8) V. p. 22, n. 10.

(9) I.e., without possessing the Divine Law.

(10) The exact number is 2,448 years which is arrived at as follows (v. Gen. Chap. V and XI): Age of Adam at birth of Seth 130 years From birth of Seth to birth of Enosh 105 " " " Enosh " " " Kenan . . 90 " " " Kenan " " Mahalalel . 70 " " " Mahalalel " " Jared . . 65 " " " Jared " " " Enoch . . 162 " " " Enoch " " " Methuselah . 65 " " " Methuselah " " " Lamech . 187 " " " Lamech " " " Noah . . 182 " Period from Adam to Noah 1,056 years Age of Noah at birth of Shem (allowing 2 years from birth of Japhet, Noah's eldest son) . . . 502 years From birth of Shem to birth of Arpachshad 100 " " " Arpachshad " " " Shelah . 35 " " " Shelah " " " Eber . . 30 " " " Eber " " " Peleg . . 34 " " " Peleg " " " Re'u . . 30 " " " Re'u " " " Serug . . 32 " " " Serug " " " Nahor . 30 " " " Nahor " " " Terah . . 29 " " " Terah " " " Abraham . 70 " Period from Noah to Abraham 892 " Age of Abraham at birth of Isaac . . . 100 years From birth of Isaac to birth of Jacob . . . 60 " Age of Jacob on arriving in Egypt . . . 130 " Israelites' sojourn in Egypt . . . 210 " Period from birth of Abraham to Exodus from Egypt 500 " Period from Creation to Exodus and Giving of the Law at Sinai 2,448 years

(11) Gen. XII, 5. These words are taken by the Targum and other Rabbinic commentators to refer to the heathen men and women whom Abraham and Sarah respectively gained for the worship of God.

(12) The birth of Abraham was, as given above, in the year of Creation 1948 (1,056 + 892); add thereto the fifty-two years that passed till his proselytising activity and you get exactly 2,000, i.e. 448 years before the Giving of the Torah.

(13) Who said before that a number of these have already passed', etc.

(14) As the notary uses the Seleucid Era, the year 1 of which corresponds to 380 before the Destruction, and as the year 4,000 of Creation corresponds to 172 after the Destruction, the difference between the two eras is 552 (380 + 172), which 48 would bring up to even hundreds.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 9b

take the phrase, Forty-eight cities.¹ If, on the other hand, the notary is uncertain as to his number, let him ask the Tanna how many he counts and deduct therefrom forty-eight and he will find his solution. As a mnemonic, take the phrase, 'The Scribe is sparing, the Tanna is redundant.'²

Said R. Huna the son of R. Joshua: If one does not know what the year is in the Sabbatical cycle of seven years,³ let him add one year [to that in the era of the Destruction] and let him put aside the hundreds as Jubilee Cycles and convert the remainder into Sabbatical Cycles [of seven years each] after adding thereto two years for every complete century; what is left over will give him the number of the given year in the current Sabbatical Cycle. As a mnemonical sign [for adding two years for every century, think of the verse]. For these two years hath the famine been in the land.⁴

Said R. Hanina:⁵ From the year four hundred after the destruction onwards, if one says unto you. 'Buy a field that is worth one thousand denarii for one denar' — do not buy it.⁶ In a Baraita it is taught: From the year four thousand two hundred and thirty-one of the Creation of the World onward, if one says unto you. 'Buy thee a field that is worth a thousand denarii for one denar,' do not buy it. What difference is there between these two [given periods]? — There is a difference of three years between them, the one of the Baraita being three years longer.⁷

There was [produced in court] a document which was dated

(1) Assigned to the Levites. Num. XXXV, 7.

(2) V. supra p. 43, n. 3.

(3) Scripture enjoins that every seventh year is to be kept as a Sabbatical Year, on which there is to be observed: (a) A land release, ugere , yhna the fields being allowed to lie fallow, and the produce of the vineyards and olive-yards left ungathered by the owner for his servants, the poor and the strangers, 'and what they leave the beast of the field shall eat' (Ex. XXV, 8 and Lev. XXV, 1, seq.). (b) Monetary release a ohpxf , yhna according to which all debts incurred were forfeited at the end of the Sabbatical Year (Deut. XV, 1, 2) a procedure which was modified by the institution of the Prosbul by Hillel the Elder. The Bible does not furnish any fixed data as to the year from which the Sabbatical Cycle is to be counted. There is, however, a talmudic tradition (Ta'an. 29a) that the Second Temple, as well as the First, was destroyed on the 9th of Ab in the year immediately following a Sabbatical Year. This means that the Sabbatical Cycle began on the year preceding the year 1 of the Era of Destruction. Some authorities, however, (Maim. Yad, Shemittoth X, 4) take the statement in Ta'an. to mean that the Destruction was on the Sabbatical Year itself, so that the Sabbatical Cycle is to begin with the year 1 of that Era. Another matter of dispute is the fixing of the Jubilee Year, i.e. the year following the completion of seven Sabbatical Cycles, in which all slaves were freed and all real estates reverted to their hereditary owners (Lev. XXV, 10). According to the Rabbis (Ned. 61a and R.H. 8b-9a) the fiftieth year was excluded from the Sabbatical Cycles, so that it formed a 'blank' year after every seven cycles. But according to Rabbi Judah it formed both the Jubilee Year and the first of the next Sabbatical Cycle, so that these cycles followed on in uninterrupted succession. (It must be pointed out that the Jewish Encyclopedia in the article 'Sabbatical Year and Jubilee', Vol. X, p. 606, not only designates Rabbi Judah b. Il'ai wrongly as Rabbi Judah Hanasi, but his statement, too, is misrepresented to mean that the Jubilee Year is to be regarded as 'identical with the seventh Sabbatical Year'.) The rule given by R. Huna for computing the year of the Sabbatical Cycle is based on the opinion that (a) the Sabbatical Cycle began with the year preceding that of the Destruction, and (b) that, in accordance with R. Judah's view, the Jubilee Year did not interrupt the succession of Sabbatical Cycles. Applied to the present year, 1934 C.E. — 1865 E. of D. — this process would work out as follows: — $1865 + 1 = 1866$. Leaving aside hundreds take 66 and add thereto 2 for every 100: $66 + (18 \times 2) = 102$. Divide total by 7: $102 / 7 = 14$ (remainder 4). Thus the year 1934 is the 4th of the Sabbatical Cycle.

(4) Gen. XLV, 6.

(5) In the first generation of the third century.

(6) As the coming of the Messiah will then be imminent, when Israel will be rehabilitated in the Holy Land.

(7) The year 1 of Destruction is equal to 3828 of the Era of Creation (4000 — 172, v. p. 42, n. 7(b)); hence the period given by R. Hanina is 4228 (3828+400), while the one given in the Baraitha — 4231 — is three years later. This Baraitha is of particular importance on account of its allusion — the earliest on record and the only one in the Talmud — to the Era of the World (generally designated Anna Mundi) which is now in use by Jews well nigh universally. While familiar to the Rabbis of the Talmud, it is not known to have been used as an Era until long after the close of the Talmud (Azariah de Rossi, Me'or 'Enayim. Vienna, 1829, 152a). Among the earliest evidence of its use are epitaphs dating from 822 and 827 C.E. in the catacombs of Vnosa (Poznanski Encyc. of Rel. and Eth., s.v. Calendar) also a Genizah scroll describing an incident as having occurred on the 3rd Shevat in the year 4772 A.M. (1012 C.E., J. Mann, HUCA. Annual, Voi. 111, 259). The attempt which had been made to ascribe the use of this Era to Sherirah Gaon in his famous Epistle, has been disproved (Poznanski ZDMG, LXVIII, 121). Likewise, an epitaph which the Karaite Firkowitz professed to have discovered in Crimea registering the Era of the World in 151 B.C.E. has been pronounced as spurious by Harkavy (Altjudische Denkmaeler, p. 161). Solomon Ibn Verga's vsivh yca contains a description of the Yom-Kippur Service in the Temple by the Roman Consul Marcus in which mention is made of the Era of the World vrhmk l fu l f , ba (Amst. 1709, p. 52b); but 'That description is a late forgery' (Buchler). Dr. F. C. Ewald (Aboda Zara Nurnberg, 1856, p. 68, note) suggests that it was early in the 10th century that the Jews, who were mostly settled in Spain, on dispensing with the Seleucid Era, adopted the A.M. for fear of being compelled to use the Christian era, but this suggestion lacks historical basis. Much better founded is the assertion of Mahler (op. cit. 158) that the C.E., which came into general use in France and Germany in the 10th century, found its way into Spain about two centuries later, and that it was about that time and for that reason that the Era of Creation gained general currency among the Jews. In computing this conventional Era, a number of uncertainties have, naturally, to be compromised (see Jewish Encyclopedia. Vol. IV, p. 68). To convert any given year from A.M. into C.E. — apart from the thousands — 240 is to be added; thus, the present year A.M. 5694 plus 240 gives [1]934 C.E. To convert from C.E. into A.M. add 3760: thus, $1934 + 3760 = 5694$.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 10a

six years ahead.¹ The Rabbis who were sitting before Raba were of opinion that it should be pronounced a post-dated document, which is to be deferred and not executed until the date which it bears. Whereupon R. Nahman said: This document must have been written by a scribe who was very particular and took into account the six years of the Greek Reign in Elam which we do not reckon. The dating is therefore correct, for we have learnt: Rabbi Jose said, Six years did the Greeks reign in Elam and thereafter their dominion extended universally.

R. Aha b. Jacob then put this question: How do we know that our Era [of Documents] is connected with the Kingdom of Greece at all? Why not say that it is reckoned from the Exodus from Egypt, omitting the first thousand years and giving the years of the next thousand?² In that case, the document is really post-dated! — Said R. Nahman: In the Diaspora the Greek Era alone is used. He [the questioner] thought that R. Nahman wanted to dispose of him anyhow, but when he went and studied it thoroughly he found that it is indeed taught [in a Baraita]: In the Diaspora the Greek Era alone is used.

Said Rabina: Our Mishnah also proves this, for we learn,³ ‘The first of Nisan is New Year for reckoning [the reign of] kings⁴ and of Festivals,’ and to the question ‘The reign of kings’, what is the practical object of this law? R. Hisda replied: [It affects] the dating of documents.⁵ Now, the same Mishnah says. ‘The first of Tishri is New Year for [counting] years and sabbatical cycles’⁶ and when it was asked: ‘What practical significance has this ruling?’ R. Hisda [again] replied: [It affects the dating of] documents.⁷ [The question was then raised:] Is not this rule of dating documents self-contradictory?⁸ And the answer given was: ‘The one refers to Jewish kings, the other to kings of Gentile nations — the year of Gentile kings being counted from Tishri, and of Jewish kings from Nisan.’ Now, in the present time we count the years from Tishri; were we then to say that our Era is connected with the Exodus it is surely from Nisan that we ought to count.⁹ Does this not prove that our reckoning is based on the reign of the Greek kings [and not on the Exodus]? That indeed proves it.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE GENOSIA [ACCESSION] OF HEATHEN KINGS etc.

What is meant by GENOSIA OF HEATHEN KINGS? — Said Rab Judah: It is the day on which the king is raised [to the throne]. But has it not been taught [elsewhere] ‘The day of Genosia and the day of the king's accession’?¹⁰ — There is no difficulty there; the one term indicates the king's own accession, the other that of his son.¹¹ But do [the Romans]¹² ever appoint a king's son as king? Did not R. Joseph apply [the following verse to Rome]: Behold I made thee small among the nations¹³ — in that they do not place the son of a king on the royal throne, — thou art greatly despised¹⁴ — in that they do not possess a tongue or script?¹⁵ What then does GENOSIA mean? — [The King's] birthday. But we learn [elsewhere] ‘The Genosia and the birthday.’ That, too, is no contradiction. The one refers to the king's own birthday, the other to that of his son. But we have also the wording: ‘The king's Genosia and his son's Genosia, his own birthday and his son's birthday’! Then [as said previously] Genosia means indeed the day of the King's accession. but there is no difficulty [raised by the mention of both terms], the one applying to his own accession, the other to that of his son; and as to your question about their not appointing a king's son as king, such appointment would be made at the [king's] request, as was the case with Asverus the son of Antoninus¹⁶ who reigned [in his father's place].

Antoninus once said to Rabbi: It is my desire that my son Asverus should reign instead of me and that Tiberias¹⁷ should be declared a Colony.¹⁸ Were I to ask one of these things it would be granted while both would not be granted.¹⁹ Rabbi thereupon brought a man, and having made him ride on the shoulders of another, handed him a dove bidding the one who carried him to order the one on his shoulders to liberate it. The Emperor perceived this to mean that he was advised to ask [of the Senate] to appoint his son Asverus to reign in his stead, and that subsequently he might get Asverus to make Tiberias a free Colony.

[On another occasion] Antoninus mentioned to him that some prominent Romans were annoying him. Rabbi thereupon took him into the garden and, in his presence, picked some radishes, one at a time. Said [the Emperor to himself] his advice to me is: Do away with them one at a time, but do not attack all of them at once.

(1) Its date was six years later than the time when it was claimed to be due e.g. 516 instead of 510 (Seleucid Era).

(2) The Era of Documents, as explained above, (p. 42, n. 7) dates from the dominion of Seleucus which was established in the year 380 before the Destruction. Now, the Exodus occurred in the year 1380 before the Destruction, thus: — Exodus to building of 1st Temple...480 years Existence of 1st Temple 410 " Babylonian Exile 70 " Existence of 2nd Temple 420 " Period from Exodus to Destruction of 2nd Temple 1380 years The Exodus was therefore just one thousand years earlier than the Seleucid Conquest, so that the year, say, 510 Era of Contract would be 1510 from the Exodus. R. Aha therefore submits that the year of Contracts may have as its starting point not the Seleucid Conquest but the Exodus, with the omission of the thousand; the year, say, 310 would not mean 310 years after the Sel Con. but [1]310 after the Exodus.

(4) The reign of a Jewish King was always reckoned from Nisan, so that even if it began in the preceding month, it would be in its second year in Nisan.

(5) The year given in dating legal documents was that of the reign of the present king.

(6) V. above note.

(7) For the purpose of dating documents Tishri is to be regarded as the beginning of the year.

(8) According to the early part of the Mishnah the year should begin with Nisan, while in the latter part it is said to begin with Tishri.

(9) Since the Exodus occurred in Nisan.

(10) Which proves that the two are not identical.

(11) When raised to the throne at the father's wish in his own lifetime.

(12) Whose kings do not reign by hereditary right but are elected.

(15) [Greek remained the spoken and written language throughout the East even after the establishment of the Eastern Roman Empire, to which the allusion here is made, v. Obermeyer, op. cit. 263]

(16) The bearers of the names given here have been variously identified. S. J. Rappaport ihkn lrg s.v. xurhuxt xbhbuybt) is of opinion that our Antoninus is Antoninus Pius (138-161) and that Asverus is his adopted son Marcus Aurelius (161-180), who was also called Annius Verus — here contracted into A-S-Verus. According to Jast, however, (Allgem. Gesch. des Isr. Volkes, Berlin 1832, II, 129 and Gesch. d. Israeliten IV, 88 seq.) our Ant. is Caracalla (211-217) and Asverus is his son Alexander Severus (222-235). Z. Frankel vbanv lfrs (Warsaw, 1923, 203) identifies Ant. with Lucius Verius Antoninus who was co-regent with Marcus Aurelius and is reputed to have issued decrees favourable to Jews. Differing from all the foregoing authorities, Graetz (Geschichte, Vol. IV, pp. 450ff). claiming the support of Origen's Epistola ad Africanum, asserts that Ant. is none other than Alexander Severus who was surnamed Antoninus in the East, and that the 'Rabbi' who is associated with Ant. in the narratives that follow here and in many others is not R. Judah I but his grandson R. Judah II who flourished near the middle of the 3rd century. That he, too, was sometimes called by the title Rabbi alone is, indeed, borne out by the phrase in the Mishnah (infra 35b) 'Rabbi and his court' which is taken to refer to R. Judah II.

(17) In Galilee whither the Sanhedrin was transferred by R. Judah II.

(18) So that its inhabitants should be raised to the rank of libertines — evidently intended as a tribute of regard to Rabbi.

(19) The Emperor was seeking Rabbi's guidance without openly taking counsel with an outsider on matters of state. Rabbi, likewise, would not commit himself to more than offering his advice by mere insinuation.

Talmud - Mas. Avodah Zarah 10b

But why did he not speak explicitly? — He thought his words might reach the ears of those prominent Romans who would persecute him. Why then did he not say it in a whisper? — Because it is written: For a bird of the air shall carry the voice.¹
